Behavioural Change Consultant & Executive Coach

Hi, I'm Graham. I'm motivated by a passion for enabling people like you to realise your full potential, so you can overcome the barriers that get in your way. Nice to meet you.

My expertise comes from real-world experiences across the globe consulting, coaching, speaking and facilitating engaging team development initiatives for organisations large and small, supporting their transformation through cutting edge, bespoke interventions that have had proven impact on individual and organisational performance.

I have a particular interest in developing Multi-Generational teams to collaborate more effectively. I love to listen, learn and meet clients like yourself where you are. Any invitation to explore a new way forwards is built off a foundation of mutual trust, respect and interest to grow.

Inside me is a hunger to learn about what makes people tick, why they make the decisions they make and crucially how peoples' motivation can be ignited to achieve what they aspire to be. I genuinely believe anything is possible, you just have to find the way to make it happen. This guides the way I go about coaching people – exploratory, curious, brave.

My background is in the Pharmaceutical Industry spanning various Operational, Leadership and Strategic roles, including Learning & Development.

I hold an MSc in Coaching and Behavioural Change from Henley Business School, am an accredited MBTI practitioner and hold membership at the Henley Centre for Coaching and Behavioural Change.

In my spare time I can be found either enjoying life with my wife Lisa, son Thomas and Alaskan Malamute Boba. Or exercising in preparation for an endurance adventure somewhere in the world.
