Electrolysis

Electrolysis is an FDA-approved method that permanently removes unwanted hair. The treatment procedure involves inserting a thin probe called an epilator into each hair follicle. To ensure a new hair can't grow there, the epilator generates an electric current to destroy the hair follicle.

Once the hair follicle is removed, the hair easily slips out of the follicle and is discarded. Treatment sessions can last anywhere from 15 minutes to several hours, depending on how many hairs you want removed. Electrolysis works on every hair color and hair type, unlike laser treatment.

Benefits of Electrolysis:

There are many benefits when you choose electrolysis for hair removal. Here are just a few reasons why people prefer this method to other hair removal treatments:

- Is FDA-approved
- Removes ingrown hairs
- Is ideal for all skin types
- Removes hair permanently
- Helps create smaller pores
- Requires minimal downtime
- Improves skin texture and tone
- Works for people with low pain tolerance
- Reduces the appearance of fine lines and wrinkles

In comparison, there are very few downsides to using electrolysis. In rare cases, it can cause hyperpigmentation in the skin. However, when you take good care of your skin and are treated by a skilled technician, this is unlikely.
