

What People Say About... ENEMY IN THE WHITE HOUSE

“Hi Roger. I hope you’re doing well! I’ve just backed your project and wanted to say congratulations, it's truly exciting to see what you’re building. I really enjoy discovering and supporting creative campaigns on platforms like Indiegogo, and yours stood out to me.”

“The concept of Enemy in the White House is thrilling, not just as an action-packed indie film, but because of how it weaves in real stakes about democracy, patriotism, and human courage. The mix of espionage, romance, and a strong female lead is the kind of storytelling that sticks with you long after the screen goes dark.”

“What stands out about Enemy in the White House is how deliberately you’ve framed the story around internal conflict and political tension rather than external threats positioning the danger as something emerging from within the system gives the narrative immediate psychological and thematic weight.”

“A tense thriller, action film, Enemy in the White House also dives into the heart of modern democracy and power struggles, reflecting real-world tensions while keeping audiences on the edge of their seats.”

“I predict Enemy in the White House will engage political thriller fans, independent film supporters, and global cinema audiences across different regions of the world by telling a story that reflects the tension around democracy, power, and modern politics?”

“Roger the connection between your father's WWII service, your grandmother's experience, and the film's mission to "slow the dismantling of democracy" creates an incredibly compelling narrative that will resonate deeply with politically engaged audiences.”

“I came across your Indiegogo campaign and love the vision.”