

Hello from AndKnit

As I set about making my lists for the September market, I was reminded that it was also time to write a newsletter. Full disclosure, I am not sure I have very much to share because it's been a tough summer: I injured my back; I have been holed up writing a dissertation, several funerals, a very wet holiday and then there has been the heat!

There is nothing we like better in this country than talking about the weather, it's a well-known fact, the press like nothing better than a "hotter than Jamaica" headline. I was more fed up with the press coverage than the heat! I cannot be the only person who had to put down their knitting due to sweaty fingers.

Anyway, it's September now and obviously my thoughts have turned to Christmas! I have been in my shed all week winding stripes and making party bags ready to share at the Afternoon Tea at Renishaw Hall on Sunday 18th September. I believe there are still tickets available if you want to join us for a knit and natter. I do wonder about winding some Halloween stripes, do let me know you think I should?

If you can't make it to afternoon tea, I will be on Altrincham market on the 10th and 11th September this month instead of the first weekend because it's our annual trip to the Chatsworth Show which traditionally for us, marks the end of summer.

Let me know about the stripes...

Best wishes

Lisa
