

DID YOU KNOW?

Finance — Story Narrative

There were two women who believed that every chapter deserved structure, support, and a clear path to success. They worked tirelessly to build a system where Treasurers could thrive, not struggle. Their goal was simple: to create a space where communication was strong, finances were respected, and every member understood the power of being prepared.

As chapters grew, the founders noticed something important. Some Treasurers were proactive, planning and keeping their records tight. Others were reactive, waiting until the last minute and scrambling to fix avoidable mistakes. Some were organized, while others were overwhelmed. Some communicated clearly, while others stayed silent and hoped no one would notice.

So, the founders created a message for every Treasurer:

Did you know that your chapter depends on you to keep accurate records, track every receipt, and report every dollar.

Did you know that communication is just as important as counting money.

Did you know that your leadership sets the tone for how seriously the chapter treats its finances.

They reminded Treasurers that missing receipts, late reports, and unclear communication can cause confusion — but strong systems, timely updates, and honest reporting build trust.

They also taught that every Treasurer must understand the difference between needs and wants, between planning and guessing, and between silence and clarity. They emphasized that the Treasurer's role is not just about numbers — it's about responsibility, transparency, and growth.

And finally, they said:

Did you know?

When you communicate well, stay organized, and use your resources wisely, you strengthen your chapter's future. You become an example. You become the standard. You become the leader who brings accountability and finance together.
