Darlene	A	Los Angeles	CA	USA	It was a blessing for a city girl like me to visit and stay at Palomar Mountain; I see myself coming back whenever I needed a quiet time. I've learned about the proposed transmission line project and it made me sad because it will not only scar the natural beauty of Palomar Mountain but also disrupt the delicate ecosystem, potentially harming local wildlife and their habitats. I believe that preserving the natural beauty and ecological integrity of Palomar Mountain is essential for future generations. NO to the transmission line!!!!

Chris	Aguilar	Oceanside	CA	USA	It would be devastating to our community for this plan to go forward. For our family, Palomar is paradise. The first place our son saw and played in snow. It's charming and pristine. I cannot imagine scarring the mountains and introducing the potentially dangerous high power lines which we know can and will cause wildfires. In an age where solar and other alternative energy sources are available it seems antiquated to build like this and potentially damage a thriving natural environment
Samara	Aguilar	Bellflower	CA	USA	There is beautiful native plants and native animals that deserve to live here. Them being here promotes biodiversity's benefits for every living thing. Jamie	Anderson	El Cajon	CA	USA	Palomar Mountain was my home for more than 10 years. Life circumstances moved me away a year and a half ago. I miss the mountain though. Its beauty and serenity are unmatched in Southern California. One thing I have noticed as I've hiked other trails in San Diego are how ruined my time is by high voltage power lines. I go out to try and escape the feel of the city only to feel the same raise in my nervous system once I'm anywhere near the constant hum of the power lines. Palomar was my refuge. The place I could be connected with nature and allow my whole body to relax. Now with the scare of that being taken away and the risk of fire heightened, I can't imagine what will happen to it. The residents human and non-human should be preserved. This has been the heart of the people living there for centuries. Please, respect all the love, work, and dedication to preserving the mountain environment that has been put in by generations of people by not allowing these power lines to go through it.

Margaret	Anderson	Valley Center	CA	USA	Palomar Mountain is a very special place for my husband and I along with extended family and friends. In 1985 our daughter Christine passed away at the age of 12. She loved Palomar Mountain. She joined the organization for girls called Campfire. When were given the choice by McLeod Mortuary of having her ashes scattered on Palomar Mountain by air we wanted that for her memory. Eternal Hills Crematory in Oceanside arranged to have her ashes scattered. I would imagine there are many more families that have loved ones ashes scattered on Palomar Mountain. To destroy this beautiful mountain would be a crime.

(Fire burned around us across the Cuca loop) where several homes and structures were burned. Power shut offs when high winds over 40 mph were projected. Linda	Ayers	Santee	CA	USA	Palomar Mountain is a treasure. I've enjoyed hiking, camping and visiting the observatory there since I was a child. The power lines would destroy the peace of the mountain. It would create an environment with toxic energy and sound thus destroying the very essence of this mountain, the tranquility away from the city. Our wildlife needs a place of safety from our human made problems and the forests do not need an added threat of wild fire. I lived through the wild fires that destroyed much of San Diego county. I have seen first hand what fire did to Cuyamaca Peak and many other areas where pine trees were abundant. Sadly the trees are gone and these areas will not recover. Please keep Palomar Mountain wild!

Giselle	B	San Marcos	CA	USA	Palomar Mountain is a beautiful and unique place to Southern California. It deserves to remain untouched and preserve its natural habitat, uniqueness, and beauty. Also, you will not find such beautiful trees anywhere else in Southern CA.
Andi & Dean	Babcock	Munich		Germany	Installing these powerlines on Palomar Mountain would be a big Crime! Palomar Mountain is a truly special & sacred place, pristine old growth forest and pristine nature that is very hard to find in Southern California. The local wild life is also so special. Cutting down the forest and natural habit for these powerlines is just wrong and the fire danger that it would create is horrific. We spent many years hiking, camping and building a simple off grid getaway cabin at Bailey's Meadow on Palomar. It always has been our happy place and it is so peaceful up on this mountain. I don't think many people realize how amazing and special Palomar Mountain is until they spend some time up there. Chris	Barnet	San Diego	CA	USA	Palomar mountain holds a special place to many of the people who live in San Diego. As a resident of the city of San Diego being able to drive a short distance to the nature of the mountain for cycling, hiking and camping is a huge benefit. One of the big draws of the city of San Diego is that you have access to undisturbed nature so close by. We already have big issue in the county with the risk of fire so to put big power lines in seems to be asking for trouble. The electrical utilities have a terrible track record of starting fires from there equipment and we don't want that here. I recently went to sequoia national forest which burned badly. The scars from it ruined the trip and I will not go back. Please don't risk this to Palomar mountain.

Livia	Berg	Cuca Ranch	CA	USA	Every time we drive the Palomar Mountain Loop it is a magical experience, like going back in time to a part of the most southern Sierra that still has miles of untouched wilderness. It feels like a sacred mountain, the “water catcher”, that was honored for thousands of years by the indigenous people who came here, to gather special acorns, hunt, and renew their connection to spirit thru ceremonial vision quest. It has that same effect on us, and we love to bring visitors here to catch the views and hike trails, away from any distraction of modern technology. That’s what we and so many others love about our special mountain, and we must preserve it.

Holly	Berkey	Valley Center	CA	USA	I am opposed to the building of a high voltage transmission line on Palomar Mountain and any surrounding areas within 100 miles. I have a few reasons as to why I believe this is not the area for a project of this type. The area this proposed transmission line is to be built in is a very high fire prone area. Currently the homeowners in the surrounding areas are being dropped from their homeowner insurances because of the location and proximity to fire possibilities. Most are having to get state insurance that is almost 3x the amount and some of their current coverages are not covered under the new state insurance. Many of the fires in our state have been started by electrical malfunctions from power lines. The families who have lost homes sometimes have waited years to get their money to rebuild from the companies who are responsible for these fires. Transmission line poles can be a fire hazard due to a number of reasons. Tracking is a combination of moisture, dust, and dirt building up on the power lines or insulators. This can create a path for electricity to travel to the pole, causing it to heat up and catch fire. Dry-band arcing is a combination of debris, condensation, mist, light rain, salt spray, or snow can create a conductive path for electricity to travel from the wires to the pole. Equipment failure of the overhead equipment can break down over time, causing current leakage and arcing. Transformers with oil-based cooling systems can fail during extreme loading or fire events, causing power outages and fire ignition points. My question would be to the developer and all companies associated with this project...would you be willing to guarantee there will not be a fire started by these lines? Can you also guarantee no human or animal life and their homes will lost because of this transmission line? Would you feel safe for your family to live around these type of projects? I have enjoyed visiting Palomar Mountain my entire life. We have and still continue to explore the miles of hiking trails and views from the top. We've seen mountain lions, deer, countless bunnies, squirrels and beautiful birds on our adventures through the woods. My children have many memories of snow days sledding down the hills in the Palomar Mountain Park. We take our out of state family to the Palomar Observatory and show them the beauty of our gorgeous mountain and the views of San Diego and Orange County it provides. This transmission line will not benefit the local citizens and residents that this project is being built through. Our electricity prices are already through the roof. Hopefully the powers that be will really look into the negatives on this project and see how they outweigh any benefits of those living in the areas where this project is projected to be built.

Karina	Bezkrovnaia	Encinitas	CA	USA	Our family has been on the mountain every week end of the year past 10 years. We hike in the Palomar SP, visit many friends who live on the mountain . We stayed on countless Airbnb locations because of the natural pristine beauty that mountain offers . We love that this mountain is hosting World famous observatory and is designated Dark Sky place. We are extremely concerned about this project to say the least ! As frequent visitors (I was there yesterday to appreciate Dogwoods) we know the weather patterns and what happens every season. Our state historically has incredibly high fire danger and Palomar mountain with extensive old forest growth is on that list of highly flammable places. Mountains get extreme high winds - not uncommon to have up to 100mi per hour gusts on the ridges. As a Sierra Club member I’m devastated to learn that the route for the towers will include our Palomar SP. How could that be ? When those designated spaces are to preserve few remaining wild life sanctuaries and old forests we have for the good of our planet and wellbeing of citizens. It much easier to destroy than preserve and I would urge you to protect our public lands for our children and generations to enjoy. There is incredible historical heritage and endangered species calling Palomar home. We believe that giving a green light to project of such magnitude is going to forever change that mountain and destroy all we hold dear.

John	C	San Marcos	CA	USA	Palomar Mountain should be preserved for our future generations. Not only is it sacred land passed down through our generations but it's should remain as such. It's disappointing corporations disregard nature and destroy it affecting much of the life surrounding the area. 4 of our generations have coming here for decades and many more to come. It's is disappointing to see the plans to destroy life.

Megan	Cahoon	Lemon Grove	CA	USA	Palomar Mountain is our favorite spot in San Diego County to camp! The mix of coniferous forest, wetlands and meadows are such a treat, a feed your soul type of spot. I'm so sad that huge towers are proposed on this much loved mountain. The thought of losing old growth trees, indigenous sites and spectacular views is crazy. There has to be another option for these towers. This land is precious.

Jocelyn	Chaloux	Rincon	CA	USA	Palomar Mountain Is Worth Protecting Palomar Mountain is more than a beautiful place on a map. It is a part of the landscape, the community, and the memories that generations of families have created there. Its forests, mountains, wildlife, fresh air, quiet roads, and breathtaking views are a natural treasure that should never be taken for granted. There is something special about being able to take your family to Palomar Mountain and simply slow down. To breathe fresh mountain air, take a walk, have a picnic, explore nature with your children, watch wildlife, or sit together surrounded by trees and silence. In a world that is constantly becoming more developed and crowded, places like Palomar Mountain give families an opportunity to reconnect with one another and with the land. Development that destroys or permanently alters the mountain's natural beauty comes with a cost. Once forests are cleared, habitats are disrupted, landscapes are changed, and the peaceful character of a place is lost, we cannot simply rebuild what was there before. Progress should never mean sacrificing irreplaceable natural spaces when there are ways to protect and responsibly care for them. Palomar Mountain has shaped the communities around it in ways that go far beyond tourism. It provides a sense of place and belonging. It contributes to the character of the surrounding communities and gives residents and visitors a place to gather, explore, and make memories. It is part of the identity of the region. Protecting Palomar Mountain is not about keeping people away. It is about making sure people can continue to enjoy it without destroying the very thing they came to experience. Visitors should be welcomed as guests of the mountain, with an understanding that we have a responsibility to leave it as beautiful—or more beautiful—than we found it. We should be thinking about our children and grandchildren when we make decisions about this land. The memories our families make today should still be possible for future generations. They deserve to see the towering trees, hear the birds, experience the cool mountain air, and stand in the same peaceful places that brought generations of people joy. Palomar Mountain does not need to be transformed to have value. Its value is already there. Let's protect its natural beauty. Let's protect its wildlife and forests. Let's protect its peaceful character and the family memories made there. And most importantly, let's respect the land enough to understand that not everything beautiful needs to be developed. Some places are meant to be experienced, respected, and preserved—not replaced. Palomar Mountain is one of those places.
Terry	Chapman	Temecula	CA	USA	This route is not beneficial to the Palomar Mountain area and beyond. It is an extreme fire hazard and a blight to this wildlife area. This undeveloped land needs to stay untouched by massive power lines.
Mark	Chavez	Lakeside	CA	USA	Palomar mountain is an attraction to people not only from all of Southern California but to tourists from around the world. There are few places on Earth that you can experience the tall mountain, the dry vast desert, and the beautiful reflecting ocean, all at once under the open sky. Liz	Collins	Santee	CA	USA	There is absolutely NO reason to cut down the beautiful old growth trees to build a massive power line across this beautiful mountain. The land and forests on this mountain should remain untouched from projects like this. The efforts should be more in line with the clearing of dead fuels and overgrown trees (wood) and managing the lands. That mountain has so much history and cultural artifacts, it needs to remain as 'untouched' by SDG&E and other industrial interests as possible. I worked for the YCC in the 1970s and worked on crews that helped clear brush, tracked mountain lions and helped maintain campgrounds in this area. It is truly beautiful country.

There is nothing ANYWHERE in Southern California with such a complete feeling of peace in the forest. The meadows are full of life with ladybugs and many species of birds . The mammals are numerous throughout the mountain and the springs are clean and clear. Much like what has happened to the wild California Mojave desert with solar factories and loss of species, I fear the same losses will occur with this proposed electrical buildout. Surely an alternate route can be found without bringing ruin to the landscape and species of our precious Palomar Mountain.

Ernest G.	Cowan	Escondido	CA	USA	I am staggered at the prospect of a massive powerline cutting through one of San Diego County's most prized habitats. We have very few pine-covered mountains in Southern California and as someone who works as a fire lookout, one of the most common things I hear is how much people love Palomar Mountain because of it unique environment. This proposed route through an area that could so easily be destroyed by fire must be abandoned. At some point, we must find alternatives that allow some pristine wildlands to be preserved for future generations. I am saddened by a decision making process that seems largely focused on economics and totally devoid of any concern for saving the things that enrich the soul of everyone. Please find a better way.
Katie	Craig	San Diego	CA	USA	Palomar State Park is my absolute favorite place in Southern California, and it's one of my favorite places in the world. There isn't any place like it here where we can experience woods, meadows, streams, and ponds that feel like the Sierras. I'm not really sure why something like this is necessary, other countries or states have power lines underground, if infrastructure is truly necessary I don't see why it has to come at the cost of nature, I think decisions like these should be left to those who live on the mountain as they are the ones this truly effects

David	Drake	Palomar Mountain	CA	USA	Palomar is known as the “Jewel of San Diego County” Because of the previous CC and Rs for building there are millions of trees causing fuel for any inadvertent spark from a high voltage power line, like happened with the recent Eaton fire that destroyed 9,000 homes. Since that cannot be guaranteed, Palomar residents could suffer catastrophic losses and the tourist draws that Palomar has to bring money to San Diego will be gone. The Jewel of San Diego County will be a burned out eyesore.

Sarah	G	Valley Center	CA	USA	I have a beautiful view of Palomar mountain from my house, and it's untouched, raw beauty is breathtaking on a daily basis. I work a high stress job and I work from home, so being able to see Palomar from my office window is one of the biggest gifts I've received in my life to date. Palomar mountain is truly one of the last places where you can experience what the "Western Frontier" was like 200 years ago. Driving through those mountains makes you forget you're 30 minutes from the city or in one of the most populated counties in the state. I come from Ventura County where the mountains are covered in powerlines that start wildfires every season, and every fall you hold your breath hoping that the mountains don't ignite into this fiery hell. Thinking of Palomar's pristine beauty being tarnished by a huge new transmission line across it and knowing the resulting effects of it (displaced wildlife, potential ignition for wildfires), makes me incredibly heartbroken that the state cares more about corporate profit than the sacred land that cultivated the rich history of this place. Think of all the PCT travelers every year and how their trails and experiences will be greatly affected. Think of all the wild turkey, deer, mountain goats, mountain lions, coyotes, etc. that will be displaced forever because of the transmission line construction. There are so many other options for getting electricity efficiently across the state. Please don't take the one landmark that has blessed generations for millennium.

This area is not only a haven for biodiversity but also a destination that attracts visitors from around the world, who seek to enjoy its unspoiled beauty and tranquility. The potential construction of a 500,000-volt transmission line through this region poses a significant threat to its ecological integrity and its touristic appeal. It is crucial to protect Palomar Mountain from any development that could degrade its unique ecosystem and recreational value. It was always my favorite place to be at and so I constantly would club my roof to get a view of Palomar, and I still do it to this day. Looking at Palomar mountain has now become a family event, with my husband, infant and parents. We all enjoy the view and visiting the nature reserve up there to hike and run. If a big power line goes through that, it would not only take away my family's tradition of enjoying each other's company and viewing Palomar nightly, but it would also bring toxins and unnatural things to a place where you go just for nature. Just to feel you're one with nature. I have several fond memories of the observatory and the roads to get up to Palomar and behind it the view of the lake is so exquisite. It's a breathtaking view on top of Palomar, so I really hope this pipeline gets stopped so my son can continue our tradition of watching Palomar change through the seasons, with his own kids. Kat	Gilbert	Encinitas	CA	USA	We recently spent a family weekend hiking in Palomar Mountain, and it was absolutely stunning. The views, the peace, and the sheer beauty of the place left us in awe. My son was captivated, and my husband and I felt grateful for the chance to share such a special place with him. But what struck me was the community living there—people dedicated to preserving this natural treasure. They're passionate and hardworking and care deeply about keeping Palomar as wild and beautiful as it is today. Now, there's talk of a 500 kV transmission line cutting through this area, and I wonder what that would do. Palomar is not just about the views; it's about the spirit of the community and the untouched nature that makes it so special. We must protect Palomar, not just for us but for everyone who finds peace and inspiration here and for future generations. This mountain deserves to stay wild, and I'm standing with the people dedicated to keep it that way.

We have been camping and hiking her since my children were young and my husband and I walked Doane Pond with the girls in toddler backpacks. They are now both in their 20s and in grad school. We've learned to love the trees and the stars, many nights lying out near the pond to witness the beauty of the stars. My daughter has buried tiny time capsules near the Weir and under "her tree." We've joined friends there for group camping and forged relationships by being in such a beautiful place of nature. I reject the idea of any clear cutting of this regional, state, and indeed national treasure to install a transmission line. In this era of changes to meet the needs of our growing population, we must find alternative ways to generate power or at least preserve those few wild and curated natural spaces we have left. What will be left for our children and the seven generations to come? Please preserve our beautiful mountain.

Kevin	Greco	San Diego	CA	USA	Strong Opposition to the Proposed Palomar Mountain High-Voltage Transmission Line As a frequent visitor to Palomar Mountain and a dedicated volunteer for the California State Parks Foundation, I am writing to express my profound opposition to the proposed 500,000-volt high-voltage transmission line crossing this region.Palomar Mountain is a rare, irreplaceable ecological and cultural sanctuary. Industrializing this landscape threatens to permanently dismantle fragile ecosystems, desecrate sacred spaces, and invite catastrophic disaster. I urge you to reject this route based on the following critical impacts:Severe Wildfire Risk: Introducing a 500k-Volt line into a high-wind, densely forested zone exponentially increases the risk of catastrophic, utility-caused wildfires. A single spark would lay waste to the entire mountain, completely wiping out endangered species populations and threatening all downwind communities while severely hindering vital aerial firefighting capabilities.Irreparable Habitat & Forest Destruction: Constructing 300-foot towers requires clear-cutting a massive, permanent swath through old-growth conifer forests, including rare big cone Douglas-firs and incense cedars. This severe fragmentation disrupts crucial wildlife corridors and directly threatens sensitive, protected, and endangered species that depend entirely on this unbroken canopy, such as the spotted owl and local endemic wildlife. Once these ancient trees and delicate microclimates are destroyed, they cannot simply be restored.Desecration of Sacred Cultural Sites: Palomar Mountain holds deep historical, spiritual, and cultural significance for regional Native American tribes, who have considered these lands sacred since time immemorial. The construction of massive steel towers, access roads, and heavy infrastructure risks the physical disruption, irreversible damage, and spiritual desecration of irreplaceable cultural resources and sacred sites.Loss of Public and Scientific Value: This project directly degrades the natural beauty, peace, and recreational value of Palomar Mountain State Park—lands that volunteers and conservationists work tirelessly to preserve—while the infrastructure threatens the dark skies required by the historic Palomar Observatory.Our public lands, endangered habitats, and sacred cultural spaces must be protected, not sacrificed for utility-scale infrastructure. I urge the regulatory agencies to reject this destructive route and prioritize safer, non-invasive energy alternatives.Thank you for your time and consideration.

Lluvia	H	Vista	CA	USA	Palomar Mountain is a remarkable place that holds special significance for many individuals, particularly those who appreciate its natural beauty and the unique old-growth forest it features. This forest is not merely a collection of trees; it is a vibrant ecosystem that supports a diverse array of plant and animal life. Preserving this area is essential for maintaining biodiversity, as it provides habitat for species that may struggle to survive elsewhere. Additionally, the forest plays a crucial role in carbon sequestration, helping to combat climate change and improve air quality. The beauty of the four seasons on Palomar Mountain is truly special. Each season brings its own charm, from the vibrant wildflowers of spring to the colorful foliage of autumn. This changing scenery offers a unique experience for both visitors and locals, encouraging outdoor activities such as hiking, birdwatching, and photography. For families, these seasonal changes create opportunities to build traditions—whether it's gathering for a picnic in the summer, enjoying a cozy cabin retreat in the winter, or exploring the trails during the fall. These moments become cherished memories that strengthen family bonds and foster a deep appreciation for nature. However, the prospect of a high-voltage transmission line on the mountain raises significant concerns. Such infrastructure could disrupt the delicate balance of the ecosystem, potentially harming wildlife habitats and altering the landscape that so many hold dear. It is vital to consider the long-term implications of such developments. While the need for energy is undeniable, we must prioritize sustainable solutions that do not compromise the integrity of our natural spaces. Protecting Palomar Mountain means ensuring that future generations can experience its beauty, enjoy the recreational opportunities it provides, and connect with nature in a way that is becoming increasingly rare in our modern world. By advocating for its preservation, we honor not only the mountain itself but also the memories and traditions it fosters within our families and communities.
Hans	Haas	Valley Center	CA	USA	Palomar Mountain is a great resource to my family. We have lived submountain to Palomar our whole lives. We hike, camp, enjoy astronomy, and own property on Palomar. We oppose any transmission line being ran through this beautiful mountain range. With the significant historic and cultural value to our community, it is astonishing that this would be considered in the first place. This is the wrong route for this transmission line. I oppose this transmission line in any form, but running it anywhere near Palomar Mountain is an egregiously dangerous and impactful route. SDG&E has shown time and again that they cannot safely manage the grid, and numerous wildfires have been started by their failed equipment. I have camped and hiked on Palomar since I was a child, and the natural legacy it provides to San Diego County cannot be understated. No transmission lines should be allowed near Palomar. We need to generate our own power locally through renewable means, rather than let SDG&E resell power from out of state.
Denise	Haase	Escondido	CA	USA	I have been able to enjoy Palomar Mountain on many occasions. Winter sledding with my grandchildren, Spring time at the Palomar State Park and motorcycle rides up the mountain. It would be absolutely devastating to build on this majestic landscape!

Katherine	Hadary	Poway	CA	USA	We are a family from Poway who enjoy camping. Palomar is a relatively close place for us to visit and we enjoy staying at the campsite by Doane's pond. The site and area is great for my oldest son who is disabled as there are easily accessible trails and interesting places such as the pond, the observatory and Boucher hill lookout. Our last trip was in June and happened to be during the national Pollinator Week Bioblitz and we submitted 24 observations, we saw many species of butterflies and bees (as well as other wildlife). I am very concerned to learn about the possibility of a high power line which would require a large amount of clearance and habitat destruction. This seems like a foolish decision, particularly in light of climate change and the intensity of wild fires that we already struggle with in this region.

Greg	Hamerly	Waco	TX	USA	I've spent many weeks on Palomar Mountain. I've camped, run, and hiked, sledded, and even cross-country skied in many different areas of Palomar. I hid my first geocache on Palomar over 20 years ago. I've visited the observatory, Boucher Hill, Mother's Kitchen, and the Post Office multiple times. Much of my time spent there has been with family. I love watching the stars at night, the sunsets, and the wildlife that makes its way through. The most unique experience I had was when I spent several days in near solitude on Palomar while writing my PhD dissertation. At that time, Palomar was somewhat disconnected from everything else, and that aloneness allowed me the time to focus on what I needed to write and finish my project.
Jim	Hamerly	Poway	CA	USA	Palomar is such an incredibly beautiful place to be! Our family enjoys outings with our children and grandchildren and friends - especially hiking through the forest. We have hiked every trail multiple times. We have also attended and hosted retreats there. When it came time for the Society of American Foresters to hold their annual meeting for southern California - they picked Palomar Mountain!
Peggy	Hamerly	Poway	CA	USA	Our family has been enjoying the beauty and serenity of Palomar Mountain since the early 2000's when we bought a piece of forested property and built a home there. It has been a haven for our family and for friends who need to rest and rejuvenate from the stresses of life in the city. We have hosted groups of students and taken them hiking on the nature trails in Palomar Mountain State Park, on field trips to the Palomar Observatory, and hosted star-gazing weekends for friends who love astronomy. The mountain was threatened with huge Southern California wildfires in 2007 and 2013 and the flames were visible from our home. Fortunately, they were stopped before reaching our property, but these infernos have made us keenly aware of the need to protect this beautiful mountain from fire danger. Every fire season, I hold my breath until winter rains and snows quell the danger. I want to protect this amazing sanctuary and leave it intact for generations to come.

Philip	Hansen	Vista	CA	USA	Growing up, I have many memories driving up to Palomar to fish at Doane Pond with my dad and brother. We would go when it was freezing cold and run back and forth between the pond and our van which we kept running to warm up. We would go in the beautiful Spring and explore deep into the valley and stumble on grazing deer and all kinds of birds. As a parent of 3 daughters, we've recently visited Doane pond with my extended family (dad, brother and his kids, brother in law and his kids), have camped, and even stayed in an Airbnb cabin with some friends. San Diego has such limited space to enjoy true peace and quiet and Palomar is the crowned jewel of that short list. As someone who resides very close to the Sunrise Powerlink, I am heartsick to think about something similar running through Warner's valley and Palomar Mountain.

Margaret	Hansl	Valley Center	CA	USA	The plans for the high voltage lines pose a threat to the wildlife, forests and communities surrounding Palomar Mountain. The fire risk without these wires is high; and with these lines, another beautiful area in Southern California will be decimated. My husband and I had our first date on the mountain 35 years ago. We still go up there to the observatory, with our family to hike and enjoy the natural beauty. Please find a safer alternative! Please leave Palomar Mountain a safe and beautiful place for the next generation to enjoy.

Nik	Hawks	San Diego	CA	USA	Palomar Mountain is home to one of the most reliable paragliding and hang gliding (free flight) sites in America. The conditions that set up here are unique, allowing for consistent exceptional flying found very few places elsewhere in the U.S. A powerline placed anywhere near the launch or landing would represent a significant hazard to flight, increasing the risks to the thousands of flights conducted here every year. Local and international free flight pilots who have worked so hard over the years to caretake these sites would be needlessly put at risk with the addition of a nearby power line.

Southern California is overpopulated and rife with development- and all of this development destroys the natural world little by little. We need to preserve what nature we have left. Not only that, but the ecosystems of Palomar Mountain are globally unique. There are species that live up here that don't grow anywhere else in San Diego county. Some people call it the Sierra Nevada of SoCal because of its special forest habitats. Not only is the forest amazing, but the shrubland habitats all around it are unique and super diverse. I stand in opposition to the proposed projects that threaten this beautiful Place.

Saundra	Holloway	San Diego	CA	USA	Strong Opposition to the Proposed Palomar Mountain High-Voltage Transmission Line To whom it may concern:As a frequent visitor to Palomar Mountain and a dedicated volunteer for the California State Parks Foundation, I am writing to express my profound opposition to the proposed 500,000-volt high-voltage transmission line crossing this region.Palomar Mountain is a rare, irreplaceable ecological and cultural sanctuary. Industrializing this landscape threatens to permanently dismantle fragile ecosystems, desecrate sacred spaces, and invite catastrophic disaster. I urge you to reject this route based on the following critical impacts:Severe Wildfire Risk: Introducing a 500k-Volt line into a high-wind, densely forested zone exponentially increases the risk of catastrophic, utility-caused wildfires. A single spark would lay waste to the entire mountain, completely wiping out endangered species populations and threatening all downwind communities while severely hindering vital aerial firefighting capabilities.Irreparable Habitat & Forest Destruction: Constructing 300-foot towers requires clear-cutting a massive, permanent swath through old-growth conifer forests, including rare big cone Douglas-firs and incense cedars. This severe fragmentation disrupts crucial wildlife corridors and directly threatens sensitive, protected, and endangered species that depend entirely on this unbroken canopy, such as the spotted owl and local endemic wildlife. Once these ancient trees and delicate microclimates are destroyed, they cannot simply be restored.Desecration of Sacred Cultural Sites: Palomar Mountain holds deep historical, spiritual, and cultural significance for regional Native American tribes, who have considered these lands sacred since time immemorial. The construction of massive steel towers, access roads, and heavy infrastructure risks the physical disruption, irreversible damage, and spiritual desecration of irreplaceable cultural resources and sacred sites.Loss of Public and Scientific Value: This project directly degrades the natural beauty, peace, and recreational value of Palomar Mountain State Park—lands that volunteers and conservationists work tirelessly to preserve—while the infrastructure threatens the dark skies required by the historic Palomar Observatory.Our public lands, endangered habitats, and sacred cultural spaces must be protected, not sacrificed for utility-scale infrastructure. I urge the regulatory agencies to reject this destructive route and prioritize safer, non-invasive energy alternatives.

The history alone with the observatory makes it one of the most special mountains in Southern California. Having SDG&E bring up huge towers and put this beautiful mountain at risk would be a horrendous idea. Doesn't anybody remember the 2018 Camp Fire wild fire disaster that killed over 60 people all started by SDG&E and their negligence. No towers, no risk of fire. It's simple. With this decade long drought ,pine beetle and another tree diseases there is so much fuel on this mountain. We need to be taking more precautions and protection against fire rather increasing the risk with unwarranted powerlines.

Rosemary	Johnston	San Diego	CA	USA	We camped at the state park there in the 70s and 80s with our four children. My uncle had bought a log cabin on Crestline in 1978, and we bought a cabin there in 1997. The transmission line represents a visual as well as a destructive threat to the mountain community, which had often been compared to the Sierras . Its resources are irreplaceable , and the threat of wildfire grows more real with global warming, drought conditions, and high winds that characterize mountain weather, even without the construction of transmission lines.
Walt	Johnston	San Diego	CA	USA	We have been visiting the mountain, camping in the state park, and finally purchasing a cabin there in 1997. The mountain environment would be ruined by the erection of these towers and should be opposed not only by mountain residents but all who cherish the ambiance there.

Sara	Jones	Valley Center	CA	USA	I don't even know where to start. It would take too long to share all of the precious, personal memories I have of camping, fishing, and hiking on Palomar Mountain, first as a child, then as a parent with two boys of my own. The bottom line is, many of my life's happiest moments have included Palomar Mountain in some way. Perhaps it would be better to start with the impact the mountain has had on the surrounding communities. For instance, many adults remember going to 6th grade camp next to Doanes Pond, while others recall going to church camp at the Christian Conference Center. Beyond the camps, families from all over visit the mountain and the state park to pitch a tent and experience all the beauty and biodiversity the mountain has to offer. As a volunteer lookout at the Boucher Hill Lookout Tower, I've seen the wonder on the faces of first-time visitors and the joy they experience when they get to tour the historic tower. Many visitors come from the neighboring counties, and most of them share that they had no idea Palomar Mountain was such a unique place. Many also claim that they feel like they're not even California anymore. The mountain's reach goes even farther than southern California, as is evidenced by the tower's guestbook. Visitors from all over the world have signed that book and have left comments that, in summary, declare their amazement at the views and the beauty of the mountain. Many of these visitors come from places that are known for being spectacular, yet they can't help but appreciate what our little mountain has to offer. I would like to add that there is a large communications tower near the lookout, and when visitors ask about it, they usually express how ugly and intrusive it is. I agree. Now picture the scene being marred by a series of towers carrying power lines across miles of the Cleveland National Forest! Other than the few who stand to benefit financially from the powerlines, who wants to see that? I could go on about the harmful impact the powerlines would have on the environment, but anyone reading this already knows. The question is, where do we draw the line when it comes to harmful human encroachment on the land? We should have drawn that line long ago, but maybe it's not too late to save Palomar Mountain.

Sunshine	Juliette	Fordland	MO	USA	We have such great memories growing up on Palomar. We had a little theater group that needed to raise $500 for our next play. Neighbors donated apples and we set up at the top of the South Grade selling our apples for $5.00 a bag. We met the nicest people coming up to visit the mountain. They went back home with a bag of two of apples. Those generous people bought over $750 of apples in a couple weekends. I am so thankful we didn't have to be under huge, ugly towers crisscrossing across the roads to sell our apples. Please keep Palomar beautiful.

There are already significant risks at Palomar due to lightning, so why add more unnecessary risks to homeowners who already spend a fortune insuring homes.

Patrick	Kappel	San Diego	CA	USA	I am a member of the US Navy and when I moved to San Diego from the East Coast I thought that I would lose the ability to reconnect with nature after living near the mountains of the East Coast for years. I was pleasantly surprised to find Palomar Mountain, one of the most beautiful mountains I have seen. After being stationed in San Diego in 2007 at Naval Base San Diego, I initially thought that I would have to drive 3-5 hours to reach alpine mountains. I was so happy when I discovered Palomar Mountain knowing that it is just a short 60 minute drive from San Diego. Unlike Julian and Mount Laguna, Palomar has an untouched feel with very little commercial activity. The forests in Palomar feel more secluded as well as they are thicker, denser, and wetter than the other forests and mountains around San Diego. Palomar Mountain is truly a one and only unique mountain in San Diego. Over the last decade plus I have spent numerous days and nights hiking and camping on Palomar Mountain with my friends and my family. My daughter, Sophia, spent a lot of time hiking with me on Palomar Mountain and her days spent on the Mountain partially contributed to her pursuing a degree in Environmental Studies at UC Santa Barbara. My daughter spent her youth going to Palomar Mountain. She is now a 20 year old college student and her mission in life is to preserve nature and special places like Palomar Mountain, while limiting the impact of humans on these rare resources. I know that my daughter would be disappointed in our generation if we allow a powerline to cut through the natural beauty of one of San Diego's greatest natural resources, Palomar Mountain. We can never take back the scars that we inflict upon the land and nature, but we can prevent them from happening in the first place. For the sake of our generation, my daughter's generation, and the generations that will follow her, please do not scar the land of Palomar Mountain. We only have ONE Palomar Mountain, and it should be preserved.
Beverly Joy	Karno	Valley Center	CA	USA	Palomar Mountain means so much to me and my family in many ways: The historical observatory that is still a working astronomy center; It is the closest place to have a wilderness mountain experience; it is home to the native plants and animals that we need to protect and in turn, have the pleasure to witness.

We are all very concerned about the impacts of this SDGE project as we all care deeply about preserving this gem of mountain. Fires here are a major concern and the thought of one being caused by a power line or the towers inhibiting ariel firefighting is absolutely terrifying. Esther	Krouse	Los Angeles	CA	USA	I first visited Palomar Mountain over 40 years ago. Back then, my husband and l lived in Escondido, one of the towns close to this mountain, and we both fell in love with it from our first visit. We enjoyed hiking on its trails together and spending entire weekends hiking and camping, enjoying Palomar Mountains' breathtaking sunrises & sunsets. Not to mention the magnificent sights whichever way you turned. The mountain's wildlife is lovely too! Such great variety of wild flowers and birds, beautiful deer and so many other treasures that make this mountain and other places that still retain and can offer, that most precious gift of God to the Earth: 'Nature,' so precious! We all have and are witnessing, the rapid and irreversible destruction we humans have and are inflicting on the natural world all around the globe. We also can testify to the detrimental effects this destruction is having on every aspect of our lives. It is not only our benefit but, also our moral responsibility, to save this last remaining wilderness. There is an ancient American Indian saying that says : " We haven't inherited the Earth. We owe it to our children and to future generations." Let us do our part by saving Palomar Mountain! Long live Palomar Mountain!

Bob and Linda	Lewis	Long Beach	CA	USA	Please Save our Mountain. Our family has been enjoying this beautiful place since the 1800's. That means four generations! My grandmother's parents bought land up here after a man traveled though town selling lots on the mountain. The stories from that time are so special. They planted apple orchards and built cabins. One of the cabins is still in the family to enjoy. My parents brought me up when I was 6 mos. old and now at 84 yrs. my large family loves the trees, the peace and quiet, the birds, the Indian rocks, and the flowers. We have taken friends from all over the world up to enjoy all that is there. We love the fall colors, the winter snows, the Spring flowers and the summer smells. I hope our grand children will be able to enjoy this special place as much as we have. Please do not add huge electrical high voltage lines on our special mountain.
Carson	Lewis	Valley Center	CA	USA	Palomar mountain is a gem in San Diego county that has been nearly untouched since the beginning of time, and now people who never even been to the mountain must leave permanent scars for something that doesn't even benefit the locals? This mountain has nothing to do with LA and should be kept that way. I live right next to high out put transmission lines and they are ugly and noisy. Also at night when it's raining or the dew is heavy I can them arcing, with a bright blue light being visible. Why would we want this on a mountain with irreplaceable old growth? Todd	Linke	San Diego	CA	USA	Palomar Mountain is a very special place to me. From a nature standpoint, it's one of the last untouched, pristine alpine ecosystems we have left and San Diego County. It's preservations should be the upmost priority. Going there is not only a beautiful experience, but it is beneficial to mind, body and spirit. I know that when I'm in Palomar, I will be at peace. All of my senses are surrounded only by nature, without any of the typical disturbances from the city environment. Again, this type of place should be top priority for preservation. Further disturbance would take these things away from me and thousands of other visitors. Please, think about the current generation and those to come. These types of places are a few and far between in California, so let's protect this place for generations to come.

Michael	Lyons	Escondido	CA	USA	It would and is an absolute tragedy that anyone with an ounce of common sense would even consider destroying and endangering forest and natural habitat lands for such an eyesore when no doubt there are alternative routes that while be more costly would make more sense in the long run. Our natural resources have been disrupted far, far too much. And I strongly suspect such work would be detrimental to the Palomar Observatory and their ongoing research. ABSOLUTELY NOT!!!

Earl	M	Long Beach	CA	USA	Palomar Mountain is one of Southern California's most beautiful places, loved by many for its stunning views, rich wildlife, and peaceful nature. I recently had the pleasure of staying in a cozy cabin there, and I was truly amazed by how pristine and natural the mountains are. The air is fresh, the trails are inviting, and the landscape is filled with towering trees, vibrant wildflowers, and breathtaking vistas. It offers a much-needed escape for those who want to enjoy the outdoors. But now, this precious mountain is facing a serious threat: a plan to build a huge 500,000-volt transmission line that would run through its heart, carrying electricity from Arizona and New Mexico to Los Angeles. If this happens, it could ruin the mountain's beauty and harm the environment. The idea of a massive transmission line cutting across Palomar Mountain is very concerning. It would destroy natural habitats, spoil the scenery, and increase the risk of wildfires. This isn't just a minor issue; it threatens the very essence of what makes Palomar Mountain special. During my stay, I witnessed the incredible diversity of wildlife and plants that call this area home. It's hard to imagine how devastating it would be to see that beauty replaced with industrial infrastructure. It's frustrating to see projects like this pushed forward for quick profits, without considering the long-term damage they can cause. The electricity from this line may benefit big cities, but what about the cost to our natural spaces? We must prioritize the health of our environment over short-term gains. The Save Palomar Mountain Task Force is doing important work to fight against this project. They are gathering stories from visitors who love the mountain, showing how much it means to all of us. It's crucial that we all join in this effort to speak out against this plan and support the preservation of Palomar Mountain. We need to come together to protect this beautiful place. We should encourage leaders to rethink this project and its harmful effects on our environment. Palomar Mountain is more than just a pretty spot; it's a vital part of our natural heritage. My recent visit reminded me of its unique beauty and the need to safeguard it. Let's unite to protect it, ensuring that future generations can enjoy its splendor just as we do today. Together, we can save Palomar Mountain from this threat and keep it a safe haven for everyone. "Profit over people is unacceptable!" - Kennedy

Candace	Mann		CA	USA	I grew up in Hemet, California in the 60's. Our family would make a yearly trip to see the observatory and enjoy the nature. I moved away at 20 but now at 65 I've moved back and can look at the mountain every day. I love that it is still a piece of untouched beauty which there is so little of. I pray that our excessive use of electricity is not a reason to damage this incredible piece of unspoiled beauty.

Teresa	Marley	El Cajon	CA	USA	Palomar Mtn is a beautiful place that holds many special memories for my family and I (and many other people I'm sure). From camping, fishing, hiking and exploring to my father-in-law building a gorgeous cabin in the early 70's that's still there, enjoyed and lived in today by our son - his grandson. I can't imagine the mountain changing so drastically. Not to mention detrimental to the wild life and terrible change to our lovely mountain that's part of history. The observatory that took 20 years to construct starting in 1928. The mountain and valley is so special that you don't have to travel far to enjoy the snow, beautiful lakes, incredible greenery and surroundings. Palomar Mountain features a unique eco system, similar to norther California Redwoods. This environment in the southern part of the state is very rare, providing the growth of cedar trees over 150' tall and over 7' feet in diameter. Cutting our forest down and huge disruption is a monstrosity. This is unforgiving. SAVE OUR MOUNTAIN!

Nancy	Matthews	Palomar Mountain	CA	USA	Sent on October 25, 2026: California Public Utilities Commission Cc: San Diego Gas & Electric Re: Golden Pacific Powerlink — Proposed Route Through Palomar Mountain Dear Commissioners and Project Review Team: I am writing to oppose routing the proposed Golden Pacific Powerlink through Palomar Mountain. I am a veterinarian and veterinary hospital owner in San Diego County, with nearly 40 years of experience caring for animals. My professional interest in animal welfare includes the preservation of the habitats on which wildlife depends. I am deeply concerned about the wildfire and ecological consequences of placing a major transmission corridor through this mountain environment. Palomar Mountain is already vulnerable to wildfire. Its forest vegetation, steep terrain, seasonal dry conditions, and periods of high wind can make fires difficult to control. Electrical transmission equipment is a potential ignition source, even with modern safeguards. The appropriate question is not only how likely an ignition may be, but what the consequences could be if one occurs during severe fire weather. Those consequences could include threats to residents and visitors, difficult evacuations, damage to watersheds, and extensive loss of wildlife habitat. Palomar Mountain also contains mature mixed-conifer forest, a relatively uncommon and valuable ecosystem in San Diego County. Building and maintaining a high-voltage corridor may require tree removal, new access roads, tower sites, and recurring vegetation management. These changes can fragment habitat, disrupt wildlife movement, increase erosion, and alter forest conditions long after construction is finished. A mature forest is not readily replaced by planting new trees. The relationships among its vegetation, soils, water resources, and wildlife develop over many decades. I understand that the proposed routes affecting the Temecula area have generated substantial public opposition. I would appreciate a clear explanation of how the Palomar Mountain alternative was identified and whether opposition to other routes influenced that decision. I do not assume that public opposition alone determined the change, but I believe the route-selection criteria should be made transparent. Palomar Mountain has a much smaller permanent population than many of the communities affected by other proposed routes. That should not make its environmental interests less important. Fewer residents may be available to attend hearings or organize comments, but the value of the mountain's forests, wildlife, and watersheds extends well beyond those who live there. Wildlife and natural habitats cannot speak for themselves in the public review process. I ask the California Public Utilities Commission to require a thorough, publicly accessible comparison of feasible routes, including alternatives that avoid sensitive forest habitat and high-fire-risk terrain. That review should examine ignition risk and fire consequences under extreme weather conditions; evacuation and firefighting access; effects on wildlife, habitat connectivity, vegetation, and watersheds; and the long-term impacts of maintaining the corridor. It should also consider the use of existing infrastructure corridors and other technically feasible approaches, with their respective environmental tradeoffs. I recognize the need for reliable electrical infrastructure. That need, however, should not prevent a careful assessment of whether a route through Palomar Mountain would impose avoidable and lasting environmental harm. I respectfully request that the Commission and SDG&E give full consideration to alternatives that would preserve this important forest environment and reduce wildfire exposure. After nearly four decades in veterinary medicine, I believe our responsibility to animals extends to protecting the natural places that sustain them. The future of Palomar Mountain should be determined by a careful evaluation of its ecological significance and public-safety risks, not by the number of people available to object to a proposed route. Thank you for considering my comments. Respectfully, Nancy Matthews, DVM Veterinarian and Veterinary
Andrea	Matthies	Valley Center	CA	USA	As a student of the ecology and ethnobotany of Southern California (focusing mostly on San Diego, and the mountains and deserts to the east) I realize how delicate the ecosystems on Palomar Mountain are. In a time when man wants to use up all of our valuable natural resources for profit, protected parks and wildernesses are growing more and more rare. Palomar mountain State Park hosts several ecosystems and the treasures of our indigenous peoples past are entombed in that mountain, thankfully protected up to this point. The devastation which could occur from the destruction via clear cutting, along with the possibility of devastating accidental fire caused by these proposed behemoth towers of electricity is unthinkable. As a lover of nature and someone who appreciates the sacredness of our remaining protects lands , I thoroughly oppose the construction and implementation of the plans to disturb and destroy them.

Victoria	May	San Diego	CA	USA	I have SO MANY precious memories from my childhood here... the wind in the trees, the old observatory explorations... camping, the Native camp sites... Please preserve!
JC	Mayfield	Chihuahua Valley	CA	USA	Look, nobody out here is pretending we don't need new infrastructure. We get it. Power has to move from one place to another, and that means transmission lines. But the way they build it matters a whole lot more than whether they build it. If they shut down this route, it's just going to land on somebody else's land next year. That doesn't solve anything. The real issue isn't the route — it's the fact they're trying to run a massive overhead line through a place that can't handle it. Out here, we live with wind, fire, rough terrain, and everything else Mother Nature throws at us. We know what overhead lines do in those conditions. Undergrounding fixes almost every one of those problems. It's safer, cleaner, and doesn't tear up the mountain. And let's be honest: the only reason they don't want to bury it is cost. That's it. Not because it can't be done — it's already being done in multiple places around the world: Tokyo, Japan — 500 kV underground transmission Osaka, Japan — 275–500 kV underground corridors New York City — 345 kV underground feeding Manhattan Netherlands & Germany — 400–500 kV underground segments California — 230–345 kV underground in urban corridors So when people say "it can't be done," that's just flat-out wrong. It has been done, and at voltages just as high — or higher — than what's being proposed here. The only reason utilities fight it is because it costs more and cuts into profits and bonuses. Meanwhile, the rest of us are left dealing with the danger and the damage. So if folks want to make a difference, the fight shouldn't be "stop the project." The fight should be "do it right — put it underground." That's the only solution that actually protects the mountain and the people who live around it.

Shanda	McDonald	Spring Valley	CA	USA	Palomar Mtn has been a place of peace for me since a child. Growing up close by, I would visit with my family for camping trips during the summer. Once I began to drive, I would come to the park for day hikes or to watch the sunset. I would be amazed that I could see all the way to the ocean on a clear day. I could look north to my hometown, or south to San Diego. I have tracked countless miles on the trails within the park. I have experienced all seasons there, and even had my first snow encounter. The park remains a place of solace and wonder for me to this day. I now visit the park with my spouse and am creating new memories hiking the trails and exploring with him. As you leave the hustle and bustle, ascend the mountain and return to nature you instantly feel the calm. Our two favorite things to do are, botanizing the native plants, bird watching and star gazing. Palomar mountain is not a cut through for high voltage transmission , it is a destination, a sacred place. A place, a home, for 1,000's of species of plants and animals. Jim	Nicholas	San Diego	CA	USA	My first experience on Palomar Mountain I actually don't remember. My parents took me to Palomar to experience snow for the first time when I was 3 years old, so in 1956. What I do remember though is when I went to 6th grade camp. It was my first experience away from my family by myself and I LOVED IT! I can still remember the heady scent of sage and crisp cool mornings when I and the other 'Weather Birds" collected data to share with the other campers regarding the temperature readings the barometric pressure and other information. The stunning scenic beauty and utter silence were revelatory for me at that tender age. Now I have my own cabin on Palomar Mountain and the same qualities that beguiled me in the 6th grade are still present. The serenity that Palomar offers visitors and residents alike cannot be lost forever. Please preserve Palomar Mountain

Nothing about harming the delicate ecosystem of this mountain, makes any sense whatsoever. Of all the places to bring the powerlines through, why choose one of the last forested areas in the county? Do we like clean water and clean air? Do we know how much erosion with destroy the springs and creeks on the mountain? It's absolute insanity and it's common sense that the destructive process of bringing these powerlines over this beautiful mountain will have long lasting, if not permanent, devastating ecological impact. We won't stand for profits over people and the planet any longer.

Marsha	Penner	San Diego	CA	USA	I've always thought of Palomar Mountain as my own special place. In the year I was born a special truck slowly made its way up the newly constructed South Grade road with a very special and very unique load. The giant mirror that was part of the famous Palomar telescope was delivered that year, and ever since I have been enjoying this mountain. I have found joy in camping in the state park on summer vacations with my parents and brother as a kid, playing around Doane pond and exploring the forest. As I got a bit older I was fascinated and awed by visits with my family to the famous observatory, taking drives up the winding South Grade road, willingly fighting car sickness, and discovering the as yet unpaved East Grade road. As an adult I made frequent trips up and down the mountain, both South Grade and East Grade, soaking up the sun and the snow and taking pleasure in being in wild nature. Many a fun time and amazing experience came from watching bicycle races and grueling foot races and witnessing many special and unique celestial events from Haley's Comet and meteor showers to bright stars and planetary alignments. And now I have property of my own on this mountain, a cabin where I can spend more time exulting in the peace and quiet of the forest environment. Palomar Mountain is a unique place in Southern California, a remote place far from the noise and the crowds of the city, where a person can unload their worries and stresses of life and find needed solace and refreshment for body, mind, and spirit. Yes, their are other mountains in Southern California, even in San Diego county, but none so free from the signs of civilization and crowds of people seeking peace and quiet. It is a rare treasure well worth preserving. To destroy this mountain refuge by clear cutting its trees, disturbing its wildlife, removing the natural vistas that bring much needed respite to people who visit, and erecting giant towers to carry enormous amounts of electricity to distant destinations would be an outrageous and enormous mistake. It would steal from people something they badly need. And would seriously affect me personally. Please don't let this happen to this special and unique mountain. There are other solutions. Please don't let the path to power go across Palomar Mountain.
Michael	Penner		MT	USA	I spent many a weekend enjoying the beauty and nature of Palomar Mountain and the State Park as a Boy Scout growing up in Pacific Beach. I live under one such power line here in Kalispell, MT and can attest to the blight it puts on the area.
Irina-Abhi	Perak	Los Angeles	CA	USA	Palomar Mountain is magical place where I like to visit and maybe even live one day. The natural air, the snow, the starry nights, the breathtaking views are the true gem of California To imagine that huge towers carrying immense voltage will be raised among the majestic trees endangering the environment and the residents, just breaks my heart. Yes, I know, the technology today is amazing, and yet, mother nature always has the last word. I just can imagine the amount of nature to be slaughtered to raise those lines and the amount of nature and life that could be when a disaster happens, not to mention the financial loss.

Every day on the West coast is a great day, and among all those great days, spending time on Palomar Mountain was a highlight of this trip for me. I saw and heard so many bird species that I'd never encountered before. Even though fog interrupted the views, just walking around the state park and being in the landscape was really grounding. Cata	Ratiu	Escondido	CA	USA	The first visit to Palomar was in 1992, when I visit the US for the first time. When I relocated to SD for work, Palomar became the destination for monthly hiking with friends, and later with my children. I still enjoy riding my bike up the south grade, hiking in the various trails, visits to the observatory, camping, and occasionally cross-country skiing, when the snow allows. My children have great memories experiencing wilderness early on in their lives at Palomar. I have, in part, chosen to live in Escondido because of proximity to the mountain. It's a home away from home. Needless to say, I am saddened by the prospect of a power line cutting through the mountain. Considering that better options exist, this is senseless, insensitive, and, frankly dangerous. During a time when we are told by governments, NGOs, and global leaders that we should not only protect our dwindling natural resources, but watch out for risks (fire, etc.), projects like this seem counter-sensical. Let's preserve the natural beauty of this SoCal wonder!

Palomar mountain is one of the most special places in California. The history. The archaeological finds that are working on right now for Nate Harrison. The observatory needs dark sky. We can't just put concrete and power lines everywhere. Some areas need to remain untouched and this is one of them. So many species of animals rely on that area to remain the way it is. Donald	Risty	San Diego	CA	USA	All aspects of Palomar Mountain must be protected as sacred and irreplaceable. Installing 500KV power lines would ruin views, destroy habitat, and damage wildlife as well as Forever increasing risk and likelihood of devastating wildfires. Ruining Palomar Mountain for benefit of Orange County is asinine and immoral. Those evil towers Will Not Be Built.
Susan	Risty	Palomar Mountain	CA	USA	I love our cabin on Palomar Mountain. We are one of the lucky ones with a million dollar view. I am strongly against putting any kind of artificial infrastructure anywhere on the mountain. Not only would it be an eyesore, it would be detrimental to the wildlife and humans.

Ben	Roberts	Mt. Carmel	UT	USA	To me, Palomar Mountain will always mean home. Not in the sense that I physically live there, but in the sense that it seems for all the world to be a perfect place. Years ago, I came to Palomar in a time of need searching for the consolation only wilderness can provide, and found it in abundance. In Palomar, vast swaths of old growth pine forests together with tiny cabin communities create an environment uniquely suited to recreation and reconnecting with nature few wilderness areas in Southern California can still afford their visitors and residents. Palomar Mountain is one of the last - perhaps THE last - wild space of its kind in the region. It's value as such cannot be overstated. I hope to return to Palomar in decades to come to find it as I found it before: a refuge uninterrupted, uninfringed, and flourishing as wilderness. Now more than ever, we need such places. Please: don't tarnish this perfect place. Don't scar one more irreplaceable wild forest forever.
Doug	Roberts	San Diego	CA	USA	I love the tranquility and simpleness of Mt. Palomar. There is no "downtown" tourist destination, and that makes Palomar Mountain the only unique mountain community in Southern California that has that solitude. It's natural beauty is largely and markedly unencumbered by "progress" of man. I hope and pray that Palomar Mountain will stay this way for generations to come.

Wyatt	Ryan	Oceanside	CA	USA	I am the founder of the Paauw and Ah-Ha Kwe-Ah-Mac Mountaineers Club. I have a long and deep connection with Palomar Mountain and its history. I have stayed at the Palomar Mountain Club House, hiked every trail in the State Park, and have been going to the mountain since I was 7. I am now 25, and am devastated to hear about the potential construction of the high voltage power line. Palomar Mountain has unique and diverse ecology that is not replicated anywhere else in Southern California. I am the leading bird watcher for Palomar Mountain on iNaturalist, and could not fathom the impact on wildlife that the devastation brought by this line would cause. This delicate area is already subject to enough human-caused ailments as it is. Palomar is not only a safe haven for our quickly disappearing wildlife, but it is also hugely significant to many indigenous peoples such as the Pauma and Pala tribes. Their history, culture, and heritage has been horrifically mismanaged as is, and this power line would be another nail in that coffin. Destroying and mixing of the midden of the sites would effectively destroy any possibility of future archeological surveys. It is also a slap in the face to all of us who have fought so hard to protect, maintain, and improve Palomar Mountain and its cultural heritage. Many rare species of amphibians, salamanders, frogs, and toads also call Palomar Mountain home. Orchestras of Pacific Chorus Frogs can be heard after any rain in the spring. Salamanders can be found scooting through the damp leaf litter foraging for food. Dark-eyed Juncos, Towhees, Warblers, Jays, and Band-tailed Doves create a symphony that can seldom be enjoyed anywhere else in Southern California. Why jeopardize such a fragile and cherished ecosystem when alternative routes exist? It is my opinion that this high voltage power line should never be constructed, nor should it ever encroach upon Palomar Mountain. It would be a detriment to visitors, residents, wildlife, and nature. Silver Crest Picnic Area is built upon a large indigenous site, and many morteros and metates exist in this area. Many other morteros, metates, arrowheads, lithic flakes, bone flakes, and other artifacts can be found all over the mountain. I have personally found many arrowheads, adze’s, and bone tools within the state park boundaries. I have also mapped, surveyed, and photographed every published indigenous site within State Park Boundaries. I only photograph what I find, then leave it as I found it. Why destroy the heritage, history, and cultural of the Pauma and Pala for a power line? Palomar Mountain, particularly the south slope, is also heavily affected by high winds. I have hiked this area in many different weather conditions. It frequently experiences sustained winds in excess of 20mph, and I have been present during gusts as high as 45+mph. For context, I could not open the passenger side door of a Subaru Forestor because the wind was so strong. Palomar has higher than average rainfall compared to the rest of Southern California, and as such has a lot of built up vegetation in the dry season. Have these companies not learned anything from PG&E? Have you not learned from the fires in LA? Why build a power line given the risk of fire and total destruction of the mountain? Must I remind you how devastating the ‘03 Cedar Fire and ‘07 Witch Creek Fire were for us? Why exacerbate that risk on a mountain that has little infrastructure to fight fires and ample fuel to feed them? For all of these reasons, the Paauw & Ah-Ha Kwe-Ah-Mac Mountaineers Club and I wholeheartedly oppose the construction of this power line. The only way for evil to triumph is for good people to do nothing. We will not do nothing. We stand at the disposal of the State Park, as well as the Savepalomarmountain.org organizers.

Sue	Saban	Hinsdale	IL	USA	Letter to: California Public Utilities Commission Public Advisor's Office Subject: Formal Objection to Proposed Transmission Line Across Palomar Mountain I am writing to formally object to any proposed transmission route traversing Palomar Mountain. Constructing high-voltage infrastructure across this ecologically sensitive, high-risk landscape poses severe threats to public safety, local resources, and irreplaceable cultural heritage. 1. Severe Wildfire Risk and Aerial Firefighting Obstruction: The California Public Utilities Commission (CPUC) designates Palomar Mountain as a Tier 3 High Fire Threat Area—the highest level of utility-wildfire risk. Combining extreme winds, heavy fuel loads, active seismic faults, and limited evacuation paths creates high potential for catastrophic ignition. Furthermore, 190-foot towers will severely compromise aerial firefighting operations, eliminating the primary method used to rapidly contain small ignitions in this rugged terrain. 2. Public Safety and Evacuation Bottlenecks: The mountain features severely restricted egress. The proposed routes cross critical corridors. Downed lines or construction hazards along these limited lifelines would trap residents and visitors during an emergency. 3. Ecological, Cultural, and Hydrologic Impacts • Protected Species & Habitat: The corridor directly threatens critical habitat for the endangered Laguna Mountain Skipper butterfly, California Golden Eagles, mountain lions, and rare old-growth mixed conifer forest. • Cultural Heritage: Palomar holds profound importance for local Native American tribes, harboring documented archaeological sites. • Public Value: Palomar serves tens of thousands of visitors annually across youth camps, state park land, and historic recreation areas. 4. Superior, Feasible Alternatives (CEQA Guidelines § 15126.6) Under CEQA, the CPUC cannot approve a project if feasible alternatives achieve project objectives while avoiding significant environmental and wildfire impacts. Viable non-destructive alternatives exist: • Grid Re-conductoring: Upgrading existing corridors with advanced conductors can double or triple transmission capacity without building new towers, taking private property, or crossing state park land. • Distributed Storage & Microgrids: The capital required for new high-voltage lines would be far more effectively deployed toward distributed battery storage, solar-plus-storage microgrids, and vehicle-to-grid (V2G) bidirectional charging infrastructure. Localized storage mitigates peak demand and outage risks without exposing communities to wildfire ignition hazards. These are aligned with the CAISO 2025-2026 plan, as highlighted by the cancellation of the Serrano-Del Amo- Mesa 500kV line in May 2026. Palomar Mountain cannot bear the catastrophic environmental, safety, and cultural costs of this project. The CPUC must reject any route over the mountain and prioritize non-destructive grid-modernization alternatives.

Go around them, underground them, but do not mar our precious landscapes with this industrial development. Promote roof top solar, and small scale solar projects on disturbed land. Judy	Simons	Valley Center	CA	USA	It is unbelievable that our government and electric utility companies are proposing a huge power line to go through one of the most beautiful mountain landscapes in San Diego county, Palomar Mountain! San Diego doesn’t have a lot of mountains and many visitors go up to Palomar to hike, vacation, visit the Observatory, and play in the snow. The mountain range is not that large and anywhere they put the power lines will more than likely be visible to visitors. It will turn the landscape from one of beauty to an eye sore. Why would they want to destroy the beauty of the few mountains we have in San Diego? Please do not put the power lines on Palomar and ruin its beauty.
Kara	Simons	Valley Center	CA	USA	This place is my home away from home. I grew up going up to Palomar for getaways with my parents and extended family and this place is the most beautiful place for peace and quiet with stunning views. My family owns property on Palomar and this project would really hurt their property. Palomar is a place of beauty and quiet and running this through the land would ruin the beauty of Palomar. Please run this through flat land rather than through the most perfect mountain in Southern California. So many people visit Palomar during the year for a beautiful place to get away and spend some time in nature and with this project, it would take away that beauty and ultimately cause less people to visit which will hurt the businesses up there. I have lived on this mountain, off and on, since 1966. I went to the one room school behind the Forest Service Station on Canfield Road. This route of the Transmission Line THROUGH the State Park is in the view sheds of everyone living on Nate Harrison Grade. It will affect one of the last remote areas on the west facing slopes of Palomar with its high voltage electric currents. This could disrupt many of our native threatened species: eagles, mountain lions, Engleman oaks, indigenous boa snakes, kangaroo rats, etc. All of which I've seen living here on this side of the Mountain.

April	Solomon Gallardo	San Diego	CA	USA	Palomar mountain for me and my family has always been a treasured place too return to many times a year. I go there to this day for many different reasons still. All of them having to do with nature and interacting with nature. You can only do that there on that mountain with it intact the way it is. Fire has already come up that mountain and killed a lot of trees to the point where they're not even growing back again. The flames of the fire become so hot with wildfires now that the trees cannot recover. I just went to Palomar mountain about a week ago when my family that adopted my son came to visit it for the first time. They were so impressed by the views and the gorgeous scenery. They were also impressed by The observatory and learning all about space. I actually got to go up into the fire lookout building and have the firefighters tell me all about how they look for fires around Palomar mountain. It was amazing. I like to go Palomar when it's snowing too. We need to protect this beautiful One of a kind mountain at all costs. Please I beg you no transmission lines going through here ever. It would spell disaster waiting to happen. And once that happens you can't stop the wildfire from burning up everything.

Cheryl	Spink	Oceanside	CA	USA	I am deeply saddened by even just the thought of this devastation to our local treasure. Palomar Mountain is my favorite place to escape to for peace and rejuvenation. I have fond memories as a child of 10 years old, back in the 1960's, of participating in "The Palomar Mountain Ride" on horseback from Vista to Palomar Mtn and back. And to this day I frequently take day trips, via car, to roam around the beautiful, forested surroundings. The State Park area is my favorite, especially Doane Pond area but the whole mountain has such a vast variety of beauty to behold. Any disruption or clear cutting of any part of this mountain for the proposed transmission line would be absolutely devastating and very, very sad. We already displace our wildlife by all the developments that are constantly being built. I hate to imagine what this transmission line would do to the beautiful aesthetic of the mountain, not to mention the disruption of the wildlife. I am a strong advocate for leaving Palomar Mountain in its natural state, which is what draws so many people to it. The mountain is a local treasure and needs to be left alone.

I’ve been to all the major mountains in the area; however, none of them compare to the beauty, serenity and history of Palomar Mountain. This mountain is one of the only places left in San Diego county that is ‘untouched’ by massive construction and overpopulation. With this said, the proposed power line will directly take away at the mountains beauty and nature feel. Please do not build this power line. Please protect the little untouched land that is left in San Diego.

Dawna	Summers	Escondido	CA	USA	Palomar Mountain is the most pristine and unique natural environments that I know. It would be a detriment to have that uniqueness and beauty scarred by the 500,000 Volt Transmission plan to take place in this sacred area. Seeing those transmission lines and towers obstruct the view while spending time hiking in these old growth forests during the seasons of each year would definitely take away from the environment of this natural area and also give great concern to the danger they would cause for possible fires in the area, not to mention the damage this plan would create in the paths created through the State Park land in order to complete the volt line. I would be devastated if this plan were to go through. I began coming up to Palomar with my church in 1984, camping at the Christian Conference Center, where I eventually became employed at for 5 years from 1984 to 1989. I spent many hours hiking the trails throughout the State Park during this time and over the years and into the present, I have continued to hike, take vacations, camp and been invited to become a Board Member of the Friends of Palomar Mountain State Park because of my love of and for this mountain. I recently enjoyed time with my son and his wife hiking near Doane Pond and have included pictures of our time there. I would hope that my future grandchildren could enjoy Palomar in the same way that my family and others can now. Please don't allow this transmission line to go through.

Today, I am fortunate to live even closer to this beautiful and serene mountaintop, and it continues to soothe the soul and bring a calmness to the mind. We have all-too-often seen the potential results of what can happen when a power line of such magnitude is placed in this type of environment. The high winds can, and have, caused line damage and devastation to the environment. It is not worth it! I am strongly opposed to this project! It has already been developed enough, and is home to incredibly important and diverse native, old growth forest and chaparral habitats. The mountain roads crossing through the mountain are far and away enough and already pose a danger to the life up there, and a huge electric power line will destroy habitat not only in its creation and construction, but that high voltage energy will disrupt the flow of life for decades to come. It will also inevitably destroy untold cultural resources from indigenous communities, and will damage the recreational enjoyment of the mountain and its open biotic spaces for everyone. John	Tran	Murrieta	CA	USA	Palomar Mountain provides immense cultural, recreational, and environmental value to the local community and Southern California as a whole. My family and I have been going to Palomar Mountain over the years as a journey to reinvigorate the senses, recreate, build relationships, and provide our children an important avenue to understand the importance of our naturals spaces. I agree that energy is important to our future, but more importantly is the need to protect our natural, outdoor spaces. Cutting our heritage and green spaces for green energy is counter productive, even moronic and hypocritical. I urge that we reroute the transmission line as to not adversely impact a sacred spot in Southern California. Our future depends on us to do the right thing.

We enjoyed doing several hikes in Palomar Mountain State Park as well as the spent the day at Palomar observatory. It is unfortunate to hear that the mountain and its biodiverse ecological life inhabiting this region is being threatened by destruction of its land for the development of powerlines. Not only would powerlines be such an eyesore to such a beautiful place, it would also increase the risk for fires in an already naturally dry and arid environment. Casey	Wear-Moline	Oceanside	CA	USA	I grew up in Escondido and I have been to Palomar Mountain so many times in my lifetime and still hike there often. She is a beautiful mountain that I love to enjoy. I even went to 6th grade camp on Palomar Mountain and I am now 61. Please do not destroy her beauty with harmful power lines. I hope and I pray this goes on the county vote ballot so that all of us that love Palomar Mountain can vote this down. This is a terrible idea to destroy nature with both Federal and State Parks involved public lands do not belong to power companies.

It makes more sense to have the lines follow the freeway where the land has already been developed and would be a clearer path to LA.

Not to mention we are always scared of wildfires here and this will only put us all at greater risk. This place is a get away from the city because it's peaceful and full of nature (not much humans or infrastructure) this project would change that! It would bring something that's not necessary to the location and destroy precious land for the species that live there. Please don't do this!

Doug	Wescott		ME	USA	Although I now live in Maine, my family has been camping on Palomar for over 60 years. My grandparents ran a summer camp at Iron Springs just before World War II. My granddaughter has camped their twice, making it five generations for our family. Major intrusions of urban society have no place on Palomar Mountain, period. People that live there and recreate there do so for the natural beauty, solitude, and mental and physical 'recharging' as a necessary part of living, especially in an urban environment. Constructing a major powerline across the middle of Palomar Mountain is far beyond acceptable. I'm very glad to see the new proposed route completely avoids Palomar. Thank you for all you do, to preserve the beautiful, pristine natural and rural character of this Southern California treasure.

Spencer	White	Valley Center	CA	USA	Palomar is not only home to important wildlife but a place for people who love nature and want to preserve it for the natural wildlife. We want to keep it a habitat for the mountain lions that travel through there as well as the native plants that keep Palomar a unique place to visit. Construction through the mountain could cause irreversible damage to the ecosystem, it would be a shame to disturb any part of the mountain as well as posing a potential fire hazard with high levels of electricity

Sara	Whyte	Bonsall	CA	USA	My husband grew up living on Palomar and we have many friends an family that live up there as well. It is so incredibly peaceful and serene. Going up the mountain and getting to relax and enjoy the wildlife, scenery, and the rural-ness of it all is absolutely priceless. Doing a project such as a major powerline through the mountain would be devastating if we were to get wild fires. There have been multiple fires on Palomar mountain and they were incredibly hard to get contained. My husband lived up there at the time and the mountain was shut down for over a week in 2007. We need to keep Palomar mountain as rural as possible to avoid another tragic event such as this.

And they even allowed us to go into the Observatory! Which I had done with my family at an even younger age. We had campfire's and sing along. Do you learn how to do chores cleaning up the environment around us and breathing in the fresh air we had talent shows! I can't imagine that all not being there. I am hoping to witness my grandchildren who are just now in the sixth grade and younger going to that camp there was a big old building there how could the observatory be there and anything else shame on them for even thinking that please don't let them do anything to that beautiful mountain.

Natalie	Woytko	Escondido	CA	USA	There is no justifiable excuse to build on this untouched area. With how hard we are pushing for solar paneling and alternative forms of clean energy, destroying this area for the sake of powerlines goes against any environmentalist movement California could pride itself on. The area is a remarkable! It is easily accessible to the surrounding communities from Fallbrook to Chula Vista. It is as big a staple as Big Bear. This undisturbed area has provided countless San Diegans with a natural reprieve from the hustle and bustle of San Diego. My husband, a former US Marine, and I have had the privilege of experiencing the beauty of Palomar Mountain and its residence on several occasions. Most recently, when the Northern Lights were rumored to be visible for a few days due to solar activity. While we did not succeed in our mission, we were able to enjoy our drive and picnic at one of the many parking areas along with others from all across San Diego. It was a reminder of how unique this preserved area is. The ability to drive less than an hour and enjoy clear skies, almost free of light pollution is almost unheard of. The hiking in the area is most noteworthy. A coworker and dear friend of mine has guided me and my husband on many lovely trails. We were introduced to some of the most welcoming members of this community. It was a breath of fresh air in more ways than one. California is one of the most popular states for many reasons. While I am not a native of California, almost everyone I've met in the 5 years I've lived here has made areas like Palomar Mountain one of the many things that keeps them in this state. I beg you as a member of this community, as a lover of nature, as a human being, please DO NOT move forward with this construction.

The Observatory campground is a great, local getaway which promises shade and a relaxing place to read, cook and wander. This is no place for transmission lines! Palomar Mountain is home to wildlife and some of the most beautiful flora in San Diego County. We often visit to see and photograph the wildlife who call it home. Stellar Jays, least chipmunks, mule deer and mountain lions. Palomar Mountain is recently home to a black bear. DO NOT DISTURB THEIR HOME! NO to transmission lines! There are other alternatives. Anouk and Andre				Holland	We enjoyed our stay from the first until the last second. What a very beautiful forest you live in. You are so blessed.
Aranjo Family		Vail	AZ	USA	Great stay, peace. tranquility, hiking trails and cool temps. Exactly what we needed ... we leave grateful and well rested from our wonderful mountain experience.
Austin		Escondido	CA	USA	I love Palomar Mountain. I love to fish and hunt and hike and explore. Having raw untouched land is a necessity for sport and recreation and also wild life. Don't ruin San Diego few mountains to give Palomar away from us!
Barbara and Garrett		Phoenix	AZ	USA	We loved our escape from the Phoenix heat to head to Palomar Mountain. One day a doe ran past as I had my morning coffee. Thanks for the wonderful memories for our family.
Becky		San Diego	CA	USA	Against these transmission line routes
Becky		San Marcos	CA	USA	Palomar Mt has been a long time favorite of mine and my family. Coming "up the hill" creates an atmosphere of ruralness, leaving city life behind. Nothing but nature awaits! Deer, bob cats, mountain lions, raccoons, and so much more make the mountain their home, the farms, the cattle ranches, and other who live there only add to its charm. One general store, a post office, and a restaurant (closed temporarily) make this destination special for us. Fires in the past have been devastating! Loss of wildlife and habitat, homes and nature all swept up in a blaze. When fire does break out it is imperative that help arrive quickly and be able to respond without the interference of power lines. Please reconsider and think about the quality of life, the beauty of a forest, and the homes to many people and the tranquility of wildlife. Putting these lines in puts it all at risk. Please think logically and not selfishly. Please don't destroy our beautiful little mountain.
Bobbie and Owen		San Clemente	CA	USA	Our only regret was that we couldn't stay longer...
Boldman Family		Ocean Beach	CA	USA	Our family needed a getaway this weekend and this was just what we wanted. We drove up from the coast and had the most lovely weekend. We are heading ack home recharged and renewed!
Bonnie			ID	USA	I have been going to Palomar Mountain for many decades to enjoy the pristine beauty. It is heartbreaking to hear about this project which will effect the quality of life and health of its residents, wildlife, and natural habitat. Please don't make that choice.
Brandon		Oceanside	CA	USA	Palomar Mountain is perfect for relaxing weekend getaway and we had an unforgettable weekend. We hope to visit again!
Brandon, Alla and baby		San Diego	CA	USA	We truly enjoyed our stay ... it was our first getaway weekend since our baby boy was born 4 months ago... We had a great and relaxing time hiking and saw deer....
Bree		Oceanside	CA	USA	Building new powerlines on Palomar Mountain poses significant risks and concerns, particularly regarding fire hazards and the potential destruction of natural habitats. The area is known for its dense vegetation and dry conditions, which make it highly susceptible to wildfires. Installing powerlines would increase the likelihood of fires, as electrical faults and equipment failures are common ignition sources. Moreover, the construction and maintenance of powerlines would disrupt the fragile ecosystem, threatening wildlife habitats and displacing numerous plant and animal species. This not only jeopardizes biodiversity but also the livelihoods and safety of residents who cherish the mountain's natural beauty and tranquility. Preserving Palomar Mountain's pristine environment is crucial for both the ecological health of the region and the well-being of its human and animal inhabitants. A few friends and myself were able to experience these great sites and experiences on Palomar Mountain this past weekend. We hope to make this trip every year. We would hate for these traditions and experiences to be abolished due to destruction of the forests.
Brendan		Murrieta	CA	USA	Against these transmission line routes
Brian		Palomar Mountain	CA	USA	No, they should not put all those bolts thru Palomar mountain. It's a historic place for Indian Americans and there is so much history found and places that can be spotted where they used to hangout and do stuff. The animals up there are also not going to like it and the construction overall will be no good to anything
Brian and Louise		Chicago	IL	USA	Palomar Mountain is beautiful and Thanksgiving was perfect here with these amazing views.
Bryan, Leslie and Helen		Oxnard	CA	USA	We had a wonderful time... Our 90 year old mom climbed all the steps to the telescope viewing platform at the amazing Observatory. Best vacation ever.

Dan and Debbie		Huntington Beach	CA	USA	The first day, we enjoyed a nice drive around the beautiful mountain, hiking and the smell of the trees, wonderful quiet and stargazing in the evening. Day two we woke to the clap of thunder and lightening and it rained most of the day. We enjoyed every minute. Palomar is such a jewel in the woods.
Dan and Yvonne		Oceanside	CA	USA	What a wonderful and beautiful place to spend our 12th anniversary! We had such a very quiet and relaxing time. How lucky we are!! We always love coming to Palomar and dream of living here one day. The breath-taking views, breathing the fresh mountain air, hearing only the sounds of the beautiful birds, the wind rustling through the magnificent trees and taking in all the amazing sights, is sure to rejuvenate anyone's soul!
Daniel		San Diego	CA	USA	The Observatory is amazing and the drives up and down the mountain most memorable
Dave and Brenda		Tolland	CT	USA	What a wonderful place Palomar is!! You might not realize how special it is, treasure this mountain. We LOVED the quiet and beauty of Palomar Mountain.
David		Valley Center	CA	USA	This mountain has been a symbol of home for me and my family we would take trips to the snow or even just to get a beautiful view no where else to find. It's a beautiful sight to wake up go outside and see the mountain full of snow on a gray day
Dee and Family		Bedford		United Kingdom	We all enjoyed staying here and experiencing Palomar Mountain, Great hikes, stunning views and such a lovely afternoon at a farm. We love to come back next time we're in California.

From hiking with friends to enjoying seeing all types of wildlife to taking in beautiful sunsets to appreciating the silence amongst the trees. It would be shameful if this beautiful place was threatened by the increased risk of wildfires by routing a high kV transmission line through it. Please reconsider.
Evelyn		Escondido	CA	USA	I've gone to Palomar Mountain every year since I was a kid. Don't change or put anything new!
Familia Rodriguez		Tijuana		Mexico	We had a WONDERFUL CHRISTMAS on Palomar! Muchas gracias!

Jackie and Lyle		Joshua Tree	CA	USA	This has been a wonderful time that we have had on this mountain top.
Jamie		San Diego	CA	USA	I was absolutely amazed at the pristine beauty of Palomar Mountain the first time I visited my friend who lives there. Though just over an hour away from San Diego, I felt like I was in an entirely different world. To have an unspoiled paradise so close to the city is amazing. This land must be treated with respect, and preserved and protected for so many reasons, including our Children's future, the amazing trees, Native American heritage, abundant wildlife, etc.
Janeen		Valley Center	CA	USA	Against these transmission line routes
Janie			CA	USA	I visit Palomar several times a year because it's one of the few places where I can truly get away from the city, disconnect, and enjoy nature without being surrounded by man-made structures. That untouched beauty is exactly what makes Palomar so special. Adding large power lines through this landscape would permanently change the very thing that draws people like me back year after year. Once that natural beauty is lost, we can't simply get it back.
Jasmin, Ryan and family		San Diego	CA	USA	We had a great stay, getting out of the house in the city and escaping into nature for a few days. The kids had a fun time trying out fishing in Doane Pond and doing the beautiful hikes afterwards. We walked over to a farm a couple of times. This walk alone is beautiful and refreshing. You can't eat the quiet, star-filled skies up here. The views of the oaks and conifers feels like a different state, even though it is so close to San Diego. A perfect get-away to relax. Thank you - we will likely be back for a winter experience sometime soon!
Jasmine and family			TX	USA	Once upon a time we stayed on beautiful Palomar Mountain. We enjoyed it so much! Very relaxing and a perfect vacation. We only wish we could stay longer!

Jenna		Valley Center	CA	USA	I love Palomar mountain and it's the only refuge we have in San Diego county to get away from the desert climate and city and into the forest. I strongly oppose this plan to clear cut and disturb the natural beauty of Palomar to build a power line.
Jesse, Stella and kids		Phoenix	AZ	USA	Thank you for a lovely time on this beautiful mountain!
Jillian		Palomar Mountain	CA	USA	I have been a full time resident of Palomar for almost 5 years and before that I would come whenever my schedule permitted and stay until the very last minute before I had to head back. I am sure I speak for several others when I say this...Palomar is a unique way of life. The reason people live here is because they choose to. They choose to live in nature, they choose to drive 30 minutes for gas, they choose to plan ahead and get supplies before they come up, they choose to live in this serene environment. Now we are coming together to CHOOSE to keep our home this way.
Jim and Elana		Pasadena	CA	USA	What a wonderful place for an exceptional escape for this country girl and boy. Many thanks for a very special 35th Anniversary!

Jovanie		San Diego	CA	USA	Palomar mountain had become a very special place to me. I have lived in California all my life and being up in Palomar Mountain has shown me how important it is to sustain the community up here. Palomar mountain is now my second home to go to when I need to get away from my busy life. I ask those who are planning to build anything to not only respect but honor the wishes of those who live up here. This is a community and a home to many and as a guest, I would hope others treat it like that as well.
Julia		Apache Junction	AZ	USA	Against these transmission line routes
Julie		Carlsbad	CA	USA	I visit Palomar Mountain and Lake Henshaw throughout the year. It would be an absolute travesty to add unsightly and harmful power lines throughout these untouched heavenly mountainous regions, neighbors hoods and forests throughout, destroying the Flora and Fauna, the innocent animal kingdom and their natural habitat along the way. I am voting (((NO))) to these power lines and their destruction.
Julie and Ana Karina		Escondido	CA	USA	It was a wonderful experience staying here on beautiful Palomar Mountain!! My 11 year old daughter and her friends were so happy. Best birthday party ever.

Julius and Anny				Manila	We packed up our belongings in Manila, the big container was loaded on a ship for our move to the States. Our first stop was weeks in Hawaii, then found this delightful Palomar Mountain. What an amazing week and a half with our children! We visited the farms, toured the Observatory and did some great hiking in the State Park... Now we're off to move into our home waiting for us in Washington DC. We'll cherish these memories and look forward to another visit.
Justine and Kyle		San Diego	CA	USA	We've been stuck in the city for months because of covid so this mountain getaway was exactly what we needed. Favorite trails: Weir and Doane Valley Nature Trail. Wildlife we saw: Steller's Jay, Red-headed woodpecker, two bobcats as we were driving up Boucher Lookout, bats, the skunk, chipmunks, squirrels, lizards, small trout. We will be back!
Karen		Encinitas	CA	USA	Running high voltage transmission lines through Palomar Mountain would be like running them through Yosemite National Park. Palomar Mountain is a national treasure enjoyed by hundreds, if not thousands, of people from all over the country, every year. These high voltage lines would be an extreme fire risk, as the communities of Paradise and Pacific Palisades have found. These lines should be located near freeways or other existing infrastructure, so they don't destroy nature, and threaten communities with wildfires.
Karen and Matte		San Diego	CA	USA	What a wonderful, restful and peaceful weekend! ... a perfect mountain escape from city life!
Kari		Tijuana		Mexico	We really had a great time on Palomar Mountain with our dogs, breathing clean mountain air. Will come back for sure!

Katie		Carlsbad	CA	USA	For the past 10 years, my family and myself have had many fun memories both during the winter, and in the spring, and summer. We have enjoyed this mountain all year long. The kids have enjoyed sledding down the snowy mountains, and we have had camping nights in the summer, marshmallows by the fire, and burgers, hot dogs, sandwiches, and family picnics in the summer. I would love to preserve this mountain for my kids and future generations to enjoy it in all its current beauty.

It would be a terrible shame to disturb this beautiful oasis that is not too far from the big city, get far away enough to where you feel, like you're totally in the wilderness. Please preserve this mountain and keep it as original as it deserves to be!

Linda and Doug		San Diego	CA	USA	This is our sixth winter stay. With Doug growing up at the Observatory, we had to visit there, of course, like we do each time we are on Palomar. Doug gave some random people a tour with his "commentary". He has so many fun, happy memories of his adventures on this mountain and that is one reason we keep coming back!

Liz			AZ	USA	Against these transmission line routes
Louis		San Marcos	CA	USA	I am personally frustrated with the amount of construction and building in my area and to think that Palomar Mountain will also be affected is unacceptable in my opinion. This clearing of trees can effect the animals homes, disrupt the natural ecosystem, and cause unnecessary damage to a piece of land that should be considered a sanctuary. I reject the proposal to erect new structures on Palomar Mountain or clear trees for any reason.

Lovedycarroll		Fallbrook	CA	USA	Palomar Mountain has been a special part of our family for generations. We love the peaceful and natural beauty of the Mountain. From family camping trips, hiking, picnics, school camps, snow play days and trips to the observatory, this natural playground needs to be kept unspoiled. As a resident in a community that is located at the base of Palomar Mountain, I also concerned about fire risk from electrical lines, as many homeowners have already been dropped by insurance carriers.

Lynette			IL	USA	I've grown up on Palomar mountain with my family. This transmission line would be a huge fire hazard on top of the fires they already face almost every year. This mountain is a sanctuary for wild life and all the people who live and visit. This threatens their way of life and the animals way of life and must not happen.
Lynne			CO	USA	We have visited beautiful Palomar Mountain whenever we came to California to visit family. Its pristine air, hiking paths, animal life & trees make the mountain a veritable refuge. It's hard to believe that California, reputed to be environmentally progressive & conscious, is planning to put this high voltage transmission line across the mountain threatening the preservation of plant, tree & wildlife. Please keep Palomar Mountain safe from the risks that this proposal would pose to all who live, hike, &visit its natural beauty.

Maria		Vista	CA	USA	Do not put in these hideous powerlines through Palomar Mountain. This is were many families go to spend quality time in nature to get away from the hustle of city living
Marie		San Diego	CA	USA	Palomar Mountain is one of a few nature areas untouched in San Diego and it would be unfathomable to see these electrical towers cut through the forest over the mountain. Not to mention the fire danger they would pose.
Mark and Maureen A.		Huntington Beach	CA	USA	We LOVED the quiet and the beauty surrounding Palomar Mountain... The amazing views and spectacular forest was just what we needed to recharge. McGarvy Family				USA	Our family had a wonderfully relaxing stay. We have been coming to the mountain a few times a year to hike the State Park, but this our first time staying overnight. Boy have we been spoiled!!! ... We honestly don't want to leave! A highlight for us was educating our 15 year old son (a kid who can't be bothered to look away from his smartphone) about the game of horseshoes. We had a competitive game that I hope will continue in future trips. Of course exploring the trails in the State Park is a tradition, too. Thank you for the memories!

Nancy		La Mesa	CA	USA	My family has been coming to Palomar Mtn since 1903. First my great grandparents bought what was then a butterfly farm that is now close to the entrance of the State Park. They ran that and then expanded to growing apples and having a small hotel with platform cabins. My grandparents took over and varied on with the small resort and apple growing. I heard tales my whole life about the histories of those people and many more. Palomar is such a unique eco system and serves so many people with recreation, homes and businesses. The Palomar Observatory is world famous and has such an incredible, inspiring story behind it. We have always strived to be a dark sky area for the observatory and for the enjoyment of the many visitors that enjoy Palomar. The idea of putting a very large electrical line over the mountain seems to be a great travesty to one of the few remaining wild lands we have in Southern California and in our country as a whole. Destroying an eco system to bring electricity to a few should not even be a consideration . Where is our sense ? Progress is not away what it's cracked up to be. This would destroy a wild area story for money for a few. We gave other means of generating electricity and should look into and use those other resources before we destroy a well loved mountain. Think of something else!

Nathan		Jamul	CA	USA	Palomar mountain is a place that is very near and dear to my heart. It's where I've been backpacking and camping many times in my childhood and it holds very fond memories. More recently it's where I took my girlfriend hiking for the first time. Since then she's always wanted to come back. We are both amazed my how alive and untouched it is. It was our first and only time (so far) we have ever seen an old growth forest and the untouched beauty it holds. I hope to share such a beautiful place with my kids in the future. These power lines cannot happen.

Prince Family			OK	USA	Thank you so much for this amazing mountain with us. It made our home away from home so very special. The mountain apples we bought from the cute kids selling at the corner were so delicious.
Pringles Family		Peoria	AZ	USA	Had a wonderful stay as a family on your beautiful mountain. Enjoyed the area views as well as a couple of trips to the beach. Pretty fun for this AZ family! Thank you for a great stay with everything that we needed for a weekend getaway!
Rami and Gaby				Israel	Such beautiful views. It was a time of tranquility and rest between many appointments and much traveling...

Sandra		Fallbrook	CA	USA	I believe in preserving the last of our precious forest for so many reasons !
Sandy and Terry		Escondido	CA	USA	We celebrated my husbands 70th birthday here. Loved the trees, peace and quiet and birds - I even saw a mama deer and her two babies cross the road! Had so much fun making s'mores - haven't done that since we were kids!
Sarah		Escondido	CA	USA	Every year we go sledding at Palomar Mountain and frequently hike in the beautiful forests
Shannon and Katie		Lemon Grove	CA	USA	... We're expecting our first child soon and this weekend was the perfect respite before the baby comes. We got here just in time for a winter wonderland. We will definitely tell our family and friends and encourage them to make a trip up to this well-kept secret of Palomar Mountain. We'll have to come back once the baby is born and do it all over again.
Sheryl and Janice		Phoenix	AZ	USA	Thank you for a great 30th Anniversary hideout!
Sophie				United Kingdom	We stayed with our family who have a cabin in the beautiful Palomar mountain zone and it was one of the most breathtaking places. It was so tranquil and peaceful. We went for an amazing hike where we could appreciate the vast amount of old trees and spectacular scenery. It is so upsetting that there is a plan for such huge amounts destruction with zero benefit to the people who live there. It seems a terrible idea to put this line in given there is already a big wild fire risk due to rising temperatures. Palomar Mountain and the diverse species that live there should be protected!

Teri and Joel		El Cajon	CA	USA	When I made the reservation for my 60th birthday, our weather had been very warm. I thought it would be great to relax on the deck and being a new moon, we would see a ton of stars. Fickle Mother Nature decided to make a very wet weekend for us. We used nine bundles of wood and enjoyed the fireplace. We watched as the clouds rolled through then relaxing rain showers. During break in the storms we drove over to Doan Valley and were rewarded with yellow Dogwood flowers and a small waterfall; BEAUTIFUL! We will be back, as we are determined to stargaze from the fine deck!

Tiffani		San Diego	CA	USA	There are few places to go in Southern California with trees and pure nature. That's why we chose to come to Palomar mountain a couple times a year. It's an amazing get away to enjoy nature. Every time we go we see more varieties of birds and butterflies and unique flowers. We discover different types of trees and unique bugs (for good or bad). We know they all play a purpose. These are some of the most happiest times for our family. It teaches so much about our earth and why we need to preserve it. We enjoy how nature works in harmony with it self.
Tom and Laura		San Diego	CA	USA	Palomar will always be a special place to us...
Tom and Laura		San Diego	CA	USA	Once again an amazing stay. This is our 4th time here but just as lovely as the first trip we came. Of course we will be back some day in the winter to hopefully see some snowflakes.
Tom and Laura		San Diego	CA	USA	Our third time here and just as peaceful as always. Wish we could stay forever . Awesome memories... just want we wanted!

Wayne		Palomar Mountain	CA	USA	Friday's power outage (con't) SDGE responded by sending 6-8 service trucks up S Grade Rd., which were slowed by a large 2 foot diameter tree trunk, which had blown into the road, completely blocking one lane. Imagine if this had been a 500kv line that went down in those 70+ mph winds that day! SDGE did not even have the foresight to schedule a PS power shutoff with those winds! Palomar Mtn will be a smoking heap of ashes, if that power line goes down over this beautiful Pine & Oak forested mountain. What a horrible plan!
Wendy, Vaness and Kids		San Diego	CA	USA	Another great stay. The kids got to see some snow which is what we wanted for them. We will definitely be back again!

Xiaome		Jilin		China	Born in China. I've been coming to Palomar for many years, whenever I'm in the States. It's so quite, calm and tranquil. It soothes my soul! Please don't forever scar this paradise with the very dangerous towers that have caused fires and burnt so many forests in California. Please keep Palomar beautiful!
