“If you are planning for a year, sow rice; if you are planning for a decade, plant trees; if you are planning for a lifetime, educate people.” Chinese Proverb

Checklist

- Set up a positive and supportive classroom environment. This includes creating a physical space that is inviting and comfortable, as well as establishing clear expectations for behavior and learning.
- Get to know your students. This means learning about their individual strengths, weaknesses, and interests. It also means building relationships with them so that they feel comfortable and supported in your classroom.
- Teach students the essential skills and knowledge they need to succeed. This includes both academic skills, such as reading and writing, as well as social-emotional skills, such as cooperation and problem-solving.
- Encourage students to be active learners. This means providing them with opportunities to explore, experiment, and make mistakes. It also means giving them feedback so that they can learn from their experiences.
- Create a culture of respect and collaboration. This means teaching students to value each other's differences and to work together to achieve common goals.
- Celebrate student successes. This helps to build students' confidence and motivation to learn.

By following these tips, you can set the foundation for a successful school year that will benefit your students for a lifetime.

The first six weeks of school are an essential time to lay the foundation for a successful year. By taking the time to plan carefully and implement these strategies, you can set your students up for success in the years to come.
