

This design was created as a class project in AGCOM 110, Introduction to Agricultural Communication at Kansas State University. This course is offered through the Department of Communication and Agricultural Education. The objectives of this course include:

- Develop basic skills in various communications and journalism
- Demonstrate knowledge of AP style and target audiences through multiple writing assignments.
- Examine and discuss diverse perspectives about agriculture and food and how those perspectives relate to communications.
- Recognize and utilize both on-campus resources and personal growth resources to enhance their college experience.

In the Fall 2022 semester, the course was taught by new faculty member, Dr. Jacqueline Aenlle. “I was very excited when I found out that I would be teaching the intro class”, said Aenlle. “Working with incoming freshmen and transfer students to help welcome them to the University and to college is very rewarding.”

AGCOM 110 will be offered again in Fall 2023 and is open to freshmen, transfer students, or students pursuing a minor in agricultural communications.

“I WAS VERY EXCITED
WHEN I FOUND OUT
THAT I WOULD BE
TEACHING THE INTRO
CLASS.”

