- The library cannot provide technology help during the group's meeting, including for technology borrowed from the library. A training session for library technology may be scheduled in advance of the meeting.
- Except for government meetings taking place during library business hours, the person signing the reservation form must have a JLHPL account.

- The library does not provide typing or copying services, take messages, or furnish supplies to groups using the meeting room. During library hours, the library does, however, provide a photocopier for patron use for a fee.

- Maximum capacity for a meeting is thirty people.
- The library is not responsible for items brought into the building by persons attending the meeting.
- The organization reserving the meeting room shall assume all liability for personal and/or property damages arising from their use of the meeting room and shall hold the library blameless on any action brought against the library as a result of their use of the meeting room.
- User is responsible for seeing that the lights in the meeting room, lobby, and restrooms are turned off and that the front entrance doors are locked when leaving. Thermostat settings are pre-set and should not be disturbed.
