What was it like growing up for you?

“I feel like growing up I had a pretty good life. Considering the fact that I was raised by a single mother, things turned out great for us. The few negative experiences that I did encounter helped mold me into the person I am today.”

What sparked your interest in modeling?

I started getting into a tv show called America's Next Top Model whither Tyra Banks and the whole show inspired me! The competition, the creativity of the shoots the models had to do, and watching the runway shows and commercials the models would have to do made me able to see myself doing exactly that, even at age 14. I knew that I could do what all those models did- and better!

What type of model do you consider yourself?

I consider myself a catalog/ commercial model. Im 5'7, and I'm a lot of circumstances that's a few inches too short for runway. Even though I've done numerous runway shows, pursuing my dream will take me down the path of commercial and catalog!

Out of the millions of models in world, what make you stand out?

Out of the millions of models in the world, I believe I stand out because of my vision. I have gauges and a nose piercing, but unlike most high fashion agency's I believe that to be a distinct look. I believe my facial features are a bit exotic due to my german background and I use that as well as my body modifications and body language in posing to portray a very artistic image. My vision is to be an icon for the world and show that body modifications like mine add to a distinct look, and still be high fashion.

Where do you see yourself in 10yrs?

In 10 years I'll be owning my own marketing firm in California and strongly pursuing my modeling career.

Im currently 19, and I'm on track to be opening up my own office in a state of my choosing by the time

I'm able to have a legal drink. Once I'm established in California I'll be able to focus on signing with an agency that's acceptable of body modifications. My mid 20's is dedicated to making my dreams of becoming an international model a reality.

“..never give up and never let anyone tell you that your dreams are unrealistic.
Put yourself where you
need to be and surround yourself with who you want to be.”
