

Community Impact

Local businesses struggle to hire: Owners cite sinking unemployment rates, high housing costs as cause of the problem

November 14, 2018 | By Miranda Jaimes | Workforce leadership

"It kind of gets to the point where it's almost bidding which restaurant is going to pay more for the same position."

Coverage summary

A broader business and workforce report uses Carlos DeLeon, then General Manager of Winewood Grill, as a restaurant-industry source. He is quoted on recruiting, employee commuting, housing affordability, wage competition, flexible scheduling, retention pressures, and the potential impact of TEXRail on staffing.

Why this matters

Shows that independent journalists treated Carlos as a subject-matter source on restaurant labor, workforce economics, compensation pressure, scheduling, and operating constraints.

Original source

Read the original article at Community Impact

<https://communityimpact.com/grapevine-colleyville-southlake/business/local-businesses-struggle-to-hire-owners-cite-sinking-unemployment-rates-high-housing-costs-as-cause-of-the-problem/>

This is an original press-summary document prepared for Carlos DeLeon / DeLeon Restaurant Consulting. The full article is not reproduced. Copyright remains with the original publisher.