TEACHING PHILOSOPHY

Every player has his or her ideas of the proper golf swing. When starting with a player, an interview process needs to happen in order to understand their ideas. During the interview process you begin to mold a plan and process for the player. Every player will be different as body styles, strengths, and flexibility will be different. Simplify the golf swing and focus on fundamentals. Beginning with making our foundation (grip, posture, ball position and aim) as good as we can. The better the foundation, greater the chance of success. Players need to understand the power sources to create speed in their golf swing and to lower their effort levels to perform at the best of their ability. Working on one thing at a time to keep the thought process minimal and too much thought will paralyze a golf swing. A golf swing starts with balance and will finish with balance. Our lifetime of golfing we are trying to perfect our golf swing, one golf swing for all clubs.
