Examples of our work with schools:

Expanding A Levels at the British International School in Ukraine

In operation for 24 years, the British International School in Ukraine (BISU) is a COBIS-member school teaching the British curriculum across four campuses Kyiv and Dnipro.

Looking to broaden A Level subject options for their pupils, Principal David Cole actively searched for an outstanding and flexible course solution that complemented their existing subject offerings.

Working with King's InterHigh BISU's Sixth Form now offers additional A Level courses online, such as Further Maths; a subject that was in high demand.

This partnership gave BISU the opportunity to effectively address the needs of their student community without straining existing resources.

Helping an Island school go hybrid

In 2021, when a British international school on an island in the Atlantic realised the power of online learning, they decided to diversify and expand their school with a sustainable, scalable online offering.

Without the expertise to develop their own online curriculum, and after conducting extensive research, they turned to King's InterHigh as the best solution.

The school is now launching an online component in partnership with King's InterHigh. Together, we're bringing a unique hybrid solution to students and families across the country and surrounding Caribbean islands. Students will follow a British international programme online, delivered by King's InterHigh subject specialist teachers and enhanced by in-person opportunities on the school's four-acre grounds. This partnership gives the island school the ability to scale and increase their student numbers.

Expanding curriculum for a small school in Congo

A small, privately owned school in an affluent Congolese city recently came to King's InterHigh in need of a secondary curriculum.

Meeting the primary schooling needs of local, expat, and internationally mobile families for almost a decade, the school recognised their community's clear demand for a senior and high school programme. However, student numbers were too small to justify the heavy investment and resourcing needed for a physical campus for secondary aged pupils.

With King's InterHigh's qualified, expert teachers, students at this small Congo school can now receive a full British international education from Years 7 to 13. The curriculum is fully delivered through our interactive online classes, while the school itself supplements academics with in-person opportunities such as excursions and extra-curricular activities. The school now has a new income stream, can attract new students and can retain their existing students as they progress through their education.

We have been very impressed with how supportive King's InterHigh have been since the beginning of our new partnership. Both staff and students are very happy with the quality of teaching and communication. We are all looking forward to an excellent year.”
