

HEATH OWENS

Growing up in the country in southern Idaho with a classic country heritage as the great grandson of Buck Owens, Heath Owens is leaving behind a dust cloud of memorable tunes wherever he goes. Heath's songs blend a combination of real life, soulful lyricism and angst-y unavoidable singalong choruses that draw from his vast influences in alt-country, southern rock and 90s punk. In this new era for country music, the forging of new subgenres is similar to the newly carved waterways after a flood. Heath's songs are finding their home in the evolving alt-country landscape. His original music offers a variety of styles that have grown with him through the years. Each song is rooted in country music, but distinctly differs from one another. Hot on the heels of trailblazing bands like 49 Winchester, Treaty Oak Revival and Muscadine Bloodline, Heath, his brother, Tennessee Owens, and the band are putting together new music to be released in Fall 2025 through early 2026 with the help of seasoned producer Grady Saxman at Saxman Studios in Nashville.

Heath signed his first booking and management deal with Julee Ann Seymour of Smokeshow Entertainment in early 2025 and has since developed his sound and performances to the point of sharing the stage with The Lowdown Drifters, Sundance Head, Them Dirty Roses, Daring Greatly, Emily Hollingshed, Hunter Hayes and Josh Turner. With several notable performances at fairs and festivals under his belt, he looks forward to all the touring season in 2026 has to offer after his national booking debut.

Heath currently splits his time between his home in Idaho, his band house in Oklahoma and his grandfather's farm in Tennessee, making the most of his time with friends both in and out of the music industry and family members in every location. He currently has bands in Idaho, Oklahoma and Tennessee which make him ready to book in any U.S. market!
