

AN INDIE THRILLER · ACTION · SHORT FILM

ENEMY IN THE WHITE HOUSE

A beautiful international espionage expert joins forces with an old lover to defeat a communist takeover of the White House.

THE STORY

Power. Loyalty. The Future of Democracy.

Some films start with a huge studio and millions in funding. This one started with a question — and that question became the seed for an independent short film that demands to be seen.

A Nation on the Brink

What would happen if the fight for democracy weren't overseas... but inside the White House itself?

Two Former Lovers

Catherine, an intelligence operative, reunites with Felix — forced back together by a threat bigger than either of them.

Trust vs. Betrayal

Under extreme pressure, loyalty is tested, secrets unravel, and unfinished love threatens to change everything.

The Characters

Catherine — Martial arts expert, multilingual, intelligent, poised under pressure, quick-witted, and above all, patriotic. Her international espionage background comes with a complicated past. When a dangerous political shift threatens the very foundation of American democracy, she must act.

Felix — Catherine's former lover and fellow operative, who desperately wants to reunite with her. His actions may ignite something far bigger than either of them expected — America's reckoning.

Cherokee — A dark operator doing mercenary work, an assassin who plays both sides of the fence. Patriot or traitor? That's for the audience to decide.

Dmitry Melnikoff — Ex Russian president, now positioned within U.S. power. The antagonist who instigates insufferable viewer disdain.
