Forgotten Foods: Memories and Recipes from Muslim South Asia with Siobhan Lambert-Hurley

Date: Sunday, 22nd February

Time: 14:00 - 15:30

Venue: Digital

Tickets: Free, register on Eventbrite

Join Professor Siobhan Lambert-Hurley, historian and author, for a captivating conversation, as she discusses her acclaimed book, "Forgotten Foods: Memories and Recipes from Muslim South Asia" with Shamim Choudhury, award-winning Media correspondent and writer.

Heritage food is a booming industry in India and Pakistan today. Five-star hotels and fashionable restaurants tout traditional menus, while food festivals bring historic flavours to a general public hungry for dishes with provenance.

Vloggers and bloggers from Instagram to TikTok have jumped on the bandwagon, enriching their #foodporn with a spoonful of Wikihistory. Yet, from the perspective of professional historians, all this chatter about 'lost recipes' and 'gastronomic traditions' needs more bonafide research to give it historical meaning and texture.

This realisation led to the birth of a project called Forgotten Food to open communications between scholars and food practitioners, including writers, performers, farmers and chefs. Among the many collaborations to come out of this project is a delectable collection of food stories, histories and recipes called Forgotten Foods: Memories and Recipes from Muslim South Asia (2023). As well as celebrating an amazing diversity of cuisines, it also points to how Muslim kitchens have so profoundly shaped and enriched South Asian food today.

This event pairs food historian Professor Siobhan Lambert-Hurley with chef and writer Sadaf Hussain to discuss their contributions and collaborations to recover lost histories and fading culinary traditions

Hosted by: Shamim Choudhury, award-winning Media correspondent and writer

Venue: Digital

Tickets: Free, register on Eventbrite

Join us for a thought-provoking event with Emeritus Professor James Trevelyan exploring AI and Creativity in the Context of Islamic Arts.

As AI technologies learn to generate traditional elements such as Arabic calligraphy and complex geometric patterns, they raise both exciting possibilities and deep concerns. While these tools can offer new ways to preserve, reinterpret, and share the rich heritage of Islamic art, they also risk reducing sacred and deeply human creative processes to algorithmic outputs.

Is AI a collaborator in artistic innovation—or a force that threatens to displace the artist entirely? This event invites artists, technologists, and thinkers to reflect on how we navigate the fine line between inspiration and imitation in a rapidly changing creative landscape.

Join Dr Javeria Khadija Shah for an inspiring presentation on the creative legacy of Punjabi Sufi poetry, where verse becomes a vessel for prayer, resistance, and longing. The session highlights how mystics such as Bulleh Shah used Kalaam, a sacred poetic form, to express truths that transcended their own time and place.

Through selected readings and contextual insights the session explores how these verses continue to travel across generations shaping contemporary creativity in the diaspora. Audiences will encounter poetry as a timeless act of imagination and devotion, rooted in heritage yet alive with resonance today.

Muslim Diaspora Archives

Celebrating the lives of Britain's first Muslim Migrants

Muslim Diaspora Archives records the voices of Britain's first Muslim migrants – before they are lost forever.

Founded by Qaisra Shahraz MBE, Muslim Diaspora Archives is a long-term heritage project dedicated to preserving and celebrating the lives of Britain's Muslim diaspora in Manchester and the North West, with a special focus on first-generation migrants who arrived in the UK during the 1960s and 1970s.

The project highlights the contributions, struggles and achievements of Muslim pioneers, who helped build Britain's social, cultural and economic fabric, and ensures these vital histories are accessible to future generations.

Through podcasts and interviews, it aims to create an authentic, community-led archive that reflects Muslim life in Britain from a lived experience.

MACFEST Book Club

Encouraging dialogue, reflection, and cultural connection through reading

MACFEST continues to expand its community-driven initiatives with the introduction of a new book club centered on Islamic literature.

This welcoming space invites participants to explore a wide range of Islamic books, from classical texts to contemporary works, while fostering thoughtful discussion and shared learning.

What makes the initiative especially engaging is its interactive format—members are encouraged to present a book of their choice, offering personal insights and sparking meaningful conversations with others.

By combining creativity, education, and community spirit, the MACFEST book club reflects the festival's broader mission to celebrate Muslim heritage while creating inclusive opportunities for dialogue and cultural exchange.

MACFEST Social Group

A safe and welcoming space for connection and shared experiences

We are introducing an exciting new initiative in the form of a MACFEST social group designed to bring people together in a welcoming and safe environment. This initiative aims to create a space where members can connect, share experiences, and build meaningful relationships within the community.

With the potential to grow into a full membership programme, the social group will also offer added benefits, including access to early bird tickets for MACFEST events.
