Out of Sight Audio

Welcome 2016 NJTA sponsor Matt McClurg and Out of Sight Audio.

Don't have a quality sound system in your Triumph? Want one without having to perform surgery on that original dash or console? Out of Sight Audio can address that concern and deliver a superior sound system with a clean install (no dash cuts or interior modifications) using Blue Tooth Audio.

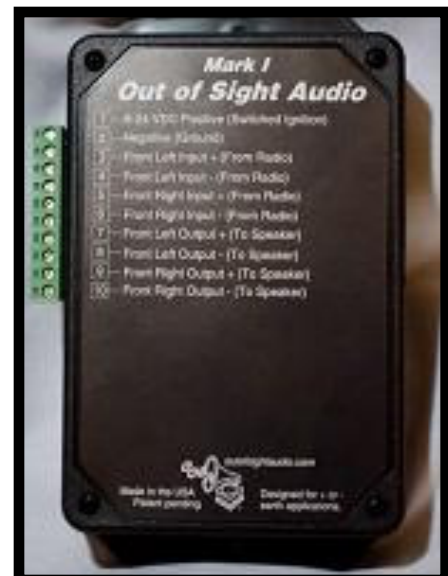

Out of Sight Audio can provide hidden car radio, stereo, and audio options for our vintage or classic cars. Boats, motorcycles, or off road vehicles too. And the existing car radio doesn't even need to be in working order. Infact, as explained on the Out of Sight Audio website, a car radio is not required for hidden car radio/stereo. Bluetooth audio can be added to most existing audio systems, it doesn't need to be exposed (no access required) and it is controlled with a smart phone, MP3 player or tablet.

It's a very simple alternative to the standard hidden or secret car audio devices. It operates on 6, 12, or 24 Volt DC power and can be used with positive or negative ground.

There are three secret audio units to choose from (Mark I, Mark II, and Mark III), each with increased functionality and they are described in detail on the Out of Sight Audio website.

Wiring schematics are presented also. Plus an informative Q&A page as well as video demonstrations. Audio pairing instructions are included too.

Prices start at $219.99 for the Mark I pictured.

Out of Sight Audio and its Bluetooth receiver devices have been featured in Hemmings Sports & Exotic Car (twice), Muscle Machines, and American Car Collector magazines.

And a Mark I device, courtesy of Mr. McClurg and Out of Sight Audio, was also the featured prize and the crowd pleaser at our Touch of England Show last summer!
