"There were around 110 replies of interest in the first 15 minutes. It was crazy.

"In the space of four weeks we'd gone from nothing to playing a NSWRL-approved opening round of a 10-team competition with 200 registered players."

Games are centrally located at one venue each Sunday over an eight-week period, culminating in finals.

As an added incentive, participants benefit from free registration and a coveted Panthers heritage jersey.

The main goal is to get kids to focus on skills and development without the added pressure and fear of heavier contact. Mr South said.

Penrith's immediate success could be a model for further weight-for-age competitions.
