This book tells the story of 12-year-old Nina Norris who answers a call from civil rights leaders in Birmingham, Alabama in 1963, to protest in place of adults who risked losing their jobs. Knowing that she will likely be arrested, she stands strong willing to pay the price for voter rights.

This book introduces readers to a silly buffalo who tries to buff and fluff his way into being bigger than he is. As his friends see right past his bravado to his insecurity, readers will also be moved to reassure him that he's great no matter his size.

When a disastrous night on the town lands Chelsea Grant in hot water and with a punishment of working with her dad's paranormal removal service, she is less than thrilled. The new job, however, reveals that she is able to see the ghosts that her dad is hunting. This leaves Chelsea faced with a choice between the afterlife of a ghost and all her dad has worked for.

A perfect bedtime read, this story introduces readers to the basic words and simple vocabulary of the Arabic language through colorful rhymes and beautiful imagery used to highlight the diversity found in Arab culture.
