

Chord Diminution

Chord Diminution is a technique that you can practice with any chords that you want to learn to switch to. The idea is that you insert a “time frame” between the chords you are learning and then begin to diminish the “time frame” as you master the motion of switching between the chords or chord progressions.

A couple of things to keep in mind are to analyze your fingers as you move from chord to chord to make sure that you are moving efficiently between them and conserving energy. Also, within the time frame process these steps in your mind:

1. What chord am I going to next? VISUALIZE IT
2. What fingers am I moving? ANSWER WHERE THEY ARE GOING
3. Then psych yourself out and move the fingers in one motion? IT IS OK TO MOVE ONE FINGER AT A TIME IN THE BEGINNING

This lesson goes perfectly with YouTube Lesson 6, and to view a better description of the chords download the “Beginner Chords” PDF
