About the Song

'Little Fairy' casts a spellbinding soundscape, with inspired harp, acoustic guitar, and cello laying the foundation for a new and original song based on a traditional Irish tune. Singer/songwriter Olivia Bradley's soaring lyrical soprano leads the way with Ashley Davis's rich and grounded vocals providing contrast, emotional depth, and beautiful blended harmonies. Including both English and Irish language lyrics (the latter translated by Cormac de Barra), 'Little Fairy' weaves together ancient folk traditions, modern rhythms, and classical elegance, providing a peaceful escape into a world of wonder.

About Olivia

American born with Irish and Scottish heritage, Olivia grew up with a love for Celtic music and culture. With a background in Irish step dance, sean-nós (old style) singing, and bodhran (Irish drum) playing, she had the opportunity to learn from a host of talented trad singers and musicians. Recent collaborators include Ashley Davis (featured on Olivia's new original single, 'Little Fairy'), Cormac De Barra, Dave Curley, and Colin Farrell, with other notable influences including Cathy Jordan, Seamus Begley, Cathie Ryan, John Doyle, and Joanie Madden.

In addition to her traditional roots, Olivia is a classically trained singer with an extensive background in musical theater and opera. Blessed with perfect pitch, she also interned with Lisa Kelly, founding member of Celtic Woman, and has performed with Sarah Brightman, Emmet Cahill, and with John Maschinot as a member of the Celtic Company and Ah Surely.

Apart from singing with her own band, since 2021 Olivia has been a lead vocalist with the Celtic Angels, performing across the US on their main Spring and Christmas tours. In 2023 she co-produced and released her debut album, Misty Morning Shore, which includes popular and traditional Irish song selections, all sung with Olivia's powerfully clear, emotional, and lyrical style.
