

'Acceptance'

Lord, it's been an ongoing nightmare one that just won't keep,
It has robbed me of my peace and joy, all I do is weep
My days are filled with sorrow, brought by the fear of this unreality One I truly cannot comprehend, or understand to be This situation defies the natural order, one that Your will has designed, It's left a piercing hole in my spirit, filled by the broken pieces of my mind Lord, I know, I must surrender this to You, trust and just let go,
For You alone can lift the stone that's cast, a weight upon my soul
I know life is filled with crosses, and this one's come my way, Pray God, He give me the courage, should this cross decide to stay?
I never thought that something so terrible, would happen Lord, to me Yet who am I, that I should be spared, just a part of human frailty You are the Father's perfection, yet they nailed You to a tree, Mend the Spirit inside my heart, so again with my heart I see That during this trial when I want to run away, shut down or just give up, I may close my eyes and see Your face in the garden, accepting Your Father's cup Accepting it not in anger, with bitterness or hate, But with the love of "Thy will be done"

Which opens Heaven's Gate

Mary L. Faller
© July 5. 1998