Greetings,

My name is Joseph Dovidio. I am a 2013 BSN graduate of Villanova University. My formative years as a nurse were spent at the University of Maryland in Baltimore as a Surgical ICU Nurse. I then returned to Pennsylvania where I worked in the Lehigh Valley as a Medical ICU/Surgical ICU Nurse which allowed me the opportunity to learn about ECMO. I graduated from the University of Pennsylvania's Adult-Gerontology Acute Care NP Masters of Nursing in 2019.

I quickly found myself in the Cardiovascular ICU at Thomas Jefferson University Hospital. I was able to really dedicate myself to my work and learned a great deal, especially through our handling of the COVID pandemic. I am currently a 2024 Doctoral Candidate at UPenn. I have become very passionate about delivering care in the most efficient and effective ways. I believe leveraging the APP role can help physicians greatly, especially in acute and critical care environments. This includes further research on APP performed procedures including point of care diagnostic testing. This has led me to an exciting career in the CSICU at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center starting March 2023!

Enough professional stuff! I am a Philly transplant now living in LA with my husband Ethan, rescue pup Teddy, and a spotted leopard gecko named Mr. Wiggles! I am a prolific house plant caregiver. We also enjoy reading, gaming and going to local shows whether it be music, comedy or drama! We love exploring local restaurant scenes and the arts. I enjoy fostering strong morale among my colleagues. I think every department needs a night out together from time to time!
