Meet the Band

Lou Rossi – Guitar/Vocals/Musical Director

From Los Angeles, Lou was introduced to music early in life, his parents' record collection made sure he was well steeped in popular and jazz music of the day; Nat King Cole, Tony Bennett, Tommy Dorsey Orchestra, Sergio Mendez and Brazil 66, Herb Alpert and the Tijuana Brass, to name but a few. Lou had early exposure to the guitar as well. At age four, his brother, in high school at that time, gave guitar lessons and played guitar in a surf band. In Lou's first band, at age 13, Lou played covers of popular rock songs of the day. And he would continue to work in Classic Rock, Pop, R&B and Jazz bands for the next five decades. Lou discovered Jimi Hendrix at age 14 and sailed through high school with blinders on; searching out every Hendrix recording he could find. College brought a new adventure; all the students in the Music Department were listening to jazz and fusion. Virtually overnight, Lou stopped listening to Hendrix and started listening to George Benson. A myriad of great jazz artists soon joined Lou's listening roster. In 1999, Lou recorded his first CD as leader; Powers Of Three, by The Lou Rossi Jazz Posse, features two original compositions and a handful of classic jazz covers. Lou has appeared on several albums of diverse musical styles on both guitar and bass guitar.

Gene McAllister – Drums/Percussion

Gene "Geno" McAllister was born and raised in Kearny, New Jersey. He started playing drums at a very early age and is completely self-taught. During his high school years, he played timpani in a classical music orchestra exchange in Toronto Canada. He also participated in jazz projects as well as wedding bands, rock bands, blues bands, original music bands and funk/dance bands. In the 80's Geno professionally recorded tracks for an original rock band in New York City. He has played at countless clubs including The Dirt Club, CBGB's, and the Showplace. Geno returned to the music scene after a long career in law enforcement.
