Lubricant Guide

Lubricant Type:	Water Based - No glycerin / sugar	Flavored or sensations	Water-Silicone Hybrid	Silicone Based	Petroleum / Oil Based
Pros / Cons:	Very safe and have multiple uses. Dries out quickly and needs to be reapplied frequently. Has a much lighter, wetter feel to it	Adds fun and different sensations, but many flavored & sensations type lubes are glycerin based, which can cause yeast infections.	Hybrid lubricants are a blend of water, clear or cream emulsifiers, and silicone. Hybrids are ideal to enhance natural lubrication, are longer lasting than water based formulas, and have a uniquely soft, velvety feel. They easily wash from skin and fabrics, are safe for most toys, and can also be used for light massage.	Great for water play. Have a more concentrated texture. Long lasting because silicone is not absorbed by the skin. Can damage certain materials and stain your sheets.	Never dries out and is the thickest of all lubes. Damages certain materials and can stain your sheets.

Wine is the greatest invention. Next to the vibrator, of course. The best sex I ever had was with my vibrator.

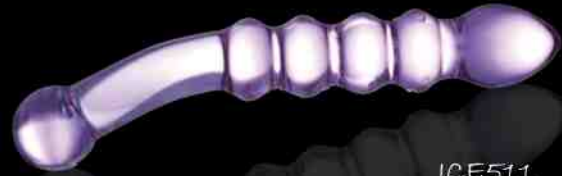

Glass

Glass is incredible! It can be used warmed or cooled, washed simply with soap & water, is nonporous, and has no allergens. Beautifully hand crafted, these creations are meant to last a lifetime when cared for properly.

Glass toys are made from Borosilicate Glass. This is a very specific glass composition that is 8-10 times stronger than regular glass. Borosilicate is the only ISO certified, medical grade, pharmaceutical grade glass what should be used for adult toys, as it is body safe.

Most people don't consider temperature play with toys because few toys are made for it. Glass is perfect for temperature play. Want to know more about temperature play? Talk with your Pleasure Specialist! Bring it up as a group if you like - you're not the only one curious and your friend might be afraid to ask!
