Canine Cough (aka Kennel Cough)

Although your dog has been vaccinated, it is important to understand that there are numerous strains of respiratory infection. It is not uncommon for pets to be vaccinated with the Bordetella vaccine (aka: Kennel Cough) and contract respiratory infections via an airborne virus, including canine cough. If your pet shows signs of respiratory infection, we strongly advise to contact your veterinarian as soon as possible.

Broughton's Kennels is committed to taking all possible measures to help reduce the risk of canine cough and other respiratory infections; however, we will not be held responsible if your pet contracts a respiratory infection or any other airborne virus during their stay with us.
