

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

July 27, 2023

C3 Capital, Inc. dba C3 Bullion (“C3” or the “Company”) announced today that it has engaged InferenceFrame of Santa Fe, New Mexico to assist with marketing and consulting advice to the Company as it launches a closed-end Delaware domiciled mining investment fund. Christopher Werner, CEO of C3 stated that “We are very pleased to have InferenceFrame engaged to assist our fund going forward and feel they have many capable services and consulting expertise to accelerate the growth of our Company”.

InferenceFrame’s mission is to continuously utilize and develop the latest in data science and analysis, as well as data engineering, especially as they relate to artificial intelligence (AI) and data organization, to enhance decision-making and connection. They were founded in 2020 and, since inception, have reached several key milestones:

- Assembled a team of advisors, including a former head of school at UNSW's School of Computer Science and Engineering (a leading school in Australia); a former director of research at the HCI Research Group at Yahoo Labs, who was also a senior scientist at Flickr, CWI, and FX Palo Alto Laboratory; a senior lecturer in epistemics at UNSW’s School of Computer Science and Engineering; and a seasoned media executive.
- Developed an interdisciplinary data/AI framework/approach applicable to various situations.
- Cultivated a diverse client base within M&A, private capital markets, and business development.
- Established related affiliations and partnerships, including with leading investment banking groups.

C3 is launching a Delaware closed-end gold investment fund to provide small and medium gold producers with expansion capital to increase production. The fund will loan this capital to existing gold or precious metal producers who will repay their loan with bullion. The Company is planning strategic investments in early to mid-stage gold and precious metal producers throughout North America.
