A PRAYER FOR PREGNANT MOTHERS

O Blessed Mother, you received the good news of the incarnation of Christ, your Son, with faith and trust. Grant your protection to all pregnant mothers facing difficulties.

Guide us as we strive to make our parish communities places of welcome and assistance for mothers in need. Help us become instruments of God's love and compassion.

Mary, Mother of the Church, graciously help us build a culture of life and a civilization of love, together with all people of good will, to the praise and glory of God, the Creator and lover of life.* Amen.

The Three Principles

Catholic social teaching is built on three principles: Human Dignity, Solidarity and Subsidiarity (Pope St. John Paul II, 55) > Pope Benedict XVI >, the greatest of which the Church insists is the first: A correct understanding of the human person embodied in the principle of Human Dignity: This is the prime principle!

Catholic social teaching informs us that good governments and good economic systems find ways of fostering the three principles. It "is not an economic or political programme, but it offers a powerful way of thinking about what the common good requires, and how structures in society can promote or undermine human well-being and the requirements of justice." Victims

In 2019 there were 915 late term abortions in Florida at 20 weeks or later. That’s the equivalent of 15 school buses full of children missing in Florida in just one year. This puts Florida in the company of New York and New Jersey in the top tier of states that allow late-term abortion.

Old notions that unborn babies cannot feel pain are now refuted by a growing body of scientific evidence. The published scientific literature shows that unborn babies can experience pain at 20 weeks probable gestational age.

Polling released in 2019 shows 76% of Florida voters – including 64% of Democrats, 75% of Independents, 77% of women, and 53% of self-described pro-choice voters – support a law prohibiting late-term abortions (only 24% support allowing late-term abortions).

THE EXECUTION OF LISA MONTGOMERY

January 18, 2021 | Post on the death penalty
by Rebecca Brady in collaboration with Dcn.
Farias, Director of Prison Ministry for the Archdiocese of Miami's Let's Talk Blog.

Florida's Death Penalty: A Brief History

1924—Frank Johnson is the first inmate executed in Florida's electric chair.

1972—In Furman vs. Georgia, the U.S. Supreme Court holds that capital punishment is unconstitutional, striking down state death penalty laws nationwide and creating new guidelines for a new death penalty.

1976—The Supreme Court begins to approve new state laws for capital punishment.

1979—Executions resume in Florida; John Spink becomes the first death row inmate to be executed under the new statutes.

1998—Judias "Judy" Buenoano becomes the first woman to die in Florida's electric chair.

2000—Florida passes legislation allowing lethal injection as an alternative execution method; Edward Castro, through lethal injection, is the 50th executed inmate in Florida.

2016—In Hurst vs. Florida, the U.S. Supreme Court finds that Florida's death sentencing scheme violates the U.S. Constitution which requires a jury, not a judge, to make the findings necessary to impose a death sentence.

2017—In response to Hurst, Florida governor signs into law a bill requiring juries be unanimous in recommending a death sentence. Prior to this law, Florida was the only state with the death penalty that did not require juries be unanimous in the finding of aggravating circumstances and allowed a simple majority vote (7-5) to impose a death sentence.

Florida's Death Penalty: Today

As of July 2019, 341 individuals are on Florida's death row; three of them are women.¹

As of July 2019, 98 inmates have been executed since Florida reinstated the death penalty in 1976.²

In 2016, Florida was one of only five states that carried out executions, was one of only five states that imposed more than one death sentence, and housed the country's second largest death row.³

Florida's Death Penalty: The Problem

Racial disparities: Research has consistently come to the conclusion that defendants are much more likely to be sentenced to death if the victims are white. In 2017, Mark Asay became the first white person executed in Florida for killing an African American person.

Florida is an outlier: 20 states and the District of Columbia have repealed the death penalty. An additional four have declared gubernatorial moratoria.

In 2016, the Fair Punishment Project published a report identifying 16 counties, out of 3000+ nationwide, that sentenced more than five people to death between 2010-2015. Four of them are in Florida.

Arbitrariness: Florida's new law requiring jury unanimity to impose a death sentence has been held to be partially retroactive, only allowing those whose sentences were finalized after June 2002 to be eligible for resentencing.

Cost: It is estimated that one execution costs taxpayers $20 million. Taxpayers pay approximately $51 million per year to enforce the death penalty in Florida, above and beyond what it would cost to punish all first-degree murderers with life in prison without parole.⁴

Alternatives exist: The appeals and retrials processes frequently end in a life sentence, a result that readily could have been obtained with far less expense.

Botched executions: At least five Florida executions have had complications leading to extraordinary suffering, most recently in the 2006 case of Angel Diaz.⁵

Have we executed the innocent? As of July 2019, Florida has exonerated and freed 29 inmates from death row, more than any other state in the country.

According to a 2009 statement by Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia, the Supreme Court "has never held that the Constitution forbids the execution of a convicted defendant who has had a full and fair trial but is later able to convince a habeas court that he is 'actually' innocent."⁶

Florida's Death Penalty: What the Catholic Church Teaches

"Recourse to the death penalty on the part of legitimate authority, following a fair trial, was long considered an appropriate response to the gravity of certain crimes and an acceptable, albeit extreme, means of safeguarding the common good.

Today, however, there is an increasing awareness that the dignity of the person is not lost even after the commission of very serious crimes. In addition, a new understanding has emerged of the significance of penal sanctions imposed by the state.

Lastly, more effective systems of detention have been developed, which ensure the due protection of citizens but, at the same time, do not definitively deprive the guilty of the possibility of redemption.

Consequently, the Church teaches, in the light of the Gospel, that 'the death penalty is inadmissible because it is an attack on the inviolability and dignity of the person', and she works with determination for its abolition worldwide." (Catechism of the Catholic Church, No. 2267)

"You shall not kill." (Exodus 20:13)

"Do not court death by your erring way of life, nor draw to yourselves destruction by the works of your hands. Because God did not make death, nor does he rejoice in the destruction of the living." (Wisdom 1:12-13)

"...we do not wish to have the sufferings of the servants of God avenged by the infliction of precisely similar injuries in the way of retaliation. Not, of course, that we object to the removal from these wicked men of the liberty to perpetrate further crimes; but our desire is rather justice be satisfied without taking of their lives..." (St. Augustine, Letter 133)

"When the state, in our names and with our taxes, ends a human life despite having non-lethal alternatives, it suggests that society can overcome violence with violence. The use of the death penalty ought to be abandoned not only for what it does to those who are executed, but for what it does to all of society." (USCCB, A Culture of Life and the Penalty of Death)
