Unsung American Wine Regions

April 8, 2015 | By Amanda Baltazar | Beverage leadership

“The local blends are the most popular wines, says general manager/wine director Carlos Deleon.”

Coverage summary

A national beverage-industry feature on emerging U.S. wine regions identifies Carlos DeLeon as the general manager and wine director of Winewood Grill in Grapevine, Texas. The article cites him on Texas wine performance and specific selections within a roughly 250-wine program.

Why this matters

Independent trade-publication recognition of beverage leadership, wine-program management, product selection, and on-premise consumer insight.
