Siege of B exar

From October until early December 1835 an army of Texan volunteers laid siege to a Mexican army in San Antonio de B exar. After a Texas force drove off Mexican troops at Gonzales on October 2, the Texan army grew to 300 men and elected Stephen F. Austin commander to bring unity out of discord. The Texans advanced on October 12 toward San Antonio, where Gen. Mart n Perfecto de Cos recently had concentrated Mexican forces numbering 650 men. Cos fortified the town plazas west of the San Antonio River and the Alamo, a former mission east of the stream.

On the morning of December 9, 1835, General Cos surrendered. Under Command of Stephen F. Austin, the Texians lost 30-35 men while the Mexican soldados lost over 150. The Mexican Army was marched out of San Antonio and remained under Texian control until the Alamo fell on March 6, 1836.
