

Contributors

Christi Cook holds a Ph.D. in English with a focus on Chicana literature. She teaches Composition and Literature courses at Tarrant County College.

Ron Bishop Ph.D. is the interim head of the newly formed Department of Communication at Drexel University. He is the author of MORE: The Vanishing of Scale in an Over-the-Top Nation (2011) Baylor University Press, Taking on the Pledge of Allegiance (2007) and When Play Was Play: Why Pick-Up Games Still Matter (2009). His research has been published in a variety of top journals across many disciplines, including the Electronic Journal of Communication, the Journal of Popular Culture, the Journal of Sports Media, the Journal of Communication, Addiction Research and Theory, the International Journal of Progressive Education, and the Journal of Poverty.

Omar Granados is Assistant Professor of Spanish and Director of the Institute for Latin American Studies at the University of Wisconsin La Crosse. His research and teaching interests include Latin American and Latino/a literatures and cultures, Caribbean studies, contemporary visual culture and film studies. He is the author of several articles and translations in journals and edited collections and he is currently working on a book on Cuban cultural policy after Raúl Castro's arrival to power in 2006.