TEACHING PHILOSOPHY

My Philosophy is to improve your ball striking and create a repeatable swing. You must be able to find the correct impact position without making any compensating motions. I have a model swing that I build my lessons around. I adjust that model based on my student's body type and flexibility. My belief is the quickest way to improve your swing is to start with smaller swings and progress to bigger swings. I would like my students to do rehearsal swings and create a consistent motion rather than seeing the result of striking a golf ball. A successful practice session is one where you have a 2 to 1 ratio in practice swings to one golf ball. Two rehearsal swings to every one golf ball is the most efficient way to implementing a new feel to your golf swing. During your first lesson with me I will find out what you are trying to do in your swing, what the cause of your swing flaw and I will educate you on correcting that flaw. I will use drills, training aids and my knowledge to help you through this process. Better your game by improving your practice sessions.
