

Contributors

Dr Bassani teaches at Kwantlen Polytechnic University in the Faculty of Arts in the Sociology Departments. Her areas of specialization include child and youth well-being though most of her research focuses the social determinants of health and general well-being in marginalized child populations. Dr Bassani's has a PhD in Sociology and completed a postdoctoral fellowship in Pediatrics. Currently she works in the area of youth program evaluation where she takes a community approach to her research.

Rebecca Ciezarek is a PhD candidate in children's literature at Victoria University, undertaking research on contemporary picture book adaptations of Wonderland. She has taught at Victoria University since 2011, and is involved in units across gender studies, literary studies, and cultural theory. Recent publications include papers in Children's Literature in English Language Education and the Journal of Language, Literature and Culture.

Sandra Cox is an assistant professor at Pittsburg State University, where she teaches American literature, and women's studies. Her work has been published in the journals Antipodas, Interdisciplinary Literary Studies, Southwestern American Literature, and Studies in American Indian Literature.

Mark I. West is a Professor of English and Department Chair at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte. In addition to performing administrative duties, he regularly teaches courses on children's and young adult literature. His most recent book is Walt Disney, from Reader to Storyteller, which he co-edited with Kathy Merlock Jackson. Before entering academia, he worked as a professional puppeteer.

Aryak Guha is an Assistant Professor in English in Sree Chaitanya College, West Bengal, India. Dr. Guha obtained his doctoral degree working on the popular English comic book series 'Amar Chitra Katha' (Immortal Picture Tales, literal, and I'm afraid a bit prosaic, translation) published from Mumbai, India, since 1967. His interests include comic books, popular print illustration and visual arts, sociology/cultural history of childhood and postcolonial literature.

Karly Marie Grice is a doctoral student at The Ohio State University studying Literature for Children and Young Adults. Her research interests include comics for children and young adults, multicultural children's literature, and social justice.

Dr. Kate White is currently an Assistant Professor of English at Indiana University-Purdue University in Fort Wayne, where she teaches a variety of undergraduate and graduate courses in professional writing and rhetoric and composition theory and history. She also coordinates writing internships for English majors and minors. Her research interests include feminist historiography, professional writing, and the rhetoric of popular culture.