The collection of historical music instruments at the Germanic National Museum Nuremberg is known as the largest collection of historic key instruments with the emphasis on hammergrand and squarepianos.

Working with and for owners of all kinds of pianos, our museum is always the institution to be asked for their professional help. The Piano Encyclopaedia written by Jens-Uwe Witter is known at this museum as a significant work and as a “big help” to all of us. The book provides 31.000 registrations about key instrument-making.

Mr. Witter’s work not only shows names, it also offers the address, date, and detailed information. This is extremely helpful to define an instrument.

As we know, Mr.Jens-Uwe Witter is continuing working on completing his extensive list . For our work, his efforts are highly appreciated. His work has great impact on our success We are hoping that his book will have another edition in the near future.
