HOW TO TREAT A 4 WAY INTERSECTION

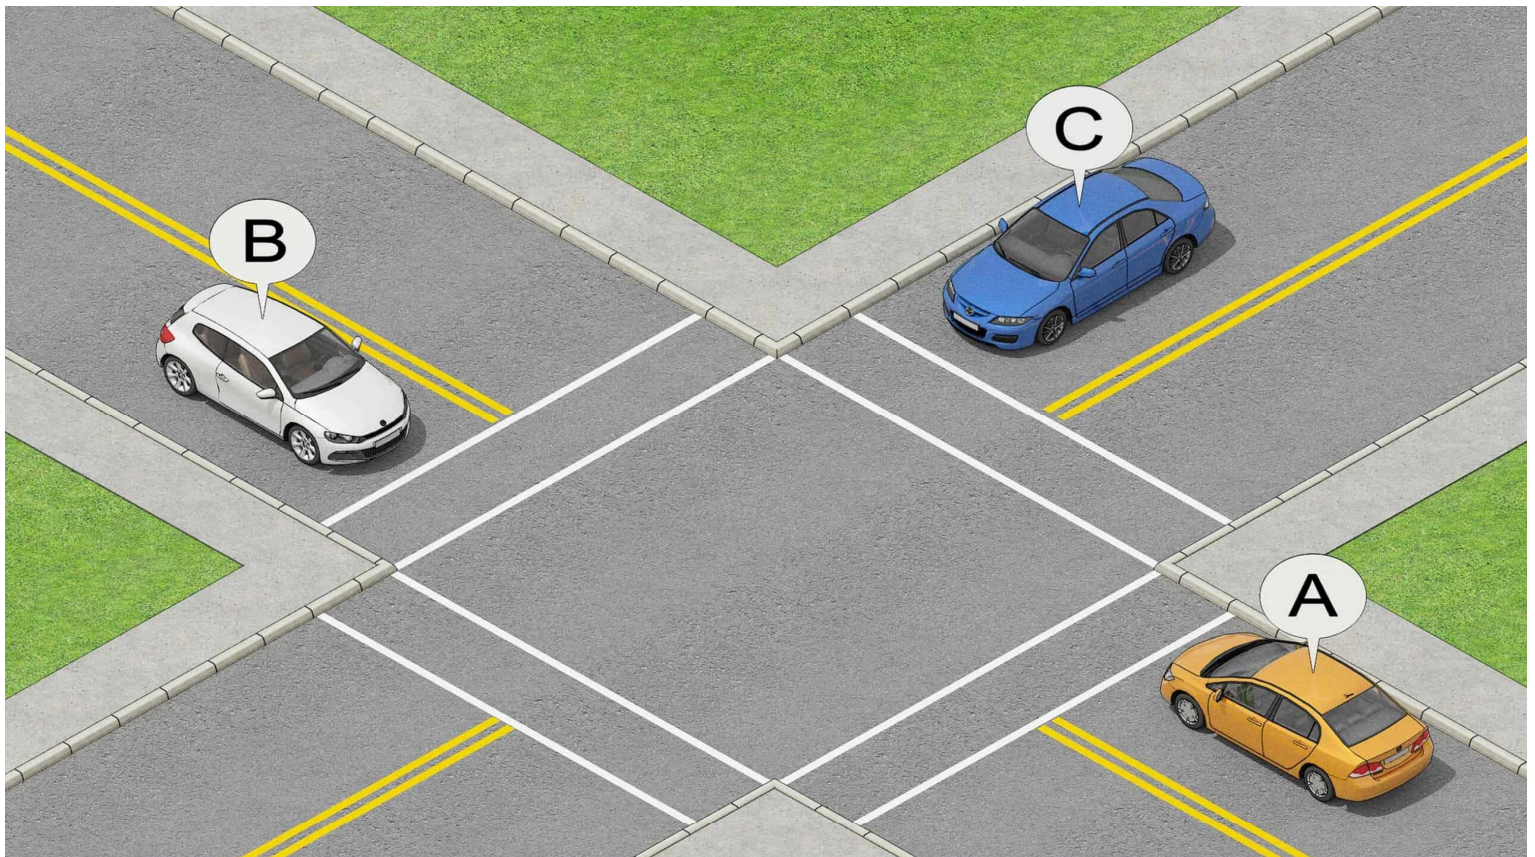

An uncontrolled intersection doesn't have any traffic control systems to help determine the right-of-way, such as stop signs, yield signs, pavement markings, traffic lights, or other authorized persons directing traffic.

When there are no traffic signs or traffic signals to indicate who should proceed first, you must drive with caution and use the basic right-of-way rules to determine who must yield the right-of-way. The right-of-way at an uncontrolled intersection is generally determined by road positioning, who came first and where each driver intends to go.

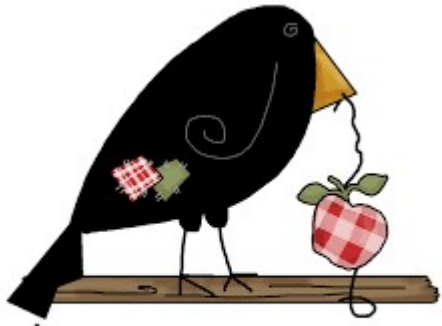

What Does Yielding the Right-Of-Way Mean?

Yielding the right-of-way to another vehicle or pedestrians means that you must slow down or stop to let them pass.

Right-of-way rules at uncontrolled intersections are designed to allow vehicles to move in a predictable way in all situations where their paths cross each other. You aren't required to stop at an uncontrolled intersection in most states unless there's other traffic or pedestrians nearby, but you should always slow down as a safety precaution.

DON'T ignore leaky sprinklers.

Keep an eye on the general water flow of the whole sprinkler system. Make sure water pressure is consistent, and that there are no drier or wetter areas than others on the lawn. Take action as soon as you notice the leak in the sprinkler itself or see puddles in the surrounding lawn.

Don't flush wipes.
