Definitions

“Modern slavery” describes situations where a person or entity uses coercion, threats, or deception to seriously exploit and undermine their freedom.

Modern slavery is defined in the Modern Slavery Act 2018 (Cth) as:

- Slavery, servitude, forced and compulsory labour;
- Committing any offense with the intention to commit human trafficking;
- Aiding, abetting, counselling, or procuring any of the above offences;
- Forced marriage, bonded labour, the worst forms of child labour; or
- Deceptive recruiting for labour or services

“Human trafficking” - the recruitment, harbouring and transportation/transfer or receipt of a person, by means of coercion, threat, deception, fraud, abuse of power and abduction for the exploitation through means of modern slavery.

“Slavery” - the condition where an offender exercises the powers of ownership over the victim, including the power to make a person an object of purchase and use their labour in an unrestricted way;

“Servitude” - the condition where the victim’s personal freedom is significantly restricted and because of the use of coercion, threat or deception, they are not free to stop working or leave their place of work;

“Forced labour” - the condition where the victim is not free to stop working or leave their place of work because of the use of coercion, threat or deception;

“Forced marriage” - the condition where the marriage in which one or both of the parties is married without his or her consent, against his or her will, through coercion, threat or deception or the victim does not comprehend or is incapable of understanding the nature and influence of the marriage ceremony;

“Deceptive recruiting” - the condition of a victim being deceived about whether they will be exploited through a form of modern slavery

“Bonded labour” - also referred to as debt bondage is the condition where a person must work to pay back an inherited debt or debt incurred as part of the terms of employment. The debt is unmistakably disproportionate, the victim’s services are not applied to eliminate the debt, or the duration and nature of the services are not limited and identified;

“Worst forms of child labour” - the condition where the work deprives the children of their childhood, their potential, and their dignity; work that exceeds a minimum number of hours; work that is mentally, physically, socially or morally dangerous and harmful to children; work that interferes with their schooling; or where children are used to produce or traffic drugs;

The terminology of “modern slavery” is only used to capture serious exploitation.

(a) It does not include practices related to substandard working conditions or underpayment of workers. Nevertheless, these practices are also illegal and harmful and may be present in some situations of the modern slavery act.

(b) These situations may escalate into a modern slavery breach if not addressed.
