Perrysville Experiences Power Outage During Heat Wave

Portions of the village of Perrysville experienced a power outage during a heat wave the week of June 22–27, leaving most residents without electricity and disrupting operations at the Step2 manufacturing plant. Several work shifts were canceled due to the loss of power.

High temperatures during the outage ranged from 92 to 95 degrees Fahrenheit, with humidity levels reaching as high as 90%, making conditions feel even hotter and more uncomfortable.

Some residents reported electricity flickering on Sunday. The village lost power entirely on Monday, June 23. Power was restored by late in the day on Tuesday, June 24, though there was a brief restoration earlier that morning before crews had to shut it down again to complete necessary corrections.

Village Administrator Mike McCaskey said Ohio Edison officials attributed the outage to an overload caused by extreme heat.

"When they fixed it initially, they hooked up something wrong that caused the three-phase system to change rotation, causing everything to run backward," McCaskey explained. "They had to turn the power off again to reverse the rotation so everything in the three-phase system would run in the correct direction."

Mayor Steve Goines, who was out of town during the outage, noted, "Having lived here most of my life, I expect power outages every year. It's the cost of an ever-increasing society." He also expressed pride in the community's generosity during the difficult time: "I am very proud of our community because we had individuals offering generators to use. Amen for that!"

Residents took to social media to express frustration over the outage and the lack of timely updates. Others shared information about estimated repair times and loaned out generators to neighbors in need. Some community members also helped clarify technical details shared by officials, improving public understanding of the issue and the restoration process.

Ohio Edison was contacted for comment but had not responded by press time.

Hi everyone! I hope each of you is coping with this heat. I, for one, am not! I hate being shut inside the house with the windows and doors closed while the air conditioning runs full blast.

I think back to when I was a kid and would lie on the kitchen floor because it was the coolest place in the house!

The following story was found in a pile of articles I've saved over the years, and I hope it brings you some warm thoughts.

A Small Gesture, A Big Impact

It was a rainy afternoon, and I had just finished a long, exhausting day. I found myself at my local café, trying to unwind with a cup of hot tea. As I sat there, I noticed a young woman at the counter. She was clearly struggling — going through her purse frantically, trying to find enough change to pay for her coffee.

Without a moment's hesitation, an elderly man who had been waiting in line behind her gently placed his hand on her shoulder and said, "Don't worry about it, I've got this." He paid for her coffee with a smile, and the woman's face lit up with surprise and gratitude.

"Thank you so much," she said, still in disbelief. The man simply replied, "Sometimes, all we need is a little kindness.'

That small, simple gesture made me realize the incredible power of kindness. It didn't cost him much, yet it had an immediate, positive effect on both the woman and everyone who witnessed it. The energy in the café shifted — what started as an ordinary day suddenly became one filled with warmth and hope.

It reminded me that kindness, no matter how small, can change someone's day. Whether it's holding the door open, paying for someone's coffee, or offering a kind word, it all contributes to making the world a little bit brighter.

From that day on, I made a conscious effort to spread kindness in any way I could. It doesn't have to be something big. Even the smallest acts of goodwill can have a lasting impact and create a ripple effect that spreads positivity far beyond what we can see.

Please check on your neighbors during this heat wave. Some may have no way to stay comfortable, and you could be a lifesaver!

Finally — "Let a man walk ten miles steadily on a hot summer's day along a dusty English road, and he will soon discover why beer was invented." — Gilbert K. Chesterton Prepare the broccoli and cauliflower by removing the stems and cutting the tops into small, bite-sized pieces. When ready, drain the pasta, rinse under cold water, and transfer to a large serving bowl. Toss the cut vegetables with the pasta in the large serving bowl. Pour the Italian dressing and add the pasta salad seasoning over the vegetables and pasta and toss together until well combined.

Cover and refrigerate until ready to serve. If needed, add more Italian dressing and toss before serving.

A Stroll Through Our Mohican Garden:

Troubleshooting Peony Bloom Failure

By Eric Larson

One of my favorite spring perennials is the peony. These long-lived plants can bring joy for decades.

Recently, a reader asked why her peonies were not blooming. She noticed a brown leaf covering the flower bud, which eventually died. I would almost consider my growing season a loss if my peonies failed to bloom, as I look forward to their scent and beauty each year.

In her case, the flower buds were brown to black — classic signs of botrytis. Botrytis blight, also called gray mold, affects peony stems, leaves, and buds. Despite the name, it often looks more brown than gray. This fungal disease is a common cause of buds dying before they open.

Peony buds infected with botrytis blight turn brown or black and fail to open—a common problem during cool, damp spring weather.

Standout Performances Mark Latest Round of Youth Softball Tournament

By Kinah Yoder

Velocity Heat 14U, coached by Hannah Roble and based in Wooster, won the 14U division of the Loudonville Fastpitch Softball Tournament on June 29.

The youth softball tournament continued June 27-29, featuring six teams in the 8-and-under division and 22 teams in the 14-and-under division. Over the weekend, the 8U division played 14 games, while the 14U division completed 55 games. This report highlights the championship matchups that concluded bracket play and spotlights notable individual performances from earlier rounds.

In the 8-and-under division, Ohio SWAT emerged as champions, defeating the Lady Quakers 8U by a score of 8–4 in the final. Velocity Heat 8U and Ohio Lady Legends 8U shared third place.

Velocity Heat 8U demonstrated strong depth throughout the weekend, with several standout players. Tenley Keschl anchored the defense with 12 outs at second base. Taya Miller delivered a complete performance at shortstop, contributing multiple hits and several diving stops. In the outfield, Brooke Schulte made a spectacular catch in right field and added a line-drive triple.

For the Lady Quakers 8U, Ella Miller earned MVP honors in Game 1, while Austyn Price secured MVP recognition in Game 3.

The 14U division featured a competitive bracket that culminated with Velocity Heat 14U winning the championship after a hard-fought 5–4 victory over Lady Aces 2k10-Martin. Velocity Heat earned their spot in the title game by defeating Olentangy Softball Club 12–4 in the semifinals.

Wolfpack '10, a local team based in Jeromesville and coached by Nicole Smith, earned a co-third place finish, following up on their runner-up performance in 2024. Their tournament ended with a close 5–3 semifinal loss to Lady Aces 2k10-Martin. Olentangy Softball Club also took home co-third place honors.

Several local players delivered standout performances during 14U pool play. Violet Lyons of Danville, playing for the Fireballers, hit a home run and earned MVP honors. Hillsdale's Maddy Neece, pitching for Wolfpack '10, was recognized for her strong outing on the mound. Ashland Blaze had two key contributors: Sarah John, who hit two home runs, and Maleah Miller, who was praised for her work in the circle.

Ohio SWAT, based in Albany and coached by Adam Calhoun and Craig Warren, won the 8U division of the Loudonville Fastpitch Softball Tournament on June 29.

MVP selections were submitted by coaches across the division; however, only a limited number were officially reported to the Shopper, despite widespread recognition throughout the weekend.

EC Ohio Legends' Bre Wisener was named MVP for her dominant 11-strike-out performance in a 7–1 victory over Mash Factory Fastpitch 14U. Ohio Warriors DiDomenico players Alayah DiDomenico (twice) and Madison Streeter were also named MVPs. Ohio Lightning 14U Silverthorn players Faith Goodwin (Games 1 and 3) and Claire Kimble (Game 2) were recognized with MVP pins. PRIDE Fast-pitch players receiving MVP honors were Payton Klockenga, Channing Jackson, and Mariah Rankin. From Mash Factory Fastpitch 14U, MVP Andelyn Jones threw three perfect innings against Ohio Wolfpack-Surnear, recording five strikeouts. Teammate Alexa Hanna earned two MVP pins for performances against EC Ohio Legends and Ohio Shockwaves.

The MVP pins are a new addition for the 2025 tournament season. Each team is issued three pins per pool game to award to standout players from the opposing team. The initiative promotes sportsmanship and celebrates individual excellence.

Tournament play is scheduled to continue July 11–13 with the 18U division, which will feature 11 teams. Programs are available at local businesses and include schedules, team information, game locations and coupons.

Pioneer Questions Johnny Appleseed's Accomplishments

By Lee Cavin

[Editor's note: This column originally appeared in the Loudonville Times on April 3, 1985.]

bragged about the effectiveness of advertising in their periodicals.

But there always have been some ads the inserter never expects to be answered.

One of these was placed by W.F. Gladden in the Perrysville column of the Feb. 9, 1893, Loudonville Democrat.

It read: "Found - in W.F. Gladden's hen coup - one pair of mittens. Owner can procure the same by calling at the W.F. Gladden residence."

Somehow I suspect the mitten owner would have been greeted with a double-barreled shotgun had he been naïve enough to claim his property he had dropped in haste while visiting the hennery.

If you want to lead the good life and be loved by your contemporaries and neighbors, try not to become a public figure.

Public figures must suffer criticism and may find their names listed in headlines in the National Enquirer today.

It always was thus. We found Johnny Appleseed being defamed by a former neighbor in a 1902 Loudonville paper.

Paul Oliver, an early settler whose family had lived for years along the Black Fork in Green Township was recalling events of nearly 70 years before.

He said that Johnny Appleseed was getting credit for things which were absurd to people who knew him.

Appleseed, Oliver claimed, lived with his half sister, Mrs. Bloom, just upstream from the Oliver cabin. An American Native trail ran along the creek between the two cabins and the families saw much of each other.

Oliver laughed at Appleseed being given credit for planting orchards. "There were at the time, 1832 to 1836, fine large orchards in the vicinity of Newville planted and grafted by the early settlers. Why would they want his trash?"

"Johnny loved the woods and shunned civilization," Oliver said. "He would wander all day in old moccasins, and frequently visit the Oliver cabin at night. After rubbing salt in the sores on his feet, he would draw up a cradle to the log fire, put down his knapsack for a pillow, Editors since time immemorial have and with his legs dangling over the bottom of the cradle, toasting in the warmth of the night log, he would retire for the night."

> Appleseed was considered harmless by settlers, Oliver said, and was allowed to come and go at will. He would seldom accept an invitation at the table, but would take food in his position in front of the fire, draped over the cradle.

> Oliver was doubtful about the credit Appleseed was receiving for warning local settlements of approaching Native American attacks during the War of 1812.

> At the time historians claimed Appleseed was saving the settlements, Oliver said the nurseryman was, to his personal knowledge, down among the wilds and settlements along the Ohio River taking orders for his nursery that was located nowhere in particular.

> Oliver showed the newspaper reporter one of Appleseed's fliers that he still had in his

> It read: "Mr. Oliver or Mr. Hamlin, let J.W. Hickox or bearer have 300 apple trees for value received. John Chapman.'

> Oliver never explained if he honored the order if, as he had said earlier, the Chapman orchards did not exist.

> Oliver became a subject of newspaper headlines a few years later. He possessed considerable property in the area, but in increasing age, he had become increasingly eccentric.

> Finally a judge, labeling him an "imbecile," appointed a guardian to look after the old pioneer's financial affairs. Unfortunately, the court-appointed guardian, while apparently well-versed in the law, was careless when submitting an inventory of Oliver's assets to the court.

> Relatives, concerned about the melting away of bank accounts and mortgages they were sure Oliver possessed, fought for four years to get a hearing at the county seat.

> When the case was finally put on the docket, the counsel for the guardian told the judge Oliver had died and that there was no one to personally testify to his alleged assets.

> All these arguments failed. Oliver was dead, but the case continued. A few weeks later, the headlines across the top of the Loudonville

Democrat proclaimed "Dishonest and incompetent guardian ordered to pay back $62,000."

Discrepancies were many. A claim against one family for $7,100 that had been advanced them by Oliver was not on the inventory. The guardian claimed this was because Oliver owed the people $10,000 for "room and board." The judge estimated this came to more than $200 a month, and felt that in 1909 this was an unreasonable amount.

A score of other accounts brought before the court appeared to have been halved by the guardian. Cash from the sale of "pine bluff lands" had disappeared.

In a day when laborers worked for $1 a day, and $500 was a family's annual income, the discrepancies on one man's estate were totaled at $62,200.

The men and women who came to Mohican Country early and put their faith in the land apparently fared well.

But then, Mohican Country had something going for it that has long been down-rated by historians who glorified military feats, generals and politicians.

Ohio and the Northwest Territories were blessed by accurate surveyors. These men, packing crude levels, 66 feet of chain and a sextant navigated the trackless wilderness, using the stars like a ship's captain and establishing boundary lines that were off only a few feet in a hundred miles.

The fact that they were here before the settlers bought farms meant that a land deed was a thing of lasting value. The real pioneers, like Daniel Boone, lost much of their land along the Ohio River that they had fought the wilderness to claim. Boone and his friends had similar problems in Kentucky and later in Missouri. The only ground in his name today lies in Kentucky, under a monument erected in his honor. His remains were brought there from a hunting cabin in Indiana, where he had died landless and still struggling to pay off debts he had incurred while opening Kentucky and the Ohio country years before.

BLOOM cont. from Pg.6

Botrytis paeoniae thrives in cool, wet early springs followed by warm, damp early summers ideal conditions for this soil-borne fungus. While unsightly and frustrating, it's not deadly.

Managing botrytis involves careful maintenance:

- Plant peonies at least two to three feet apart to ensure good air circulation and reduce moisture around foliage.
- Water at the base of the plant to avoid wetting the leaves and do so early in the morning so any moisture can dry during the day.

- Regularly prune peonies and remove diseased foliage during fall cleanup. The fungus overwinters in leaves, stems, and blossom debris.
- · Apply mulch beneath the plants to prevent soilborne spores from splashing onto foliage.
- Avoid overly wet soil. Peonies prefer rich, well-draining conditions; soggy soil encourages disease spread.
- buds as soon as you spot them to prevent further infection.

Stay alert during cool, damp weather, especially in spring. Vigilant removal of diseased plant parts will help maintain healthy peonies.

As a garden designer, I often recommend peony cultivars that show resistance to botrytis, such as 'Bartzella', 'Coral Charm', and 'High Noon'.

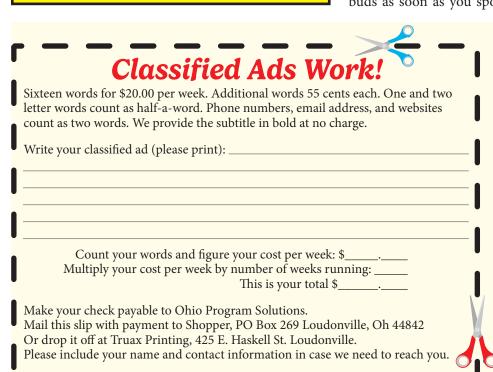

For those who prefer chemical control, Bordeaux week strolling through your mix — a copper-sulfur fun-• Remove infected gicide used for centuries is available at local garden to email me at centers. Follow the label

If you want to see peonies in full bloom, Walnut Ridge Farm in Orrville hosts an annual Peony Festival each June. If you plan to visit next year, be warned — you just might fall in love with these stunning flowers.
