Creative Business Seeks Partners to Help Provide Journals to Women and Girls, Giving Them an Outlet!

Montgomery, Alabama - With the help of partners, an Alabama based business is on a mission to inspire and encourage women and girls to express themselves through the love of the arts and journaling. Call Me Set Free, owned by Katrina Hunter, a Montgomery, Alabama native, is a company founded on this sole purpose – to remind others that their past does not define them and that if they have a past, they also have a future. Call Me Set Free is passionate about the arts, seeing women and girls explore their creativity, discover their purpose, and be healed mentally, emotionally, and spiritually.

Hunter initially started the company as a faith-based blog site, however in recent months, the focus has shifted to creating unique, and tangible products with her artwork and designs. Products include prayer journals, blank journals, calendars, and apparel. Hunter hopes to provide books and journals at no cost, to churches, non-profit organizations, and shelters with the help of sponsorships. The types of organizations Hunter is seeking to support would include any organization that offers support services to women and girls to help them rise above their present circumstances.

"Drawing and painting have always been a way for me to escape my troubles, while writing and journaling equipped me to face my troubles head on. Journaling is a great way for people to write down their feelings, and help them prioritize problems, fears, and concerns. I love writing my thoughts down and getting them out of my system," says Hunter.

Hunter has donated her journals in the past to various groups on a smaller scale, but with sponsorship support, more donations to many organizations would be possible and would have a greater impact in the community.

Currently, Call Me Set Free would like to focus on organizations in the River Region area, and then eventually expand across the State of Alabama. “I want young girls and women to know that they are not forgotten and that someone is thinking of them. It brings me joy to know that I can take my creative gifts, share them, and bring a smile to someone’s else face with them. Creating a space for young girls and women to write down their dreams and feelings is a dream come true for me,” says Hunter.
