Charley Parkhurst

Pat Bush

“Charlotte shivered in the cold New Hampshire morning. Her mother and father had been recently killed in a wagon accident. It was tragic to lose her parents at such an early age. It was more traumatic when her uncle decided to send her and her brother to an orphanage. As she neatly braided her long hair, she wondered what living in an orphanage would be like. She knew her brother would probably not stay long since boys could become an apprentice in trades such as carpentry or blacksmithing. Charlotte envied him. She knew it was unthinkable for a girl to have such opportunities. Sighing, she took her small bundle of belongings and walked to the living room where the trustees for the orphanage were waiting for the two children. Departing in the carriage, Charlotte left behind the life she had always known.

Soon after arriving, Charlotte’s brother became an apprentice and left the orphanage. Before leaving he secretly gave Charlotte some of his clothes, as they both realized it was the only way she could support herself outside of the orphanage.

Then one night she cut her hair and left quietly, embarking on an odyssey that would take her on a lifelong journey of danger and deception. Masquerading as a boy, she changed her name to Charley. She found a job as a stable boy on a farm. From that time on everyone thought Charley was a boy. For a long time she mucked the stalls, and she walked and fed the horses. When her employers realized how good she was with horses, Charley was allowed to ride them for their daily exercise. A natural progression from menial duties, she drove a stagecoach to and from neighboring towns.

Now answer the questions about this part of the selection.

1. Why did Charlotte envy her brother?

- A. He was a boy.
- B. She wanted to be a blacksmith.
- C. Boys didn't have to do housework.
- D. Boys who had jobs could leave the orphanage.

2. In paragraph 3, the author states that Charlotte embarked on an odyssey.
The word odyssey means

- A. danger and deception.
- B. an extended adventure.
- C. masquerade.
- D. change your name.

At a time when a lady's options were limited to household duties, Charlie enjoyed her time outside working with horses. Keeping her real identity from fellow workers became too burdensome, so she decided to head West. In this wild, unsettled, and rugged land, nobody asked questions about one's past. Charlie continued life as a man driving a stagecoach during the gold-rush days in California.

Charley was only about 5'6" in height, slim and wiry, and had attentive gray eyes. She did not speak very often, and when she did, her voice was oddly sharp and high-pitched. Charley wore a patch over one eye either to distract people from the lack of a beard, or because she had been injured by a horse. She refused to bunk with the other drivers. Instead, she slept in barns with the horses to maintain her privacy.

A skilled driver, Charley took danger and hardship in stride. On one trip, one-eyed Charley was carrying a large amount of gold. Sensing danger, she felt the hair on the back of her neck rise. Suddenly two masked gunmen jumped from behind a pile of boulders. The outlaws pointed six-shooters at her and demanded the gold. Too fast for the thieves to know what was happening, Charley swung her shotgun around and fired. They dropped. Charley put down her gun, ignoring the cheers of her passengers. She was only doing her job. From that time on, no outlaw dared mess with Charley. They were afraid of meeting the same fate.

In Charley's day, women were not allowed to vote. But Charley was not known to be female. Ulysses S. Grant ran for president in 1868. Charley cast her vote in November of that year, becoming the first woman ever to vote in a presidential election.

Now answer the questions about this part of the selection.

6. Charley was the first woman to vote for a president because
- A. people thought she was a man.
 - B. she was responsible.
 - C. everyone in California was allowed to vote.
 - D. she was good with horses.

She gained the respect of almost all of the people in the towns and stations she served. She helped women during childbirth, set broken bones, donated money to needy causes, and kissed babies. Charley was plagued by arthritis after long years of heat, cold, rain, and snow. Aches and pains were part of her daily routine. However, people knew her stagecoach would arrive on time. Nothing could stop her, neither wrecks in flooded washes nor wild pigs in the road. More than once she had to pull flailing passengers from a shattered coach. Still the passengers and mail continued to be delivered.

Charley woke one morning so stiff she was reluctant to take the stagecoach on its run. As she painfully walked across the barn floor, she decided it was time to retire. She purchased a stagecoach station because a sedentary life was not for her. Each day, drivers knew she would be patiently waiting for them to come around the bend. She would wave at the first sound of horses pulling another load of the gold seekers.

One day Charley was not outside. The driver pulled up and gave a loud “whoa” to stop the horses; still Charley was nowhere in sight. The driver knew something was wrong. When he entered the small station house, he found Charley. She had died in her sleep. Until that day, nobody had suspected this extraordinary pioneer was a woman.

In the summer of 1896, gold fever spread like wildfire across North America. According to rumors, someone had found gold near the Klondike River in Canada. Hopeful men and women were stricken with gold fever. People combed western Canada and Alaska in search of the precious metal. Nome, Alaska, was first settled as a mining camp. It became an important hub of the gold rush. Fortune seekers relied on the growing city for supplies.

Prospectors grumbled but were willing to face the hardships. They chose to endure the harsh, frigid weather for a chance to become wealthy. Lives were lost in the freezing, arctic climate. Gritty miners searched the land for hidden riches. Burros plodded beside their masters with huge boxes of mining supplies. They were also laden with food items such as flour, beef jerky, and beans. Fresh vegetables were scarce.

There were many other hazards. Danger lurked everywhere. A ghastly fate awaited anyone who stumbled upon a grizzly bear. Bandits often robbed miners of their gold.

Some lucky miners struck gold in the mother lode. They filled their coffers with treasure. Most, however, returned home empty handed.

The Oregon Trail began in Saint Louis, Missouri. 8
 Pioneers were hoping to establish homesteads in the 16
 West. Settlers were advised to only pack basic food 25 items. With drinking water, clothing, and cooking 32 utensils, a covered wagon weighed more than three tons. 41
 Some people tried to take too much. So the trail was 52
 littered with abandoned belongings. 56
 The westward migration began in early spring. 63
 Pioneers needed to make it across the mountains before 72 winter. The people and livestock required water. 79
 They also needed relief from the sizzling sun. For these 89 reasons, the trail followed various rivers. Oregon’s 96
 Columbia River marked the final leg of the journey. 105
 Pioneers were robust people. They had a great sense 114 of adventure. Fathers drove the wagons. Mothers and 122 young children rode in the wagons. Older sons and 131 daughters herded animals alongside the caravan. 137
 The wooden wagon seats were hard and uncomfortable. 145
 To get relief, banged and bruised riders jumped off their 155 wagons and walked. 158
 Encounters with hostile Indians were not very 165 common. Contrary to old, western movies, “circle the 173 wagons” was not a cry to fend off Indians. It was an 185 order by the wagon master. It meant it was time to form 197
 a corral for horses and oxen. 203
 The journey wasn’t always unbearable. Settlers took 210 time to have fun. They told stories, sang, and danced 220 around the campfire. 223
