"This is a really interesting study of Lincoln, from an angle that is (as far as I know) unique. It's an interpretation of an aspect of Lincoln's psychology, which you call 'spirituality.' ... you are not only examining AL's spirituality, but reflecting on the nature of spirituality itself, and its possible roles in shaping character, values, behavior, world view...." Dr. Richard Slotkin, Wesleyan University, Emeritus. "A Great Disorder" Belknap Harvard

"This book offers a new, non-dogmatic, non-denominational way to feel the power of religious themes...in politics and culture." Rev. Dr. John Philip Newell, "Christ and the Celts" Wiley
