The Discovery Process: Where to Look

“Emotions are like the gold embedded in mountains. No matter how much you dig out, there's always more, somewhere. And, of course, there's fool's gold and real gold, like with emotions. To be able to tell the difference between superficial music that may excite your taste like sugar, and great music that nourishes you forever, requires a lot of digging. But what an adventurous dig it is!”

HELP SUPPORT THE WIND REPERTORY PROJECT!

The Wind Repertory Project is and always will be free for all to use...but maintaining the site comes at a cost. from web hosting to domain registration and more. We've recently doubled the amount of storage space, which has resulted in faster search speeds and page loading (hopefully you've noticed!) To keep the WRP ad-free and independent, we rely on donations to cover these expenses. If you have ever benefited from the information on the site, please consider supporting its upkeep and maintenance with a DONATION - every contribution helps, no matter how small!

Welcome to The Wind Repertory Project™

A database of 29,712 articles, providing an online resource for wind band conductors, enthusiasts, and students.
Thank you to our DONORS for helping keep the WRP active!

The Wind Repertory Project™

The Wind Repertory Project™ is a comprehensive database of wind literature, expanded by contributions of band directors/conductors, students, and wind band enthusiasts worldwide. Our goal is to help you find detailed information about wind band literature, including program notes, instrumentation, errata, media links, academic resources, and more. Our small but mighty team is constantly adding new information on works and composers, and you can help as well, by contributing any relevant information, from recent performances to program notes you have written to errata you've discovered along the way.

Please visit our FAQ section, or jump in with both feet by creating an account. You can also help by donating, which helps offset the costs of hosting and upkeep. Please help us spread awareness of the WRP by forwarding a link to your colleagues, students, and anyone else you feel would benefit from the information within. Many thanks for your continued support!
