

Kidney Contenders interview with Kyle Reyes, Stealth Marketing Guru with Conservative Marksmanship

KC: There appears to be a divide in the United States, between liberals and conservatives, youth and the aged, and this divide can be metaphorically put on one big chess board. If you were to put this divide on one big chess board then how are we the citizens defining our leadership?

KR: Let's examine our two most important pieces on our "chess board" in comparison to two important forms of preservation for our country; they organize, arm and discipline the rights that allow our individual leadership. Are our constitutional principles struggling to maintain their placeholder because our citizens are now restructuring our civil liberties?

KC: Should our citizens blame millennials and their vision for this restructuring of our civil liberties?

KR: We can blame millennial, social media keyboarding warrior surges, but millennials are the offspring of generation X and Y, so their projection of “clear vision” for leadership is questionable.

KC: “Clear Vision” seems less conservative, less liberal, less independent and more dependent, do you agree?

KR: This “Clear Vision” seems more strategic and imposing on our civil liberties, less check mate more checked.

KC: Who do you contend for?

KR: "Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness" with a conservative twist.

Kyle Reyes, CEO, The Silent Partner Marketing & National Spokesman, Law Enforcement Today

Company Website: <http://www.thesilentpartnermarketing.com/>

Follow on LinkedIn: <https://www.linkedin.com/in/thesilentpartner/>