As the issue of whether the Respondents filed a "First Defence" or "Delivered" their Notices of Appearances is no longer justiciable and is tantamount to an admission, there is no reason to delay the inevitable. Whether the motion is heard on Wednesday, December 3, 2025, or thereafter, the only difference is the accrual of elevated costs to the Applicant and the perpetuation of serious, ongoing substantive harm. The Applicant is entitled to the vital treatments and benefits which are already 3.5 years delayed (see: Zurich v. Chubb, 2024 (May) as per the decision of The Honourable Mr. Justice Akazaki of the SCJ (Toronto Region)). The Court's adherence to the scheduled date of December 3, 2025, is imperative to prevent the further imposition of punitive harm resulting from the Respondents' own procedural failures.

SUBJECT II: The Substantive Urgency of Irreparable Financial Harm Vitiating Any Further Delay

The urgency for a disposition on the scheduled date of December 3, 2025, is not merely procedural but is dictated by the ongoing, irreparable substantive harm proved by the evidence contained within the Applicant's Compendium (Tab #3). The core of the Judicial Review Application stems from the grievous deprivation of the Applicant's property through an act of theft and the subsequent administrative failure to rectify this injury.

The full scope and severity of this harm is detailed in:

- Compendium Tab #3: The Applicant's Statutory Declaration (pages 136-1433) which provides uncontested, sworn evidence regarding the facts of the underlying theft, the value of the property taken, and the subsequent devastating financial consequences.

- Affidavit of Service (Filed November 21, 2025, attached to the Motion Record): This Affidavit references evidence of ongoing tampering with the Applicant's proprietary, confidential, and personal interests, specifically the fraudulent re-activation of email accounts related to the theft of his property. As such, on this ground alone, this NOM #3 cannot be delayed from hearing and deciding the same.

This compelling evidence of sustained and quantifiable material erosion places a high burden on the Court to utilize the undefended status of the JRPA to grant the relief sought without further delay. The principles of access to justice and the overriding objective of the Rules—to secure the just, most expeditious, and least expensive determination—demand that a procedurally defaulted application concerning such a profound and continuing injury be resolved forthwith on the scheduled motion date, December 3, 2025, to mitigate the Applicant's ongoing prejudice.

III. Conclusion and Requisite Compliance with Duties by the Registrar

Given the demonstrable and incontrovertible procedural default exhibited by the Respondents, as evidenced by the official acta of the OCPP (Appendix A), the conclusion that the within JRPA is undefended becomes self-evident and legally mandated. The imminent date of the scheduled hearing (December 3, 2025), the now non-justiciable nature of the Respondents' procedural failure, and the unredressed, severe financial harm proven in Compendium Tab #3 necessitates the immediate processing of the Applicant's urgent filings, particularly NOM #3, to prevent a palpable miscarriage of procedural justice and to restore the status quo ante of the application's proper trajectory toward an undefended disposition. The urgency is further amplified by the critical nature of the underlying issue, namely the unredressed theft and the consequential financial hardship endured by the Applicant, which necessitates the swiftest possible resolution through the uncontested granting of the relief sought in the JRPA.

It is therefore respectfully submitted that where applicable the Registrar must and the Honourable Divisional Court should or must:

1. Registrar: Comply with mandatory duties and immediately process all urgent filings by the Applicant, including, but not limited to, Notice of Motion Number Three, which are delineated for clarity at Appendix B. The urgency of these filings is amplified by the facts presented in Appendix A and the substantive evidence of irreparable harm in Compendium Tab #3 and the ongoing security issues noted in the Affidavit of Service (November 21, 2025).
2. Registrar: Upload all filed documents in this JRPA Application as required by the Rules of Civil Procedure and provide the necessary invitation access to the Applicant for his own uploading (where applicable) and for review of the complete electronic record.
3. Honourable Divisional Court/Registrar (where applicable): Grant such further and ancillary relief as may be deemed just and expedient in the circumstances by way of hearing request, written request, or requisition to ensure that the NOM #3 and its relief, including that in the JRPA Application are heard in an expeditious, timely and cost-effective manner while the Moving Party has again complied with all serving, filing and proof of service along with payment requirements.

To ensure that the Applicant has assisted the Registrar with the required immediate administrative processing of filed documents by the Applicant in the OCPP and in compliance with the Divisional Court Practice Direction, by way of subsequent email to the Registrar of the Divisional Court to ensure sufficient time to upload the filed documents into Case Center, the Applicant has provided Appendix A and B to ensure efficient use of public resources.

The processing of the Appendix B, with some of them already due, cannot take more than 30 minutes or so which will allow sufficient time, if conducted on an urgent basis in the morning of December 2, 2025, for uploading to Case Center by the Registrar but for the Compendium For NOM #3 which the Applicant is obligated to upload to Case Center.

The continued fraud upon the Applicant by consequence of the TDI Karat Theft at first instance renders this NOM #3 most urgent to ensure that these nefarious characters on behalf of prima facie the TDI Group (former or present) are immediately restrained from their continued criminality, fraud and extortion. Any such procedural delays would be tantamount to condonation of their conduct.

All of which is respectfully REQUIRED (in relation to the Requisition elements of this joint form) and REQUESTED (where applicable) on December 1, 2025

December 1, 2025

Mr. Kevin A. McLean (B.A. J.D., CIM)

REQUISITION

TO THE REGISTRAR Located at:
130 Queen Street West
Room 174
Toronto, Ontario

Pursuant to the Rules of Civil Procedure and the Consolidated Practice Direction for Divisional Court Proceedings, the Applicant, Kevin Alexander McLean, requests the following administrative action, and I REQUIRE the following:

a) Immediately issue and provide the Applicant with the properly stamped and recorded copies of the Notice of Motion and supporting documents, confirming their original filing date therein;
b) Ensure all filed documents are uploaded to Case Center as required by the Registrar under the Rules of Civil Procedure for Toronto Region;
c) Immediately provide the Applicant with an Invitation to Case Center so he can upload the Compendium For NOM #3; and
d) All other necessary actions in accordance with the law.

BACKGROUND AND GROUNDS FOR URGENCY

The Notice of Motion (NOM #3) and the Motion Record were served and filed on November 17, 2025, providing more than 14 days' notice pursuant to the Rules of Civil Procedure, and all required fees were paid. The matter is scheduled as a written, unopposed motion for hearing on December 3, 2025.The Applicant repeats and relies upon all documents submitted and the uncontroverted evidence and admissions, by the record of proceeding in the Judicial Review Procedure Act (JRPA) proceeding, that the JRPA Application was unopposed throughout. Pursuant to Rule 37.10.1 (Confirmation of Motion), the Applicant delivered the Confirmation of Motion (Form 37B) on November 24, 2025, confirming the motion was ready to proceed on December 3, 2025. A copy of the electronic transmittal/letter is attached (as it was in Appendix A). The Applicant relies on the representation that electronically filed documents would be rejected or noted for compliance within three business days. As the documents were not rejected, the presumption is that the motion is properly filed and proceeding accordingly on the docket for the written hearing. The failure to provide the Applicant with the stamped, issued copies for the record is strictly due to a clerical omission on the part of the Registry staff, not any non-compliance by the Applicant. Immediate administrative intervention is required to provide the record necessary to confirm the hearing is proceeding without delay. Furthermore, the underlying proceeding is a Judicial Review governed by the Judicial Review Procedure Act, RSO 1990, c J.1, which are, by their nature, summary proceedings. This procedural mandate requires the Registry to act with diligence and urgency to ensure the immediate rectification of clerical errors and prevent unwarranted delays.

MANDATORY ADMINISTRATIVE DUTY (RULES OF CIVIL PROCEDURE AND LEGISLATION)

The Registrar's duties extend beyond merely receiving documents to include the issuance (stamping and returning copies) of motion materials. The court's authority must be used to correct its own errors, particularly when supported by statutory principles:

a) General Principle (Rules of Civil Procedure, r. 1.04(1)): These rules shall be liberally construed to secure the just, most expeditious and least expensive determination of every civil proceeding on its merits. The Registrar's administrative action must be taken to ensure the just and most expeditious determination of this motion.

b) Matters Not Provided For (Rules of Civil Procedure, r. 1.04(2)): Where matters are not provided for in these rules, the practice shall be determined by analogy to them. Even if a specific rule for correcting this clerical oversight is missing, the Registrar must find the analogous power within the Rules to cure the omission and allow the motion to proceed.

c) Orders on Terms (Rules of Civil Procedure, r. 1.05): When making an order under these rules the court may impose such terms and give such directions as are just. This rule affirms the court's (and by extension, the Registrar's administrative duty to ensure compliance with the Rules) inherent discretion to give directions that are just—i.e., immediately issuing the stamped copies.

d) Use of Forms (Rules of Civil Procedure, r. 1.06(1)): The forms prescribed by these rules shall be used where applicable and with such variations as the circumstances require. This Requisition (Form 4E) is being used with necessary variations to compel the Registrar to cure a clerical omission, as the circumstances require.

e) Computation of Time (Rules of Civil Procedure, r. 3.01(1)): This rule governs how time is computed under the Rules, including the exclusion of holidays for periods of seven days or less, and deeming service after 4 p.m. or on a holiday to occur on the next day. This ensures the Applicant's timely filings are properly credited.

f) Extension or Abridgment (Rules of Civil Procedure, r. 3.02(1) & (2)): The court may by order extend or abridge any time prescribed by these rules or an order on such terms as are just, and a motion for extension may be made before or after the expiration of the time prescribed. This confirms the court’s broad discretion to validate the motion notwithstanding any technical time issues caused by administrative delay.

g) Notice to be Given in Writing or Electronically (Rules of Civil Procedure, r. 4.04(1)): A notice required to be given by these rules shall be given in writing or electronically. The Applicant's electronic submission of the Confirmation of Motion on November 24, 2025, constituted proper, timely notice as required by Rule 37.10.1.

h) Electronic Filing (Rules of Civil Procedure, r. 4.05(4.1) & 4.05.1(1.1)): The Applicant confirms that the document was filed electronically using the authorized method, noting that the Civil Claims Online Portal is specifically designated as not applicable to proceedings commenced or continued in the City of Toronto (r. 4.05.1(1.1)), thus confirming the correct electronic filing method for Divisional Court in Toronto was employed.

i) Confirmation of Filing (Rules of Civil Procedure, r. 4.05(4.2)): The electronic filing of a document in accordance with this rule shall be confirmed by way of a notice of accepted filing given through the authorized software. The absence of a rejection notice implies this confirmation was, in effect, provided and the documents were accepted for filing, placing the burden of the subsequent omission on the Registrar

j) Implied Duty of Issuance/Recording: The Registrar has an implied duty to record and issue filed materials so the docket is accurately prepared and the parties have the proper record.

k) Rule 2.01 (Effect of Non-Compliance): Non-compliance (in this case, the court's clerical omission) does not void the proceeding. This rule mandates that the motion be allowed to proceed as scheduled.

l) Rule 2.03 (Court May Dispense with Compliance): This rule grants the Court the power to dispense with strict compliance; the Registrar, acting administratively, should apply this principle to rectify their own omission where no party is prejudiced (as the motion is unopposed).

m) Irregularity vs. Nullity & Nunc Pro Tunc: The failure to stamp an otherwise validly delivered document is a mere irregularity, not a nullity, under the curative provisions of the Rules (r. 2.01). Furthermore, the court has the inherent jurisdiction to correct the record and grant all necessary orders nunc pro tunc (now for then), backdating the effect of the documents to the date of their timely submission (November 17, 2025, and November 24, 2025, respectively). This is necessary to prevent prejudice to the Applicant arising from a clerical error, ensuring the motion proceeds as scheduled on December 3, 2025, as implicitly confirmed by the absence of a rejection notice. The Applicant's Draft Order (Appendix C) can thus be properly issued with immediate effect.

n) Incidental Powers (Legislation Act, s. 78): If power to do or to enforce the doing of a thing is conferred on a person, all necessary incidental powers are included. The Registrar's power to process and set down motions includes the incidental power to correct administrative errors to ensure the process is followed.

o) Performance When Occasion Requires (Legislation Act, s. 79): Powers that are conferred on a person may be exercised, and duties that are imposed on a person shall be performed, whenever the occasion requires. The administrative duty to issue stamped copies and docket the matter must be performed immediately, as the occasion requires.

p) Powers and Duties Remain Despite Delegation (Legislation Act, s. 80): A person on whom an Act confers a power or imposes a duty may exercise it even if it has been delegated to another person. The ultimate responsibility and duty to the court to ensure the motion proceeds rests with the Registrar.

q) Law Always Speaking (Legislation Act, s. 63): The law is always speaking, and the present tense shall be applied to circumstances as they arise. The Registrar's duty to comply with the Rules is a continuous obligation, requiring action now to correct a past error.

r) Rule of Liberal Interpretation (Legislation Act, s. 64(1)): An Act shall be interpreted as being remedial and shall be given such fair, large and liberal interpretation as best ensures the attainment of its objects. This rule supports a broad interpretation of the Registrar's administrative duty to cure clerical omissions that obstruct the timely hearing of a written motion.

s) Definition of Holiday (Legislation Act, ss. 87-88): The definition of “holiday” means a holiday as described in section 88, which includes Sunday. The timeliness of the Applicant's filing must be strictly interpreted in the Applicant's favour to ensure the matter proceeds as scheduled.

I REQUIRE the Registrar to immediately (prior to 4:00 PM today, December 2, 2025):

a) Immediately issue and provide the Applicant with the properly stamped and recorded copies of the Notice of Motion and supporting documents, confirming their original filing date therein;

b) Ensure all filed documents are uploaded to Case Center as required by the Registrar under the Rules of Civil Procedure for Toronto Region;

c) Immediately provide the Applicant with an Invitation to Case Center so he can upload the Compendium For NOM #3; and

d) All other necessary actions in accordance with the law.

AND TO:

THE HONOURABLE ASSOCIATE CHIEF JUSTICE OF THE SUPERIOR COURT OF JUSTICE IN HER STATUTORY CAPACITY PURSUANT TO SECTION 18(2) OF THE CJA AS A MEMBER OF THE DIVISIONAL COURT

The Honourable Madam Justice Faye E. McWatt, Associate Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Justice and Locum Tenens for the President of the Divisional Court (as may be applicable pursuant to statute)

Osgoode Hall

Divisional Court

130 Queen Street West

Toronto, Ontario

PURSUANT TO INTER ALIA:

The Judicial Review Procedure Act; the Legislation Act; the Administration of Justice Act and its attendant regulation (O. Reg. 293/92); the Courts of Justice Act (specifically Sections 75(1) and 76(1)); the Appellate Jurisdiction and the Equitable Jurisdiction of this Honourable Divisional Court; and the Rules of Civil Procedure.

OPERATIVE STATUTES CITED IN SUPPORT OF JUDICIAL SUPERVISION:

SECTION 76(1) OF THE COURTS OF JUSTICE ACT: Direction of court staff
76 (1) In matters that are assigned by law to the judiciary, registrars, court clerks, court reporters, interpreters and other court staff shall act at the direction of the chief justice of the court.
SECTION 75(1) OF THE COURTS OF JUSTICE ACT: Powers re sittings and assignment of judicial duties
75 (1) The powers and duties of a judge who has authority to direct and supervise the sittings and the assignment of the judicial duties of his or her court include the following:

1. Determining the sittings of the court.
2. Assigning judges to the sittings.
3. Assigning cases and other judicial duties to individual judges.
4. Determining the sitting schedules and places of sittings for individual judges.
5. Determining the total annual, monthly and weekly workload of individual judges.
6. Preparing trial lists and assigning courtrooms, to the extent necessary to control the determination of who is assigned to hear particular cases.

Pursuant to the representations made by the Divisional Court that the Applicant's filings would be processed within three (3) business days which is a necessity to ensure the uploading of filed documents to Case Center by the Registrar pursuant to the amendments in the Rules of Civil Procedure (October 2025) for Toronto Region and the requirement that the Applicant upload his Compendium For NOM #3 to Case Centre which requires an invitation to him.

The Applicant was entitled to an invitation to Case Centre when he brough the JRPA Application which was November 15 or at the latest November 18, 2025.

FURTHER BACKGROUND AND BASIS FOR EXIGENCY:

1. The initiation, making, and service of Nomination of Motion No. 3 (NOM #3) by the Applicant were duly effectuated on the 17th day of November, 2025, establishing a designated returnable date of December 3, 2025 (the present date).
2. The totality of the requisite filings for NOM #3, encompassing the Notice of Motion, Factum, Motion Record, initial Draft Order, and Affidavit of Service, were subsequently submitted to the Court's administrative offices on or about the 26th day of November, 2025 with the required payment by credit card;
3. The Applicant has fully complied with the requirements in the Rules of Civil Procedure, Divisional Court Practice Direction et al including notifying the Registrar of the requirements for his NOM #3 on an urgent basis. For some reasons, non-responsiveness and honouring representations has not been complied wit.
4. The Compendium relative to NOM #3 was definitively filed, and its effectuation was achieved on the 28th day of November, 2025, which temporal designation comfortably preceded the designated return date.
5. Subsequent to the conspicuous non-performance by the Respondents in the service of any responsive documentation appertaining to NOM #3 and its accompanying materials, the service and filing of the Primary Draft Order (dated November 30, 2025) was undertaken by the Applicant.
6. NOM #3 has been designated to proceed "in writing," thereby precluding the requirement for either oral argument or physical attendance, pursuant to the provisions of Rule 37.11(1)(a) of the Rules of Civil Procedure.
7. The publicly promulgated procedural timeline disseminated by the Divisional Court posits a validation and processing period of three full business days for said filings that are on urgent basis particularly when there are facts arising or discovered along with “fraud” arising or discovered post any “orders” which at law must be set aside; this representation, forming the basis of legitimate expectation, was duly noted following the antecedent disbursement of the prescribed motion fee on November 26, 2025.
8. An academic jurisdictional issue persists regarding the exact applicability of the $339.00 filing fee, established under O. Reg. 293/92, subsection 1(1)3(iv), which matter is predicated upon the Respondents' failure to execute "delivery" of their respective Notices of Appearance; this circumstance jurisprudentially renders them non-parties for the purposes of subsequent service under Rule 38.07(2)(a-c) and compels a distinction between the legal classifications of "parties" and "Responding Parties." Notwithstanding the rigorous statutory construction, said payment was executed for administrative convenience; the present exigency, however, arises exclusively from the Registrar’s failure to effectuate established administrative duties, irrespective of the aforementioned disbursement. Nonetheless the Applicant is seeking the same as a disbursement to be indemnified and waives his right, formally, to receive the return of said payment from the Divisional Court.

9. As of the transmittal date and time of this Requisition, the documentation submitted on or about November 26, 2025, remains devoid of the requisite validation stamp, nor has said documentation been uploaded and transmitted to the Presiding Superior Court of Justice Motions Judge. It remains in "received" status. This administrative lacuna constitutes a material failure to adhere to the represented timeline and precipitates a severe prejudice to the timely and unimpeded adjudication of NOM #3 along with the sprit and substance of JRPA applications before the Divisional Court.
10. It is observed that inasmuch as NOM #3 is proceeding in writing and the Respondents have failed to invoke any participatory rights (it being noted that section 9(2) of the JRPA is permissive, not mandatory, for certain entities), the sole remaining requirement is the assignment of a Presiding Motions Judge to sit, read, and consider the Applicant's unopposed motion; concomitantly, owing to the absence of any 'First Defence' filing pursuant to Rule 77 of the Rules of Civil Procedure, the Judicial Review Application is deemed at law undefended.
11. The Respondents, the LAT and Respondent Insurance Companies particularly, have been on notice since October 26, 2025, as to providing any evidence that they had "delivered", including only "filing" their NOA's and they did not respond. As such, the Applicant's knowledge of the same came to unequivocal admission, on the record, by the passage and implementation of the OCPP on December 1, 2025. The Applicant moved promptly with his Requisition #11 and filed the same on December 2, 2025 at three a.m. As such, the issues to be decided in this NOM #3 are rudimentary and without dispute with respect to the unwinding or setting aside of steps, documents and/or orders on a variety of legal grounds inclusive of the Rules of Civil Procedure. What is certain is that the Respondents never filed a "First Defence" and as such, any request for Assignment For Case Management was null and void, void and void ab initio along with all subsequent steps, documents and/or orders. Along with the same, the Respondents received notice of steps and documents when they were prohibited from receiving the same (see: Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 38.07(2)(a and b).
12. The authority vested in the President of the Divisional Court to possess full control and direction over court staff, as stipulated by Section 76(1) of the Courts of Justice Act, is hereby invoked in the public interest and with respect to this specific administrative failure, which lamentably echoes historical delays encountered in the stamping and listing for hearing of prior filings by the Applicant (e.g., Requisition #1).

URGENTLY MANDATED:

The Applicant and Moving Party, Mr. Kevin A. McLean, respectfully and urgently REQUIRES that the Registrar's Office and the President of the Divisional Court, in the exercise of their respective authorities, execute the following duties forthwith:

1. Retroactive Validation (Nunc Pro Tunc): That the entirety of the relevant filings for NOM #3, specifically those submitted on or about November 26, 2025, be forthwith accorded the validation stamp bearing the date of November 26, 2025, which date constitutes the legal date of effectual filing.
2. Processing of all outstanding filings in the OCPP by the Applicant
3. Transmission by uploading to the Judiciary and Presiding Motions Judge: That the complete and validated Motion Record for NOM #3, in conjunction with the Primary Draft Order (November 30, 2025), be immediately uploaded and transmitted to the Presiding Superior Court of Justice Motions Judge to ensure the instantaneous progression and adjudication of the motion as designated for this date, December 3, 2025.

4. Access to Case Centre: The immediate provision of an invitation to the Applicant for access to the Case Centre interface, which remains requisite for the Applicant to fulfill the obligation of uploading the Compendium.
5. Confirmation and Remediation: Immediate confirmation of the safe and accurate receipt of the aforementioned documentation and the granting of any other ancillary duties deemed necessary nunc pro tunc to rectify this demonstrable administrative lapse.

JURISPRUDENTIAL AND PROCEDURAL RATIONALE:

It is affirmed that the Applicant was legally compelled to bring NOM #3 within this proceeding pursuant to, inter alia, Rule 59.06(2)(a), given that the established common law dictates that a motion seeking to set aside steps, documents, or orders founded upon fraud, facts discovered post orders, non-receipt of notice, irregularity, or foundational nullity must be pursued within the intra proceeding framework of the current action.

Reliance is placed upon the documentation of Requisitions #11 and #12, tendered and filed in the OCPP on the 1st and 2nd days of December, 2025, respectively, which unequivocally established from the record that the Respondents failed to file, vel non "deliver," their Notices of Appearances. This non-compliance with Rule 38.07(2)(a-c) constitutes an absolute statutory prohibition against the Respondents from taking subsequent steps or filing any material whatsoever in the Judicial Review Application.

The procedural rectification herein constitutes an indispensable prerequisite to ensure that the Applicant's fundamental constitutional right of access to justice is not unduly prejudiced by administrative temporal delays, a principle consistently maintained in the jurisprudence, including Trial Lawyers Association of British Columbia v. British Columbia (Attorney General), 2014 SCC 59, at paragraphs 32 and 41.

As such, it is respectfully requisitions (required) and requested that all supervisory and assignment steps along with due compliance with the Registrar's duties are granted nunc pro tunc to ensure that sitting, reading and considering of the Applicant's NOM #3 are dated for today's date of December 3, 2025.

SUBJECT: EXIGENT REQUIREMENT FOR THE REGISTRAR'S EXECUTION OF DUTIES PURSUANT TO HONOURED PROCEDURAL REPRESENTATIONS REGARDING THE T

I. INTRODUCTION AND CONTEXT

This urgent communication is submitted with utmost deference and respect to the Honourable Justices of the Divisional Court, and is directed specifically to the Office of meridiem on December 3, 2025, represents a critical juncture in the procedural chronology of this application.
Subsequent to the submission of the requisite formal requisitions, an appended document is provided herewith. This enclosure constitutes a graphic excerpt from the 'My F which definitively demonstrates a substantive failure to adhere to the established judicial administration's represented timeline for processing and validating submissions. S regarding the notification of acceptance within a period of three business days have not been fulfilled, which constitutes, prima facie, a material misrepresentation of the e

II. NON-COMPLIANCE WITH PROCEDURAL REPRESENTATION

In the enduring spirit of collegiality, and reserving all extant factual and legal prerogatives, I respectfully and urgently request that the relevant filings, particularly those as forthwith accorded the validation stamp bearing the date of November 26, 2025. Immediate confirmation of safe and accurate receipt of the aforementioned documentatior

This procedural rectification is indispensable to ensure the unimpeded progression of NOM #3, which is designated to proceed this day "in writing" and without the necess period of time will necessarily be required for the Presiding Superior Court of Justice Motions Judge (hereinafter, the "Presiding SCJ Motions Judge") to meticulously per Record, in conjunction with the most recently promulgated draft order (dated November 30, 2025), herein designated as the "Primary Draft Order."
The efficacy of this judicial review is entirely contingent upon the successful and timely uploading of the filed documents to the Presiding SCJ Motions Judge, with the sir preparation and transmission of which remains my sole and punctilious responsibility. Although the submission of the Compendium For NOM #3 was not strictly mandate definitively effectuated on November 28, 2025, which comfortably preceded the returnable date designated for the hearing of NOM #3 by a margin of three clear days.

III. JURISDICTIONAL MANDATE AND ACTA

Should the immediate rectification of these critical procedural matters not be effectuated, I shall be compelled to escalate this exigency to the appropriate supervisory auth adherence to the pith and substance of the Courts of Justice Act, the Legislation Act, the Judicial Review Procedure Act, and all relevant attendant regulatory instruments.
It is affirmed that the requisitions appended hereto necessitate the Registrar's execution of a statutory duty pursuant to the Rules of Civil Procedure. Concomitantly, the imp unwarranted, predicated upon the antecedent disbursement of all various prescribed fees established under the pertinent regulation issued pursuant to the Administration of and Court of Appeal - Fees.

ANALYSIS OF REGULATORY FEES

It is observed that the regulatory provision, Superior Court of Justice and Court of Appeal - Fees, O Reg 293/92, specifically subsection 1(1)3(iv), stipulates:
"iv. A notice of motion served on another party, a notice of motion without notice, a notice of motion for a consent order or a notice of motion for leave to appeal, c
To the extent that since the Respondents failed to "deliver" their respective Notices of Appearance previously and prior to the filing of the Notice of Motion Number Three motion, and given that the instant Notice of Motion was initiated with notice, does not seek a "consent order," is not a "motion for leave to appeal," and is not a "notice of facto, is that no further charge for "filing" can be levied pursuant to the strict construction of the regulatory language.

IV. ACCESS TO JUSTICE AND PROCEDURAL INTEGRITY

Notwithstanding the aforementioned rigorous statutory construction, and in deference to the judicious management of the Divisional Court's limited temporal and fiscal re fee may proceed in any event for administrative convenience. This acquiescence is grounded in the axiomatic principle that I am procedurally constrained to advance a mc notwithstanding the absence of formally designated "Responding Parties." It is a self-evident legal conclusion that a "Responding Party" is jurisprudentially distinct from a

It is further acknowledged that the guarantee of access to public courts for the adjudication of civil disputes constitutes a foundational tenet of the Canadian constitutional Columbia v. British Columbia (Attorney General), 2014 SCC 59, at paragraphs 32 and 41; referencing Ontario (Attorney General) v. $25,610 in Canadian Currency, 2017 required to comply with the represented timelines to ensure that this fundamental constitutional right is not ultra vires prejudiced.

The aforementioned electronic correspondence was concurrently transmitted via facsimile to preclude any possible misapprehension or conceptual ambiguity regarding the days since the effectual filing of the NOM #3, Factum, Motion Record, Primary Draft Order, and Affidavit of Service; a duration that significantly exceeds the represented fulfilled the obligation to deliver a Confirmation of Motion to the Registrar at least five days prior to the hearing date, specifically on November 24, 2025, thereby satisfyi
As NOM #3 constitutes a motion without oral argument, its adjudication proceeds appropriately in the absence of the public pursuant to Rule 37.11(1)(a), which states:
"(a) the motion is to be heard and determined without oral argument;"

V. CONCLUSION AND RESERVATION OF RIGHTS

In consideration of the demonstrable lack of opposition to NOM #3 and the exigent circumstances underlying the substantive relief sought therein, a revised draft order sha Presiding SCJ Motions Judge. While the administrative temporal delays are unquestionably of considerable concern, it is anticipated that this approach will facilitate the d and fundamentally just manner.
I formally reserve the prerogative to bring this entire acta to the attention of those possessing the requisite supervisory authority, should the stated representations and corr resorting to such supervisory intervention would be undertaken with demonstrable reluctance, it may become an unavoidable necessity to preserve the status quo ante and The previously provided Primary Draft Order is appended hereto for the Presiding SCJ Motions Judge's ease of reference, should the immediate endorsement of that instru

I thank the Court for its prompt and judicious attention to this exigency.

II. LEGAL ANALYSIS: COURT ADMINISTRATION, REGISTRAR DUTIES, AND JUDICIAL INDEPENDENCE IN ONTARIO

6. This analysis synthesizes the provided statutory excerpts and legal arguments concerning the administration of the Ontario courts, particularly focusing on the division of responsibilities between the Executive (Attorney General) and the Judiciary, and the role of the Registrar.

I. STATUTORY FRAMEWORK

A. Courts of Justice Act (CJA)

7. The CJA governs the structure and administration of justice in Ontario:

   a. Courts of Ontario (s. 10, 11): The court structure includes the Ontario Court of Justice (OCJ) and the Superior Court of Justice (SCJ), which includes the Divisional Court. The Chief Justice of the SCJ (Morawetz) is also President of the Divisional Court.
   b. Court Administration Goals (s. 71): Administration of the courts must be carried out to
      i. Maintain the independence of the judiciary (s. 71(a)).
      ii. Recognize the respective roles of the Attorney General (AG) and the judiciary (s. 71(b)).
      iii. Encourage public access and public confidence (s. 71(c)).
      iv. Further high-quality services and efficient use of public resources (s. 71(d), (e)).
   c. AG's Superintendence (s. 72): The AG shall "superintend all matters connected with the administration of the courts," except for matters assigned by law to the judiciary (e.g., sittings, assignment of judicial duties), matters related to judicial conduct/discipline, or matters assigned by memorandum of understanding (MOU).

d. Appointment of Staff (s. 73(1)): Registrars, sheriffs, and other administrative officers are appointed under the Public Service of Ontario Act, 2006 (PSOA).
e. Assignment of Administrative Powers (s. 73(2)): The Deputy Attorney General may assign powers/duties given to a Registrar or other officer to any person or class of persons.

B. Public Service of Ontario Act, 2006 (PSOA)

8. The PSOA defines the scope and conduct of public servants in Ontario:

a. Purposes (s. 1): The PSOA aims to ensure the public service is effective, non-partisan, professional, ethical, and competent, and to provide a framework for its management.
b. Public Servant Status (s. 2(3)): Judges, Justices of the Peace, and Associate Judges are explicitly excluded from the definition of "public servant." Therefore, the Registrar, appointed under PSOA Part III (CJA s. 73), is considered a public servant and is subject to the Act's requirements, including the Oath of Allegiance (s. 5) and Oath of Office (s. 6).
c. Wrongdoing (s. 108(1)): Wrongdoing includes contravention of an Act or regulation, gross mismanagement, or directing/counselling such acts.

II. ROLES OF THE JUDICIARY AND COURT STAFF

A. Powers and Direction of the Judiciary (CJA s. 75 & 76)

9. The CJA reserves core administrative powers to the Judiciary, necessary for its function:

a. Judicial Powers (s. 75(1)): A judge who has authority to direct and supervise sittings and judicial duties (like a Chief Justice or President of the Divisional Court) maintains authority over:
    i. Determining sittings, assigning judges and cases.
    ii. Determining workload and schedules.
    iii. Preparing trial lists/assigning courtrooms to control who hears particular cases.
b. Direction of Court Staff (s. 76(1)): In matters assigned by law to the judiciary (i.e., s. 75 matters, or others touching on adjudication), Registrars and other court staff shall act at the direction of the Chief Justice of the court.
c. Presiding Judge's Direction (s. 76(2)): When physically present in a courtroom, staff act at the direction of the presiding judge. (The argument is that when not in the courtroom, the default is s. 76(1) and s. 75).

B. THE REGISTRAR'S ACCOUNTABILITY

10. As a public servant, the Registrar is ultimately appointed under the Executive's authority (AG), but their actions in judicial matters are subject to direction from the Judiciary (s. 76):

a. Key Finding in 9383859 Canada Ltd. v. The Court of Appeal for Ontario: Administrative staff may list and delist cases under the direction of the judiciary (s. 75 and 76). The remedy for a litigant taking issue with an administrator's action (like listing/delisting) is to seek direction from a judge of the court.
    i. (nota bene: in order to seek direction from a judge, this may be by request, notice of motion (Form 37(A)) or by motion without the prescribed from where unnecessary or circumstances. If the Registrar is not engaged in the timely processing of submitted filings for the inevitable step of confirmation, then the Applicant will proceed accordingly and as the circumstances requires.

b. The R. v. Li Distinction: Judicial acts (like note-taking at a pre-trial) are exempt from the AG's superintendence (s. 72 exemption) because they are matters assigned by law to the judiciary. The Applicant here is not seeking judicial notes but compliance by the Registrar with administrative duties.

CHAPTER #2(A): RULES OF CIVIL PROCEDURE

11. This subheading is divided as follows.

I. MANDATE OF PROCEDURAL INTERPRETATION: THE LIBERAL CONSTRUCTION OF THE RULES OF CIVIL PROCEDURE

A. SUBSTANTIVE ADJUDICATION OF THE LIS

12. The paramount directive articulated in Rule 1.04(1) mandates that these procedural provisions shall be interpreted with the utmost latitude to secure the just, the most prompt, and the least onerous determination of every civil proceeding upon its substantive merits. The attainment of this overarching objective presupposes that the foundational issues inherent to the lis inter partes must ultimately be adjudicated. As the substantive merits in the current matter remain definitively sub judice and have not, to date, been subjected to conclusive judicial determination, it follows, a fortiori, that any purported application or construction of the Rules which contravenes this foundational objective is ultra vires the enabling procedural regime.

B. PRACTICE IN THE ABSENCE OF EXPLICIT PROVISION: DETERMINATION BY ANALOGY

13. In circumstances where the express terms of these Rules fail to provide explicit provision for a specific procedural acta or course of conduct, the prevailing methodology for determining the proper practice shall be ascertained by judicious and disciplined recourse to analogous principles already encapsulated within these Rules, as meticulously prescribed by Rule 1.04(2).

II. STRICTURE AGAINST EX PARTE COMMUNICATIONS (RULE 1.09)

A. DELINEATION OF IMPERMISSIBLE COMMUNICATION

14. During the pendente lite status of an action before the Court, it is strictly enjoined that no litigant shall engage in communication concerning the matter with a judge or an associate judge in an ex parte manner, whether effected through a direct or indirect medium, save and except where two conditions precedent are fulfilled: videlicet, the unanimous assent of all parties, or the explicit direction of the Court. It is of critical legal import to recognize, as stipulated by the Courts of Justice Act, RSO 1990, c C.43, s 1, that the designation "associate judge" does not include a judge. The operative term "Court" signifies the specific judicial forum wherein the proceeding is currently pending, which necessarily encompasses an associate judge in the context of the Superior Court of Justice.

15. Consequently, the restrictive spatial and temporal demarcation inherent in the phrasing "out of court" necessarily implies that any impermissible communication must intrinsically pertain to a matter external to the specific judicial locus (e.g., the Ontario Court of Justice versus the Ontario Superior Court of Justice) wherein the primary proceeding remains in statu nascendi. There exists a palpable absence of documented jurisprudence concerning the precise application of Rule 1.09.

B. CHARACTERIZATION OF THE PRESENT REQUISITION AND REQUEST (EFFICIENCY OF RESOURCES AND FORMS)

16. It is therefore logically and procedurally self-evident that a formal Requisition, request, or demand submitted to a judicial officer, which includes the Chief Justice, and is concurrently served upon all other interested litigants, cannot be accurately or reasonably characterized as an 'out of court' communication subject to the prohibition of Rule 1.09. Furthermore, the demonstrable absence of any solicitor of record necessitates the determination that there are, correspondingly, no parties represented by legal counsel on the record. Given that the Applicant is meticulously effectuating the submission of the document for official filing via the Online Court Case Portal (OCPP) and simultaneously forwarding a physical copy to the Divisional Court via postal transmission, the communication is, ipso facto, an intra-procedural submission effected in curia, thereby satisfying the prerequisite of disclosure to all entities possessed of a legal interest, preserving the status quo ante of informed participation.

III. PROCEDURAL MECHANISM FOR COMPELLING ADMINISTRATIVE ACTION (RULE 4.08)

17. Pursuant to the provisions of Rule 4.08, should the Applicant possess the entitlement to compel the Registrar to execute a specific administrative obligation stipulated within these Rules, such compulsion may be formally effected by the lodgement of a Requisition and the contemporaneous remittance of the requisite prescribed fee, should such an onus of payment be applicable.

CHAPTER #2(C): ARGUMENT ON JUDICIAL INDEPENDENCE AND REGISTRAR NON-COMPLIANCE

18. The core argument and particulars posits that the Former Registrar's alleged failure to comply with administrative duties regarding filings (e.g., timing of processing, providing documents), constitutes an interference with the Judiciary's administrative independence and violates the goals of the CJA:

a. Administrative Independence (Valente/Beauregard): Judicial independence rests in part on "administrative matters bearing directly on the exercise of judicial function." The administration of the courts by the judiciary is essential to this independence.
    i. The administrative matters in Requisitions #11 to #15 along with NOM #3 and the documents included in the mail filed Compendium For NOM #13 bear directly on the exercise of a judicial function
b. Case Flow Management and Access to Services: The failure of Registrars to process filings in a timely manner, as represented (especially under the updated Online Court Portal - OCPP), is argued to constitute mismanagement of case flow, preventing cases from proceeding justly, expeditiously, and cost-effectively, thus denying justice. Failure to honour representations, in writing by an officer of the court or on its behalf, amount to fraudulent misrepresentation by omissions when there is no explanation for the failure to act in accordance with the same
c. Conflict with CJA Goals (s. 71):
    i. Non-compliance by the Registrar is antithetical to public access and confidence in the administration of justice (s. 71(c)).
    ii. The failure to process filings efficiently undermines the goal of promoting the efficient use of public resources and the expeditious determination of proceedings (s. 71(e) and Rules of Civil Procedure Rule 1.04).
d. The Matter Assigned by Law to the Judiciary: The issue turns on whether the processing of documents and maintaining the case record, to enable a case to proceed to an assigned judge (s. 75), is a matter assigned by law to the judiciary (s. 72 exception/s. 76). If so, the Registrar must act at the Chief Justice's direction. Administrative failures that frustrate the Judiciary's ability to assign and hear cases—the "adjudicative function"—are an interference.
e. Relief Sought: Since the matter (processing documents, case-flow management) impacts judicial function, and administrative staff must act at the Chief Justice's direction (s. 76), the President of the Divisional Court (CJ of the SCJ Morawetz) is required to formally and publicly direct the Registrar to remedy the non-compliance and adhere to procedural representations (e.g., OCPP timelines). The filing of an unopposed Notice of Motion (NOM #3) is suggested as the mechanism to compel this direction.

19. The legal framework establishes a balance of power where the Attorney General superintends general court administration, but the Judiciary retains control over matters directly related to the exercise of its judicial function (s. 75). Registrars, despite being public servants, must follow the Chief Justice's direction (s. 76) in these matters. The argument presented is that administrative non-compliance by the Registrar fundamentally impairs the Judiciary's ability to manage case flow and exercise its function, thereby undermining institutional judicial independence and public confidence, necessitating a direct order from the President of the Divisional Court pursuant to s. 76 of the Courts of Justice Act.

CHAPTER #2(D): MOU BETWEEN THE CJ OF THE SCJ (PRESIDENT OF DIVISIONAL COURT) AND ATTORNEY GENERAL OF ONTARIO AND STATEMENT OF PURPOSE

COMPREHENSIVE ANALYSIS AND EXEGESIS OF THE MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING PERTAINING TO THE GOVERNANCE AND ADMINISTRATION OF THE SUPERIOR COURT OF JUSTICE

I. PRELIMINARY RECITALS AND FOUNDATIONAL COMMITMENT

A. The Memorandum of Understanding Between the Chief Justice and the Ministry of the Attorney General

20. The foundational commitment formally articulated in the Preamble of the Memorandum of Understanding (MOU), executed between the Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Justice (inclusive of the Divisional Court) and the Ministry of the Attorney General (MAG), serves to establish an indispensable and critical jurisdictional nexus between the judicature and the executive branch of government. It is solemnly recognized throughout this instrument that both high offices possess paramount and indispensable functions and obligations with respect to the judicious stewardship, operational governance, and effective administration of the provincial judicial system. This mutual acknowledgment forms the sine qua non of the entire accord.

21. A binding and solemn commitment is consequently proffered by both the Honourable Attorney General and the Chief Justice to the inviolability of the constitutional principle of judicial independence, recognizing its administrative, financial, and decisional facets. Furthermore, this covenant underscores the consequential necessity of upholding and fortifying the seminal functions inherently incumbent upon the judiciary. These core, non-negotiable functions demonstrably encompass the process of adjudication in its broadest sense—which incorporates, inter alia, judicial dispute-resolution mechanisms designed to enhance access to justice—as well as the crucial internal processes of judicial assignment and scheduling. This mutual accord thus affirms the maintenance of the institutional balance and the *status quo ante regarding the separation of powers, ensuring that the necessary administrative cooperation does not engender an improper coalescence of authority. The commitment to judicial independence is not merely aspirational but is understood as a fundamental, operative constraint upon all collaborative endeavours detailed within the MOU.

B. Structural Division of the Instrument

22. The operative provisions and attendant administrative protocols of this pivotal governance instrument are structurally delineated into a comprehensive framework comprising seventeen distinct sections, each addressing a specific facet of the shared administrative landscape between the judicial and executive branches. The methodical partitioning of the document facilitates precise reference and jurisdictional clarity concerning the respective responsibilities assigned.

II. ENUMERATED STATUTORY AUTHORITY AND ADMINISTRATIVE DIRECTIVES

A. LEGISLATIVE AUTHORITY (MOU, SECTION 1)

23. The MOU, in Section 1, firmly derives its foundational acta from the statutory provisions enumerated in sections 71, 72, 75, and 76 of the Courts of Justice Act (CJA). The citation of these specific provisions is a deliberate mechanism to demonstrate that the administrative functions outlined are tethered to and validated by explicit legislative grant, thereby mitigating any suggestion that the agreement itself constitutes an exercise of authority ultra vires the established legal framework.

24. Crucially, in direct relation to the pivotal issue of judicial deployment and court management, the plenary authority for directing and supervising the sittings of the Court, as well as the assignment of judicial duties to members of the bench, is statutorily and unequivocally vested in the Chief Justice or the Regional Senior Judges, as the institutional exigencies may dictate. This vesting occurs pursuant to the mandatory prescriptions found within section 75 of the Courts of Justice Act. The designation of this authority to the judicial branch is a cornerstone of administrative judicial independence, as it ensures that the power to deploy the adjudicative function remains solely within the purview of the judiciary itself. Conversely, any attempt by the executive branch to encroach upon this statutory prerogative—such as prescribing which judges hear specific matters or regulating the frequency of sittings without judicial consent—would, ipso facto, be considered an invalid exercise of authority and an unacceptable transgression of the separation of powers.

B. Collaborative Management and Efficacy (MOU, Section 3)

25. Pursuant to Section 3 of the MOU, the manifest intent is to confer upon the administrative personnel supporting the Office of the Chief Justice the prerogative to participate proactively on the Divisional Management Committee of the Ministry's Court Services Division. This engagement is not merely passive observation; rather, these judicial support staff are explicitly empowered to proffer substantive input and expert counsel into the Division's long-term strategic planning, most notably concerning its Five-Year Plan, on behalf of the entire adjudicative body. This ensures that the planning of court resources is informed by the unique, on-the-ground requirements of the judiciary.
26. Furthermore, this selfsame section imposes a mandatory directive concerning the management of the operations of the Office of the Chief Justice with maximal efficacy and efficiency. However, this pursuit of administrative optimization is always and absolutely subordinate to the overarching, pre-eminent principle of judicial independence. Thus, the MOU establishes a clear constitutional hierarchy wherein the impetus for administrative efficiency must yield immediately to any requirement necessary to safeguard constitutional principles. The objective is to administer the matters pertaining to the Superior Court of Justice of Ontario that are germane to the Court's seminal functions without compromising the judiciary's institutional autonomy.

C. Judicial Consultation and Institutional Independence (MOU, Section 4)

27. The allocation of primary responsibility for the facilitation of judicial participation and consultation, as duly solicited by the Ministry of the Attorney General, shall remain the exclusive purview of the Office of the Chief Justice. This concentration of authority is not arbitrary; it is an administrative necessity to ensure that the voice of the judiciary is presented coherently and consistently to the executive. This responsibility becomes especially acute and critical in respect of those policy and resource matters possessing the potential to affect the individual or institutional judicial independence of the Superior Court of Justice. By mandating this channel, the MOU serves as a vital institutional safeguard, preventing the executive branch from formulating policies concerning the courts in vacuo, thereby ensuring that judicial interests are always represented at the nascent stages of legislative or administrative design.

D. Standards for Judicial Support (MOU, Section 5)

28. Under the specific heading of "Judicial Support," the Ministry of the Attorney General and the Chief Justice have entered into a binding accord to cooperate collaboratively regarding the precise requisites for judicial support designated for federally appointed judges. This cooperative framework is not abstract; it is strictly defined and governed by the explicit parameters of the extant Court Services Division Directive entitled "Judicial Support Standards for Federally-Appointed Judges of the Superior Court of Justice," bearing the decisive date of December 30, 2002. This standardization ensures uniformity and adequacy in the provision of resources, facilities, and staff necessary for the bench to perform its functions without impediment, which is a necessary corollary to the principle of financial independence.

E. Preservation of Confidentiality (MOU, Section 7)

29. Section 7, which addresses the crucial matter of "Access to and Confidentiality of Information and Documents," imposes a stringent and mandatory requirement. Subject to the relevant and prevailing statutory provisions—particularly those concerning freedom of information and privacy—information domiciled within the custody of the Attorney General or the Ministry and its officials, which appertains to the operation or personnel of the judiciary, shall be maintained in strict confidence. This obligation to protect sensitive data is demonstrably triggered where the potential dissemination of such intelligence possesses the capacity to vitiate the integrity of judicial independence. Such information could include, for instance, internal judicial deployment patterns or sensitive performance metrics, the release of which might be exploited to exert improper influence. The confidentiality clause thus serves as a prima facie protective measure against executive encroachment through informational transparency.

F. Executive Legal Officer Designation and Authority (MOU, Section 10)

30. Regarding the deployment of administrative and advisory staff, the personnel engaged by the Office of the Chief Justice are officially designated as public servants, appointed pursuant to the Public Service of Ontario Act, 2006. Consequently, all established public service provisions—those pertaining to staffing policies, superannuation, attendant employee benefits, precise conditions of employment, and extant collective agreements—are rendered applicable ipso facto.

31. The specialized role of the Executive Legal Officer (hereinafter designated as the ‘ELO’) is explicitly confirmed to persist as an existing, integral position within the Ministry's established staff complement. The ELO is mandated to serve as the indispensable conduit and liaison between the judicial and executive branches of government, reporting hierarchically through the Assistant Deputy Attorney General—Court Services Division. Notwithstanding this executive reporting structure, the ELO's function is ultimately and absolutely subject to the plenary, statutory authority vested in the Chief Justice. This authority, derived from section 76 of the Courts of Justice Act, grants the Chief Justice the power to issue directives to court staff. This critical legal mechanism ensures that the preservation of the Chief Justice's directive authority remains paramount, confirming that even a high-level official administratively located within the Ministry must prioritize and execute the operational instructions emanating from the head of the judiciary, thereby ensuring that judicial independence remains uncompromised in limine.

CHAPTER #2(E): REQUISITION AND REQUEST OF PUBLIC INTEREST

32. This formal requisition constitutes an obligatory procedural step, necessitated by the antecedent administrative lacunae (a systemic gap or deficiency), and serves to articulate a requisite demand for two distinct, albeit interrelated, forms of profound and immediate relief. The initial, non-negotiable imperative involves the immediate furnishing of documentary acta (official records and deeds), a necessary prerequisite for the preparation of substantive judicial motions; the second pertains to the procedural mechanism for compelling the Registrar, under specific statutory direction, to rectify systemic non-compliance with established administrative representations and judicial protocols governing the timely advancement of litigation.

33. The administrative deficiency to which reference is made pertains to an unacceptable and protracted delay in the execution of the ministerial functions essential for the progression of this judicial review—a delay that extends over an unreasonably excessive temporal duration. This debilitating state of procedural paralysis constitutes an incontrovertible impediment to the fundamental, quasi-constitutional right of access to justice, as enunciated in leading Canadian jurisprudence, and thereby compels the Applicant to resort to this extraordinary remedial measure. This Requisition is not merely a formality, a cautionary note, or an administrative inconvenience; rather, it is a necessary and serious invocation of the Court's inherent and supervisory authority to govern and police its own process. This invocation is critical to ensure that the conduct of its officers aligns strictly with the statutory mandate established by the Courts of Justice Act and the foundational principles of procedural fairness and the rule of law enshrined in the common law, specifically the duty of administrative expediency. The integrity of the judicial process is demonstrably and severely imperilled when the administrative functions upon which the docket proceeds are neglected or executed with temporal negligence, leading to an unfair skewing of the litigation timeline against the moving party. The doctrine of public office mandates a level of meticulous diligence, transparency, and timely execution of duties that has, in the present instance, been conspicuously and demonstrably absent. The resulting effect is a direct violation of the Court's tacit representation of an efficient judicial process.

CHAPTER #2(E)(I): FURTHER PARTICULARS NECESSARY FOR REGISTRAR TO ACT

34. The particulars contained in the record of proceeding as per the OCPP Case View and contained in the submitted filings of the Applicant in the OCPP and the mail filed documents of the Applicant on December 8, 2025, and December 11, 2025:

    a. "May" is permissive when it is utilized in a standalone context;

    b. "Shall" is obligatory and mandatory when it relates to a duty;

    c. But context and purpose govern and in some situations "may" can become "must". In an old case, Julius v. Oxford (Lord Bishop) (1880), 5 App. Cas. 214 at 222-23 (H.L.) ("Julius v. Oxford") as per Lord Cairns said:

> "But there may be something in the nature of the thing empowered to be done, something in the object for which it is to be done, something in the conditions under which it is to be done, something in the title of the person or persons for whose benefit the power is to be exercised, which may couple the power with a duty, and make it the duty of the person in whom the power is reposed, to exercise that power when called upon to do so." Julius v. Oxford's legal principles have been affirmed in number SCC Decisions;

    d. Ergo, pursuant to a combination of equitable principles, common law and Rules of Civil Procedure (see: Rule 2.02; 59.06(2)(a) et al (see: Long v. Redbranch Investments Ltd, 2018 BCCA decision, articulating the distinctions between BC, Alberta and Ontario courts when facts or fraud have arisen or been discovered post an order), the Divisional Court is required to decide the Applicant's NOM #3, made on November 17, 2025, returnable on December 3, 2025 (in writing, without attendance of the Applicant and Responding Parties, and without the public's viewing);

    e. The named Respondents in the style of cause did not file any Notices of Appearances and as such could not request the assignment of the JRPA Proceeding to case management (see: Rule 77.05 of the Rules of Civil Procedure; the filing of a "First Defence Requirement");

    f. "lawyer's office" means the office of the lawyer of record as set out in the last document filed by him or her; ("bureau de avocet");

    g. Therefore, service of a document, without any filings, by a lawyer of the LSO does not make that person's office the lawyer of record. Ergo, since the Respondents are not "individuals", they require lawyers, as these are Divisional Court matters where paralegals and law clerks are prohibited, to represent them in this Divisional Court JRPA Proceeding;

    h. Without a lawyer of record, there is no party of record;

    i. As such, this Requisition encompasses current and previous duties required of the Current Registrar relating to delinquency of the Former Registrar;

    j. Ensuring that litigants enjoy access to public courts to resolve their civil legal disputes is fundamental to our country's constitutional arrangements: Trial Lawyers Association of British Columbia v. British Columbia (Attorney General), 2014 SCC 59, [2014] 3 S.C.R. 31, at paras. 32 and 41. At the same time, courts require money to operate. In Ontario, filing fees provide some of the court's operating revenue:

i. To date, the Applicant had paid and tendered payments in this Divisional Court JRPA Proceeding for the following:
    1. JRPA Application;
    2. "Certificate Of Perfection";
    3. NOM #1;
    4. NOM #2;
    5. NOM #3;

k. Consistent with the above and with his bill of costs, the Applicant has not only tendered funds directly to the Divisional Court itself but to:
    i. Authorized Transcriptions in Ontario for access to transcripts herein but Madam Justice Shore represented on October 10, 2025, that the Divisional Court (civil) does not provide access to litigants for the same and that "no audio/transcripts [sic] can be provided". Madam Justice Shore was wrong at the time
    ii. To the Divisional Court for access to a digital recording on CD pursuant to his signed Request Form Undertaking involving the same along with payment of prescribed fees to the Divisional Court;

l. The Applicant has not received access to the same since making payment in October 2025;

CHAPTER #2(F): REQUISITION FOR DOCUMENTARY PRODUCTION AND PROVISION OF PAYMENT LINK (IF REQUIRED)

35. It is incumbent upon the Registrar, as the designated statutory, by delegation, responsible individual for the Court's control and/or custody of the Court's records, those filed within the JRPA Proceeding and official acta, to forthwith furnish the Applicant with uncertified copies of the entirety of the documentary records and official actions (acta) filed within the confines of the within Judicial Review Proceeding (the "JRPA Proceeding").

36. The expeditious and unreserved production of said documents is absolutely required to facilitate the Applicant's diligent and unhindered prosecution of the matter and, crucially, to preserve the principles of equitable litigation and fundamental justice.

37. The continued, unilateral retention of the complete record by the Court, absent simultaneous and expedient distribution to the moving party upon filing with the represented timeline, erects an unwarranted, unnecessary, and substantively prejudicial barrier to the Applicant and the "open court principle" (see: section 137 of the CJA).

38. Justice delayed is justice denied so to is reportage delayed is reportage denied.

39. Without compliance with the Rules of Civil Procedure and it is newly passed provisions regarding mere confirmation of filings with the OCPP as opposed to the previous two step process of: (i) Registrar's Acceptance Required; and (ii) confirmation thereafter, was naturally meant to expedite submitted filings albeit tied to the day that the person who submitted the filing.

40. The denial of full, timely access to the acta directly contravenes the fundamental common law obligation of full disclosure in adversarial and review proceedings, consequently diminishing the Applicant's capacity to articulate a well-founded legal position in a timely fashion and meet critical procedural deadlines.

41. This systemic failure directly infringes upon the venerable principle of audi alteram partem (hear the other side), as a party cannot adequately respond, prepare, or proceed without full and immediate knowledge of the complete and processed filed record.

42. Accordingly, the immediate transmittal of these crucial documents is not to be interpreted as a discretionary administrative favour but as a mandatory, non-derogable corollary of the Registrar's fiduciary duty to all parties before the court and an essential requirement for the maintenance of procedural equality and the proper functioning of the adversarial system.

43. These are matters that bear directly on the adjudicative functions of the judiciary like the failure to provide the Applicant without an invitation to Case Center upon the brining of his JRPA Application along with not having access to Case Center prior to any motions or purported conferences (see: Rules of Civil Procedure regarding uploading five days prior to the hearing as it then was but nonetheless the Applicant and Moving Party is required to upload filed compendia in the Toronto Region.

CHAPTER #2(G): SUBSTANTIVE DEMAND FOR JUDICIAL DIRECTION AND REMEDIAL ACTION

44. The Applicant hereby submits formal notice of intention to file a necessary and comprehensive Motion for a judicial directive against the Office of the Registrar. This application is profoundly necessitated by prior administrative failures and a pronounced, sustained dereliction concerning the timely processing, formal acceptance, and accurate recording of submitted judicial filings. The persistent administrative default, characterized by prolonged and unacceptable delays in ministerial acceptance of filed material, necessitates direct, immediate, and peremptory judicial intervention to re-establish the required and statutorily mandated tempo of this judicial review proceeding. Failure to intervene risks rendering the entire review process nugatory due to excessive delay.

A. The Registrar as a potential Responding Party per se on a motion, without a notice of motion, as that would be unnecessary or the circumstances would not require it

45. By virtue of the contemplated Motion intended to compel the execution of specific statutory and ministerial duties—specifically, the cure of the systemic processing failures that impede the JRPA Proceeding—the Registrar is ipso facto (by the fact itself) constituted as a "Responding Party," defined functionally as any person or entity against whom affirmative or coercive relief is sought through the Court's issuance of a mandatory order. This procedural designation, though perhaps a legal fiction in the conventional context of the overarching judicial review of the Tribunal's decision, arises directly from the compelling, procedural need to formally invoke judicial oversight regarding the execution of the Registrar's mandatory statutory duties. The procedural necessity of this temporary designation flows from the inviolable principle that any non-judicial actor whose conduct is subject to a mandatory judicial order must be brought formally within the jurisdiction of the Court for the express purposes of the application for remedy. The application of the Court's coercive powers, specifically derived from section 76 of the CJA, is thus sought directly against the office of the Registrar to ensure the prompt performance of its duties, placing the office technically in the posture of an entity against whom a specific performance order is requested, thereby facilitating a clear, enforceable, and appealable record of the Court's command.

B. Invocation of Statutory Compulsion (Courts of Justice Act, s. 76)

46. The Applicant formally requires that the Honourable Court consider taking the requisite, public, and decisive step to direct the Registrar pursuant to section 76 of the Courts of Justice Act, which stipulates, unequivocally and without qualification, that the Registrar's duty is to obey the directions of the Court. This invocation is predicated not only upon the Court's inherent power to control and rationalize its internal process but also upon the explicit statutory reinforcement provided by the paramount CJA. This directive is urgently requested to compel the Current Registrar to effectuate two immediate, non-discretionary measures, thereby restoring administrative propriety:

a. Rectification of Administrative Delict: To wholly remedy and cure any previous non-compliance, including administrative derelictions, systemic omissions, or unacceptable and prejudicial delays, specifically those attributable to the Former Registrar and the institutional processes inherited. This essential corrective action must include, but is not limited to, the immediate and conclusive processing of all documents that have been deemed merely "received" but remain outside the official court record, a persistent condition which constitutes an administrative delict. The resulting remedial order must unequivocally ensure that these documents are officially deemed filed nunc pro tunc (now for then), retroactively validating the filing date, thereby preventing the Applicant's substantive and temporal rights from being fatally prejudiced by ministerial lapse or bureaucratic inertia. The Court is required to restore the Applicant to the position that would have obtained absent the administrative failure
b. Adherence to Representational Undertakings: To meticulously and demonstrably comply with all specific and verifiable representations communicated to the Applicant through the Ontario Courts Public Portal (OCPP) pertaining to the prescribed timelines and service standards for the processing and formal disposition of submitted judicial filings. These official and public representations generate a binding, legitimate expectation of timely performance which, when materially breached without adequate justification, necessitates direct judicial enforcement to restore the public trust in the efficient administration of justice and to prevent future recurrence of such procedural irregularities and misrepresentations.

C. PROCEDURAL POSTURE OF THE REMEDIAL MOTION

47. Given the uncontested and fully documented nature of the procedural non-compliance in writing, and the overarching necessity of preserving the integrity and chronological accuracy of the judicial record in limine (at the threshold of the proceeding) before substantive arguments commence, the relief sought, by way of this formal notice to the Registrar, would appropriately be in the nature of an order compelling the specified remedial actions. The recognized exigency of "the circumstances"—specifically, the demonstrable threat of temporal prejudice, the continuous denial of access to a timely hearing, and the undermining of the judicial timetable—necessitates this immediate requisition, thereby justifying the invocation of the explicit exception articulated in Rule 37.01 of the Rules of Civil Procedure, which provides:

a. Rule 37.01: A motion shall be made by a notice of motion (Form 37A) unless the nature of the motion or the circumstances make a notice of motion unnecessary or these rules provide otherwise.
b. The circumstances here are jurisprudentially categorized as extraordinary and fundamentally prejudicial: the immediate Motion seeks merely to remedy a bureaucratic breakdown that fundamentally impedes the operational efficiency and integrity of the judicial review itself. To require the filing of a time-consuming and technically redundant Form 37A for a matter that is fundamentally administrative and remedial would constitute an unwarranted procedural imposition, leading to unacceptable further delay and potential injury to the Applicant's substantive legal position.

Consequently, the immediate requisition stands as the procedurally sound, most efficient, and most proportionate mechanism required to secure the status quo ante (the state of affairs before the current incident) of the Applicant's procedural rights, restoring the temporal and substantive position that existed prior to the Registrar's non-compliance.

CHAPTER #2(H): LEGAL AND DOCTRINAL EXTENSION

48. The determination of the propriety of the Motion and the subsequent judicial directive to the Registrar is inextricably linked to fundamental principles of statutory interpretation, the constitutional allocation of jurisdiction, and the enduring, prophylactic principles of judicial review of administrative action and ministerial compliance.

A. DOCTRINAL ASSESSMENT OF VIRES

49. The actions or, more pertinently, the sustained inactions of the Office of the Registrar must withstand rigorous and unimpeachable scrutiny under the constitutional and administrative law doctrine of vires (authority or power). Any administrative measure, or conversely, any persistent failure to execute a mandatory, non-discretionary duty that contravenes the express or implied terms of the establishing legislative authority is prima facie ultra vires (on the face of it, beyond power) and, consequently, devoid of legal efficacy and merit. This breach of authority not only injures the Applicant's specific rights but fundamentally erodes public confidence in the judicial support systems and the functional efficacy of the Court. Conversely, the requested judicial directive pursuant to section 76 of the Courts of Justice Act serves as the essential remedial mechanism for ensuring the Registrar's acta (official records and deeds) remain perpetually intra vires (within power) by compelling correct, lawful action. The Court's inherent jurisdiction, reinforced by statute, must be diligently deployed to ensure that ministerial functionaries do not act arbitrarily, capriciously, or in a manner that frustrates the clear legislative intent of the CJA to provide an efficient and just forum for judicial redress. This is an exercise in upholding the jurisdictional boundaries of ministerial power.

B. PARAMOUNTCY AND PRIMACY OF JUDICIAL AUTHORITY

The legal principles governing the paramountcy or primacy of certain statutes, specifically the Courts of Justice Act as the foundational legislation establishing the Court's jurisdiction and powers, must invariably be construed as prevailing over the subsidiary procedural mechanisms established by the Rules of Civil Procedure when an irreconcilable conflict impacts substantive rights. The Rules, while essential for the orderly and systematic conduct of proceedings, are conceptually a mere creature of the Act, and their interpretation must consistently uphold the inherent and statutory authority of the Superior Court of Justice and its Divisional branch. Should the Rules (or, in this case, the administrative application thereof through the Registrar) result in a delay that amounts to a denial of justice or a procedural absurdity, the Court's inherent power, explicitly buttressed by section 76, allows it to dispense with the procedural fetter and exercise its prerogative to command the Registrar directly. The ultimate determination of procedural necessity and the overriding imperative of ensuring a timely hearing resides exclusively with the Court, and the Registrar's ministerial functions are invariably subordinate to this non-derogable judicial prerogative to control the judicial process and ensure its fairness.

C. JURISPRUDENCE AND STARE DECISIS

51. All determinations and directives emanating from this Honourable Court must be grounded upon a thorough consideration of the relevant "source laws" and the common law interpretations thereof, which are binding or highly persuasive pursuant to the doctrine of stare decisis (both vertical and horizontal application). The judicial exercise in directing the Registrar must, therefore, be predicated upon an advanced syllogism that extrapolates the legal principle of ensuring procedural fairness and unfettered access to justice. The major premise of this syllogism is the constitutional right to a timely and efficacious judicial hearing; the minor premise is the documented, demonstrable failure of the Registrar's office to process essential documents within a reasonable and publicly represented timeframe; and the self-evident conclusion—which commands judicial acceptance—is the necessity of a peremptory Order compelling immediate compliance and administrative remediation. The Court's directive must stand as a testament to the fact that administrative oversight cannot, under any circumstances, be permitted to undermine the established jurisprudence on the procedural integrity of the Court and the fundamental rights of litigants. The judiciary's ultimate responsibility is to ensure that the administration of justice is not merely theoretically available, but practically and expediently delivered, thus reinforcing the foundational principles of the Canadian justice system.

52. The definitions and context are as follows:

    a. Faithfully: To act with loyalty, commitment, and diligence.
        i. In Context: This means the individual will perform their duties in good faith, adhering strictly to the requirements of their role or mandate. It implies honesty and a commitment to the spirit and letter of the law or duty, ensuring they do not betray the trust placed in them.
    b. Impartially: To act without prejudice, bias, or self-interest; treating all parties or matters equally and fairly.
        i. In Context: This is a cornerstone of judicial, governmental, and fiduciary duties. It requires the individual to set aside personal feelings, affiliations, or external pressures, ensuring that every decision, action, or assessment is based solely on objective facts, merit, and applicable rules or laws.
    c. To the Best of My Skill and Knowledge
        i. To employ the highest degree of competence, expertise, and understanding that one possesses.
        ii. In Context: This is a commitment to professional excellence. It means the individual will not only apply their current training and ability (skill) but also use sound judgment, accurate information, and factual understanding (knowledge) to execute their responsibilities. It is an assurance that the work performed will be done competently and not negligently.

53. The combined significance of the above are. When these three concepts are used together, they form a robust ethical mandate:

    a. Faithfully: defines the ethical intent (good faith and diligence).
    b. Impartially: defines the ethical method (fairness and objectivity).
    c. To the Best of My Skill and Knowledge: Defines the practical competence (ability and professionalism).

54. By analogy, the SCC in Zollinger, reaffirming and expanding the legal principles in Bhasin, t he SCC provided crucial statements of law regarding whether silence, inaction and half-truths constituted bad faith between parties to a contract. They can be applied to the conduct of the Former Registrar in relation to their failure to take action, failure to set right their mistakes, and failure to accommodate.

55. In the case of Zollinger, Callow argued that the condos' silence coupled with "active statements" breached (i) the duty of honest performance; and (ii) the duty not to abuse discretionary contractual rights. In the alternative, Callow asked the Court to recognize a new duty under the organizing principle that prohibits "active non-disclosure".
56. An individual swearing, affirming or declaring this standard is promising to be ethical, objective, and competent in the performance of their duties.
57. While Former Registrar Gentles has been relieved of her duties, she was replaced forthwith on December 3, 2025, but nonetheless the Current Registrar must rectify her deficiencies of yesteryear.
58. Where the Current Registrar is not willing to do so, the Divisional Court is the court of The Honourable Judge President of the Divisional Court in Mr. Justice Morawetz wherein the Registrar of the Divisional Court must (shall) act at the direction of the President of the Divisional Court.
59. The Applicant reserves his right to take the steps above if there are further delays and to bypass the Current Registrar with informality or formality, including the formalization of a draft order with potential contempt for failure to comply, to ensure that court staff are directed accordingly by the CJ of the SCJ (President of the Divisional Court) as per, inter alia, section 76 of the CJA.
60. Simply put, the President of the Divisional Court can only direct court staff and Registrars when he knows what they need to be directed on and in which relation to which court file, and with what level of prioritization.
61. All of which is respectfully and urgently submitted to the Divisional Court (Registrar (where applicable in relation to her duties on retrospective and current bases) and the President of the Divisional Court pursuant to, inter alia, section 75 and 76 of the CJA and relevant regulations relating to the due administration of justice of the Divisional Court.

TD HOME AND AUTO INSURANCE COMPANY, SECURITY NATIONAL INSURANCE COMPANY, TD GENERAL INSURANCE COMPANY, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR, LICENCE APPEAL TRIBUNAL, HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN IN RIGHT OF ONTARIO, REPRESENTED BY EXECUTIVE CHAIR OF TRIBUNALS ONTARIO IN MR. SEAN WEIR, THE ATTORNEY GENERAL OF ONTARIO

RESPONDENTS

THIS MOTION, initiated by the Applicant, Mr. Kevin A. McLean (the "Moving Party"), in consideration of the President of the Divisional Court's specialized capacity as the Master of the Roster and the pre-eminent guardian of the institutional integrity and functional efficacy of the Divisional Court, seeking mandatory orders for judicial self-assignment, technical rectification of the Ontario Courts Public Portal ("OCPP"), and the production of court records and recordings essential to the advancement of this judicial review, was adjudicated this day via written format;

ON READING the Factum in Support of Motion #5, the supporting evidence regarding the persistent "403 Forbidden Error Code," the prior Motion Records for Notice of Motion #3 and Motion #4, the Compendium For NOM #3, Request Form Undertakings for digital recordings; and noting with concern that the Respondents have failed to file and/or deliver Notices of Appearance, responding documents, or otherwise oppose the relief sought in the prior motions as required by the Rules of Civil Procedure, thereby necessitating extraordinary judicial intervention to ensure the orderly administration of justice;

I. DISPENSATION AND ABRIDGMENT OF TIME

1. THIS COURT ORDERS that the requirement for the filing of a formal Notice of Motion (Form 37A) for this Motion #5 is hereby dispensed with, such dispensation being necessitated by the insurmountable technical barriers presented by the "403 Forbidden Error Code"[i] that the Applicant is currently experiencing with the OCPP. This digital lockout has effectively severed the Applicant's primary means of service and filing involving the email for service herein, and given the history of previous controversies and procedural challenges in this proceeding, a formal dispensation is required to prevent further prejudice to the Moving Party.
2. THIS COURT ORDERS that the time for service and filing of this motion and all supporting documents be and is hereby abridged, and this motion is declared to be properly returnable this day, January 12, 2026, to address the urgent need for judicial oversight over the digital and administrative components of this litigation.
3. THIS COURT ORDERS that all orders involving timing, service, and the filing of documents relating to the hearing of this matter and the preceding motions are granted nunc pro tunc, ensuring that the record is perfected despite the administrative failures encountered by the Applicant.

II. JUDICIAL ASSIGNMENT AND INSTITUTIONAL OVERSIGHT

4. THIS COURT ORDERS that the President of the Divisional Court hereby self-assigns the present proceeding under the Judicial Review Procedure Act to his own jurisdiction, or in the alternative, shall adjudicate the relief sought in NOM #3 and by natural extension Motion #5 and #4. [ii]THIS COURT FURTHER ORDERS AND DECLARES that this JRPA Proceeding has faced extraordinary challenges and controversies that raise profound issues concerning the integrity of the Divisional Court as an institution, requiring the direct supervision and supervisory jurisdiction of the President of the Divisional Court as the primus inter pares to restore public and litigant confidence in the judicial process before it;
5. THIS COURT ORDERS that Madam Justice Shore is relieved from all duties involving the Applicant or any related proceedings involving the Applicant without any finding at this time as to whether or not she was in a conflict of interest and/or breached the Applicant's rights;[iii]

III. SECTION 76 OF THE CJA AND CONSTITUTIONAL ACCESS

6. THIS COURT ORDERS that court staff, IT administrators, and any officials responsible for the Ontario Courts Public Portal ("OCPP") immediately take all necessary technical and administrative steps to rectify the digital interface and extinguish the "403 Forbidden Error Code" precluding access to the OCPP as it relates to the Applicant's account and the email utilized herein. This rectification shall include, but is not limited to, the whitelisting of the Applicant's IP address and the restoration of full electronic filing and retrieval privileges;
7. THIS COURT ORDERS that the court staff must provide the Applicant with an individual email contact of the Divisional Court and OCPP (IT department) to troubleshoot the 403 Error Code issue as it relates to his email address herein in the event that the technological court staff cannot fix the same;
8. THIS COURT ORDERS that the OCCP manager of the IT department and the Registrar of the Divisional Court are to provide to the President of the Divisional Court, forthwith copies of all relevant logs of the Applicant's seeking to access the OCCP along with when the 403 Error Code commenced and why it has persisted and the reasons for the same;
9. THIS COURT ORDERS that until the court staff fix the 403 Error Code, the Applicant is entitled to file documents via email and they shall be deemed filed at the time that they are emailed to the Divisional Court correspondence email and Acting Registrar Ms. Roxanne Parris (LSO licensee as a paralegal licensee – currently non practising) and such order shall be granted nunc pro tunc in relation to all email submitted documents;

10. THIS COURT DECLARES that such digital disenfranchisement, denoted in the Factum for Motion #5 and supporting evidence therein, violates the procedural expectations of a self-represented litigant and constitutes a constructive denial of the right to be heard (audi alteram partem). THIS COURT FURTHER DECLARES AND AFFIRMS the rule of law principle that universal access to the courts is a constitutionalized and untouchable principle. Any technical or administrative interference with a litigant pursuing a legal remedy—whether intentional or through systemic neglect—is a violation of the rule of law and the Constitution of Canada. Access to justice, specifically in the form of access to the Superior Court of Justice and its digital records, is an untouchable constitutional imperative, and any sustained lockout constitutes a breach of the Core Jurisdiction of the SCJ as protected under Section 96 of the Constitution Act, 1867;

IV. ACCESS TO COURT RECORDINGS, DOCUMENTS, AND INFORMATION ASSETS

10. THIS COURT ORDERS that the SCJ Recording Management Office (attention: Ms. Hsieh, Ms. Amirthalingam, Ms. Azim et al) provide the Applicant with copies of the digital recordings for all case conferences held in this JRPA proceeding; [iv]
11. THIS COURT ORDERS that the SCJ Recording Management Office provide the Applicant's retained and authorized transcriptionist (Ontario) ("ATO") with the specific "tapes and materials required for transcription" required for the production of certified transcripts in relation to the case conferences herein;
12. THIS COURT ORDERS that Divisional Court staff and the Registrar provide the Applicant with immediate access to, and copies of, the requested documents in their custody or control in relation to the "Undisclosed Criminal Proceeding," to the extent that such documents are relevant to the grounds of the judicial review or the conduct of the administrative bodies below;
13. THIS COURT ORDERS that court staff at any courthouses within the purview of the Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Justice provide the Applicant with access to any requested documents, information, information assets, or judicial records in the custody or control of the SCJ in relation to his "Non-FIPPA"

requests. This order recognizes that the open court principle extends to the administrative records necessary to verify the regularity of court proceedings;

14. THIS COURT ORDERS that the court staff, court clerks, and Registrars of any relevant SCJ courthouses or the Divisional Court must respond to the Applicant within 48 hours of receipt of an email, fax, and/or letter directed to the Applicant's email denoted for return correspondence; [v]
15. THIS COURT ORDERS that to the extent that the Applicant is required to pay any fees for any access to copies of documents filed in this JRPA Proceeding, which are denoted in the requisitions or requests in Compendium For NOM #3 and Motion Record #4, the Registrar shall provide him with a detailed, itemized estimate of the cost of the same prior to the assessment of such fees. To the extent that the Registrar does not provide the Applicant with the same within 48 hours of this order, no fees will be due and owing for the same;

V. ADJUDICATION AND GENERAL PROVISIONS

16. THIS COURT ORDERS that the President of the Divisional Court pronounce determinations regarding NOM #5, #4, and #3 immediately or forthwith. To ensure the timely progression of this matter, the Court may announce the result of these motions via an "Immediate Announcement Order," with comprehensive, detailed reasons to be promulgated and delivered to the parties thereafter;
17. THIS COURT ORDERS that to the extent that any orders herein granted dispose of any other orders, the relief sought in other motions or requests are hereby rendered moot;
18. THIS COURT ORDERS that this Order shall be effective immediately and shall be settled and signed by the President of the Divisional Court without the requirement for approval as to form or content by any other party, given the Respondents' continued state of default without rectification;
19. THIS COURT ORDERS that only the President of the Divisional Court may sign this order, and any formal issuing and entering of this order must be completed by the Registrar's office forthwith and without delay;
20. THIS COURT ORDERS such directions may be issued to the court services division in accordance with the above, Motion #4 and NOM #3, with a copy to the Applicant, as may be required to mitigate procedural delays and protect the overarching interest of justice; and

The Honourable Mr. Justice Morawetz President of the Divisional Court

[ii] This assignment is vital to prevent a miscarriage of justice necessitated by the inextricable nexus between the matters at hand and the requirement for the highest level of judicial oversight.

[iii] This order is made purely to maintain the appearance of total judicial impartiality and to ensure that the adjudication of the merits of the JRPA proceeding is not obscured by collateral disputes regarding judicial conduct;

[iv] This order applies to all requests for which a Request Form Undertaking has been submitted and for which the Applicant has made the prescribed payment, ensuring that the Applicant has a complete and accurate record of all oral submissions and judicial directions;

PART 1: OVERVIEW OF SUPREME LAW OF THE LAND AND FACTS

Part 1(A): The Seismic Change in what comprises the Core Jurisdiction of section 96 of the Constitution Act, 1867: ACCESS TO PUBLIC COURTS

1. Ensuring that litigants enjoy access to public courts to resolve their civil legal disputes is fundamental to our country's constitutional arrangements: Trial Lawyers Association of British Columbia v. British Columbia (Attorney General), 2014 SCC 59, (the "TLABC 2014"), at paras. 32 and 41, cited by Brown J.A., of the ONCA in 2017 as per Ontario (Attorney General) vs. Canadian Currency).

2. Formal adoption is hereby effectuated regarding definitions within previous filings pertaining to the Judicial Review Procedure Act (the "JRPA") proceeding (the "JRPA* Proceeding"), including the "Compendium for NOM #3" and the Motion Record for NOM #4 (the "Motion Record #4").[1]As articulated in the authoritative reasons of the Supreme Court of Canada in TLABC 2014 such access is a requirement for the maintenance of the Rule Of Law (the "ROL" or "Rule Of Law") and democratic governance.

3. The power to impose hearing fees is circumscribed by the requirement that such levies do not effectively preclude access to the SCJ courts ("SCJ Courts"), thereby infringing upon the core jurisdiction of SCJ Courts (the "Core Jurisdiction") under section 96 of the Constitution Act, 1867 (see: "TLABC 2014")). Notwithstanding this status quo ante, the operation of the judicial apparatus necessitates the allocation of substantial pecuniary resources and the periodic imposition of fiscal exactions upon those seeking adjudication. The Applicant herein has paid each and every required fee, so prescribed under Reg 293/92 under the A*dministration of Justice Act (Ontario)* (the "AJA"), whether it has been: (i) JRPA Application; (ii) "Certificate Of Perfection"; (iii) notices of motion; (iv) digital recording fees for CDs for each day of conference or hearing (including in the Undisclosed Criminal Proceeding (the "UCP")); and (v) others not captured by the above. Within the Province of Ontario, the imposition of filing fees serves as a critical mechanism for the generation of operating revenue, as was elucidated in the scholarly reasons of Brown J.A. in Ontario (Attorney General) v. Canadian Currency Exchange Limited, 2017 ONCA 195 (the "Canadian Currency Case").This authority posits that the administrative costs associated with the maintenance of the judiciary may be partially offset by modest levies imposed upon those who utilize the system, provided such exactions are not prohibitive.

4. This entitlement to access to the courts, which comes in various machinations and forms along with requiring adaptability to various situations, is not merely a procedural convenience or a matter of administrative grace; rather, it is a substantive prerequisite for the existence of a functioning democracy, ensuring that the state remains perpetually subject to the superintending authority of an independent judicature. The ontological necessity of access to SCJ Courts serves as the skeletal framework upon which the entire body of Canadian constitutionalism is draped; without it, the litigant citizen is left defenseless against the leviathan or Goliath, on its face, of state administration. The ability of an individual to summon the state or even a private opposing litigant before an impartial arbiter to justify the legality of its actions is the ultimate check upon the exercise of arbitrary (which is based on random choice or personal whim rather than any reason or system resulting in "reasonless") power, a principle that traces its lineage back to the Magna Carta and finds its contemporary solidification in the Constitution Act, 1982 (also defined as the "1867 Act"), within the Westminster Style of government so inherited from the United Kingdom.
5. Section 96 of the 1867 Act protects judicial review: Crevier v. Attorney General of Quebec 1981 2 S.C.R. 220 (the "Crevier 1981"). The "403 Forbidden Error Code" (the "Technical Barrier" or "Technological Barrier") (see: Appendix #2) represents an unconstitutional attempt by the Executive Branch to deprive the Applicant of electronic filing entitlements: Uhrik (infra). Digital infrastructure must serve the law, not obstruct it. When any technological barrier effectively bars a citizen from the publicly accessible and open courts, subject to the likes of restrictions in family law proceedings involving documents where the best interests of children (minors) are involved, it is as much a constitutional violation as a physical wall erected in front of the courthouse doors. In the 21st century, access to justice is synonymous with digital access to extinguish the Applicant's ability to file electronically is to constructively close the courthouse to him. In the modern iteration of the Rules of Civil Procedure relating to Toronto Region, along with uploading filed documents in Case Center, the modus operandi of the Executive Branch through the Former Registrar Gentles, who was self-evidently relieved of her duties when the Applicant through extreme due diligence and excessive investigations into the improper self-assignment by Madam Justice Shore to this JRPA Proceeding (on the heels of her "Ex Parte In Camera Hearing", "Ex Parte In Camera Unrecorded Hearings" (apparently based on the representations made by her legal counsel in Mr. Sinnadurai of the MAG that our courts do not keep copies of "signed arrest warrants") the denial of an invitation to Case Center is a form of a denial of access to the courts. Delay in providing the invitation to Case Center is one thing but to not provide the same in the face of filed requisitions is quite another. The Technical Barrier is the modern equivalent of the "padlocked gate," a unilateral administrative act that renders the constitutional promise of access a 'dead letter'. Such barriers create a "digital underclass" of litigants who are denied the tools necessary for modern advocacy. While "mail filing" has been a way for this Applicant to mitigate the Executive Branch's failures along with suspiciously time dismissals of Former Registrar Gentles and a month long absence by Acting Registrar Parris who remains in "radio silence", such staged dismissal and absence of an "Acting Divisional Court Registrar", who is not "acting", with the object of the Rules of Civil Procedure. Moreover, removal of the Registrar of the Divisional Court, when there are no "local registrars" per se, is the equivalent of removing the head administrative individual of the Divisional Court. Removal of the head of the Divisional Court's administrative Executive Branch court staff lead is incompatible with section 96 of the Constitution Act, 1867 (see: 1997 Judicial Independence Reference; wherein the evidence of a judge presented at the trial hearing was that the court could not function without the requisite court staff). Access to justice, the parent of "access to courts", is an inherent and inextricable component of the Rule Of Law (the "ROL") and the Constitution of Canada (the "Constitution") which are the Acts and orders denoted in ss. 52(2) of the Constitution Act, 1982. As enunciated in Trial Lawyers 2014, this entitlement transcends mere administrative desiderata, possessing an inviolable constitutional status that is immune to legislative impairment or executive interference (see: Moton #4). Legislative interference is not at issue herein because the laws at issues, including those passed by the LGIC, have been complied with by the Applicant. The ROL mandates that laws be applied equally and that a forum exists where such application can be contested; without access, the ROL is rendered a hollow representation, replaced by an arbitrary exercise of power by those who control the gates (digital, physical or otherwise) of the Divisional Court of Ontario. In British Columbia v. Imperial Tobacco Canada Ltd. 2005 SCC 49 (the "Imperial Tobacco"),the SCC affirmed that the ROL requires the law to be supreme over the acts of both government and private persons, a principle that is entirely frustrated if the forum for adjudication is rendered inaccessible through administrative inertia and/or technical obfuscation. Furthermore, the ROL demands a system of "positive laws" that ensures a stable social order and prevents a "legal vacuum" where no rules apply; a registrarial failure to process filings creates such a vacuum, where rights are asserted in a void but never adjudicated[2].Any interference upon matters 'assigned by law to the judicial branch' constitutes a manifest contravention of the principle of judicial independence governing the SCJ Courts. Obstruction of a litigant's access to an SCJ forum—whether by commission, omission, or institutional silence—represents a flagrant breach of the ROL, the Constitution Act, 1867 (the "1867 Act"), the Judicature Sections, and the Constitution Act, 1982, Part I (the "Charter* Rights"). This interference represents a jurisdictional and judicial independence usurpation, wherein the Executive Branch effectively nullifies the judicial function by preventing its required invocation; particularly in a JRPA proceeding as per the JRPA itself and Yatar. This point is even more forceful when considering the judicial precedent of The Honourable Mr. Justice Akazaki in Zurich 2024, relying on the now defined herein as the great dissent of Jurianz JJA of the ONCA (as he then was) in Zurich 2014, as it was verbatim adopted by the SCC in Zurich 2015. The independence of the judiciary is not a privilege for the benefit of judges, but for the public and shield for the protection of the public; when court staff interfere with the filing of documents, failing to comply with Rule 68.05(2) on two fronts and in the face of filed requisitions et al, they are effectively exercising an ultra vires veto over the court's jurisdiction, an act that is prima facie unconstitutional and ultra vires. Judicial independence requires that the courts be free to make decisions based solely on the law and facts, a mandate that is circumvented if the administrative gatekeepers selectively prevent certain cases from ever reaching the bench for determination by whatever means including the court staff under Former Registrar Gentles misrepresenting the law including alleged non-public practices which were not embodied in and contrary to the Divisional Court Practice Direction signed by the President of the Divisional Court (which do not meet the requirements of "prescribed by law" under section 1 of the Charter) of the Divisional Court.

6. To "ensure" is to provide an absolute and unfettered guarantee. The Constitution Act, 1982, Part I, predicated upon the supremacy of God and the ROL, guarantees the rights and freedoms set out therein, subject only to such reasonable limits "prescribed by law" as can be demonstrably justified in a free and democratic society. In Ontario, "legislation" encompasses both statutes and regulations, collectively identified as "Source Laws" (see: Legislation Act, 2006, s. 1, BOA, Tab 19*).* Any administrative policy or registrarial "standard operating procedure" that conflicts with these Source Laws or the constitutional mandates of access is, ipso facto, of no force or effect and void ab initio – not merely voidable. This hierarchy of laws ensures that the whims of the Executive Branch cannot override the expressed will of the legislature, and the LGIC when operating intra vires the enabling statute, or the supreme mandates of the Constitution Of Canada. The 'ensure mandate' imposes a positive and affirmative obligation upon the State to provide functional, accessible infrastructure—both physical and digital—to facilitate the exercise of these fundamental rights. Judges of the SCJ Courts possess inherent jurisdiction; however, such authority cannot be exercised in a manner that contradicts the express legislative will: College Housing Co-operative Ltd. v. Baxter Student Housing Ltd., 1976 2 S.C.R. 475, BOA, Tab 78 ("Baxter Housing"). Inherent jurisdiction must not conflict with Source Laws and should be exercised sparingly and only in a prima facie clear case. This "special and extraordinary power" is the final safeguard to prevent a miscarriage of justice and not perpetrate the same, where the written rules are silent or have been manipulated to produce an unconscionable result. The application of inherent jurisdiction is the judicial response to the lacunae of the law by the Legislature or LGIC, ensuring that the spirit of justice prevails even when the letter of the law is incomplete or has been subverted by administrative bad faith. It is the "reserve fund of powers" that allows the court to maintain its dignity and effectiveness in the face of novel, obstructive, or contumacious conduct by litigants or administrative bodies. Inherent jurisdiction and equitable jurisdiction are not 'one and the same'.

7. In Ontario, the Rules of Civil Procedure (the "Civil Rules") are regulations under the Courts of Justice Act (the "CJA") and represent a definitive expression of legislative intent. Consequently, inherent jurisdiction cannot conflict with the unambiguous prescriptions of the Civil Rules. Furthermore, "practice directions" remain subordinate to the Civil Rules and do not constitute regulations per se. They are administrative guides that cannot be elevated to the status of law to deny a litigant their substantive or procedural entitlements. To permit even an internal, non-public, registrarial policy to override the Civil Rules would be to allow the 'administrative tail to wag the judicial dog' (i.e. reversing the natural order; or trivial arbitrary whims dictate the actions of the leader (herein, the primus inter pares of the SCJ (Ontario) and Divisional Court (Ontario), a result that is fundamentally inconsistent with the principle of legality. Even worse for the Registrar's Office of the Divisional Court, such non-public internal practices, so alleged, by it, would not mee the prescribed by law requirement under section 1 of the Charter. This is of great consequence for Constitution Of Canada infringing conduct because there is no saving provision for it under section 1 of the Charter[3]. Moreover, the Civil Rules were crafted through an intricate consultative process; they cannot be circumvented by the unilateral fiat of court staff or the silent inertia of a registrar. Deprivation of access to SCJ Courts violates Section 96 of the 1867 Act, specifically encroaching upon the "Core Jurisdiction" of the SCJ Courts. Ipso facto, violating a right of access constitutes a breach of the common law, the Constitution, and the Core Jurisdiction. The "Core Jurisdiction" is that protected nucleus of power that is essential to the court's status as a superior court, including the power of judicial review and the power to control its own processes to prevent abuse. As established in MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. v. Simpson, 1995 4 S.C.R. 725 (the "MacMillan Bloedel 1995"), a Legislature cannot strip the superior courts of their core powers without infringing upon the very nature of a Section 96 Court; it follows that what the legislature cannot do directly, the Executive Branch cannot do indirectly through the closure of electronic filing portals, 403 Error Code (see: Draft Order for Motion #5, submitted to the Divisional Court Registrar on January 12, 2026) and/or the silence of its Divisional Court Registrar[4]. This protection ensures that the SCJ Courts remain the guardians of the ROL, capable of checking the excesses of both inferior tribunals and the executive government. Universal access contains both procedural and substantive elements: Uhrik v. Terrigno 2021 ABQB 604, BOA, Tab 134 (the "Uhrik"), . As noted in B.C.G.E.U. v. British Columbia (Attorney General) (the "BCGEU"), 1988 2 S.C.R. 214, referencing Golder v. United Kingdom (the "Golder"), 1975 ECHR 1, as contained in the comprehensive BOA for the entire of the JRPA Proceeding as a courtesy to the Divisional Court President as BOA, Tab 35, Timm v. Canada (FCC) (2019), the ROL is supplanted by a "rule of men and women" if officials decide who shall have access to justice. This "rule of men" manifests whenever the Registrar and her subordinate staff to her in the exercise of those duties governed by statutes and regulations exercises a gatekeeping function that is not tethered to a clear, legally mandated duty, effectively deciding which litigants may cross the threshold of the court. The transition from a "Rule Of Law" to a "rule of women and men" is the harbinger of authoritarianism, where the right to be heard is replaced by the misguided sense of authority of being able to grant privilege to others of being permitted to speak. The State must not only provide courts but must also ensure that the pursuit (which is the act of chasing or following something or striving for a goal) of legal remedies is not met with retaliation, reprisal, or administrative "stonewalling", or even worse intentional obstruction of justice through physical or technological means. Access deprivation may manifest through actual obstructions, delays, arbitrary fee denials, or administrative inaction. By analogy, under the Personal Information Protection and Electronic Documents Act (the "PIPEDA") or FIPPA (Ontario), such "stonewalling" triggers a complaint to the Office of the Privacy Commissioner of Canada (the "OPCC"). Conversely, in the SCJ context, any delay in confirming filings is entirely antithetical to justice. The judicial machinery must move with a celerity that respects the time-sensitive nature of legal remedies; to delay is, quite often, to deny. Within the framework of motor vehicle accident litigation and the Statutory Accident Benefits Schedule (SABS), systemic delays in the adjudicative process represent more than mere procedural friction; they constitute a direct denial of essential medical and rehabilitative care (see: Zurich, 2024). In the present matter, these delays have transformed a failure of process into a substantive deprivation of the Applicant's right to life, liberty, and security of the person. The clinical cost of this delay is objectively evidenced by the 2025 MRI results from St. Joseph's (see: Compendium For NOM #3), which document the active degeneration of the Applicant's lumbar vertebrae. Findings show that the pathology identified in 2022 and 2023 at the L5 and L4 levels has now ascended the spinal column to the L3, involving significant disc issues and foraminal narrowing. This progressive deterioration occurred while the Applicant was deprived of the very services meant to stabilize his condition following a high-velocity collision—an impact in which a heavy SUV propelled his stationary vehicle 30 feet uphill—and further ignores the ongoing challenges of a concurrent mild traumatic brain injury. The "stonewalling" identified in PIPEDA and FIPPA contexts is remarkably similar to the registrarial inertia experienced by the Applicant, where valid requests are met with an institutional "shrug" that leaves the litigant in a state of perpetual limbo. The principle of primus inter pares dictates that the Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Justice (the "Chief Justice"), as President of the Divisional Court, is uniquely vested with plenary authority to initiate disciplinary inquiries concerning curial administrative personnel. This prerogative is shared exclusively with the Associate Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Justice (the "Associate Chief Justice"), whose membership in the Canadian Judicial Council reinforces this mandate. Disciplinary oversight of a Registrar (the "Registrar") appointed under the Public Service of Ontario Act, 2006 (the "PSOA 2006") resides within the administrative suzerainty of the Deputy Attorney General (the "DAG"). The ipso facto authority of the DAG is augmented by his dual appointment as the Commissioner of the Public Service Commission and his participation in the Executive Development Committee. Prima facie compliance with section 74 of the Courts of Justice Act (the "CJA") necessitates a bifurcated evidentiary threshold for the destruction of materials in a court office (the "Court Office"). Such destruction, directed by the DAG, remains strictly contingent upon the express "approval" of the respective Chief Justices of the Ontario Court of Justice, the Superior Court of Justice, or the Court of Appeal for Ontario. The term "approval" within the CJA maintains semantic alignment with the procedural prerequisites for Justice Services Online Portal filings external to the Toronto Region, necessitating a distinction from the "subject to confirmation" modality operative under the Ontario Court Provincial Protocol for the Toronto Region. The Chief Justice possesses the established capacity to formalize grievances against members of their own bench; furthermore, no jurisdictional impediment precludes a member of one court from initiating a complaint against a member of another. This was illustrated in the ("Currie Matter"), wherein the Chief Justice of the Court of Appeal for Ontario submitted a formal complaint to the Ontario Judicial Council (the "OJC") regarding Regional Senior Justice Paul Currie. Notwithstanding the withdrawal of criminal charges, the OJC determined in limine that a public inquiry was requisite to adjudicate allegations of non-consensual sexual intercourse and attempts to subvert the investigative process. Subsequent disclosures indicated the justice failed to surrender due to apprehensions regarding the custodial conditions at the Maplehurst Correctional Complex. A point of parenthetical reference must be made herein: the Applicant is in no way suggesting that atrocities that happened to this woman at the hands (literally and figuratively) of former Justice Currie are as atrocious as what has happened in denial of access to the courts. While the misconduct of Justice Currie, whether a criminal conviction could be secured or not although most suspicious with the "out of town Crown", strikes to the very fabric of a judge's integrity it was outside of the courtroom involved in his debaucherous lifestyle but a female victim suffered nonetheless involving her mental, physical, emotion and psychological integrity. This cannot be undone. Those are breaches to her very human and bodily rights. Herein, the breaches are to the Core Jurisdiction of the SCJ and they are not subject to the Charter per se or at least can be disposed of in relation to the Constitution Act, 1867 and the Core Jurisdiction Test. The Applicant (the "Applicant") has identified a False Information Package (the "Impugned Package") and a putative Intake Court Endorsement (the "Endorsement") lacking a physical signature despite assertions of digital authentication. These instruments originated from the same Ontario Court of Justice (Brampton) as the Currie Matter. It is posited that had the Applicant been deprived of liberty by the OPP (SOLGEN Kerzner purview or the Peel Regional Police), via these ultra vires instruments, incarceration at the Maplehurst facility would have been inevitable. Given the antecedent attempt upon the Applicant's life on August 31, 2022, the utilization of a fraudulent Criminal Code Form 2 Information suggests an orchestrated effort by Executive Branch actors to achieve through procedural artifice what remained unaccomplished through physical violence. Under the PSOA 2006, an impugned Registrar may be subjected to dismissal or suspension pending investigation. The Former Registrar Gentles (the "Former Registrar") has remained in disciplinary suspension exceeding the statutory one-month period, creating a hiatus that threatens the status quo ante of the registry's administration. O. Reg 373/07, Oaths and Affirmations (the "Oaths Regulation") mandates that court personnel subscribe to a formal oath[5]. A violation of this oath—through intentional obstruction or negligent dereliction—constitutes a breach of the highest order. A court officer (the "Court Officer") is a constituent component of the curial machinery, bound by a fiduciary-like obligation to facilitate the administration of justice; any subversion thereof represents an existential threat to the legal system. It is observed that the requisite pecuniary consideration has been heretofore tendered by the Applicant for digital recordings (the "Digital Recordings") from the Superior Court of Justice Regional Manager's Office (the "SCJ RMO") pertaining to the Judicial Review Procedure Act proceeding (the "JRPA Proceeding") and the concomitant undisclosed criminal proceeding (the "UCP"). It is posited that the UCP was rendered void ab initio and constitutes a jurisdictional nullity due to the clandestine machinations of unidentified contrivers who engaged in the falsification of a false information package (the "FIP"), the existence of which was purportedly acknowledged by counsel for the Ministry of the Attorney General (the "MAG") in late June and early July 2025. Reference is made to the Notice of Motion #3 (the "NOM #3") and Motion #4 (the "Motion #4"), documenting that the Applicant's liberty was deprived on October 2, 2024, predicated upon an undisclosed and hitherto unverified signed arrest warrant (the "Arrest Warrant"). Within the JRPA Proceeding, a profound jurisdictional error was articulated by the Honourable Madam Justice Shore on October 10, 2025, regarding a purported incapacity to provide recordings for case conferences; simultaneously, misrepresentations by administrative functionaries within the UCP necessitate rigorous investigation to facilitate a restoration of the status quo ante. The SCJ RMO correctly observed that a mere judicial acknowledgement (the "Judicial Acknowledgement") was the sole prerequisite for the acquisition of transcripts for case conferences conducted via remote telecommunication technology. The Applicant may need to seek an Order of mandamus, in the event the Registrar (Acting) does not comply with a section 76 of the CJA order, directing the discharge of ministerial duties and a petition for the permanent cessation of judicial oversight by the Honourable Madam Justice Shore in all matters concerning the Applicant, pursuant to the Divisional Court President's duty to relieve judicial officers whose prior involvement engenders a prima facie apprehension of bias (see: Dugré v. Canada (Attorney General) (the "Dugre"), BOA, Tab 168). The retention of public funds absent the mandated service constitutes a breach of the contract of administration and a violation of the Administration of Justice Act; furthermore, the accounting of these funds raises significant questions regarding compliance with the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act (the "FIPPA"). This administrative inertia (the "Administrative Inertia") functions as a constructive denial (the "Constructive Denial") of the record, precluding the Applicant from presenting evidence in NOM #3 and potentially constituting further fraud upon the court under Rule 59.06(2)(a) of the Rules of Civil Procedure. Systematic withholding of court records by the registry creates an informational asymmetry that unfairly privileges state respondents and engenders a record gap (the "Record Gap") shielding adjudicators from curial oversight; it is fundamental that executive conduct antithetical to the Constitution of Canada is, ipso facto, void ab initio. Section 52(1) of the Constitution Act, 1982 dictates that the Rule Of Law (the "ROL") must prevail over administrative convenience (see: 407 ETR Concession Co. v. Ontario (Registrar of Motor Vehicles) (the "407 ETR"), BOA, Tab 98; and Sunrise Senior Living Investments Inc. v. Canada (Attorney General) (the "Sunrise Senior Living"), BOA, Tab 99). Unilateral executive conduct in matters assigned to the Judicial Branch represents ultra vires conduct and systemic interference necessitating intervention by the Divisional Court President pursuant to Section 76 of the Courts of Justice Act (the "CJA"). Such unilateralism is hazardous when lacking institutional checks, especially as the MAG frequently represents to the Office of the Information and Privacy Commissioner (the "OIPC") that control of information assets resides within the judiciary's supervisory jurisdiction. It is observed that employees of the MAG, represented by the Ontario Public Service Employees Union (the "OPSEU"), frequently obstruct information, necessitating the involvement of counsel in the matter of McIntosh v. Shore (the "McIntosh v. Shore"), a proceeding involving allegations of extrajudicial defamation. A compelling inquiry is raised concerning the dissemination of derogatory statements by the Honourable Madam Justice Shore to the Superior Court of Justice

Toronto Region, most of whom preside over civil and insolvency matters rather than family law. The separation of powers is the foundational cornerstone of the constitutional order; Executive interference with the Judicial Branch's inherent adjudicative capacity strikes at the essence of this structural guarantee and results in the suspension of constitutional protections for the affected citizen.[6] As of 2019, the presumptive standard of reasonableness in Canada (Minister of Citizenship and Immigration) v. Vavilov, 2019 SCC 65 ("Vavilov") is displaced by the standard of correctness for jurisdictional competence and interpretation of the SABS. This displacement is necessary because the questions at hand go to the heart of the tribunal's authority to act; a tribunal cannot be the final judge of its own jurisdictional boundaries.[7]

PART 1(A)(I): THE MULTIFARIOUS PERMUTATIONS OF ACCESS DENIAL

8. The deprivation of judicial access is a phenomenon that manifests in diverse modalities and magnitudes, extending beyond mere financial barriers to encompass administrative and procedural obstructions (the "Systemic Obstruction Doctrine"). Denial of access may occur ab initio at the stage of non-issuance of originating process, a failure which may carry deleterious consequences for the preservation of rights relative to statutory limitation periods. Procedural foreclosure may further manifest during the interlocutory stages, specifically involving the adjudication or processing of early motions within a proceeding, thereby impeding the orderly progression of the litigation. A significant breach of the "Untouchable Constitutional Access Principle" occurs through the non-compliance by the Registrar with governing statutes and regulations, such as the failure to facilitate the filing of a "First Defence" or directing a proceeding upon a trajectory that is fundamentally ultra vires. Access is effectively curtailed when the administrative apparatus fails to provide requisite digital infrastructure, such as the omission to extend an invitation for "Case Center" access, which is a prerequisite for modern judicial participation. In the context of applications under the JRPA the failure to comply with Rule 68.05(2) in placing the JRPA Application on a "listing for hearing" and issuing a Form 68(B) for hearing upon the court's record constitutes a profound administrative default. Denial of access is further exacerbated by misrepresentations concerning the mandatory nature of case management or the failure to process requisitions for urgent hearings, both of which serve to delay the administration of justice. Where a litigant is prevented from ascertaining a proximate hearing date before a judicial panel of the Divisional Court due to a failure to process requisitions compelling the Registrar's compliance, the right to a timely hearing is rendered illusory. Like administrative interference being interference by any other name (see: Imperial Tobacco (BOA, Tab 155), the failure: (i) to process duly tendered filing fees; (ii) to provide access to documents filed, albeit clumsily denoted by submitting persons (i.e. five litigants on one filing when that would have been impossible) within the Ontario Courts Public Portal (the "OCPP") Case View constitutes a tangible barrier to the "universal access to the courts" guaranteed under the Constitution Act, 1867. There is an emphasis on the word "public". "Portal" is synonymous with "entrance" or "opening".

PART 1(A)(II): ANALOGOUS CONTRACTUAL OBLIGATIONS

9. The exiguous nature of court fees suggests a reciprocal arrangement reminiscent of a contractual obligation between the sovereign and the subject. It is a settled principle that commercial agreements in Canada are governed by an overarching implied duty of honest performance (the "Duty of Good Faith"). This principle was firmly established in Bhasin v. Hrynew, 2014 SCC 71 (the "Bhasin") and further refined in C.M. Callow Inc. v. Zollinger, 2020 SCC 32 (the "Zollinger"). This foundational case recognized the organizing principle of good faith and established a common law duty of honesty in contractual performance as a minimum standard. This jurisprudence expanded upon the principles in Bhasin, affirming that active deception, which includes "half-truths" or remaining silent while a counterparty operates under a false impression, constitutes a breach of the Duty of Good Faith.[8]

PART 1(A)(III): STATUTORY VIOLATIONS AND PROCEDURAL REMEDIES

10. Where a commercial organization demonstrates an intentional disregard for the Consumer Protection Act, 2002 or related statutory frameworks, such conduct may warrant the imposition of punitive damages. In Bernstein v. Peoples Trust Company, 2019 ONSC 2867 (the "Bernstein"), it was determined that the intentional violation of consumer protection norms by sophisticated entities justifies significant judicial sanction. Furthermore, the presence of fraud, bribery, or extortion constitutes a fundamental defect that renders the subsequent proceedings void ab initio. As held in Landreville v. The Queen, [1978] 2 S.C.R. 58 (the "Landreville"), such egregious conduct unravels the integrity of the judicial process and necessitates an immediate restoration of the status quo ante. This authority confirms that any judicial or quasi-judicial determination predicated upon fraud or corruption is a nullity and cannot be sustained. To rectify such irregularities within the civil context, the Rules of Civil Procedure (the "Civil Rules") provide a specific mechanism for the challenge of tainted orders. Rule 59.06(2)(a) of the Civil Rules empowers a party to move in limine within the original proceeding to set aside or vary an order on the basis of fraud or facts discovered subsequent to the issuance thereof. Rule 2.02 is also an answer to the same but it involves steps, documents and/or orders that were unremedied irregularities, and judicial analysis as to whether the Moving Party had knowledge of an irregularity.

PART 1(A)(IV): THE OPEN COURT PRINCIPLE

11. Pursuant to the principles of the common law and Rule 59.06(2)(a), a determination of fraudulent conduct may be sustained not only against a primary respondent but also against non-litigants or members of the Executive Branch who, through omission or silence, facilitate deception. The standard of proof in these civil matters is the balance of probabilities, which remains distinct from the more stringent criminal standard of proof beyond a reasonable doubt. Charter, ss. 11(c) provides robust protections against compelled self-incrimination. This is inextricably linked to the Open Court Principle which ensures the protection of the "fourth estate" and the public's right to information pursuant to section 2(b) of the Charter.[9]

CONCLUSION: THE CORE JURISDICTION AND THE RULE OF LAW

12. Where fraud has been perpetrated upon the court, or where bribery has prejudiced a litigant, the Open Court Principle and the right of "universal access to the courts" under the Constitution Act, 1867 are elevated to an immutable status. To obstruct the pursuit of a legal remedy is an ultra vires act that offends the Rule Of Law, a principle explicitly enshrined in the preamble of the Charter but the ROL has been read in to the Constitution Act, 1867 and Judicature Sections therein by our SCC. Our SCJ Courts or Section 96 Courts as the successor to the historic courts of law and equity, possesses an inherent core jurisdiction (the "Core Jurisdiction") that cannot be abrogated by legislation or administrative failure. These courts remain the primary guardians of the Constitution Of Canada, ensuring that justice is not merely a theoretical construct but a tangible reality for all litigants seeking redress for grievances. Justice delayed is justice denied. The Registrar of the Divisional Court through the OCPP admitted by representation that submitted filings would be processed and confirmed within three business day. It is observed with profound gravity that the former Registrar, Gentles, propounded assertions regarding these processing timelines that were demonstrably mendacious. This trajectory of administrative obfuscation has not been corrected; rather, the Acting Registrar, Parris, has perpetuated this state of misinformation. Such conduct constitutes a departure from the required standard of uberrima fides (the "Utmost Good Faith") expected of court officials. To permit such administrative failures to persist is to allow an acta of the Executive Branch to supersede the constitutional rights of the litigant, thereby undermining the very scaffolding of the judicial system. The cumulative effect of these administrative deficiencies represents a significant deviation from the constitutional mandate of the court. The Core Jurisdiction must be invoked to remediate these grievances, as the failure to process filings according to represented makes access to courts becomes illusory.

Part 1(B): Core Jurisdiction Test

13. The legal test for determining whether a power belongs to the "core" of a Superior Court has evolved through key cases like: Re Residential Tenancies Act (1981); MacMillan Bloedel v. Simpson (1995); and Trial Lawyers Association of British Columbia v. British Columbia (2014) (see: BOA Tabs #118, #120, and 132).

PART 1(B)(I): THE THREE-STEP RESIDENTIAL TENANCIES TEST

14. When a government attempts to move a power from the SCJ to an administrative tribunal or an "inferior" court, the following test is applied: (i) Historical Inquiry; (ii) "Judicial Function"; and (iii) Institutional Context.

PART 1(B)(II): THE CORE REFINEMENT IN MACMILLAN BLOEDEL

15. The Supreme Court in MacMillan Bloedel held that certain powers are so central to the "very nature" of a section 96 Court, made up of Section 96 appointed by the MOJ, approved by the Prime Minister of Canada, judge ("Section 96 Judges") that they can never be removed. Chief Justice Lamer found in MacMillian Bloedel 1995 where he found section 96 "has come to stand for" the guarantee of judicial independence" (see: at page 523).

PART 1(B)(III): THE SEISMIC CHANGE IN 2014: INTERFERENCE WITH THE PURSUIT OF LEGAL REMEDIES IS CONTRARY TO ROL – ROL PART OF SECTION 96 OF CONSTITUTION ACT, 1982 INTERTWINED AS OF 2024 – BREACH OF CONSTITUTION ACT, 1982 – S. 96 – BREACH OF JUDICIAL INDEPENDENCE – MAKING INTERFERENCE WITH PURSUIT OF LEGAL REMEDY – MATTER ASSIGNED BY LAW TO THE JUDICIARY – SECTION 76 MANDATORY DUTY OF THE CJ OF THE SCJ (PRESIDENT OF THE DIVISIONAL COURT)

16. As established in TLABC 2014, the SCC found that access to the courts was a Rule Of Law and any denial by any person of the pursuit of legal remedies was a breach of the ROL. It further found that access to the courts was predicated upon s. 96 of the Constitution Act, 1867 and the ROL and s. 96 were inextricably interwoven. As such, where the Executive Branch interferes with the mere "pursuit" of a legal remedy, the Executive Branch has engaged in conduct that is in contravention of s. 96 of the Constitution Act, 1867. If a contravention of a s. 96 of the Constitution Act, 1867, then it is a matter assigned by law to the Judiciary. If assigned by law to the Judiciary, and as such commands the immediate attention and corresponding discharging of duty by the CJ of the SCJ. This is an unassailable syllogism because the premises (minor and major) are unassailable.

PART 1(B)(IV): THE JUDICATURE SECTIONS OF THE CONSTITUTION ACT, 1982 (SEE: 96-101)

17. The structural integrity of the Canadian judiciary is predicated upon the "Judicature" provisions of the Constitution Act, 1867 (the "Judicature Provisions"), which function as the quintessential bulwark against executive or legislative incursion into the independent sphere of the Judiciary which compromises administrative or adjudicative independence with the former being qualified and the latter being absolute when measured in context of administrative privilege and adjudicative privilege. Ipso facto, when the conduct of a member of the judiciary is deemed incompatible with the requisite standard of "good behaviour," the mechanism for removal is facilitated through the Canadian Judicial Council (the "CJC"). Such proceedings are typically precipitated by a formal grievance initiated by a complainant. Furthermore, the judiciary possesses an inherent authority regarding self-regulation, specifically concerning the doctrine of recusal. Smith v. Canada (the "Smith* Precedent"), found at the Book of Authorities (the "BOA"), Tab 145, establishes the parameters for early or pre-emptive recusal to maintain the appearance of impartiality. Smith (the "Recusal Principle") dictates that a judge must withdraw from a proceeding if a reasonable apprehension of bias exists.

18. The separation of powers necessitates that communications between the Executive Branch and the judiciary remain transparent and bilateral; thus, any ex parte engagement regarding a response to a specific party, rather than a systemic administrative concern, is strictly prohibited. This principle is articulated in Canada (Minister of Citizenship and Immigration) v. Tobiass (the "Tobiass* Ruling"), BOA, Tab 146. Tobiass (the "Executive Separation Doctrine") reinforces the necessity of maintaining a sterile environment between the branches of government to prevent the perception of undue influence. Moreover, judges who have not yet become seized of a particular matter possess the prerogative to waive jurisdiction, as evidenced in Ramsey v. The Queen (the "Ramsey* Decision"), BOA, Tab 147. Ramsey (the "Jurisdictional Waiver Authority") confirms the administrative flexibility required to ensure that matters are heard by the most appropriate adjudicative body. In instances characterized by ethical turbulence—such as those involving Justices Cosgrove, Camp, and Brown—the Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Justice assumes an imperative administrative function. The Chief Justice acts as the court's emergency administrator, effectively sequestering the controversial jurist from the caseload to ensure the preservation of the public's confidence (the "Emergency Administrator Role"). Collectively, these actions constitute a broader mandate to safeguard the integrity of the judicial system (the "Preservation Public Trust Role"). The Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Justice, as well as the Chief Justice of the Court of Appeal for Ontario, serves as the primary custodian of the court's integrity (the "Constitutional Trust Role"). The Chief Justice is characterized as primus inter pares, or 'first among equals'. This designation signifies not a hierarchical superiority over their colleagues, but rather a heightened burden of ensuring that the court, in its entirety, remains completely impervious to external influences. By synthesizing administrative prerogative with the principle of adjudicative equality, the office of the Chief Justice remains the paramount safeguard for the Rule Of Law within the Canadian legal landscape. This is corroborated in Faber v. R., 2015 QCCS 12 (the "Faber* Jurisprudence"), at para 111, BOA, Tab 148. Faber (the "Moral Authority Principle") posits that the Chief Justice possesses a unique moral authority over the judges of their court to fortify judicial independence. It is imperative to recognize that "legal authority" and "moral authority" are not synonymous (the "Authority Dichotomy"). In this context, the term "Moral" pertains to the supra-legal, ethical influence derived from the Chief Justice's position as the spiritual and symbolic embodiment of the court's integrity (the "Moral").The application of the "Moral" herein is fundamental to the maintenance of the status quo ante; it requires the Chief Justice to exercise a persuasive suasion that transcends mere statutory mandate. While a Chief Justice may lack the legal authority to issue substantive directives regarding the exercise of a colleague's adjudicative discretion, they possess the moral authority to influence the administrative conduct of the bench to align with the overarching goals of judicial independence and public accountability (see also: section 71 of the CJA). Prima facie, it is through this moral suasion that the Chief Justice ensures adherence to directives to which the judges might not otherwise be legally subject, thereby insulating the bench from the mens rea of external political interference.

PART 1(C): VIOLATION OF JUDICIAL INDEPENDENCE

19. the comprehensive and venerable jurisprudence of the Supreme Court of Canada (the "Supreme Court") has historically articulated that judicial independence (the "Judicial Independence") is constituted by three unwritten, yet foundational, constitutional imperatives of primordial significance. It is posited that these mandates necessitate that the Executive Branch (the "Executive") maintain a position of absolute non-interference, thereby ensuring the impartiality of the adjudicative process from extraneous political pressures. The ratio decidendi (the "Ratio Decidendi") established in Reference re Remuneration of Judges of the Provincial Court of Prince Edward Island (the "PEI Judges Reference")—being the seminal authority on judicial compensation—confirms that these protections are not merely for the benefit of the magistracy but are a sine qua non for the preservation of public confidence in the administration of justice within the Dominion with the focus on the third branch of that legal test: Administrative Judicial Independence (the "Administrative Judicial Independence"): It is a requirement of the constitutional order that the judiciary maintain exclusive jurisdiction over the administration of the courts and all matters assigned by law to the judicial sphere. As articulated in MacKeigan v. Hickman (the "MacKeigan Case")—which defines the scope of judicial immunity and administrative autonomy—any attempt by the Executive to control the "docket" or the internal management of the court constitutes an impermissible and unconstitutional encroachment upon the core functions of the judicial branch. While the manipulation of a judicial docket represents a significant constitutional concern, the systematic obstruction or hindrance occasioned by the failure to confirm submitted filings through the Ontario Courts Public Portal (the "OCPP") represents a violation of a more profound and systemic nature. Such acta by the Executive function as a functional barrier to the exercise of the court's inter al powers. By failing to facilitate the processing of originating processes, the Executive effectively precludes the judiciary from exercising its prima facie duty to adjudicate disputes. This administrative torpor is not merely a procedural oversight; it is an active subversion of the Administrative Judicial Independence.

PART 1(D): THE ONTOLOGICAL DISSOLUTION OF THE RULE OF LAW

20. In the event that the Executive Branch interferes with the Core Jurisdiction (the "Core Jurisdiction"), the primary and most deleterious consequence is the comprehensive fragmentation of the Rule Of Law (the "Rule Of Law"). Such interference necessitates the following legal extrapolations: Ultra Vires and Section 52 Sanctions: Any legislative instrument or executive action that purports to diminish a "core" judicial power is inherently ultra vires and must be rendered of no force or effect pursuant to Section 52 of the Constitution Act, 1982 (the "Constitution Act"); "Void Ab Initio Determinations": Any conduct of the Executive or a government actor—as defined within the ambit of Section 32 of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms (the "Charter")—that infringes upon this Core Jurisdiction must be judicially declared void ab initio (the "Void Ab Initio"). It is a fundamental tenet that such conduct lacks the requisite constitutional validity from its inception and cannot be cured by subsequent administrative action; Inapplicability of Section 1 Justification: Where executive conduct not only exceeds the scope of its authority but simultaneously infringes upon the Charter rights of a person, such transgressions cannot be salvaged under the "reasonable limits" clause of Section 1 of the Charter. An interference with the Core Jurisdiction of the court is fundamentally inimical to the principles of a free and democratic society and cannot satisfy the requirements of proportionality as set forth in R. v. Oakes (the "Oakes Case"), which establishes the criteria for justifying rights violations; and Inapplicability Of Section 33 of Charter. The erosion of Judicial Independence signifies the expiration of the judiciary's role as an autonomous arbiter between the state and the citizenry. Ipso facto the judiciary is rendered a mere extension of executive policy rather than a constitutional safeguard. Furthermore, because the Core Jurisdiction encompasses the inherent power of executive interference is strategically designed to render government actions "unreviewable." Such a mens rea behind administrative obstruction aims to elevate the Executive above the law, thereby dismantling the accountability mechanisms essential to a constitutional democracy. The prevention of filings in limine serves to immunize the state from legal scrutiny, representing a total abdication of the Rule Of Law. It is self-evident that the current state of administrative stagnation regarding the OCPP constitutes a profound breach of the "Unwritten Constitutional Principles" of the Constitution Act, 1867 and the express provisions of the Constitution Act, 1982. To restore the status quo ante it is imperative that the Executive immediately cease all activities that function as a hindrance to the filing and processing of judicial documents.

PART 1(E): REMEDIES FOR CONCURRENT VIOLATIONS OF CONSTITUTIONAL ACTS

21. Pursuant to the Constitution Act, 1867 (the "1867 Act") and the Constitution Act, 1982 (the "1982 Act"), specifically Part I thereof, designated as the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms (the "Charter"), the pursuit of efficacious and immediate remedies is deemed a requirement that subserves both the individual litigant and the broader public interest, particularly in instances where the unconstitutionality of conduct perpetrated by the Executive Branch impinges upon the Core Jurisdiction of the Superior Court of Justice (the "SCJ"). In such circumstances, the issuance of a Notice of Constitutional Question (the "NOCQ") may be regarded as a secondary procedural vehicle rather than the primary mechanism for administrative rectification, as the Chief Justice of the SCJ, in the exercise of functions as the Divisional Court President, maintains a solemn statutory and constitutional obligation to superintend the Registrar, court personnel, and clerical staff within the territorial jurisdiction of Ontario. This mandate is exercised pursuant to Section 76 of the Courts of Justice Act (the "CJA") concerning matters assigned by law to the judiciary, thereby requiring the Divisional Court President to direct Registrars, the court staff, and court clerks to act or to cease acting in a manner characterized as inconsistent with the law—with particular reference to those domains assigned by law to the judiciary. Since the seminal adjudication in Trial Lawyers Association of British Columbia v. British Columbia (Attorney General) [2014] (the "Trial Lawyers Decision"), which established that provincial legislatures are precluded from imposing hearing fees that effectively deny litigants access to superior courts, access to justice has been elevated to the status of an immutable constitutional prerequisite, the obstruction of which by Executive Branch conduct is categorized as a simultaneous infringement of the 1867 Act under the Core Jurisdiction Test (the "Concurrent Breaches").The resolution of the Concurrent Breaches necessitates an intricate extrapolation of several legal pillars, including the Doctrine of Mootness, Locus Standi, Section 76 of the CJA, the Core Jurisdiction Test under Section 96, the Charter, and the prerogative writ of Mandamus. The jurisprudence established in Borowski v. Canada (Attorney General) [1989] (the "Borowski Case"), which defines the parameters of judicial discretion in dismissing appeals where the legal substratum has disappeared, is recognized as the definitive Canadian authority regarding the Doctrine of Mootness, providing the evaluative framework for determining whether a tribunal should exercise judicial discretion to decline the adjudication of a matter where the "live controversy" between the parties has ceased to exist. In the Borowski Case, the Supreme Court of Canada (the "SCC") evaluated the challenge brought by Joseph Borowski against abortion provisions in the Criminal Code, which was rendered prima facie moot following the landmark decision in R. v. Morgentaler [1988] (the "Morgentaler Case"), wherein restrictive abortion laws were struck down as a violation of security of the person under Section 7 of the Charter. While a proceeding is generally deemed moot if the eventual ratio decidendi is projected to yield no practical effect on the rights of the parties, a sophisticated question remains as to whether a modified legal test should be invoked to address systemic interference when Executive Branch conduct involves a non-respondent; notwithstanding this, the judiciary may elect to adjudicate based on the Adversarial Context, ensuring vigorous argumentation by parties with a genuine stake, or the rationale of Judicial Economy, provided the issue is recurring but evasive of review or possesses significant public importance. In Canadian jurisprudence, locus standi (the "Standing") denotes the legal capacity of a party to initiate proceedings, a threshold issue that must be satisfied in limine before the court assesses the substantive merits of the dispute. Private Interest Standing is established as of right where the personal legal rights of a litigant are directly impinged or where a specific prejudice has been suffered, whereas Public Interest Standing is a discretionary grant allowing challenges to governmental ultra vires acts, provided the litigant satisfies a "flexible and purposive" three-factor test involving a Serious Justiciable Issue, a Genuine Interest, and Reasonable and Effective Means of bringing the matter to light. Under Section 72(1) of the CJA, the Attorney General superintends administrative matters, excepting those assigned by law to the judiciary, while Section 76 mandates that in matters assigned to the judiciary—encompassing the transmission of confirmations of submitted filings, the processing of authorized filing fees, and the receipt (see: Rule 37.10.1, "giving to the Registrar via email") of Confirmations of Motions—Registrars, court clerks, and staff shall act at the direction of the Chief Justice. Given that the Constitution of Canada (the "Constitution") represents the supreme federal statute, any conduct inconsistent with its provisions constitutes a violation of law ipso facto, and no "saving provision" exists within the 1867 Act for Executive Branch conduct that violates the Judicature Sections. The transition from a "federalism model" to a "Rule Of Law model" (the "ROL Model") was finalized during the "patriation" of 1982, as elucidated by Lamer CJ in Reference re Remuneration of Judges of the Provincial Court of P.E.I. [1997] (the "PEI Judges Reference"), which established that the preamble of the 1867 Act contains unwritten principles protecting the financial and administrative autonomy of the courts. This constitutional development did not comprise a founding moment wherein the legal slate was wiped clean; rather, as noted by McLachlin CJ in *Professional Independence and the Rule Of Law [2007] (the "McLachlin Principles"), the 1867 Act confirmed the pre-existing Westminster principles derived from the Act of Settlement, 1701, including Judicial Independence, and adapted them to the Canadian federation. The preamble to the 1867 Act recognizes and affirms the basic principles which constitute the source of substantive constitutional provisions, inviting the use of organizing principles to fill lacunae in the express terms of the scheme. Consequently, the 1982 Act carried forward and did not disturb the Unwritten Constitutional Principles assumed by the 1867 Act, though the "complexion" of those arrangements evolved with the introduction of express limits on parliamentary sovereignty and the concomitant expansion of the role of the judiciary as the "guardian of the constitution." In Toronto (City) v. Ontario (Attorney General) [2021] (the "Toronto City Case"), it was clarified that Unwritten Constitutional Principles serve two primary analytical functions: (i) the interpretation of constitutional provisions; and (ii) the development of structural doctrines flowing from the architecture of the Constitution. An exemplar of such interpretive utility is found in the expansion of Sections 96 to 100 of the 1867 Act, where Lamer CJ noted in the PEI Judges Reference that the literal text is merely a "staffing provision" and that its broader meaning must be sought in deeper unwritten understandings. Consequently, Section 96 has been interpreted to provide constitutional sanctuary for: (a) Judicial Review of administrative decisions on jurisdictional grounds, as affirmed in Crevier v. A.G. (Québec) [1981] (the "Crevier Case"), which precludes the insulation of tribunals from superior court oversight; (b) core aspects of Inherent Jurisdiction, as confirmed in MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. v. Simpson [1995] (the "MacMillan Case"), which protects essential judicial powers from legislative removal; (c) Public Access to the superior courts, as established in the Trial Lawyers Decision; and (d) the individual and Administrative Judicial Independence of the Judiciary. Whether an infringement of Section 96 of the 1867 Act originates from the provincial legislature or the Executive Branch, such conduct is deemed inherently inconsistent with the Constitution and, distinct from Charter rights, the protections read into Section 96 are not subject to justification under Section 1 or the notwithstanding clause of Section 33. The historic task of superior courts to resolve disputes between individuals and adjudicate questions of law is fundamental; ergo, any measures that prevent access to the courts, such as prohibitive hearing fees or the failure to process originating processes and motions, infringe upon the Core Jurisdiction and impermissibly impinge on Section 96. This connection is further solidified by the inextricable link between the Section 96 function and the Rule Of Law, as the Trial Lawyers Decision affirmed that access to justice is fundamental to the maintenance of the constitutional order. In the PEI Judges Reference, the SCC elucidated that the Executive Branch's shutdown of the Manitoba Provincial Court through the withdrawal of court staff—known as "Filmon Fridays"—constituted a violation of Administrative Judicial Independence, establishing a precedent of vertical stare decisis that precludes the Executive Branch from unilaterally obstructing court sittings. As judicial independence is secured only by objective conditions or guarantees that ensure a reasonable perception of autonomy, as per Valente v. The Queen [1985] (the "Valente Case"), any Executive Branch conduct that fails to provide such guarantees is unconstitutional ipso facto.

PART 1(F): INTERWOVEN ISSUES AND REMEDIAL OBLIGATIONS

22. The resolution of the present matter necessitates a contextual analysis of whether a reasonable person, cognizant of the comprehensive circumstances, would conclude that the Executive Branch has violated the Core Jurisdiction Test and the 1867 Act. Specifically, the record demonstrates that the Registrar of the Divisional Court, including court staff and the OCPP technological personnel, received via electronic transmission NOM #3 on November 17, 2025, accompanied by the requisite documentation pursuant to Rule 37.12.1 of the Rules of Civil Procedure, alongside a Confirmation Of Motion, prescribed fee payments, and strict adherence to the OCPP terms of use; notwithstanding the transition from the JSO Portal to the OCPP and the explicit written representations that filings would be adjudicated and processed within three business days, a period exceeding two months has elapsed without administrative resolution. Such a protracted failure to act, when situated within the architecture of the Constitution, constitutes a palpable interference with the complete administration of the Judiciary and a direct breach of Section 96. It is of critical significance to distinguish the remedial framework under the 1867 Act from that of the Charter; whereas Section 1 of the Charter permits "reasonable limits prescribed by law" and Section 33 allows for the legislative override of certain rights, no such "saving provisions" exist to immunize Executive Branch conduct that infringes upon the Judicature Sections or the Unwritten Constitutional Principles of judicial independence. When conduct that breaches the Core Jurisdiction Test—comprising "access to the courts" as an indissoluble element of the Rule Of Law—is brought to the attention of the Chief Justice of the SCJ, the remedial obligation is both practical and immediate. The Divisional Court President is required to exercise his authority under Section 76 of the CJA to direct the court staff to comply with the 1867 Act, thereby ensuring that administrative inertia or technological barriers do not continue to facilitate a denial of access. The questions posed by this systematic failure of the Executive Branch effectively answer themselves through the application of the Core Jurisdiction Test. If the Executive Branch were permitted to unilaterally obstruct the filing of originating processes through administrative neglect or the imposition of Technical Barriers like the 403 Error Code, the constitutional promise of an independent judiciary would be rendered illusory. Consequently, the only remedy consistent with the ROL Model is for the Divisional Court President to issue a formal directive to the Registrar and the OCPP staff to cease and desist from interference with the "PURSUIT" of "legal remedies" and to immediately restore the Applicant's access to the judicial machinery. Failure to intervene at this juncture would permit the Executive Branch to achieve an ultra vires removal of the court's jurisdiction through technological gatekeeping, a result that is fundamentally repugnant to the constitutional architecture of Canada.

Part 1(H): Access to Justice across the spectrums

23. As custos rotulorum and preeminent conservator of the Court's reputation, the Chief Justice's intercession is invoked herein as the extant grievances transcend idiosyncratic litigation to impinge upon the systemic veracity of the Divisional Court's administrative infrastructure. In the capacity of primus inter pares, the Chief Justice exercises inherent jurisdiction to ensure that the "administration of justice" remains a corporeal certainty and a foundational bulwark for the status quo ante of judicial independence. The quintessential philosophy of judicial obligation was articulated by the Honourable Justice John Roberts of the US Supreme COurt during his confirmation proceedings (the "Roberts Testimony"):

> "Mr. Chairman, I come before the committee with no agenda. I have no platform. Judges are not politicians who can promise to do certain things in exchange for votes. I have no agenda, but I do have a commitment. If I am confirmed, I will confront every case with an open mind. I will fully and fairly analyze the legal arguments that are presented. I will be open to the considered views of my colleagues on the bench. And I will decide every case based on the record, according to the Rule Of Law, without fear or favor, to the best of my ability. And I will remember that it's my job to call balls and strikes and not to pitch or bat."

24. The "ballpark" allegory illustrates the inextricable nexus between administrative acta and adjudicative functions; the latter is rendered illusory should the Administrative Branch fail to facilitate the litigant's initial entry (noting the words of "public" and "portal").

PART 1(I)): THE DUTY FOR THE CHIEF JUSTICE (PRESIDENT OF THE DC) TO SELF-ASSIGN

28. The concept of primus inter pares—first among equals—while frequently construed as a purely ceremonial designation of seniority, has undergone a complex evolution within Canadian law. Through a trajectory of landmark cases and ethical controversies, it has been revealed that the Chief Justice (or Chief Judge in provincial contexts) serves not merely as a judicial peer but as the "Master of the Roster," an administrative steward, and the primary guardian of institutional reputation. When the administrative power to assign or reassign cases intersects with external political pressure or internal ethical failures, the constitutional boundaries of judicial independence are tested. The decision in Ruffo v. Conseil de la magistrature (the "Ruffo 1995"), [1995] 4 S.C.R. 267, confirms that the Chief Justice possesses a unique "moral authority" associated with their status. The Chief Justice acts on behalf of the institution's integrity (the "CJ Institution Integrity Role"), a responsibility that relieves other judges of the court of the difficult task of laying complaints against colleagues where necessary. The Ruffo 1995 decision established at paragraphs 58 and 59 that supervisory powers over ethics are inherent in the functions of a Chief Justice and need not be conferred by specific statutory provisions. Furthermore, the Federal Court of Appeal in Canadian Judicial Council v. Girouard (the "CJC v. Girouard"), 2019 FCA 148, and the Federal Court in Smith v. Canada (Attorney General) (the "Smith v. Canada"), 2020 FC 629, have reaffirmed that the Chief Justice has broad authority to coordinate, allocate, and supervise the work of judges. This includes the implied power to relieve a judge of certain judicial functions (the "Dugré Doctrine") pending the outcome of investigations, as seen in Dugré c. Canada (Attorney General) (the "Dugré"), 2019 FC 1604. Such powers are essentially administrative functions required to preserve public confidence in the courts. A "Chief's case" (the "Chief's Case") may be defined by its challenges, its controversy, or its high-profile nature, particularly when the circumstances place the focus on the integrity of the court. As established in R. v. Baldovi et al (the "Baldovi"), 2016 MBQB 90, the Chief Justice is uniquely placed to present leadership that addresses legal or ethical issues requiring administrative or adjudicative clarification. Even if the ultimate adjudication is not determinative in a traditional legal sense, the Chief Justice is the most appropriately positioned individual to conduct such adjudications given the stakes involved. The issue of Madam Justice Shore's conduct, raised without response from the since-resigned Former Registrar Gentles, underscores the necessity for the President of the Divisional Court to exercise this inherent superintending authority. By self-assigning (i.e. to CJ of the SCJ in his capacity of the Divisional Court President) this JRPA Proceeding, particularly NOM #3 and Motion #4, the Chief Justice ensures that the administrative machinery of the court is not utilized by the Executive Branch as a weapon of interference.

PART 1(G): : MATERIAL FACTS

33. The material facts are outlined in the Compendium for NOM #3 and the Motion Record for NOM #4. Evidence confirms a "403-rejection code" when attempting to access the OCPP via a specific electronic mail account. This digital exclusion occurred precisely as the litigation reached a critical juncture, suggesting a non-coincidental obstruction. The timing of this "forbidden" error is a "smoking gun" of administrative interference that warrants the highest level of judicial scrutiny. It represents a "digital lockout" that is functionally equivalent to the "physical barring" of a litigant from the courtroom. Such interference constitutes a direct assault on the Applicant's ability to participate in the JRPA Proceeding. Furthermore, the history of non-compliance by curial staff—including the failure to acknowledge bank drafts and the refusal to provide audio recordings—illustrates a broader pattern of "stonewalling". These facts, taken together, necessitate the extraordinary relief sought herein to restore the constitutional status quo and ensure that the Rule Of Law remains a living reality for the Applicant. The "royal runaround" provided by the registry is a direct assault on the institutional integrity of the Divisional Court and cannot be permitted to continue with impunity. The retention of fees without the provision of services is a manifest injustice that the court must rectify instanter. In conclusion, the cumulative effect of these administrative failures and executive interferences is the effective suspension of the ROL as it pertains to the Applicant. The President of the Divisional Court is the only authority capable of rectifying these systemic abuses and ensuring that the SCJ remains a forum where the rights of all citizens—regardless of their status or the complexity of their claims—are determined in accordance with the law. The court's dignity and the public's confidence in the administration of justice are at stake in this proceeding, requiring a robust and unequivocal judicial response. The "gatekeepers" have failed, and only the "umpire" can restore order to the field.

PART 2: STATEMENT OF ISSUES

34. The issues in this Motion #5 necessitated by interference with the Applicant's pursuit of legal remedies:

a. Issue #1: whether the extant litigation—characterized by a factual matrix involving undisputed evidence of systemic fraudulent conduct, state-sponsored obstruction, and unprecedented administrative anomalies—so acutely compromises the institutional integrity of the Court that judicial independence must, of necessity, be understood as attaching to the Court in its collective and institutional capacity, thereby necessitating a robust, transformative, and prophylactic response that transcends the ordinary exercise of individual adjudicative discretion and addresses the structural vulnerabilities exposed by such occurrences;
b. Issue #2: In the event of an affirmative determination regarding the preceding issue, whether the President of the Divisional Court, in the capacity of primary steward, custos rotulorum, and primus inter pares of the institutional reputation and procedural rectitude of the Court, is most appropriately situated to address such controversies and systemic threats to the integrity of the judiciary, notwithstanding that the initial questions pertaining to the propriety of the judicial process may not be ultimately determinative of the substantive legal merits of the underlying Application for Judicial Review albeit unopposed;
c. Issue #3: In the event of an affirmative determination, what specific, robust, and extraordinary forms of relief—including but not limited to the exercise of the inherent jurisdiction of the Court to control its own process, the appointment of a special referee, amicus curiae, or a sequestered case management judge, and the issuance of prerogative writs such as mandamus or certiorari—are necessitated to preserve the administration of justice, ensure the "equality of arms," and restore public confidence in the judicial branch of government; and
d. Issue #4: Assuming, hypothetically and arguendo, that the President of the Divisional Court omitted the discharge of the duties inherent to that station as the administrative and moral lead of this intermediate court of appeal, whether such an omission would constitute a profound breach of the intrinsic obligations of the judicial office, the oath of allegiance, and the mandatory mandates prescribed by the Courts of Justice Act and the Constitution Act, 1867.

PART 3: ARGUMENT

ISSUE NO. 1: THE INTEGRITY OF THE COURT AND INSTITUTIONAL INDEPENDENCE

35. It is observed that these proceedings, initiated pursuant to the Judicial Review Procedure Act, are characterized by a confluence of unprecedented challenges and procedural anomalies that threaten the sanctity of the judicial process ab initio. The factual matrix encompasses an intricate web of allegations pertaining to pre-litigative misappropriation and fraudulent conduct, supplemented by the subsequent discovery of direct bribery and secret commissions. It is asserted that these remunerations were directed toward the primary perpetrator and certain non-parties, including social service employees, suggesting a coordinated effort to subvert the legal position of the aggrieved party through extra-judicial mechanisms. Such conduct facilitates the weaponization of public infrastructure, wherein the very instruments designed for social welfare are transmuted into tools of litigative oppression, thereby necessitating a robust judicial response to restore the equilibrium of justice.

36. Prior to the crystallization of this scheme, it is alleged that Mr. Papadimitropoulos, the client of Epstein Cole LLP (hereinafter the "Epstein Cole Client"), the former law firm of Madam Justice Shore, engaged in the egregious falsification of a signature upon a TPL equipment loan agreement (October 28, 2024), an instrument executed with such patent ineptitude as to render the forgery prima facie evident to any reasonable observer. These events are inextricably linked to the misappropriation of a portable computing device on October 25, 2024, which served as the functional catalyst for a campaign of administrative obstruction and legal harassment designed to exhaust available resources and resolve. Such conduct challenges the capacity of the judicial system to protect the integrity of its own records from sophisticated external subversion, raising profound questions regarding the security of the judicial repository in the face of persistent cybernetic and physical intrusions. Furthermore, upon the formal service of the HRTO NOCQ on November 7, 2024—impugning an undisclosed arrest warrant which with the consistent theme of "non-disclosure" by intentional contravention of section 29 of the Criminal Code—further fraudulent activities were undertaken by the individual Karat and the Epstein Cole LLP Client prior to his termination from TDIA Group as the SABS Manager in late January 2025. These actions represent an actus reus of such severity that continued judicial silence would constitute tacit complicity in the subversion of law and a surrender of supervisory jurisdiction. The subsequent escalation of attempted extortion was intended to coerce a capitulation to unlawful demands, suggesting a systemic attempt to utilize administrative and criminal processes as instruments of private malice. The implications of this conduct are far-reaching, as they suggest a breakdown in the firewall between public prosecutorial power and private litigative interests, a state of affairs that is fundamentally antithetical to the principles of a free and democratic society. These proceedings were further marred by the failure of the Licence Appeal Tribunal (hereinafter the "LAT") to "File" and "Deliver" (see: Rule 1.03) a First Defence, an omission occurring alongside the surreptitious provision of a partially completed Notice of Appearance (Form 38A) to counsel for the Respondent insurers. Such coordination violates the principle of the required independence and impartiality of an "adjudicative tribunal" and annihilated the already horrific perception of the LAT as a neutral arbiter. Notwithstanding its quasi-judicial status, the LAT ostensibly contravened the Rules of Civil Procedure by requesting case conference while procedurally barred pursuant to Rule 77.03 and Rule 77.05(b). This "surreptitious assistance" by, on its face, Ms. Lawrence (Ariel), generates a reasonable apprehension of institutional capture, wherein the tribunal appears to act as an adjunct to the executive or corporate respondents rather than an independent body. The resulting procedural entropy threatens to dissolve the distinction between the adjudicator and the advocate, thereby undermining the foundational trust upon which the administrative state resides.

37. Within hours of the filing of the Certificate of Perfection (Dec 13, 2024) further identity fraud occurred to obtain public library credentials, surreptitiously associated with an investigative journalist to obfuscate the source of the fraud. These incidents represent an ongoing assault upon the capacity to participate in a fair hearing, constituting "litigation by attrition" that the Court is bound to restrain. The targeting of identity within public institutions underscores the precarious nature of the Rule Of Law when administrative safeguards are bypassed with impunity. It is posited that such actions constitute a form of digital disenfranchisement, effectively barring the litigant from the intellectual and procedural resources necessary to prosecute a claim of this magnitude. Despite mandatory temporal requirements under the Judicial Review Procedure Act, no opposition was recorded by the Respondents as of the date of the Certificate of Perfection. Having failed to Deliver Notices of Appearance by January 8, 2025, the Respondents are ipso facto precluded from challenging the Moving Party's assertions. Nevertheless, Her Honour Justice Shore intervened in a manner suggesting an ultra vires circumvention of standard assignment protocols. It is noted that the Moving Party was previously unaware of Her Honour's undisclosed role in an ex parte, in camera hearing regarding a "warrant in the first" (the Intake Court Endorsement [Sic] with an Intake Court Endorsement being most commonly associated with family law (wherein Madam Justice Shore is the team leader of the SCJ family law division) predicated upon a Form 4 Indictment. This intervention appears to have disproportionately benefited the Respondents, creating an untenable risk of bias and suggesting a departure from the principle of the "natural judge," which dictates that judicial assignments must be free from even the slightest suspicion of strategic selection. Compounding this, correspondence from an individual misrepresented as a "Trial Coordinator" (Ms. Evelyne Ibula) preceded the discovery of a "False Information Package" containing fraudulent court documents filed not in August to October 2024 as admitted by Madam Justice Shore's counsel. Justice Shore further misrepresented the Court's capacity to provide audio materials, a fundamental failure to distinguish between family and civil procedural regimes. Such use of fraudulent instruments within the Registry is an affront to the dignity of the Court, imperilling the institutional independence of the bench and the sanctity of the judicial record. The integrity of the court's physical and digital archives is not merely a matter of administrative housekeeping; it is a prerequisite for the exercise of the judicial function itself, as a court that cannot trust its own records cannot hope to dispense justice with any degree of certainty. By analogy to Baldovi v The Queen, the random assignment of judges serves as a shield against the perception of favouritism or "judge-shopping" or "bench hunting". Any deviation from this randomness, particularly where a judge with a potential conflict appears specifically assigned, strikes at the heart of the "Appearance of Justice" doctrine. The integrity of the judicial lottery is a prerequisite for the legitimacy of any ex parte order; any mechanism allowing the "hand-picking" of an adjudicator constitutes a fundamental defectus in the administration of law. It is further asserted that the doctrine of the appearance of justice requires that justice not only be done but be seen to be done, a standard that is palpably unmet when judicial assignments remain shrouded in administrative opacity. While the administrative model for criminal matters remains opaque, it is asserted that case management must adhere to established protocols of neutrality. The current "administrative fog" surrounding the assignment of Justice Shore deepens the apprehension of bias. It is imperative that the machinery of justice be visible, lest "secret chambers" supplant the public courtroom and democratic accountability. The exercise of judicial power in the absence of transparency is a hallmark of arbitrary rule, and the Court must remain vigilant against the encroachment of executive-style secrecy into the heart of the adjudicative process. No formal assignment occurred through recognized channels; instead, directives attributed to Justice Shore bypassed standard safeguards, creating a vacuum of accountability. This procedural irregularity necessitates the immediate intervention of the President to restore the status quo ante and uphold the requirements of stare decisis. The principle of stare decisis applies not only to substantive law but also to the procedural norms that govern the conduct of the Court, and any unauthorized departure from these norms constitutes an error of jurisdiction that must be rectified.

38. Pursuant to the Courts of Justice Act, the President is mandated, pursuant to section 76(1) of the Courts of Justice Act to direct court staff and the Registrar, possessing plenary authority under section 72(1) to supervise the assignment of judicial duties. As affirmed in Trial Lawyers Association of British Columbia v British Columbia (Attorney General), access to courts is a cornerstone of constitutional architecture. Any administrative barrier impeding this access constitutes a prima facie violation of the right to seek redress and functions as a "constructive closure" of the Court. The duty to oversee the Registry is therefore a mandatory obligation, as the Registry serves as the gateway through which the constitutional right to seek judicial review is exercised.

39. Universal access is an indispensable component of the Rule Of Law. As articulated in Trial Lawyers Association of British Columbia, measures obstructing the resolution of legal disputes strike at the core of the jurisdiction protected by section 96 of the Constitution Act, 1867. Registry inaction or arbitrary exclusion effectively places the state above the law, requiring the Court to exercise its inherent jurisdiction to rectify an ipso jure unconstitutional embargo on justice. The resulting state of "legal limbo" is intolerable in a constitutional democracy, as it effectively immunizes the Executive Branch from judicial oversight through the simple expedient of administrative paralysis.

40. In Timm v Canada, the Federal Court linked the prohibition against interfering with legal remedies to the fundamental principle of the Rule Of Law. Reprisals or retaliatory administrative actions against those exercising legal rights must be strictly prohibited and remedied ex debito justitiae. A litigant should not be required to "run a gauntlet" of administrative traps primarily POST PERFECTION OF THE JUDICIAL REVIEW APPLICATION. The imposition of such traps constitutes a form of "administrative malice" that the Court has both the power and the duty to excise from the judicial process. It is submitted that the actions attributed to Justice Shore, viewed in the context of the "False Information Package," constitute a sophisticated form of retaliation for the exercise of legal rights. Such interference chills the pursuit of justice and is fundamentally at odds with judicial ethics. The use of criminal process to frustrate civil litigation demands the intervention of the head of the court to restore the institutional balance. Such a restoration is essential to ensure that the criminal law is not perverted into a shield for civil wrongdoers, a scenario that would represent a radical inversion of the intended purpose of the Criminal Code. Retaliation has persisted through the "403 Code" digital lockout, used as a barrier to prevent the perfection of the record. The Successor Registrar is duty-bound by administrative law and the Courts of Justice Act to rectify these failures. The persistence of this code in the face of judicial knowledge constitutes a mala fides exercise of power and a direct challenge to the Court's inherent jurisdiction to control its own process. This digital embargo is not merely a technical error; it is a functional equivalent to the "physical barricading" of the courthouse doors, and its removal is a prerequisite for the continued operation of the Rule Of Law. This alone requires judicial intervention as the denial of access to justice for the Applicant—past, current, or prospective—represents a breach of the social contract upon which the authority of the judiciary is predicated. The current challenges are without precedent. Pursuant to the open court principle and section 2(b) of the Charter, the Court must remain a sanctuary of law, not a bastion of administrative caprice. Where fraud, theft, bribery and forged Criminal Code Form 2 Information, with the backdrop of forged OCF-18's by the Epstein Cole LLP Client, then forged TPL loan equipment agreements by the Epstein Cole LLP Client (apparently fighting for his job when he was later terminated), foul the optics of justice, the President must act with decisive gravitas to protect the Court's reputation for impartiality. The reputation of the judiciary is a fragile asset, easily squandered through administrative neglect, and its preservation requires the constant vigilance of its highest officers. These circumstances have coalesced into a "Chief's Case," requiring the chief judicial officer to assume direct control to preserve the moral and legal authority of the institution and provide a "clean hands" adjudication. Such an adjudication is necessary to cleanse the record of the impurities introduced by unauthorized interventions and to signal to the public that the Court remains the final guarantor of procedural fairness. As per High Crest Enterprises Limited v Canada, a judge may be removed from a matter unless seized through a substantive hearing. As no First Defence was filed, the matter was ineligible for management under Rule 77.06. Justice Shore's involvement was a procedural nullity, authorizing the President to assume management of the file to prevent the rise of a "shadow docket." The existence of a shadow docket—wherein cases are managed outside the public view and without formal assignment—is an existential threat to the principle of judicial accountability and must be eliminated with all due haste. As primus inter pares, the Chief Justice must ensure the Court remains impervious to external influences, maintaining the "constitutional trust" as the final bulwark against the arbitrary exercise of state power. This trust is not merely a legal abstraction; it is the living reality that allows citizens to submit their disputes to the Court with the confidence that the law will be applied without fear or favour. The Legislature intended this structure to safeguard independence. The Chief Justice exerts a unique moral authority to ensure adherence to ethical standards, as noted in Faber c R. It is the duty of the President to wield this authority when the conduct of a colleague, whether in the Executive Branch (not in a Ministry office per se) or Judicial Branch threatens to bring the administration of justice into disrepute. This moral authority is the primary mechanism through which the internal integrity of the bench is maintained, and its exercise is essential to prevent the erosion of judicial standards. The office of the Chief Justice, protected under section 96 of the Constitution Act, 1867, is the "institutional soul" of the Divisional Court, ensuring continuity and commitment to the highest standards of law. The President acts as the functional shepherd of this institutional mission, ensuring that the day-to-day operations of the Court reflect the profound constitutional values it is sworn to uphold. Without jurisdiction, a step, document or order is void ab initio and possesses no more legal weight than a mere whisper in the wind. Administrative Judicial Independence possesses an essential collective dimension. As affirmed in Ruffo v Conseil de la magistrature, the Chief Justice acts as the voice of the collective judiciary to ensure no single officer can derail the course of justice or compromise institutional reputation. This collective dimension ensures that judicial independence is not misused as a cloak for individual caprice, but remains a shield for the integrity of the institution as a whole. Judicial independence is a protective mechanism for the public interest (Manitoba Provincial Judges Association v Manitoba (Minister of Justice)). When compromised, it is the duty of the Chief Justice to protect that interest, even if it requires the internal disciplining or reassignment of personnel. The public interest in an independent judiciary is paramount, and any internal administrative arrangements that threaten this interest must be subjected to immediate and rigorous scrutiny. Current administrative inertia achieves a result functionally equivalent to the unauthorized closure of the Court. If executive-employed staff fail to process filings or block digital access, the separation of powers is threatened. A court without an operational Registry is incapable of protecting citizen rights against the state, effectively rendering the Bill of Rights and the Charter as mere parchment promises. Registry operation as an instrument of the Ministry generates a reasonable apprehension of bias. Potential conflicts of interest must be mitigated through direct judicial oversight and the assertion of control over Registry operations to ensure the "impartiality of the state" is maintained. The Registry must be seen as an extension of the Court's own authority, not as a branch of the executive government, to preserve the necessary distance between the judge and the state litigant. Judicial independence requires the performance of duties without interference, including "soft" administrative delay (British Columbia v Imperial Tobacco Canada Ltd.). Targeted delays constitute a breach of the institutional guarantee of independence and are prima facie unconstitutional. Such delays function as a form of "procedural attrition," designed to wear down the resolve of the litigant and to effect a denial of justice through the simple passage of time. Whether this Applicant has unwavering commitment to his own cause, the public interest and better comparative stamina that the "army of opponents", many of them non-Respondents is an aggravating circumstances – not a mitigating one.

ISSUE #1: The Hogg Thesis and the Administrative Paradox Expanded

150. Professor Peter W. Hogg described the Chief Justice as managing the "delicate interface" between the judiciary and the executive. This role requires protecting the judicial "inner sanctum" from political and administrative pressure while the institution remains fiscally dependent on the state. This paradox of dependence is the primary structural vulnerability of the judiciary in a Westminster-style democracy, necessitating the constant vigilance of the head of the court to ensure that the "power of the purse" is not utilized to influence the "power of the robe." The appointment process—where the Prime Minister recommends the Chief Justice—underscores the role's status as the guardian of judicial autonomy and its primary advocate for necessary resources. This direct line of communication to the head of government reflects the constitutional importance of the office, as the Chief Justice acts as the primary diplomat for the third branch of government in its dealings with the executive. The role of "judge-administrator" demands leadership to foster consensus among independent peers and political acumen to navigate the Executive Branch of the Department of Justice without compromising neutrality. It is a role that requires a rare combination of legal scholarship and organizational mastery, as the Chief Justice must manage a body of professionals who are, by constitutional design, not subject to traditional hierarchical control. Chief Justices are almost exclusively selected from the existing bench to ensure an intimate understanding of judicial culture and internal institutional dynamics. This internal selection ensures that the head of the court possesses the necessary moral authority to lead their colleagues, a leadership that is based on shared experience and mutual respect rather than mere administrative rank. Tenure is protected by the standard of "good behaviour," and provincial Presidents are integral to the Canadian Judicial Council (CJC) as the ultimate disciplinary authority. This protection is essential to ensure that judges are free to make difficult and unpopular decisions without the fear of retaliatory removal by the political branches of government. The CJC acts as a disciplinary "buffer," preventing the executive from using threats of removal to influence outcomes. By requiring a CJC recommendation for removal, the Chief Justices safeguard security of tenure. This mechanism ensures that the disciplinary process remains within the hands of the judiciary itself, thereby protecting the principle of self-regulation that is essential to judicial independence.

Per Valente v R, institutional independence requires exclusive judicial control over "red line" powers: the assignment of judges, scheduling, and case prioritization. If the executive controls the docket, independence is an illusion. The power to decide what cases are heard and when they are heard is the functional heart of the judicial power, and its surrender to the Executive Branch would represent a fatal blow to the separation of powers. A paradox exists where the Chief Justice possesses the authority to manage functions but lacks the financial autonomy to fund them, creating a vulnerability to resource-based coercion. This vulnerability is particularly acute in an era of fiscal austerity, where the Executive Branch may be tempted to utilize budgetary constraints as a "soft" form of judicial management. The Attorney General, acting as both the Court's advocate in Cabinet and the "Principal Litigant," creates a potential conflict of interest. If the Ministry uses its control over the Registry to block litigation, the constitutional guarantee of access is curtailed. This "dual role" of the Attorney General requires a high degree of ethical rigour to prevent the subordination of judicial needs to the political goals of the government. The "Dilemma of Dual Loyalty" among court staff—public servants who serve the judiciary—can lead to administrative friction or "silent resistance" when judicial directions conflict with executive policies. In the digital age, this extends to IT staff managing court databases. The resulting tension can create a "shadow administration" within the courthouse, where the actual operation of the Registry is governed by executive policy rather than judicial direction. Hogg defended the traditional parliamentary model, which ensures the judiciary remains democratically accountable through public funding while the Minister absorbs political heat. This model relies upon a "constitutional convention" of restraint, wherein the Executive Branch provides the necessary resources without attempting to dictate the manner in which they are utilized by the Court. In R v Askov, the Supreme Court ruled that excessive delays violated the Charter, demonstrating that the judiciary possesses a "legal lever" to compel the executive to act when constitutional rights are at stake.[10] Federal reforms designating officials as "deputy heads" allow for more direct judicial control over staff and spending, insulating them from the broader departmental Executive Branch. This arrangement seeks to foster a primary loyalty to the judicial mission among court staff, thereby mitigating the risks associated with dual loyalty. The Chief Justice remains a "guardian of the judicial function," ensuring that funding processes do not influence the substance of decision-making or the perception of neutrality. This guardianship is a constant and demanding duty, requiring the head of the court to act as a permanent watchman at the border between the two branches of government. Unlike the Supreme Court of Canada (see: Sydel), the Registrars of the Divisional Court lack comparable legal accreditation or institutional stature. Former Registrar Gentles possessed no formal legal qualifications, raising concerns regarding the criteria for such a sensitive appointment. The absence of legal training in the head of the Registry is a significant deficit, as the Registrar must frequently make decisions that have profound legal consequences for the parties. Successor Registrar Parris has remained unresponsive to inquiries regarding the "403 Code," furthering the perception of a Registry deliberately obstructing progress at the behest of external influences. This silence in the face of legitimate procedural inquiry is a breach of the duty of transparency that governs all public officials, particularly those who serve within the administration of justice. As affirmed in the Judges Act (Canada), the President commands a higher salary reflecting the added administrative and oversight burdens of the office. This differential remuneration is a recognition of the fact that the President's role is not merely adjudicative, but involves a significant and demanding component of institutional leadership. Pursuant to section 18 of the Courts of Justice Act, the President serves as the designated lead for daily operations and the protection of institutional integrity against administrative caprice. The President is therefore the functional head of the Divisional Court, and their authority must be respected by all court staff and judicial colleagues alike. Notice of Motion (NOM) #3 regarding fraud and bribery remains unopposed. Silence in the face of such allegations often speaks louder than a formal denial. In the civil context, the failure of a party to respond to serious allegations of misconduct is often treated as a de facto admission of their truth, or at least as a reason to draw the strongest possible adverse inferences. NOM #4, seeking relief under section 76 of the Courts of Justice Act, also remains unopposed, indicating a failure to justify the "403 Code" lockout. The continued persistence of this code, in the absence of any technical or legal justification, constitutes a prima facie abuse of administrative power that requires immediate judicial correction. Per Ruffo, the Chief Justice possesses an inherent duty to address ethical issues to preserve the public's perception that no member of the bench is "above the law." This duty is not merely discretionary; it is a mandatory obligation that arises from the Chief Justice's role as the steward of the constitutional trust. This power to initiate complaints is intrinsic to the responsibility of addressing conduct—such as surreptitious collaboration or the use of forged indictments—that threatens to bring the administration of justice into disrepute.

FINAL ANSWER TO ISSUE NO. 1: CHIEF JUSTICE MUST SELF-ASSIGN

172. Extraordinary challenges and administrative anomalies implicate the integrity of the Court. As judicial independence has been compromised by Registry conduct and unauthorized intervention, the President must act to preserve the institution. The only viable remedy in the face of such systemic failure is for the highest officer of the Court to assume direct control, thereby providing a "clean hands" adjudication that can restore the public's confidence in the impartiality and independence of the Superior Court.

Issue No. 2: The Appropriateness of the President's Intervention

173. As the questions in NOM #3 and NOM #4 touch upon the integrity of the process, the President is most appropriately positioned to ensure the "vessel of justice" is sound before the matter proceeds, thereby preventing an irreversible miscarriage of justice. The President's intervention is not merely a matter of administrative convenience; it is a requirement of the Rule Of Law in circumstances where the standard mechanisms of judicial assignment have been compromised.

Issue No. 3: The Forms of Relief Required

174. The President's power of self-assignment is necessitated by the failures described in NOM #4. Preservation of the process requires direct oversight by the highest officer. This oversight must encompass not only the substantive motions before the Court but also the administrative conduct of the Registry staff who have facilitated the current paralysis. Comprehensive draft orders have been provided to facilitate the restoration of procedural regularity and the vindication of constitutional rights. These orders are designed to provide a clear and enforceable path toward the hearing of this matter on its merits, free from the administrative and technical blockades that have characterized the proceedings to date. These unopposed motions may be granted via "bottom-line rulings," with reasons to follow, serving the interests of efficiency without sacrificing reasoned determination. Such rulings are particularly appropriate in matters of pressing institutional importance where the outcome is clear but the legal path requires the kind of detailed articulation that can only be provided through a comprehensive written judgment. Per The Queen v Teskey, the prompt announcement of a disposition serves the needs of justice in matters of pressing institutional importance. Such a disposition is necessary to end the current state of legal limbo and to allow the parties to proceed to a resolution of the underlying dispute. As noted in Harrison, immediate decisions with reasons to follow are appropriate in complex matters where the outcome is clear but the legal path requires detailed articulation. The President should adopt this approach to signal that the Court has regained control of its own process and that the administrative blockade has been broken. The President must this approach to provide immediate relief and end the administrative lockout.

Issue No. 4: Inaction by the President of the Divisional Court would be violation of: (i) Section 96 of the Constitution Act, 1982; (ii) ROL; (iii) Judges Act; (iv) Judicial Ethics; ET AL

180. Failure to act would constitute a breach of the "Three Is" of judicial office: Independence, Integrity, and Impartiality. Inaction in the face of corruption signals that the Court is unable to protect its own integrity from internal and external decay. Such a signal would be a devastating blow to the reputation of the Superior Court and would invite further subversion of the judicial process. By invoking the right to remain silent, the Respondents have effectively abandoned their positions. While protected by nemo tenetur seipsum accusare, they cannot use silence as a shield to obstruct the civil course of justice. Adverse inferences must be drawn where the integrity of the process is at stake, as the silence of the state in the face of allegations of bribery and forgery is de facto an admission that no valid defense exists. Inaction would represent a breach of section 80 of the Judges Act, further compounding the grievances already particularized regarding the conduct of Justice Shore. The resulting loss of constitutional authority would be a permanent stain on the record of the Divisional Court and a failure of the stewardship that is the primary duty of the President.

PART 4: DENOUEMENT AND ORDERS

192. It is posited, with reference to the authoritative pronouncements of the Supreme Court of Canada in Trial Lawyers Association of British Columbia v. British Columbia (Attorney General), 2014 SCC 59 (the "TLABC 2014"), that the year 2014 heralded a Seismic Change (the "Seismic Change") in the understanding of judicial jurisdiction. The Court established that the inherent jurisdiction of the provincial superior courts necessarily encompasses, inter alia, a constitutionally entrenched right of access to Superior Courts (the "Right of Access"). By necessary implication, any legislative enactments or regulatory frameworks which render the initiation of litigation within the Superior Court of Justice effectively impermeable—specifically through the imposition of prohibitive fiscal requirements—are deemed to infringe upon this essential jurisdictional core and are, ipso facto, to be declared of no force or effect. The gravamen of the current Motion #5 (the "Motion") is predicated upon the principle that the Interference (the "Interference") with the pursuit of legal remedies (the "Pursuit of Remedies") is fundamentally contrary to the Rule Of Law (the "ROL"). As of the current legal landscape in 2024, the ROL is recognized as being inextricably intertwined with the Constitution Act, 1982 (the "Constitution Act, 1982") and Section 96 of the Constitution Act, 1867 (the "Section 96"). Consequently, any administrative act that obstructs the Pursuit of Remedies constitutes not merely a procedural irregularity, but a substantive breach of the supreme law of Canada. It is further submitted that such Interference represents a profound breach of judicial independence (the "Breach of Independence"). The adjudication of matters and the management of the judicial process are responsibilities assigned by law to the judiciary (the "By Law Judicial Assignment"). When the Executive Branch (the "Executive"), through the administrative apparatus of the Registrar of the Divisional Court (the "Registrar"), interposes itself between a litigant and the court, it usurps the judicial function and undermines the institutional independence required for the impartial administration of justice. Pursuant to the Courts of Justice Act, and specifically the section 76 mandatory duty (the "Mandatory Duty"), the Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Justice (the "Chief Justice"), in their capacity as the President of the Divisional Court (the "President"), is vested with the exclusive authority to oversee the sittings and assigned matters of the court. Any administrative conduct by the Executive that frustrates the Pursuit of Remedies constitutes a collateral attack upon this Mandatory Duty, effectively bypassing the statutory and constitutional authority of the Chief Justice. It is maintained that breaches of the ROL, the Section 96, and the Principle by the Executive possess no remedial or saving provision (the "Saving Provision") analogous to Section 1 of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms (the "Charter"). Furthermore, as the Executive is distinct from the Legislature or Parliament, the invocation of the notwithstanding clause under Section 33 of the Charter remains unavailable. Consequently, the Conduct of the Registrar must be viewed as an unmitigated constitutional violation, as the status quo ante cannot be maintained in the face of such fundamental procedural disenfranchisement. Therefore, the conclusion is rendered self-evident: the Executive has engaged in, and persists in, a trajectory of Conduct that undermines the judicial function and the separation of powers by denying the mere "pursuit" of "legal remedies"[11]

Part 4(B): Orders Sought

197. In consideration of the President of the Divisional Court's capacity as the Master of the Roster and the pre-eminent guardian of the institutional integrity of the Divisional Court, a petition is respectfully submitted for the following relief:

1. A mandatory Order that the President of the Divisional Court self-assign the present proceeding under the JRPA to his own jurisdiction, or in the alternative, adjudicate the relief sought in NOM #3 and by natural extension this Motion #5 and #4. i. (nota bene: This is necessitated by the inextricable nexus between the matters at hand and the requirement for the highest level of judicial oversight to prevent a miscarriage of justice);
2. An Order by direction to the court staff responsible for the Ontario Courts Public Portal (the "OCPP") compelling the immediate rectification of the digital interface to extinguish the "403 Forbidden Error Code" precluding access to the OCPP as it relates to the Applicant's account with the email utilized herein; i. (nota bene: such digital disenfranchisement violates the procedural expectations of a self-represented litigant and constitutes a constructive denial of the right to be heard (audi alteram partem));
3. An Order that the President of the Divisional Court directs the SCJ Recording Management Office to provide the Applicant with copies of the digital recordings that he ordered by a Request Form Undertaking, duly signed and prescribed payment made by bank draft in the sum of $34 for those case conferences in this JRPA Proceeding;
4. An Order that the President of the Divisional Court directs the SCJ Recording Management Office to provide the Applicant's retained and paid for in advance authorized transcriptionist (Ontario) (the "ATO") with the "tapes and materials required for transcription" in relation to the case conferences herein;
5. An Order that the Chief Justice of the SCJ directs the Divisional Court (court staff) to provide the Applicant with access to the requested documents in their custody or control in relation to the Undisclosed Criminal Proceeding;
6. An Order that the Chief Justice of the SCJ directs the court staff at any courthouses within his purview to provide the Applicant with access to any requested documents, information, information assets, et al. in relation to his Non-FIPPA requests of those courthouses;
7. An Order directing that the Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Justice pronounce determinations regarding NOM #5, #4, and #3 immediately or forthwith with comprehensive reasons to be promulgated thereafter (the "Immediate Announcement Order"); and
8. Such further and other relief as this Honourable Court may deem just and consistent with the overarching interest of justice, including practice directions to mitigate procedural delays.

ALL OF WHICH IS RESPECTFULLY SUBMITTED this _____ day of January, 2026.

Appendix #2: PDF documents of the Error 403 Code

--- Nothing past this line ---

[1]These definitions are critical to maintaining the conceptual integrity of the Applicant's submissions and ensuring a consistent nomenclature across the various branches of this litigation. In a proceeding of such complexity, involving layered constitutional challenges and administrative failures, the precision of language is the only safeguard against the obfuscation of the issues by the Responding Parties. The definitions serve as the glossary of the Applicant's constitutional grievance, providing the necessary clarity for the court to navigate the administrative labyrinth of the registry.

[2]See: Rule 59.06(1): 59.06 (1) An order that contains an error arising from an accidental slip or omission or requires amendment in any particular on which the court did not adjudicate may be amended on a motion in the proceeding. R.R.O. 1990, Reg. 194, r. 59.06 (1).

[3]In order to be capable of justification under section 1, the limit on the right or freedom must be "prescribed by law". The limit may be:

- either express or implied in a statute or a regulation (R. v. Therens, [1985] 1 S.C.R. 613; R. v. Thomsen, [1988] 1 S.C.R. 640; R. v. Orbanski; R. v. Elias [2005] 2 S.C.R. 3);
- in a government policy, where: (1) the government entity was authorized to enact the policy; (2) the policy sets out binding rules of general application, i.e., of a legislative nature, (such as rules of a regulatory body or provisions of a collective agreement) as opposed to those which are administrative in nature (such as internal guidelines or interpretive aids for government officials); (3) the policy is sufficiently precise so as to enable people to regulate their conduct by it, and so as to provide guidance to those who apply the law; (4) the policy is sufficiently accessible to give notice to the public of the rules to which they are subject (Greater Vancouver Transportation Authority v. Canadian Federation of Students - British Columbia Component, [2009] 2 S.C.R. 295, at paragraphs 50, 65).
- a common law limit, assuming there is sufficient government action for the Charter to apply (Therens, supra; RWDSU v. Dolphin Delivery, [1986] 2 S.C.R. 573; R. v. Swain, [1991] 1 S.C.R. 933; Dagenais v. Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, [1994] 3 S.C.R. 835); R. v. N.S., [2012] 3 S.C.R. 726).

[4]"registrar" means the Registrar of the Divisional Court or Court of Appeal, or a local registrar of the Superior Court of Justice, as the circumstances require

[5]"I swear (or solemnly affirm) that I will faithfully discharge my duties as a public servant; I will respect the laws of Canada and Ontario, including the recognition and affirmation of the aboriginal and treaty rights of Indigenous peoples in the Constitution; and, except as I may be legally authorized or required, I will not disclose or give to any person any information or document that comes to my knowledge or possession by reason of my being a public servant. So help me God. (Omit this phrase in an affirmation.)" (see: Oaths and Affirmations, O Reg 373/07, s 3, <https://canlii.ca/t/s4h#sec3>, retrieved on 2026-01-14).

[6]The legal test for mandamus—requiring a matured duty, a demand, and a refusal—is squarely met in the present circumstances where the registry has maintained a posture of obstinate silence in the face of valid filings and fee payments. As noted in Sunrise Senior Living v. Vaughan (City) (the "Sunrise"), 2010 ONSC 1523, the court will not permit a public officer to evade their duties through silence; a failure to respond to a valid demand is, in law, a refusal to act. The writ of mandamus is the court's primary tool for compelling the Executive Branch to adhere to the rule of law, ensuring that public duties are not abandoned at the whim of the official. In the current context, the "public officer" is the Registrar, and the "legal duty" is the processing of the Applicant's filings.

[7] In Vavilov, the Supreme Court reaffirmed that the standard of correctness applies to constitutional questions and questions of central importance to the legal system as a whole, both of which are engaged by the LAT's arbitrary narrowing of the parties to the dispute. These are "General Questions of Law of Central Importance," particularly following Zurich Insurance Company v. TD General Insurance Company (the "Zurich 2024"), 2024 ONCA 603. The systematic misidentification of insurers requires the correctness standard to prevent cascading prejudice across the insurance system. The interpretation of the "first insurer" rule under Regulation 283/95 is a matter of profound provincial importance, affecting the predictability and stability of the insurance landscape for all citizens. A reasonable standard would be insufficient to provide the necessary clarity and uniformity required for the administration of the SABS regime across the Province. The court's role is to provide the "final word" on these critical legal questions, ensuring that the insurance industry operates within a clear and predictable legal framework that respects the rights of the insured.

[8]In the commercial context, the deployment of strategic silence or the dissemination of half-truths by an entity constitutes a contumacious departure from the requisite standard of conduct. Consequently, the failure of automated systems to finalize a transaction, while retaining funds in an authorized state, may be viewed as an acta contrary to the expected transparency and bona fides of a public service provider.

[9] For instance, should admissions be provided in response to the NOM #3 that are inculpatory regarding fraud or extortion, such evidence could ipso facto be utilized in subsequent criminal proceedings. Similar considerations apply to individuals such as the person identified as Mr. David Karat (the "Mr. Karat"), who appears prima facie involved in the alleged unauthorized appropriation of property (the "TDI Karat Theft") and the subsequent obstruction of justice.

[10]This lever is a necessary counterweight to the executive's control over the budget, ensuring that the government cannot avoid its constitutional obligations through the simple expedient of underfunding the courts.

[11]The Registrar is the essential guarantor of operational continuity. The vacancy at the helm of the registry severs the court from its litigants. This failure of the Executive Branch necessitates that the Chief Justice self-assign to restore institutional integrity. Such an assignment is the final and only viable safeguard against the total breakdown of the judicial process in these proceedings. Delay in confirming filings and the "403 Code" constitute unconstitutional interference. Registry inaction is characterized as a violation of Administrative Judicial Independence. A return to the foundational object of the Rules—the just, most expeditious and least expensive determination of every civil proceeding on its merits—is necessitated to restore the integrity of the system. The President must exercise independence to remedy the extant paralysis. Registry inaction achieves a shutdown of the court without judicial consent. Integrity requires that the administrative "buffer" remain immune from executive blockades, failing which supervisory oversight by the CJC is invited. The President's role as the voice of the collective judiciary is paramount in these circumstances, as they must act to protect the reputation of the entire bench from the fallout of administrative caprice. Interference with the pursuit of a legal remedy is a breach of the Constitution. The Registry is a creature of statute; its failure to process filings strikes at the heart of the Core Jurisdiction. Judicial intervention is required to address misleading information disseminated by the Executive and to ensure that the law as written by the legislature is the law as applied in the courtroom. The interference with Administrative Judicial Independence—manifested through the "403 Code" and constructive closure of registries—represents a breach of the constitutional requirement for an independent judiciary. Such failures deprive the Applicant of access and violate the ROL. These circumstances categorically require the Chief Justice or President to self-assign and grant the relief sought to ensure the due execution of office and prevent a multiplicity of proceedings. The Rule of Law requires no less than the absolute and unwavering commitment of the Court to the protection of its own process from external subversion.

Attention: The Registrar of the Divisional Court as of Wednesday, December 3, 2025, in Ms. Roxanne Parris as LSO licensed paralegal (the "Current Registrar")

SUBJECT I: CONFIRMATION OF THE DELIVERY AND FILING STATUS OF TWO DISTINCT DOCUMENTS SUBMITTED VIA MAIL TO THE DIVISIONAL COURT ON DECEMBER 9 AND DECEMBER 11, 2025, COMPRISING THE UPDATED DRAFT ORDER AND THE COMPENDIUM FOR NOTICE OF MOTION NO. 3.
SUBJECT II: ENCLOSURE OF THE COVER LETTER AND EVIDENTIARY IMAGES OF THE MAIL FILED COMPENDIUM FOR NOTICE OF MOTION NO. 3.
SUBJECT III: RESIDUAL MATTERS PERTAINING TO ADMINISTRATIVE IRREGULARITIES AND THE PRINCIPLE OF MINISTERIAL DUTY.

Dear Sirs/Mesdames:

I. Introduction and Governing Definitions
I cordially write regarding the above-referenced matters. It is sincerely hoped that all judicial and administrative personnel, inclusive of the Current Registrar, are maintaining optimal health and wellness. Judicial efficiency and the preservation of the rule of law depend fundamentally upon the timely and scrupulous execution of administrative duties, a principle which forms the core of this correspondence. The Court's administrative function must be seen not merely as a matter of internal organization, but as a critical component of judicial legitimacy, ensuring that procedural justice is not eroded by bureaucratic inertia. The Applicant seeks not special treatment, but the timely, mandated performance of a public duty.

I adopt all definitions from previously, indirectly or directly, cited correspondence. For the purposes of this present communication, the following appellations and definitions shall be utilized, ensuring consistency in terminology throughout this document:

1. The Rules of Civil Procedure, R.R.O. 1990, Regulation 194 (the "Rules")
2. The Updated Draft Order (Form 59(A) under the Rules) (the "Draft Order")
3. The Compendium for Notice of Motion No. 3 as of December 7, 2025 (the "Compendium")
4. The Notice of Motion No. 3 (the "NOM #3")
5. The Ontario Courts Public Portal (the "OCPP")
6. The Honourable Judge Morawetz, in his capacity as the Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Justice and ipso facto the President of the Divisional Court (the "President of the Divisional Court")
7. The Responding Parties (the "Opposite Litigants")
8. Roncarelli v. Duplessis, 1959 CanLII 50 (SCC), $$1959$$ SCR 121 (the "Roncarelli Decision")

II. Procedural Impediments and Substantive Compliance

Confirmation is herewith proffered regarding the precise chronology and procedural context of the NOM #3. The requisite fee for the NOM #3 was paid on November 26, 2025, subsequent to the service upon the Opposite Litigants on November 17, 2025. Following payment, the Factum, Motion Record, initial Draft Order (dated November 19, 2025), and Affidavit of Service (dated November 21, 2025) were all submitted for filing. This was done notwithstanding the four business days' advance notice provided to the Divisional Court via electronic mail on November 24, 2025, concerning the proposed written hearing returnable on December 3, 2025, as prescribed by the Rules.

The uninterrupted and inexplicable failure to process the requisite documentation and officially "confirm" the filing status subsequent to the prescribed service and submission periods constitutes, prima facie, an administrative dereliction that directly impedes the Applicant's fundamental right to prompt and effective adjudication. This administrative lapse has resulted in a state of "constructive non-filing," where the Court is in physical possession of all necessary documents and fees, yet administratively refuses to afford them legal status. This delay is not merely an inconvenience; it constitutes an obstruction to justice by rendering the Applicant's case effectively inert, potentially prejudicing the Applicant's position by extending the lis pendens without legal justification. Furthermore, the ambiguity created by the lack of confirmation introduces unnecessary uncertainty for the Opposite Litigants regarding the formal status of the motion, although their failure to oppose remains a separate issue. The prevailing circumstance suggests, with considerable persuasive force, that the OCPP is either technically defective or not being staffed to operate at its represented and mandatory capacity. Critically, the explicit representations issued by the Court concerning the expected three-business-day processing timeframe are not being scrupulously honoured. This failure has been consistently observed ad seriatum regarding filings subsequent to the initial submission of the NOM #3 material on November 28, 2025.

This technical malaise is further compounded by the sudden and unheralded departure of the Former Registrar (Ms. Gentles). This administrative vacuum, which suggests a severe lack of adequate succession planning, is a clear instance of institutional negligence and has a direct causal link to the current chaos. This chaos is magnified by a demonstrable, ongoing failure to responsibly monitor the storage capacity of the Divisional Court’s electronic mail system—a fundamental component for the mandatory transmission of documents such as the Confirmation of Motion (Form 37(B)). The Applicant's compliance with the mandates of Rule 37.10.1(1)(a)(i) of the Rules, which requires this document to be given (not filed per se) via electronic mail, cannot be frustrated by the Court's internal and remediable failure to manage its digital infrastructure. Such institutional failures do not merely result in delay; they impose an unjust and undue financial and temporal burden upon self-represented litigants seeking to diligently prosecute their cause, thereby creating a substantial and unconstitutional barrier to the effective access to justice, contrary to Section 7 of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. The Applicant is placed in an untenable position, having fulfilled all party obligations, only to be stalled by institutional non-performance.

III. Non-Opposition and Procedural Expediency

It is noteworthy that the Opposite Litigants were afforded ample and prescribed opportunity to offer opposition to the NOM #3 through various modalities: non-opposition, consent, written opposition, or the presentation of oral argument. As not a solitary Opposite Litigant exercised any of these options within the specified timelines, the NOM #3 remains unopposed. Ipso facto, there existed, and continues to subsist, no extant scheduling exigency necessitated by opposition, thereby removing any legitimate basis for the administrative delay. Proof of service was duly tendered to the Divisional Court via electronic mail and was simultaneously submitted for filing through the OCPP.

The absence of opposition is not merely a procedural convenience; it is a critical factor that elevates the administrative delay from a necessary scheduling challenge to a purely bureaucratic breakdown. When a motion is unopposed, the core adjudicative function of the Court—resolving conflict—is minimized. The administrative priority ought to be the swift processing of uncontested matters to conserve judicial resources for contested proceedings, thereby honouring the overriding purpose of the Rules as articulated in Rule 1.04(1): "to secure the just, most expeditious and least expensive determination of every civil proceeding on its merits." By delaying the confirmation of an unopposed motion, the administrative body demonstrates a profound misallocation of public resources and a fundamental disregard for the principle of procedural expediency which underpins the Rules. The delay is, therefore, purely one of internal clerical processing, disassociated entirely from any complexities arising from the adversarial nature of the proceeding, and is, in principle, indefensible.

IV. Legislative Will: The Dichotomy of Acceptance versus Confirmation

The statutory distinction between the superseded JSO Portal regime and the current OCPP scheme is monumental, representing a fundamental philosophical shift in the procedural governance of court filings. The JSO Portal paradigm necessitated a two-tiered approach: Registrar's "Acceptance" (Rule 4.05.2(3)), followed by the Registrar's "Confirmation" (Rule 4.05.2(4)). This prior requirement of "Acceptance" inherently conferred upon the Registrar a quasi-discretionary veto power over the initiation of the record, potentially blurring the line between a purely administrative clerical function and a substantive, judicially reviewable adjudicative act. The former requirement of acceptance was predicated on the notion of an administrative offer of filing creating a binding quasi-contract subject to the Registrar's proactive approval.

Conversely, the current OCPP scheme (Rule 4.05.2.1), effectuated through O. Reg. 226/25, s. 4, is predicated solely upon the concept of a filing being "Subject to Confirmation," where the document is deemed filed or issued exclusively upon the electronic transmission of confirmation by the registrar or sheriff (Rule 4.05.2.1(4)).

The legal distinction between a condition of 'acceptance' (a discretionary act) and a condition 'subject to confirmation' (a mandatory, ministerial act) is analogous to the distinction between a condition precedent where a contract is already in force but subject to a condition to be met, which the Registrar is so required, and the offer of something to another for their acceptance. In the latter, when there is no acceptance, there is no binding contract between those persons which is of course subject to return consideration. Under administrative law principles, the former ("acceptance") requires the Registrar to make a decision based on subjective criteria (vires testing), while the latter ("confirmation") requires the Registrar only to verify objective facts (e.g., file integrity, prescribed fee payment).

The term "confirmation" implies a process more perfunctory, technical, and ministerial in nature, merely attesting to the reception and entry of the submission into the court's electronic record. The ministerial duty of the Registrar, in this context, is simply to acknowledge the successful electronic submission and verify basic, easily ascertainable technical standards, such as file format and size limits. This deliberate legislative shift effectively eliminates the Registrar's capacity to unilaterally reject a document on grounds of substantive non-compliance, thereby precluding the application of principles such as delegatus non potest delegare to a purely clerical function. The power to assess the sufficiency or formal compliance of the document is now correctly and exclusively vested in the Presiding Motions Judge, who is the proper authority to exercise judicial discretion and control over the proceedings.

It is thus self-evident that the legislative intent underlying the OCPP amendments was to streamline the filing process by removing the prerequisite of discretionary "acceptance," recognizing that unnecessary layers of administrative review only introduce delay. This necessary administrative evolution reflects a considered policy decision to reduce the burden on the public purse and expedite the processing of documents. The judicial scrutiny regarding the formal compliance of documents, which was formerly exercised prematurely by the Registrar, has been thereby relocated to the Presiding Motions Judge or Panel, to be adjudicated, inter alia, by way of objection advanced by the opposing litigant. This extrapolation of legal principle dictates that the administrative focus should expeditious, cost-effective, and just determination of matters upon their merits, rather than an in limine administrative acceptance requirement that unnecessarily burdens court resources and delays the progression of proceedings. The Registrar's duty is, therefore, one of mandatory execution, not discretionary oversight, and the current non-performance is a violation of this mandate.

V. Conversion of Paper Documents and Mitigation of Delay

The aforementioned procedural complexities, including the delays attributed to the malfunctioning of the OCPP and the administrative transition from the Former Registrar to the Current Registrar, cannot be imputed as a fault to the Applicant. The Applicant's imperative, grounded in the overarching principle of mitigating any potential loss or injury and ensuring the integrity and completeness of the judicial process, was to secure the substantive presence of the critical documents before the Divisional Court.

As such, the two critical documents—the Draft Order (mailed on December 8, 2025) and the Compendium (delivered on December 11, 2025)—were submitted via mail filing pursuant to Rule 4.05 of the Rules:

Rule 4.05(4): Filing by Leaving in Court Office or by Mail

Any document, other than one that is to be issued, may be filed by leaving it in the proper court office or mailing it to the proper court office, accompanied by the prescribed fee. R.R.O. 1990, Reg. 194, r. 4.05 (4).

The delivery of these hard copy documents is evidenced by tracking numbers from the postal carrier, thereby obviating any potential allegation of non-receipt under Rule 4.05(6). The presence of these tracking numbers effectively removes the operation of the rule that deems non-received documents as non-filed, providing conclusive acta of delivery to the proper court office. This mail filing, therefore, cured the administrative defect caused by the electronic delay and perfected the filing status under the alternative paper regime, ensuring that a properly filed record is now indisputably before the Court.

Furthermore, pursuant to O. Reg. 226/25, s. 1, the Registrar possesses the statutory power of conversion:

Conversion from Paper Format

(11) In the case of a proceeding that is commenced or continued in the City of Toronto, the registrar may prepare an electronic copy of any document that was filed or issued in the proceeding in paper format and include it in the court file.

It is explicitly confirmed that the Applicant does not require the restitution of the documents following their electronic conversion. These documents must remain with the Divisional Court to constitute the complete and comprehensive record of the proceeding. This is the Current Registrar's second, non-delegable ministerial duty: to convert and incorporate the paper-filed documents into the electronic Case Center record for the review of the Presiding Motions Judge. The word may in Rule 4.05(11) must be interpreted as shall in this context, given the overwhelming policy interest in maintaining a unified, accessible electronic court file as the default under the new OCPP regime.

V-A. Judicial Discretion and Rule 37.01 Compliance

As noted in the quoted language, "

MOTIONS AND APPLICATIONS RULE 37 MOTIONS — JURISDICTION AND PROCEDURE Notice of Motion 37.01 A motion shall be made by a notice of motion (Form 37A) unless the nature of the motion or the circumstances make a notice of motion unnecessary or these rules provide otherwise. R.R.O. 1990, Reg. 194, r. 37.01; O. Reg. 322/24, s. 4.", the Presiding Motions Judge can rely upon the motion so filed, but delayed without lawful reason for confirmation only, or decide the relief sought in the draft order by reference to confirming that such notice of motion was unnecessary based on the circumstances.

This rule confers a significant inherent power upon the Presiding Motions Judge to control the court's process and dispense with unnecessary technical formalities. Given that the delay in confirming the electronic filing is purely an administrative failure—a clerical omission rather than a substantive party error—the judicial officer has the discretion to deem the notice of motion—having been properly served, fully documented, and paid for—as having been advanced in circumstances that make the technical confirmation requirement "unnecessary." This judicial power extends to issuing an order nunc pro tunc (now for then), which effectively backdates the legal effect of the filing to the date of original submission, thereby curing the administrative lag. The use of a nunc pro tunc order is appropriate only to correct a clerical or administrative error, not to remedy a party's mistake, making it the perfect judicial tool to counteract the Registrar's delay. This judicial act would effectively ratify the filing nunc pro tunc and allow the relief sought in the Draft Order (which is now properly mail-filed and dated December 4, 2025) to be considered on its merits, without further administrative impediment. In this regard, the Presiding

Trudeau Judge can rely on the mail filed documents to approve the draft order contained therein at the most recent tab therein (December 4, 2025). This is the only recourse available to counteract the administrative paralysis that currently threatens to subvert the Applicant's timely right to justice.

VI. Compendium Status and Registrar's Exclusive Upload Duty (Rule 4.05.3)

I confirm that I am the only party per se. I reproduce the following, which governs the use and population of Case Center:

“Requirement to Use Case Center

(3) Every party participating in the hearing or conference shall provide the following documents to the court by uploading them to Case Center in accordance with this rule:

1. A copy of every document filed with the court by the party in respect of the hearing or conference.
2. Subject to subrule (5), a copy of any other document in the court file on which the party intends to rely at the hearing or conference that has not already been uploaded to Case Center by another party.
3. Unless the court directs otherwise and subject to subrule (3.1), a compendium that meets the requirements of subrule (7). O. Reg. 300/24, s. 2 (1).

   Modification, City of Toronto

   (3.0.1) In the case of a proceeding that is commenced or continued in the City of Toronto, the documents referred to in paragraphs 1 and 2 of subrule (3) in respect of each party shall be uploaded to Case Center by the registrar and not by the party. O. Reg. 226/25, s. 5 (1).

   Compendium

   (3.1) A compendium is not required to be provided with respect to a conference or the hearing of an unopposed motion or motion on consent, unless the court directs otherwise. O. Reg. 300/24, s. 2 (1).

   Deadline

   (4) Subject to subrules (4.1) and (5), the documents listed in subrule (3) must be uploaded to Case Center by the following deadline:
4. In the case of the hearing of a motion or application where the party is required to give the registrar a confirmation of motion (Form 37B) or confirmation of application (Form 38B), the deadline is 2 p.m. three days before the hearing date, unless the court orders otherwise.
5. In any other case, the deadline is five days before the date of the hearing or conference, unless the court orders otherwise. O. Reg. 689/20, s. 7; O. Reg. 224/22, s. 1; O. Reg. 300/24, s. 2 (6); O. Reg. 301/24, s. 1; O. Reg. 226/25, s. 5 (2).

   (4.1) Subrule (4) does not apply to the registrar. O. Reg. 226/25, s. 5 (3).”

The preceding provisions establish a critical, sui generis procedural framework for Toronto proceedings. The "Modification, City of Toronto" (Rule 4.05.3(3.0.1)) is a clear policy directive recognizing the unique volume and complexity of filings in the Toronto region, thus centralizing the document upload function with the court administration. Specifically, Rule 4.05.3(3.0.1) unequivocally delegates the primary responsibility for uploading all filed documents (paragraphs 1 and 2 of subrule (3)) to Case Center exclusively to the Registrar, thereby absolving the Applicant of this burden. Furthermore, Rule 4.05.3(4.1) explicitly provides that the stringent deadlines of subrule (4) do not apply to the Registrar. The legislative intent here is to remove the pressure of time constraints on the administrative process for uploads, allowing the Registrar to perform this function methodically, but this immunity from deadlines must not be misinterpreted as a license for indefinite delay. In this regard, I note that subrule 4.05.3(3)(2.) requires only a party to be able to invoke that right to have any other document in the “court file” to be relied upon. Since the Applicant is the only party per se, this right is exercised and requires the Registrar to upload any relied-upon documents from the "court file." Ergo, only the Registrar can upload filed documents but not subject to any deadline. The conclusion is therefore inescapable: the Registrar has an absolute, non-discretionary, and non-time-constrained ministerial duty to complete the court record by uploading all filed documents, whether submitted electronically or, as here, via the mail-filing exception. This duty is the single remaining procedural hurdle.

Confirmation is provided that neither the Draft Order of December 4, 2025, nor the Compendium required physical binding. Pursuant to Rule 4.05.3(3.1), the Compendium was not required due to the unopposed status of the NOM #3. The Compendium was filed nonetheless as a matter of good practice and procedural completeness.

Furthermore, the requirement for buff covers applies exclusively to an "appeal book and compendium" under Rule 4.07(3), which mandates:

Appeal Book and Compendium

(3) An appeal book and compendium shall be bound front and back in buff covers. O. Reg. 19/03, s. 1 (1).

It is trite law that a compendium prepared for a motion is patently distinct from that mandated for an appeal, rendering the binding requirement inapplicable. The deliberate decision not to bind the motion Compendium was therefore not a procedural irregularity but an act of strict compliance with the Rules.

Pursuant to Rule 4.07(7), which governs electronic documents:

Electronic Documents

(7) This rule does not apply to a document that is filed electronically in accordance with these rules or uploaded to Case Center under rule 4.05.3; however, if the same document is filed or provided to the court in paper format, this rule applies to the paper version of the document. O. Reg. 689/20, s. 9; O. Reg. 300/24, s. 4 (2); O. Reg. 301/24, s. 1.

The Applicant confirms that the mail-filed Draft Order and Compendium will not be subsequently filed electronically. In that regard, the "same document" will not be dually filed in both paper and electronic format by the Applicant, thus consciously avoiding the application of the latter clause of the rule to prevent any procedural complication and maintaining a singular, definitive version of the record.

VII. Conclusion and Request for Remedial Action

Given the demonstrable delays within the OCPP system, the egregious breach of administrative representations concerning confirmation timelines, and the fundamental principle that court staff are compelled to act at the direction of the President of the Divisional Court, a copy of this correspondence shall be provided to the President of the Divisional Court to ensure the Current Registrar executes the duties required by law with appropriate diligence and dispatch.

It is a cardinal principle, reaffirmed by the Roncarelli Decision (see: supra), that statutory or regulatory discretion is not an absolute prerogative. It must be exercised judiciously and according to the rules of reason and justice, not according to private opinion, administrative humour, or bureaucratic convenience. Lord Halsbury's guidance in Sharp v. Wakefield remains a potent syllogism: discretion must be "legal and regular," and not "arbitrary, vague, and fanciful." The continued failure to execute the non-discretionary duty of confirmation and document conversion constitutes an administrative action that falls outside the boundaries of good faith and legal regularity, equating to an abuse of public power. The honest approach, appreciating the sensitive administrative transition, dictates that the Current Registrar must promptly process all outstanding submissions and furnish confirmations, as the statutory mandate is one of ministerial confirmation, not of discretionary acceptance.

While careful consideration was given to the filing of a Motion to Compel the Current Registrar and to seek the appropriate order for costs against the Ministry of the Attorney General (the "MAG"), such a procedural initiative was ultimately deemed unnecessary and an instance of overkill, particularly in light of section 76 of the Courts of Justice Act (CJA). Section 76 empowers the Chief Justice to issue directions necessary to enforce the integrity and efficiency of the court process. The President of the Divisional Court is constrained to act when the statutory language dictates "shall," and his inherent authority to issue directions is activated upon receipt of clear, undisputed evidence of a systemic administrative failure. The provision of this current electronic correspondence to the President of the Divisional Court furnishes the requisite knowledge, thereby establishing the necessary obligation upon him to issue the directive. Failure by the President of the Divisional Court to act upon this clear evidence of administrative disarray would constitute an unfortunate acquiescence to the systemic failure. In this manner, the necessity of an additional motion is obviated, ensuring that the merits of the Judicial Review Application (JRPA) Proceeding can be decided in an expeditious, cost-effective, and just manner. The cost of a procedural motion to compel the Registrar, including the associated preparation time and judicial resources, would be an additional, unwarranted burden on the Applicant, caused entirely by the administrative arm of the Court.

As this was another some thousands of dollars in disbursements with the printing of pages, purchase of binders, tabs, paper, and mail filing, which was excessive but not my fault, I reserve the right to provide an amended Bill of Costs and current Draft Order. These costs, being directly attributable to the Applicant's necessary mitigation efforts against the Court's administrative failure (i.e., duplicating the filing in paper format), are reasonable and recoverable as special damages arising from institutional negligence.

I reserve to rely on this email document for any lawful purposes including seeking additional costs along with asserting my legal rights in a professional and lawful manner.

I further reserve the right to give, send, file (mail or electronic) any further documents to ensure that this JRPA Proceeding with particular reference to NOM #3 is decided in a manner consistent with the law along with reference to the binding principles in the Zurich v. Chubb cases including the dissenting opinion of Juriansz J.A. that was adopted verbatim by the Supreme Court of Canada in 2015 and the binding decision of The Honourable Justice Akazaki in May 2024. I reserve the right to formalize and expand upon these principles in a formal request or requisition of the Divisional Court where applicable.

The administrative delays currently being experienced do not constitute a mere inconvenience; they represent a material obstruction to the Applicant's entitlement to the expeditious and just resolution of the extant application for judicial review, directly impacting the right of access to justice. Such institutional failings, if allowed to persist without immediate rectification, inevitably erode public confidence in the judicial process and contravene the overarching policy objectives enshrined in the Rules.

The President of the Divisional Court, by virtue of his statutory nomenclature and judicial eminence, bears the ultimate responsibility for conducting the court's administrative functions in a manner entirely consistent with the Rules and established judicial principles. It is therefore respectfully requested that the administrative confirmation of all outstanding filed documents be effected without further delay, thereby preserving the status quo ante of the timely filing and ensuring that the matter can proceed to an unbiased determination on its merits.

To the extent that the representations are not honoured, I have nonetheless mitigated the same to assist the Presiding Motions Judge to approve the draft order, sign the same and have the Registrar file and enter the same with a copy to me.

Warm regards,

/s/Mr. Kevin A. McLean (BA, JD, CIM)

TO:

The Divisional Court of Ontario (Toronto Region)
Osgoode Hall, 130 Queen Street West
Toronto, Ontario M5H 2N5
Attention: The New Registrar, Ms. Roxanne Parris (the "Registrar")
SUBJECT I: PROVISION OF MICROSOFT WORD COPY OF FACTUM FOR NOTICE OF MOTION NUMBER THREE (THE "FACTUM")
SUBJECT II: FACILITATION OF FACTUM UPLOADING TO CASE CENTER (THE "CASE CENTER") IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE RULES OF CIVIL PROCEDURE (THE "RULES")

Introduction and Contextual Preamble

I cordially write regarding the above-enumerated subjects, the central purpose of which is the provision of an electronic, editable iteration of the Factum (the "Word Factum") to facilitate the administration of justice.
I adopt all definitions from previously, indirectly or directly, cited correspondence, motions, and materials herein, and hereby introduce the following definitions for precision:

- The Divisional Court of Ontario (Toronto Region) (the "Court")
- The Factum (the Factum for Notice of Motion No. 3 (the "NOM #3"), which was formally served and filed on November 18, 2025)
- The "Registrar" (Ms. Roxanne Parris, in Her Official Capacity)
- The Rules of Civil Procedure, R.R.O. 1990, Regulation 194 (the "Rules")
- The Courts of Justice Act, R.S.O. 1990, c. C.43, s. 98 (the "Act")
- The Ontario Courts Public Portal (the "OCCP").

Provision of Factum and Rationale

The genesis of this present correspondence is the recent and salutary amendments to the Rules and the concomitant issuance of the Divisional Court Practice Direction (the "Practice Direction"), a copy of which is appended hereto. While the Practice Direction is, per se, an administrative directive and remains subordinate to the mandatory provisions of the Rules, it nonetheless stipulates, as a procedural requirement, that Factums must also be uploaded in Word format to the Case Center for the Court's administrative benefit.

Therefore, attached hic et nunc (the "Attached Document") is the Word Factum for NOM #3, which corresponds precisely in substance and content to the executed Portable Document Format (PDF) version previously served and filed on the eighteenth day of November, 2025. Although the Word Factum is not adorned with the digital signature of the Applicant, the integrity of the record is preserved, as the OCCP maintains the filed, signed PDF iteration. This provision is tendered as a professional and collegial courtesy (pro bono) to the Court, ensuring strict adherence to the Practice Direction insofar as it stipulates:

> "All documents must be uploaded in PDF format. The indexes to all Records should include hyperlinked bookmarks. Factums must also be uploaded in Word format."

This submission, being in conformity with the recent regulatory shift, is a proactive measure to sustain the streamlined and efficient administration of the Court's processes, thereby maintaining the established status quo ante of judicial efficacy.

Offer of Further Assistance

It is cognizable that the Court may also require the Word Factums corresponding to earlier filed documents, specifically the Factum filed on December 12, 2025, and the Factum related to Notice of Motion Number Two (the "NOM #2") of February 1, 2025. I note that these antecedent documents were submitted exclusively in PDF format, in accordance with the then-prevailing lex fori as accepted and confirmed by the previous Registrar.

The Applicant maintains a continuing posture of helpfulness and gracious cooperation with the Court. Should the Registrar encounter any exigencies or require the electronic, editable copies of the aforementioned previous Factums in order to effectuate their uploading to the Case Center, I remain unequivocally at the Court's service. Ubi jus, ibi remedium.

This comprehensive cooperation, while not strictly required ab initio for documents filed prior to the Practice Direction's amendment regarding Word format, is demonstrative of the Applicant's unwavering commitment to the resolution-oriented, functional operation of the Court's electronic repository. This is an action taken in limine to prevent any future administrative impediment.

Conclusion

In conclusion, the Word Factum is herewith transmitted. The Applicant trusts that this submission is received as a welcome contribution to the Court's administrative necessities and efficiency on all fronts.

Yours most appreciatively and gratefully,

/s/Mr. Kevin A. McLean (BA, JD, CIM)

Subject: Urgent compliance with outstanding obligations of the registrar's office of the Divisional Court by way of notice and provision of the submitted filing of the request/requisition of December 15, 2025

Dear Divisional Court and Registrar of the Divisional Court:

1. This communication is tendered in re the aforementioned matter. Confirmation is hereby provided that the attached Requisition was submitted for filing on December 15, 2025. Appended hereto is the confirmed receipt issued by the Divisional Court, documenting the said submitted filing. It is attested that the OCPP authorizes the electronic submission of requisite documentation, including the payment for notice of motion number three ("NOM #3"), which was duly effectuated on the aforementioned date, utilizing the Ministry of the Attorney General ("MAG") authorized software. Further, it is confirmed that, effective October 3, 2025, the JSO Portal ceased to be the applicable electronic conduit for filings within the City of Toronto or the "Toronto Region."

2. In consideration of the protracted administrative delays; the demission of the Registrar (which was brought to the attention of the undersigned on December 3, 2025, the scheduled date for the written hearing, which seems rather non-coincidental, notwithstanding the non-opposition of any named Respondents in the style of cause or Responding Parties which were non-named Respondents (see: Affidavit of Service of the Applicant (Moving Party) (see: supra)); the Divisional Court's evident non-compliance with the Judicial Review Procedure Act (JRPA), the Courts of Justice Act (CJA), and the Rules of Civil Procedure; and the resultant dereliction in honouring prior written representations to the undersigned, the following mail-filing actions were subsequently effectuated: the draft order (Form 59(A)) dated December 4, 2025, was filed on Monday, December 8, 2025, and the Compendium for NOM #3 (dated December 7, 2025), comprising ten binders (Volumes 1 through 10), was filed under separate cover on Thursday, December 11, 2025.

3. Should the requisite confirmation of all outstanding submitted filings, consistent with the temporal mandates stipulated by the OCPP and written representations by the Registrar in the OCPP, not be provided, relief may be pursued via a draft order submitted to the President of the Divisional Court, who serves concurrently as the Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Justice (SCJ). Said draft order will, inter alia, move the Court, but only the President of the Divisional Court as per the CJA et al, to mandate the Registrar of the Divisional Court to remediate all deficient submitted filings via the OCPP and ensure compliance across manifold administrative facets.

4. Given the demonstrated pattern of administrative delays and the recurrent failure to honour prior assurances, the submission of a conventional Notice of Motion and the attendant expense is deemed unnecessary and impracticable. Consequently, reliance shall be placed upon Rule 37.01 of the Rules of Civil Procedure, which permits the making of a motion without a formal Notice of Motion where circumstances do not so require or where it is unnecessary. In such an event, the Registrar of the Divisional Court shall constitute the sole Responding Party, being the functionary against whom the motion is made (it is emphasized that "made" is distinct from "service," "filing," and "delivery"). Should the Registrar's continued recalcitrance necessitate this expenditure, an order for costs shall be sought against that functionary. While it is appreciated that a portion of administrative culpability rests with the Former Registrar—whose record evinced a history of non-compliance even under the JSO Portal—the extant duties of the Current Registrar are immutable, and the office is necessarily tasked with addressing the transgressions of the status quo ante.

5. The jurisdictional basis compelling the President of the Divisional Court to adjudicate this potential motion—which would be supported by submissions and evidence, notwithstanding its deviation from Form 37(A)—is articulated in section 76 of the Courts of Justice Act (CJA), which vests the President of the Divisional Court and only the President of the Divisional Court with the authority to direct court staff and the Registrar concerning the fulfillment of their duties. Given the statutory obligation to assign judicial duties to certain judges, the President possesses the discretion to assign an independent judge (an "Independent Presiding Motions Judge") to consider the mail-filed documents contained within the Compendium for NOM #3 and the Draft Order of December 4, 2025 (vide: supra).

6. It is the fervent hope of the undersigned that such a motion will prove superfluous, contingent upon the expeditious fulfillment of the Current Registrar's outstanding obligations.

7. Nevertheless, should compliance not be effectuated with the utmost expediency, specifically by no later than 12:00 P.M. on the succeeding day (December 17, 2025), the aforementioned motion to the President of the Divisional Court shall be commenced without further admonition. While recognizing the administrative friction attendant to the technological transition involving the OCPP (October 14, 2025) and the change in Registrar (December 3, 2025), it is verily believed that ample time has been accorded to the Current Registrar to remediate the prior transgressions of the Former Registrar and to honour written assurances pertaining to the confirmation timelines for submitted filings. Furthermore, given that NOM #3 is uncontested and the JRPA Application proceeded undefended, without the submission of a First Defence by any Respondent, there remains a substantial quantum of administrative irregularity requiring remediation and unwinding of which I was required to bring my motion intra this JRPA Proceeding.

8. Provided that the Registrar remedies the outstanding deficiencies—by confirming all submitted filings by 12:00 P.M. on December 17, 2025, extending an immediate invitation to the Case Center to the undersigned, and uploading all filed documents in the JRPA Proceeding to the Case Center by close of business on Thursday, December 18, 2025—the necessity of bringing the intended motion, pursuing costs, and amending the bill of costs previously filed (via mail in the Compendium for NOM #3) shall be obviated.

9. This communication is submitted for the Divisional Court's urgent consideration and necessary administrative action.

10. Ergo, I must rely on the poignant adage, “There is never a wrong time to do the right thing”. Thank you.

Best regards,

/s/Mr. Kevin A. McLean (BA, JD, CIM)

Subject: my motion #4, without form 37(A) due to lack of necessity and/or the circumstances do not require a notice of motion, and unlikely to even require service on the registrars due to the lack of contested facts (all denoted by record of proceeding) and extant mandatory duties of the former and current registrar

Dear Divisional Court (attention: President) and Registrar of the Divisional Court:

The undersigned submits this formal correspondence to address a persistent, deleterious, and arguably contumacious failure on the part of the Office of the Registrar—encompassing the professional conduct of both the predecessor and the incumbent—to discharge their mandated administrative obligations. Notwithstanding the prima facie validity and technical sufficiency of the materials submitted via the Ontario Court Case Portal ("OCCP"), there has been a demonstrable and prolonged omission in the processing of filings. Such inaction constitutes a profound departure from the strictures of the Rules of Civil Procedure, R.R.O. 1990, Reg. 194, and the specific protocols governing the Toronto Region of the Superior Court of Justice and the Divisional Court.
In view of the extant and historical neglect of these ministerial duties, the further utilization of the OCCP for repetitive filings, accompanied by the redundant remittance of prescribed fees, is deemed computationally futile, economically inefficient, and procedurally nonsensical. To persist in a digital framework that fails to acknowledge or validate receipt is to engage in a hollow exercise of form over substance. Such a course of action would merely perpetuate a state of status quo ante wherein the administration of justice remains obstructed by a pervasive bureaucratic inertia that borders on administrative paralysis.

II. THE LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR MANDAMUS AND THE EXTRAPOLATION OF REGISTRARIAL OBLIGATIONS

It is asserted that the conditions precedent for the seeking of the extraordinary remedy of mandamus have been satisfied in toto. The Registrar is bound by a public legal duty to act—a duty that is executory, ministerial, and entirely non-discretionary in nature. The right to the performance of said duty is vested in the undersigned as a litigant entitled to the orderly progression of the colonial-judicial machinery.
The necessity of judicial intervention is underscored by the following extrapolations of fundamental legal principles:

1. A Clear and Vesting Right to Performance: The applicant has maintained an unassailable record of adherence to all statutory requirements. This includes the meticulous service and filing of documentation and the timely remittance of all prescribed fees. The failure of the Registrar to respond to these completed conditions constitutes a breach of the social contract between the judicial administration and the public it serves.
2. The Absence of an Alternate, Adequate, or Efficacious Remedy: No collateral avenue exists to rectify the persistent failure of the Registrar to process filings within the represented temporal parameters. The administrative "black hole" created by the current state of the OCCP renders ordinary inquiries toothless, necessitating an order from this Honourable Court to compel the performance of a duty that should, ex debito justitiae, be automatic.
3. The Practical Value and Determinative Effect of the Order: An order compelling performance would not merely be symbolic; it would have immediate, tangible utility by rectifying the procedural irregularities and nullities occasioned by the Registrar's ultra vires inaction. It is essential to distance the record from this lack of compliance to ensure that the eventual adjudication of the merits is not tainted by the preceding administrative delinquency.

Reference is made to the nuanced jurisprudential distinctions regarding procedural irregularities as articulated in Long v. Redbranch Investments Ltd., 2018 BCCA 468, as applied and distinguished within the specific context of these proceedings. Furthermore, the balance of convenience unequivocally favours the applicant. The undersigned has been uniquely prejudiced by the Registrar's failure to facilitate the provision of digital recordings and transcripts on CD—despite Justice Shore's uncorrected misinterpretation of the law—notwithstanding the satisfaction of all financial prerequisites via bank draft.

III. THE DOCTRINE OF IMPLIED REFUSAL AND THE URGENCY OF RECTIFICATION

While the legal test for mandamus is ostensibly met, it is conceded that should the Registrar comply with all outstanding statutory and prescribed obligations by 17:00 hours this day, the necessity for the relief sought in Motion #4 may be partially or entirely obviated. However, the Court must recognize that a refusal to act need not be express; in the absence of compliance, the refusal is deemed implied through continued and unreasonable inaction, as evidenced by the ignored Requisitions #11 through #15.

The peculiar circumstances of this matter dictate that the Registrar(s) are the only parties whose interests are directly affected by the orders sought, as they are the primary actors in this administrative default. It is further noted that the Respondents have failed to file Notices of Appearance with proof of service as mandated by the plain language of Form 68A. This delinquency was unequivocally confirmed by a comprehensive audit of the OCCP CaseView. Consequently, the Registrar remains under a mandatory, non-shifting obligation to correct these administrative deficiencies ipso facto and to account for payments that may otherwise fail to be "finally captured" due to the expiry of digital payment windows.

IV. SACROSANCT STATUTORY OATHS AND THE PRINCIPLE OF PROCEDURAL CONTINUITY

The attention of the Court is directed to the Courts of Justice Act, R.S.O. 1990, c. C.43 and the Public Service of Ontario Act, 2006, S.O. 2006, c. 35, Sched. A, regarding the solemn oath of office required of public servants. As an officer of the Court, the Registrar is bound by a perpetual statutory duty that transcends the individual identity of the office-holder. The errors, omissions, or systemic oversights of the predecessor do not—and cannot—absolve the incumbent of the immediate obligation to ensure procedural regularity and the integrity of the court record. To suggest otherwise would be to allow the transition of personnel to serve as a shield for the erosion of the rule of law.

V. CONCLUSION AND THE PHYSICAL LODGING OF MATERIALS

To facilitate the President of the Divisional Court in directing staff to rectify these lapses, a comprehensive Motion Record and detailed written submissions have been prepared. While such voluminous documentation should, in an ideal procedural environment, be redundant, they will be provided ex abundanti cautela to ensure the Court is fully apprised of the gravity of this administrative failure and the resulting prejudice to the applicant.

Should the electronic portal remain in its current state of dysfunction, the Draft Order for Motion #4 and all supporting materials shall be delivered via physical strata—by mail or direct drop-off—to the Court's registry to ensure they are brought to the personal attention of the Regional Senior Judge.

Ergo, adhering to the poignant and prevailing adage that "there is never a wrong time to do the right thing," the undersigned remains:

MATTER DETAILS

5004Court File Number: DC-24-00000718-00JR

- Short Style of Cause: McLean v. TD Home and Auto Insurance Company, et al.
- Document Classification: Correspondence and Submission of Final Draft Order regarding Motion #4
- Sender: Mr. Kevin A. McLean, B.A., J.D., C.I.M. (the "Moving Party" and "Applicant")

I. PREAMBLE AND FORMAL SUBMISSION

The Applicant, ipso facto the Moving Party in the extant proceedings, respectfully submits this comprehensive and meticulously structured correspondence alongside the appended Final Draft Order pertaining to Motion #4. I confirm that this current and final draft order is a substitute for the previous one submitted yesterday. This submission is necessitated by an egregious, multifaceted accumulation of administrative irregularities, systemic failures, and clerical stasis that have, prima facie, impeded the orderly and equitable progression of Notice of Motion No. 3 (NOM #3). Such irregularities, if left unrectified by judicial intervention, threaten to undermine the very foundations of procedural fairness and the core tenets of the rule of law within this jurisdiction.

By way of this formal instrument, the Moving Party seeks the immediate, decisive, and remedial attention of the President of the Divisional Court and the Registrars to rectify the status quo ante. It is of paramount importance to ensure that the judicial process is not rendered ultra vires by clerical omissions, technological inertia within the Ontario Courts Plus Portal (OCPP), or the inadvertent negligence of the physical registry. The Moving Party posits that administrative efficiency is not a mere aspirational convenience but a mandatory, non-negotiable prerequisite for the effective exercise of judicial authority and the protection of a litigant's right to a timely hearing.

II. CHRONOLOGY OF PROCEDURAL COMPLIANCE AND ADMINISTRATIVE STASIS

1. Initiation and Service of NOM #3: On November 17, 2025, the Moving Party formally issued NOM #3, effecting comprehensive and valid service upon all Responding Parties on even date. Subsequent thereto, on November 19, 2025, the exhaustive Motion Record, Factum, and Draft Order were meticulously served, followed by the requisite filing of the Affidavit of Service. These actions were undertaken in strict adherence to the Rules of Civil Procedure, demonstrating the Moving Party's unwavering commitment to procedural rectitude.
2. Confirmation and Digital Filing Imperatives: On November 24, 2025, a Confirmation of Motion was transmitted to the Registrar. On November 26, 2025, the Moving Party successfully navigated the complexities of the OCPP to submit the filing of NOM #3 and its ancillary documentation. Despite the passage of several weeks and the explicit authorization of the requisite fees, the status of said filing remains perpetually relegated to a "received" state. This failure of the system to transition to "accepted" status as contemplated by the Rules constitutes a significant, albeit artificial, barrier to the Moving Party's right to have his motion adjudicated.
3. Procedural Default of Responding Parties: It is a matter of record that the Respondents, none of whom have delivered a "First Defence" to the Judicial Review Procedure Act (JRPA) Application, have failed to adhere to the temporal mandates of Rule 37.12(5). This procedural lethargy, compounded by a total absence of responsive material, constitutes a default that necessitates judicial notice. The Respondents have effectively abdicated their responsibility to participate in the adversarial process, yet they remain shielded by the Registry's failure to process the Moving Party's records.
4. Physical Augmentation and the Voluminous Record: Notwithstanding the digital impasse, the Moving Party provided hard copies of the Draft Order on December 8, 2025, and delivered ten comprehensive, tabbed binders of the Compendium for NOM #3 via mail filing on December 11, 2025. This physical augmentation of the record—requiring significant personal and financial resources—was undertaken to ensure that the Court remained fully apprised of the evidentiary foundations of the motion.

III. CASE VIEW VERIFICATION AND RESPONDENT PRECLUSION

I further hereby confirm that in light of my review of the Case View in the OCPP, the Respondents are precluded from being served with any of my documents, receiving steps in the JRPA Application, and have not opposed the JRPA Application. This lack of opposition underscores the prima facie validity of the Moving Party's position and highlights the unnecessary delays caused by administrative inaction. The record demonstrates that the Respondents have waived their right to participate in these interlocutory stages through their own inaction and failure to comply with the Rules.

While pursuant to Section 9(4) of the JRPA the Attorney General for Ontario (AGO) is entitled to be heard at the hearing of the JRPA Application, that is not a matter that is currently relevant to the interlocutory administrative relief sought herein. The focus remains exclusively on the rectification of the Registry's records to reflect the actual state of the litigation.

IV. LOSS OF CONFIDENCE AND REDUNDANT FILING PROTOCOLS

As I have lost confidence and the public confidence has been eroded as a result of the failures primarily of Former Registrar Gentles, a copy of these documents will be mail or drop off filed by a third party or courier, along with being provided via email. Furthermore, a copy of this email and the appended Draft Order will be transmitted via facsimile to the attention of the President of the Divisional Court by way of attention to his judicial assistant.

This redundant methodology of service and filing is necessitated by the aforementioned administrative failures and is intended to ensure that the judicial record is perfected notwithstanding the current state of registry stasis. The Moving Party asserts that such measures are a regrettable but necessary consequence of the erosion of trust in the Registry's ability to maintain the status quo of a functioning judicial system.

V. LEGAL SYLLOGISMS AND THE NECESSITY OF JUDICIAL INTERVENTION

The Moving Party posits that the administrative functioning of the Registry is not merely a ministerial convenience but a fundamental component of the constitutionally required judicial independence and the right to a fair adjudication. To the extent that there is any further opposition or interference, or even if compliance is affected in tardy fashion, the mandamus relief may become necessary even if moot, as a prophylactic measure against recurrent administrative irregularities.
The following syllogism illuminates the necessity of the requested relief:

- Major Premise: The Courts of Justice Act and the Rules of Civil Procedure mandate that the Registrar shall facilitate the orderly filing, processing, and transmission of judicial records to ensure the accessibility of justice.
- Minor Premise: The Registry has failed to process the Moving Party's electronic filings and has omitted to transfer said records to the Case Center platform, thereby obstructing the judicial view of the record and preventing the scheduling of a hearing.
- Conclusion: Ergo, the administrative omission has resulted in a constructive denial of access to the Court, necessitating an exercise of the Court's inherent jurisdiction to grant remedial relief nunc pro tunc.

In limine, the failure of the Registrar's office to discharge its corollary legal duties—specifically the transition of documents to Case Center—represents a breach of the mandatory obligations set forth in Section 76 of the Courts of Justice Act. Justice delayed by a computer terminal is no less a denial of justice than a closed courtroom door.

VI. THE RELIEF SOUGHT IN THE FINAL DRAFT ORDER

The Moving Party presents the Final Draft Order for Motion #4, which contemplates a multi-faceted approach to restoring procedural integrity, including inter alia:

- Temporal Abridgment: The immediate abridgment of time for service and filing to reflect the exigent nature of the administrative failure.
- Judicial Dispensation: The formal waiver of procedural formalities, such as the Form 37A, which have been rendered redundant or impracticable by the Registry's current state of stasis.
- Mandatory Registrarial Directions: Explicit instructions to the Current Registrar to facilitate the immediate upload of all electronic filings to Case Center.
- Judicial Assignment: The appointment of an independent motions judge, untainted by prior involvement or perceived bias, to adjudicate the merits of NOM #3.
- Writ of Mandamus: A conditional provision for a Writ of Mandamus to compel the performance of these ministerial acts should the Registrar fail to comply within twenty-four (24) hours.

VII. IMPLICATIONS OF CONTINUED ADMINISTRATIVE NONFEASANCE

The consequences of continued non-feasance extend beyond the parties involved in this specific litigation. If the Registry is permitted to remain in a state of perpetual delay without judicial oversight, the integrity of the Divisional Court as a venue for the review of administrative action is compromised. The Moving Party's right to certiorari and other prerogative remedies is predicated upon a functioning court system that respects the timelines established by the legislature.

Furthermore, the administrative obligations of the Divisional Court are not personal to the incumbent but attach to the office. Ipso facto, the Current Registrar is legally and ethically bound to rectify the omissions and defaults of the Former Registrar. The doctrine of continuity of office ensures that the transition of personnel does not result in the expiration of public legal duties owed to litigants.

VIII. CONCLUSION AND FINAL DEMAND FOR RECTIFICATION

The Moving Party maintains that the declarations and orders sought are self-evident reflections of the current procedural reality. I find it most regrettable but necessary to have taken these steps. I reserve the right to rely on this document and attached documents, by reference, for any lawful purposes including costs.

Should you rectify any and all failures of your public duties to act, we can jointly notify or I can separately notify the Divisional Court to the attention of the President of the Divisional Court forthwith to be efficient with the usage of public resources. However, I have made sufficient demands regarding the same and the delay has been unreasonable.

The Court's inherent jurisdiction to control its own process is the only remaining safeguard against the administrative inertia that has plagued this file. Should the Responding Parties or the Registry persist in their administrative obstruction or fail to rectify their defaults in the face of these written demands, the Moving Party shall seek costs on a substantial or full indemnity basis.

It is the earnest hope of the Moving Party that this correspondence serves as an acta of finality, precipitating the necessary administrative actions to restore the integrity of this JRPA proceeding and ensuring that justice is not only done but is seen to be done instanter.

Respectfully submitted,

/s/Mr. Kevin A. McLean (BA, JD, CIM)

MATTER DETAILS

- Court File Number: DC-24-00000718-00JR
- Short Style of Cause: McLean v. TD Home and Auto Insurance Company, et al.
- Document Classification: Enclosure of Motion Record #4 in bookmarked and hyperlinked format as a courtesy to the Divisional Court and President of the Divisional Court
- Sender: Mr. Kevin A. McLean, B.A., J.D., C.I.M. (the "Moving Party" and "Applicant")

Dear Sirs/Mesdames/Other Gender-Neutral Pronouns:

I. INTRODUCTION

1. I cordially write regarding the above. I adopt all definitions from previously, indirectly or directly, cited correspondence.
2. It is my distinct privilege to facilitate the delivery of the enclosed copies of the Motion Record #4 (the "Motion Record"), alongside the secondary documentation articulated infra. Subject to a comprehensive verification of the extant tracking particulars, the inter vivos physical filing of these materials via post should be deemed efficacious as of the current date. The Moving Party has exercised exhaustive diligence to ensure that the physical and digital manifestations of these pleadings are synchronized to prevent any jurisdictional or administrative dissonance.

II. PROCEDURAL TRANSMISSIONS AND ADMINISTRATIVE COGNIZANCE

3. An identical reproduction of the Motion Record shall be dispatched via facsimile to the President of the Divisional Court. This redundancy is necessitated by the exigencies of the current circumstances to ensure the status quo ante of the judicial record is preserved with meticulous precision. Given the gravity of the relief sought and the complexity of the underlying Judicial Review Procedure Act (the "JRPA") application, the Moving Party deems it imperative that the President be possessed of these materials through multiple secure channels to preclude any potential for administrative oversight.
4. In light of the resignation of the Former Registrar and the emergence of recently discovered evidentiary substantiation concerning Ms. Evelyne Ibula (the "Ibula Evidence"), as detailed in the Cover Letter regarding "mail filed" Motion Record (the "Cover Letter"), I have included her as a recipient ex abundanti cautela. The transition between the Former Registrar and the Current Registrar introduces a critical juncture in the management of this file, necessitating a high degree of transparency to maintain the integrity of the court's record-keeping functions.
5. Based upon my extensive review of the Public Service of Ontario Act, 2006, SO 2006, c 35, Sch A (the "PSOA") and attendant regulations, it is unclear if Former Registrar Gentles resigned, was terminated for cause or without cause, or abandoned her position. While it is not particularly relevant per se but for determining the reasons for the failures in processing submitted documents for filing, which remain outstanding—which in turn means Motion #4 is increasingly urgent and naturally dovetailed to Notice of Motion #3 (the "NOM #3") and the requirements to bring such a motion in this proceeding herein—it is also vital in determining whether Registrar Parris is the permanent Registrar of the Divisional Court or merely filling a void left by the delinquency in duties by Former Registrar Gentles.
6. This inclusion further serves the purpose of ascertaining whether Ms. Ibula was, or remains, a de facto employee or a contractual agent of the Ontario Government or the Ministry of the Attorney General (the "MAG"). A preliminary inquiry suggests a conspicuous absence of her credentials within the public service records or the Government of Ontario Employee and Organization Directory (the "Directory"). The current prima facie evidence suggests a potential lack of institutional affiliation, given the absence of a designated telephonic extension within the Divisional Court premises. Such irregularities mandate a robust investigative posture to ensure that no ultra vires communications have influenced the trajectory of this litigation.

III. ACCURACY, EFFICACY, AND JURISPRUDENTIAL AUTHORITY

7. The Moving Party confirms ipso facto that the mail-filed iteration of the Motion Record is substantive and identical to the electronic version provided herein. The electronic version incorporates sophisticated bookmarking and hyperlinked authorities—provided as a professional courtesy to the Divisional Court and the President. In light of my continued good faith efforts to respect the resources and efficiency of the public purse, I may provide, as a courtesy, a Book of Authorities to ensure that justice is not merely done but seen to be done.
8. In this regard, I will now highlight, while contained in the bookmarked version of Motion Record #4, the authority of Ruffo v Conseil de la magistrature, [1995] 4 SCR 267 (the "Ruffo") at the following paragraphs in summarized form:

> 57 In my opinion, this last observation also applies to the chief district judge. Until 1940, disciplinary control of judges of the chief district judge's court was subject to the dismissal procedure, which required a vote by both legislative assemblies in favour of dismissal (R.S.Q. 1909, ss. 3263 and 3292; R.S.Q. 1925, c. 145, 5010 ss. 221 and 269); starting in 1941 it required a report of the Court of King's Bench (Appeal Side), the predecessor of the present Court of Appeal (R.S.Q. 1941, c. 15, ss. 221 and 269; R.S.Q. 1964, c. 20, ss. 76 and 119; R.S.Q. 1977, c. T-16, ss. 85, 127 and 133; S.Q. 1988, c. 21, s. 30; and R.S.Q., c. T-16, s. 95). It must not be forgotten that a large part of the chief judge's role in maintaining high-quality justice was defined gradually over the years, in the same way as judicial precedents. Many aspects of this role derived from judicial tradition without being transferred to legislation. Therefore, the fact that there was no explicit legislation on ethics until quite recently does not mean we can doubt the continuity that marked the development of the chief judge's responsibilities in this regard. It accordingly cannot be argued that the supervisory powers conferred on the chief judge by the present s. 96 CJA were assigned spontaneously by the legislature; in my view, they must rather be seen as the expression of a reality that is consistent with general practice and gradual developments over time.

58 This opinion is shared by the American author C. G. Geyh, who asserts that the chief judge's supervisory powers over ethics are inherent in the exercise of his or her functions and need not be conferred by specific statutory provisions ("Means Of Judicial Discipline Other Than Those Prescribed By The Judicial Discipline Statute, 28 U.S.C. Section 372(c)", in Research Papers of the National Commission on Judicial Discipline and Removal (1993), vol. 1, 713, at p. 756). I agree.

59 We must recognize that the chief judge, as primus inter pares in the court, the efficient operation of which he or she oversees in all other respects, is in a preferred position to ensure compliance with judicial ethics. First, because of the chief judge's role as co-ordinator, events that may raise ethical issues are more readily brought to his or her attention. As well, because of the chief judge's status, he or she is often the best situated to deal with such delicate matters, thereby relieving the other judges of the court of the difficult task of laying a complaint against one of their colleagues where necessary. In short, the power to lay a complaint is an intrinsic part of the chief judge's responsibility in this area and it would not be fitting for the chief judge to act through someone else, whether a judge or a person outside the judiciary, to fulfil his or her obligations in this regard.

9. As such, Motion #4 is multi purposed and in the public interest as per the explicit language therein. This technological augmentation is intended to mitigate the cognitive burden on the judiciary, allowing for a more fluid extrapolation of legal principles and a more efficient verification of the cited jurisprudence.
10. Obviously, whatever complaint process of the President of the Divisional Court purview is not my prerogative to know but nonetheless part of my duty (moral, ethical, legal or otherwise) to assist in the public interest so others do not suffer in the same or similar

IV. CLOSING REMARKS

10. It is the Applicant's anticipation that the self-evident nature of the enclosed materials, coupled with the rigorous adherence to the governing statutes and Rules of Civil Procedure, RRO 1990, Reg 194 (the "Rules"), despite certain processes being frustrated will assist the Divisional Court in resolving the pending motions without further delay.
11. I confirm that as of today's date, the Registrars, court staff and court clerks of the Executive Branch (MAG), have NOT opposed any relief sought herein.

Respectfully submitted,
/s/Mr. Kevin A. McLean (BA, JD, CIM)

PRIVATE AND CONFIDENTIAL
VIA ELECTRONIC TRANSMISSION
DATE: December 31, 2025
TO: The Superior Court of Justice — Divisional Court (the "Divisional Court")
ATTENTION: The President of the Divisional Court (the "President")
SUBJECT I: CONFIRMATION THAT THE ONLY POTENTIAL CORRECT EMAIL COORDINATES OF MS. IBULA IS NOT ACTIVE WITH THE ONTARIO GOVERNMENT
SUBJECT II: RESERVATION OF RIGHTS IN RELATION TO SUBJECT I
SUBJECT III: DEMAND IN PERPETUITY FOR THE REGISTRAR OF THE DIVISIONAL COURT AS REPRESENTED BY FORMER REGISTRAR GENTLES

Dear Divisional Court of Ontario:

I. INTRODUCTION

I cordially write regarding the above. I adopt all definitions from previously, indirectly or directly, cited correspondence.

II. FACTUAL ANTECEDENTS AND THE STATUS OF MS. EVELYNE IBULA

It has been ascertained, through diligent inquiry, that the electronic mail address previously associated with Ms. Evelyne Ibula (the "Ibula Email") no longer constitutes an active conduit for communication. Perforce, a comprehensive examination of the signature block utilized by the individual (see: Appendix #1), which notably omitted any telephonic contact information during her representation as the "Assistant Trial Coordinator" (the "Coordinator Role") in January 2025, militates toward the conclusion that Ms. Ibula was neither a permanent employee nor a contractually retained agent of the Divisional Court at the material time.

The undersigned has copied and pasted the relevant information from the "Delivery Status Notification" (Failure):

Mail Delivery Subsystem <mailer-daemon@googlemail.com> 4:58 PM (1 hour ago)

to me

Address not found

Your message wasn't delivered to evelyne.ibula@ontario.ca because the address couldn't be found

The undersigned herein places reliance upon publicly accessible jurisprudence, Cover Letter regarding mail filed Motion Record #4 at page 4, (the "Ibula Jurisprudence") which references Ms. Ibula in capacities distinct from the public service (see: Appendix #1). Consequently, the Ibula Email has been expunged from all current and prospective itineraries of communication.

III. SYLLOGISTIC EVALUATION OF CONFLICTS AND ADMINISTRATIVE PROPRIETY

The revelation that Ms. Ibula's recent professional affiliations were tethered to Martin Barristers (the "Private Firm")—an entity situated at the identical municipal address and suite as counsel for Mrs. Aphrodite Artopoulos—in conjunction with the actions of Mr. David Karat of the Respondent Insurance Companies (collectively the "Respondents") regarding the McLean Property (the "Property"), engenders profound apprehension. Such a nexus necessitates the immediate attention of the President in light of the multifaceted supervisory obligations articulated in Ruffo v. Conseil de la magistrature, [1995] 4 SCR 267 (the "Ruffo").

The principles elucidated in Ruffo have been unequivocally adopted by the Federal Court of Appeal in Canadian Judicial Council v. Girouard, 2019 FCA 148 (the "Girouard"), at paragraph 42. Ipso facto, the Chief Justice, in the capacity of President, possesses an inherent mandate to investigate the circumstances surrounding the ad hoc emergence of Ms. Ibula within the administrative architecture of the Court, particularly as her involvement appears coincident with the purported compulsory case conference requirements mandated by Madam Justice Shore.

IV. STATUTORY ANALYSIS OF THE PUBLIC SERVICE OF ONTARIO ACT AND COURTS OF JUSTICE ACT

While the Deputy Attorney General (the "DAG"), acting as the Commissioner under the Public Service of Ontario Act, 2006, SO 2006, c 35, Sched A (the "PSOA"), maintains the ultra vires power to terminate or deem abandoned the positions of unionized employees of the Ontario Public Service Employees Union (the "OPSEU"), such statutory authority does not preclude the President from discharging the delicate obligation of investigating "colleagues," as envisioned by the Supreme Court of Canada in Ruffo. Furthermore, the Courts of Justice Act, RSO 1990, c C.43 (the "CJA"), under section 73(2) and 73(2.1), permits the DAG or a designate to assign duties to persons regardless of their appointment status under the PSOA. It remains a matter of grave concern whether Former Registrar Gentles (the "Former Registrar") attempted to vest Ms. Ibula with such authority in limine. There exists a palpable necessity for a "cooling off" period for individuals transitioning from private advocacy within the same jurisdictional region to roles within the Divisional Court administrative apparatus.

Should it be determined that the assignment of Ms. Ibula was procedurally defective or otherwise prima facie improper, the undersigned reserves the right to seek the unwinding or setting aside of all derivative steps, documents, or unmade orders as a matter of status quo ante.

V. CONCLUSION AND RESERVATION OF RIGHTS

This comprehensive missive is intended for the direct perusal, jointly, of the President; however, in light of the erosion of faith and confidence—and presumably that of the public where similar contraventions have transpired—I shall transmit the final two electronic communications and the respective attachment via facsimile, as performed heretofore. I shall continue to exercise ex abundanti cautela and due diligence regarding these administrative anomalies. I reserve the absolute right to rely upon this correspondence for any lawful purpose.

As Motion #4 remains unopposed, I shall refrain from seeking costs at this juncture. Although it was previously intimated that an "army" was being marshalled against the interests of the undersigned, the supremacy of the Constitution Act, 1982, the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, and the overarching rule of law ensures that the legal apparatus remains the ultimate arbiter. It is suggested that this multi-jurisdictional army, formed ad hoc for the purpose of my destruction, directs its focus toward a comprehension of the Canadian legal system. To the extent they possess such knowledge—which appears improbable given their sparse attempts at legal analysis culminating in a variety of sophisms and fallacious syllogisms—they should attempt to prevail on a balance of probabilities rather than through the manipulation of documentation and the utilization of various criminal law enforcement divisions.

The undersigned maintains that the preservation of legal integrity outweighs individual mortality. With a valid will and power of attorney, I am prepared to persevere through extreme incapacity, serious impairments, and disabilities inclusive of death. If such a stand is not taken, particularly given the perceived threat that the state may turn upon practitioners while the Attorney General of Ontario holds a prominent role under the Law Society Act, RSO 1990, c L.8, the public interest will suffer irretrievably. Consequently, the Divisional Court need not anticipate a potential settlement, as a confidential and non-disclosable resolution serves no public good. Oddly, this allows me a certain lacuna or opening to have evened the scales of justice which underscores the nefarious and unlawful efforts by the MAG, TPS, OPP et al that have tried and have delayed justice. Nonetheless, the rule of law must be adhered to. The inference regarding the ad hoc inclusion of Ms. Ibula suggests that employees of the Ministry of the Attorney General (the "MAG") within the Divisional Court possessed knowledge of an undisclosed ex parte in camera hearing judge who authorized an arrest warrant and were, understandably, hesitant to communicate with the undersigned. I welcome any written opposition to my beliefs while the sources of my beliefs have been highly particularized.

Finally, a formal demand is hereby reiterated that the current Registrar of the Divisional Court (see: Appendix #2) discharge all non-discretionary public legal duties necessitated by the omissions of the Former Registrar, specifically regarding the systemic failure to ensure communication channels remained unobstructed. It is demanded that all outstanding submitted filings are processed without delay and forthwith.

I thank the President of the Divisional Court in advance for discharging the duty to direct the Registrar, court clerks, and other court staff in matters encompassing Motion #4, all of which are assigned by law to the judiciary and only to the judiciary.

A blessed and Happy New Year to all herein and beyond.

Yours most appreciatively and gratefully,

/s/Mr. Kevin A. McLean (BA, JD, CIM)

VII. Non-opposing Respondents (by virtue of their failure to comply with the explicit language in Form 68A of the Rules of Civil Procedure et al) and prohibited by law to have filed or presented any evidence or submissions in the JRPA Proceeding by the same explicit language in Form 68A: in style of cause
VIII. Responding Parties in relation to Motion #4: the Former Registrar and Current Registrar of the Divisional Court (collectively, the "Divisional Court Registrars")

SUBJECT I: CONFIRMATION – MAIL FILING (SEE: RULE 4.05(5) OF THE RULES OF CIVIL PROCEDURE) – MOTION RECORD #4

Dear Sirs/Mesdames/Other Gender-Neutral Pronouns:

I. INTRODUCTION AND DEFINITIONS

1. I cordially write regarding the above. I adopt all definitions from previously, indirectly or directly, cited correspondence.

2. For the purposes of this communication, the Rules of Civil Procedure, RRO 1990, Reg 194, shall be referred to as (the "Rules"). The motion record filed via postal services on the date hereof shall be referred to as (the "Motion Record #4"). The collective administrative leadership, former and current of the court shall be referred to as (the "Registrars").

II. FILING AND STATUTORY OBLIGATIONS

3. It is observed, ex abundanti cautela, that in light of persistent and profound irregularities concerning the failure of the Registrars to discharge their public legal duties—which are unequivocally statutory and prescribed in nature according to the letter of the law—Motion Record #4 was dispatched and finally effected via mail-filing (see: Rule 4.05(5) of the Rules of Civil Procedure) to the Divisional Court this morning (the "Filing"). This proactive measure is necessitated by the requirement to preserve the integrity of the judicial process and to ensure that the Moving Party's rights are not attenuated by administrative inertia or procedural circumvention.

4. Ipso facto, the Office of the Registrar is under a non-discretionary and mandatory obligation to exigently and expeditiously affix the judicial stamp to Motion Record #4, effective as of the date of this correspondence, pursuant to the strictures of Rule 4.05(5) of the Rules. Any deviation from this prescribed duty would constitute a departure from the status quo ante and potentially invite a finding of ultra vires conduct regarding the administrative handling of the record.

5. To preclude any potential for jurisdictional ambiguity, or subsequent disputation regarding the receipt of the Filing, the attached Canada Post tracking identifier (the "Tracking Documentation") serves as prima facie evidence of delivery. This documentation ensures that the relevant and sole court office cannot maintain a vacuum of information or assert a lack of knowledge regarding the receipt of a document that has been "filed by mail" under the auspices of Rule 4.05(6) of the Rules. The temporal certainty provided by the Tracking Documentation is conclusive and rebuts any assertion of non-receipt.

III. SERVICE AND PREVIOUS CORRESPONDENCE

6. It is further confirmed that, inter alia, the substantive application and underlying legal syllogisms supporting Motion #4 were initiated and "made" on December 23, 2025, and concurrently served upon the Registrars in their official capacity. The efficacy of this service is absolute, thereby placing the Registrars on constructive and actual notice of the relief sought and the evidentiary basis contained therein.

7. Furthermore, the Draft Order and Motion #4 Factum, defined infra, were transmitted via facsimile to the President of the Divisional Court (the "President"). This transmission was executed to facilitate the President's requisite and urgent adjudication and deliberation of the relief sought, with specific reference to the Factum or Written Submission for Motion #4 (the "Factum") and the accompanying Draft Order. These transmissions occurred with precise regularity on the following occasions:

a. December 23, 2025, at 18:42 hours; and
b. December 23, 2025, at 23:17 hours.

8. Such repetitive notification underscores the urgency of the matter and ensures that the judicial mind is fully seized of the complexities and the necessitated interventions required to prevent a miscarriage of justice or an inequitable delay in the proceedings.

IV. Conclusion

9. The language and specific relief articulated within the Motion #4 Draft Order remain entirely applicable, relevant, and efficacious as of the current date.

10. It is salient to observe that there has been an absence of any countervailing submissions or formal opposition from the Responding Parties, rendering the requested relief effectively unopposed and the conclusions therein self-evident.

11. In strict and unwavering adherence to the Rules, it is respectfully requested and required (see: language in requisition form) that the Office of the Registrar provide a copy of the Order once it has been made, issued, and entered into the judicial record of proceedings for this JRPA Proceeding.

12. Should the President of the Divisional Court require any refinements, clarifications, or in limine modifications to the instrument to better reflect the Court's intent, the undersigned remains available to redraft the same. This ensures that the final document is entirely congruent with the Court's findings and the high standards of stylistic elegance expected in such high-stakes, generally and specifically, and public interest litigation, prior to its subsequent filing and entry into the record of proceeding.

13. Otherwise, I shall presume, reliance on the adverse inference doctrine, that I have complied, in light of the lack of necessity of a Form 37A along with the frustration of the process with electronic filings with the OCPP and the circumstances dictating the absence of a Form 37A, that Motion #4 and its relief sought in the form a hard copy made, provided and served Draft Order via email and fax, and "mail filed" is decided without opposition to the relief sought.

14. Should the Divisional Court and the President of the Divisional Court require any further clarification or assistance in this regard, I remain available via this email.

15. Thank you kindly.

Respectfully submitted:

Dear Sirs/Mesdames/Other Gender-Neutral Pronouns:

I write to you on an urgent and extraordinary basis, compelled by circumstances that threaten to render the judicial process a nullity. I repeat, rely upon, and incorporate by reference the entirety of the relevant correspondence previously submitted to this Court as though fully set out herein. The situation has reached a critical juncture where the administration of justice is being systematically obstructed by a combination of technical failure, registrarial paralysis, and institutional silence.

The Digital Blockade and the "403 Forbidden" Exclusion: I confirm that as of today's date, there continues to be a persistent and impenetrable "403 Forbidden Error Code" whenever I attempt to access the Ontario Public Courts Portal (OCPP) using my designated email, password, and verification codes. In technical terms, a "403 Forbidden" error signifies that the web server understood the request but affirmatively refuses to authorize access to the requested resource. It indicates that the user lacks the necessary permissions—functioning as a locked door even when the litigant possesses the correct key.

This digital blockade is not a generalized system outage but appears to be a targeted and deliberate exclusion. Through rigorous comparative testing conducted for investigative purposes, I have confirmed that other OCPP accounts remain fully accessible from the same IP address and hardware configuration. However, my specific credentials result in an immediate and absolute refusal. This "digital excommunication" represents a "smoking gun" of administrative interference, occurring precisely as critical litigation deadlines approach. It is a violation of the fundamental principle that digital infrastructure must serve the law, not function as a weapon for "digital gatekeeping" to exclude specific litigants from their constitutional right to be heard. To deny a litigant their digital portal is to effectively evict them from the modern courthouse.

The Administrative Vacuum and Registrarial Absence: While I acknowledge that Ms. Roxanne Parris has served as Acting Registrar since December 3, 2025, there appears to be a total breakdown in institutional continuity. I have verified through direct telephonic inquiry that Successor Registrar Gentles has been absent since December 10, 2025, with an expected return only on January 9, 2026. This month-long absence, occurring during the returnable period for Notice of Motion #3, has left the Registry in a state of functional paralysis. I have preserved an audio recording of the official voicemail message confirming this absence as evidentiary proof of the "institutional silence" currently pervading the Registry.

This administrative vacuum, coupled with the unexplained 403 technical lockout, constitutes a "constructive closure" of the courthouse. When a litigant cannot file, cannot speak to a Registrar, and cannot receive confirmations of service, the rule of law is effectively suspended. The combined effect of these factors creates a "legal vacuum" where rights are asserted in a void but never adjudicated, effectively insulating administrative decisions from judicial review. This is not merely a matter of administrative convenience; it is a substantive prerequisite for a functioning democracy that the state remains subject to the superintending authority of an independent judicature.

Constitutional Imperatives and the Core Jurisdiction of the SCJ: In light of the ongoing 403 Error Code, I respectfully require and demand that this technical barrier be rectified forthwith and by no later than the close of this business day. Access to justice is an inviolable constitutional principle (TLABC v. BC, 2014 SCC 59). In the 21st century, access to the Superior Court is synonymous with digital access; to extinguish a litigant's ability to file effectively is to render the constitutional promise of access a dead letter. This blockade represents an unconstitutional attempt by the Executive Branch to achieve indirectly what it is barred from doing directly: ousting the "Core Jurisdiction" of the Superior Court as protected under Section 96 of the Constitution Act, 1867. Any administrative policy or registrarial "standard operating procedure" that conflicts with these constitutional mandates is, ipso facto, of no force or effect.

Enclosures, Versioning (V4), and the Piecemeal Record: Please find enclosed the Draft Order for Motion #5 (dated January 12, 2026). I have designated this Draft Order as "V" (Version 3). For purposes of good faith and full disclosure, should updated evidence or status changes require a subsequent revision to bring the status current, I will entitle the same "V5" for ease of reference. This staggered delivery is necessitated by the insurmountable technical barriers I am currently facing, which have forced me to resort to physical mail-filing and facsimile transmissions to preserve my rights. I expressly confirm that I will maintain the highest substantive standards of legal argument in my Factum, maintaining the integrity of the record in spite of the technical non-compliance forced upon me.

PARTICULARIZED LIST OF THE TWENTY-ONE (21) ORDERS SOUGHT IN DRAFT ORDER (V3)

The Applicant seeks the following specific orders to restore the Rule of Law and ensure institutional integrity:

I. DISPENSATION AND ABRIDGMENT OF TIME

1. DISPENSATION OF FORM 37A: That the requirement for a formal Notice of Motion (Form 37A) for this Motion #5 be dispensed with, necessitated by the insurmountable technical barriers of the "403 Forbidden Error Code" which has effectively severed the Applicant's primary means of service.
2. ABRIDGMENT OF TIME: That the time for service and filing be abridged, declaring this motion properly returnable this day, January 12, 2026, to address the urgent need for judicial oversight over the digital and administrative components of this litigation.
3. NUNC PRO TUNC ORDERS: That all orders involving timing and filing relating to this matter be granted nunc pro tunc, ensuring the record is perfected despite the administrative failures encountered by the Applicant.

II. JUDICIAL ASSIGNMENT AND INSTITUTIONAL OVERSIGHT 4. SELF-ASSIGNMENT BY THE PRESIDENT: That the President of the Divisional Court self-assign this proceeding to his own jurisdiction. This is vital to prevent a miscarriage of justice necessitated by the inextricable nexus between the matters at hand and the requirement for the highest level of judicial oversight to restore public confidence. 5. RELIEF OF JUSTICE SHORE: That Madam Justice Shore be relieved from all duties involving the Applicant to maintain the appearance of total judicial impartiality and ensure the merits of the JRPA proceeding are not obscured by collateral disputes regarding judicial conduct.

III. SECTION 76 OF THE CJA AND CONSTITUTIONAL ACCESS 6. MANDATORY RECTIFICATION OF OCPP: That IT administrators immediately rectify the "403 Forbidden" status, including whitelisting the Applicant's IP address and restoring full electronic filing and retrieval privileges. 7. PROVISION OF IT CONTACT: That court staff provide an individual email contact for the IT department to troubleshoot the 403 issue in the event that the technological court staff cannot fix the same. 8. PRODUCTION OF ACCESS LOGS: That the OCCP manager and Registrar provide the President with all relevant logs regarding the Applicant's access attempts to determine exactly when and why the blockade commenced. 9. ALTERNATIVE EMAIL FILING: That until the 403 error is fixed, the Applicant is entitled to file via email to the Registry and Acting Registrar Roxanne Parris, with documents deemed filed at the time of transmission. 10. DECLARATION OF CONSTRUCTIVE DENIAL: A declaration that digital disenfranchisement constitutes a "constructive denial of the right to be heard" (audi alteram partem) and a breach of the Core Jurisdiction of the SCJ as protected under Section 96.

IV. ACCESS TO COURT RECORDINGS, DOCUMENTS, AND INFORMATION ASSETS 11. COPIES OF RECORDINGS: That the SCJ Recording Management Office provide copies of digital recordings for all case conferences for which a Request Form Undertaking has been submitted and payment remitted. 12. PROVISION TO TRANSCRIPTIONIST: That the RMO provide the Applicant's authorized transcriptionist (ATO) with the specific tapes and materials required for the production of certified transcripts. 13. ACCESS TO "UNDISCLOSED CRIMINAL PROCEEDING": That staff provide immediate access to requested documents in their custody related to relevant criminal proceedings, to the extent such documents are relevant to the grounds of judicial review. 14. "NON-FIPPA" ACCESS: That staff at any SCJ courthouse provide access to requested documents and information assets, recognizing that the "open court principle" extends to administrative records necessary to verify procedural regularity. 15. 48-HOUR RESPONSE MANDATE: That court staff and Registrars respond to the Applicant within 48 hours to compensate for significant procedural delays and ensure the Applicant is not further marginalized by administrative silence. 16. ITEMIZED FEE ESTIMATES: That the Registrar provide detailed, itemized estimates of costs for document access. If not provided within 48 hours, such fees shall be deemed waived. V. ADJUDICATION AND GENERAL PROVISIONS 17. IMMEDIATE ANNOUNCEMENT ORDER: That the President pronounce determinations regarding Motions #3, #4, and #5 immediately, with comprehensive, detailed reasons to follow. 18. MOOTNESS OF PRIOR ORDERS: That to the extent these orders dispose of any other orders, the relief sought in other motions is rendered moot. 19. IMMEDIATE EFFECT: That this Order be effective immediately and settled/signed solely by the President without requirement for approval as to form or content by defaulting Respondents. 20. PRESIDENTIAL SIGNATURE: That only the President may sign this order, with formal issuing to be completed by the Registrar's office forthwith and without delay. 21. LEAVE TO SEEK DIRECTIONS: That the Applicant is granted leave to seek further directions or submit evidence to assist the Court with the status of these orders.

EXPANDED SUMMARY OF FACTUM OR WRITTEN SUBMISSION IN SUPPORT (MOTION #5)

THE "CONSTRUCTIVE CLOSURE" DOCTRINE & THE ADMINISTRATIVE LEVIATHAN This Motion seeks extraordinary intervention to remedy a state of "digital excommunication." As established in TLABC v. BC, access to justice is the skeletal framework upon which the body of Canadian constitutionalism is draped. The "403 Forbidden Error Code" represents a unilateral administrative act that renders the constitutional promise of access a dead letter. When the Executive Branch—through its control of court services—interferes with the Judicial Branch's ability to hear a case, it strikes at the heart of the separation of powers. This is a "Chief's Case" (R. v. Baldovi, 2016 MBQB 90), requiring the President to act as the ultimate guarantor of the Court's institutional reputation in the face of executive overreach.

INSTITUTIONAL INTEGRITY & THE "FALSE INFORMATION PACKAGE"

This letter and the Factum addresses a factual matrix of systemic fraudulent conduct, including identity fraud and forged signatures on equipment loan agreements (e.g., the Epstein Cole TPL loan). Central to this motion is the discovery of a "False Information Package" containing fraudulent court documents and the unauthorized involvement of Justice Shore in unrecorded ex parte proceedings. These anomalies threaten the appearance of total judicial impartiality. The "independence of the judiciary" is not a privilege for judges, but a shield for the public; institutional silence in the face of bribery and forgery constitutes a surrender of supervisory jurisdiction.

THE DIGITAL BARRICADE & THE RULE OF LAW VS. THE RULE OF MEN (see: Timm v. Canada (BOA, Tab 135)

Access to justice transcends mere administrative grace; it is a substantive prerequisite for a functioning democracy. The Rule of Law is supplanted by a "rule of men" if administrative officials decide who shall have access to the court through server-side blacklisting. Pursuant to 407 ETR v. Ontario, 2005 CanLII 49963 (Div. Ct.), the Registrar's duty to process documents is a ministerial duty with no residual discretion. The digital blockade functions as "litigation by attrition," intended to wear down the Applicant's resolve through administrative "stonewalling" and the creation of a "digital underclass" of litigants.

PART 4: THE PRESIDENT AS CUSTOS ROTULORUM & MANDAMUS (CONDITIONAL UPON THE INITIAL SECTION 76 OF THE CJA ORDER) (Ruffo, Baldovi and others (see: BOA, Tabs 64 and 69)

The Chief Justice/President possesses the unique "moral authority" to protect the "constitutional trust" (Ruffo v. Conseil de la magistrature). This role requires intervention when "shadow assignments" or registrarial paralysis threaten the Court's institutional integrity. The Applicant seeks a Writ of Mandamus to compel the performance of ministerial duties, including the production of case recordings for which payment has been retained without service—a manifest breach of the "contract of administration." Only the President can pierce the "administrative fog" and ensure that the courtroom gates are reopened.

ALL OF WHICH IS RESPECTFULLY SUBMITTED this 12th day of January, 2026.

Dear Sirs/Mesdames/Other Gender-Neutral Pronouns:

I. INTRODUCTION AND PROCEDURAL PREAMBLE

I cordially write regarding the above. I adopt all definitions from previously, indirectly or directly, cited correspondence and filed instruments. This correspondence is intended to serve as a formal bridge between the physical filings already in the possession of the Divisional Court and the digital exigencies necessitated by the current technological impasse. It constitutes a deliberate act of procedural preservation, ensuring that the record of these proceedings reflects the Moving Party’s unwavering commitment to the Rule of Law (the “ROL”) despite the systemic obstructions encountered.

II. TRANSMISSION OF EXECUTORY INSTRUMENTS AND RESTORATIVE ENCLOSURES

Please find appended hereto the following instruments which were submitted for mail filing on the morning of January 14, 2026, as evidenced by the Canada Post Tracking Attachment (the “Tracking Confirmation”) provided infra. Each document serves as a vital component in the overarching architecture of the Moving Party's pursuit of a meritorious adjudication:

1. Draft Order for Notice of Motion #3 (Liability) (the “NOM #3 Liability Order”): A foundational instrument designed to resolve the threshold questions of liability that have remained in a state of administrative suspended animation for an unacceptable duration.
2. Draft Order for Notice of Motion #3 (Costs) (the “NOM #3 Costs Order”): An essential restorative measure intended to address the significant disbursements and full-indemnity costs incurred through the protracted procedural history and the necessity for repeated mitigatory filings.
3. Draft Order for Motion #4 (the “Motion #4 Order”): Provided herein as courtesy copies, having been previously mail filed, this order seeks to compel the Current Registrar to discharge the statutory and ministerial duties mandated by the Courts of Justice Act, R.S.O. 1990, c. C.43 (the "CJA").

4. Draft Order for Motion #5 (the "Motion #5 Order"): A sophisticated request for judicial self-assignment and technical remediation, ensuring the functional efficacy of the court's process and the protection of the Moving Party's right to be heard.
5. Factum in Support of Motion #5 (the "Motion #5 Factum"): Meticulously prepared in hyperlinked and bookmarked fashion, this document provides an intricate extrapolation of the legal principles governing the core jurisdiction of the superior courts and the constitutional necessity of access.

Concomitantly, copies of the following are provided to ensure a complete record of the Moving Party's due diligence:

1. The cover letter dated January 14, 2026 (the "January 14 Correspondence"), which enclosed the aforementioned for mail filing; and
2. The Tracking Confirmation, establishing the precise tempus regit actum of the physical submission and confirming the receipt of these materials by the Divisional Court.

III. MEDICAL EXIGENCY AND THE CONSTITUTIONAL IMPERATIVE FOR ADJUDICATION

As is manifest from the 2025 MRI (the "2025 MRI") and the totality of the medical evidence within the record of proceeding, the physiological condition of the Moving Party undergoes a progressive and non-linear decline. A definitive adjudication upon the merits of the Judicial Review Procedure Act, R.S.O. 1990, c. J.1 (the "JRPA") proceeding is not merely a procedural preference but an imperative of natural justice. This is particularly salient given that the Certificate of Perfection (the "Certificate of Perfection") was duly filed and the requisite fees remitted on December 13, 2024.

Notwithstanding this perfection, there has been a profound and unexplained administrative omission to schedule the JRPA proceeding for a hearing, contrary to the Rules of Civil Procedure, R.R.O. 1990, Reg. 194 (the "Rules") and the solemn oaths of office undertaken by the Divisional Court personnel. This failure to list the matter involves the institutional integrity of this Honourable Divisional Court and falls within the exclusive purview of the President. The Moving Party asserts that any further delay constitutes a de facto denial of the right to be heard, as the window for meaningful recovery or management of health through medical expert opinions continues to narrow. In order for the Moving Party to determine how to manage their health with the benefit of medical expert opinions et al., the legal status of the insurance coverage must be resolved instanter. The status quo ante cannot be restored if the subject of the litigation—the health and viability of the Applicant—is permitted to deteriorate beyond the point of medical remediation due to administrative inertia.

IV. JURISPRUDENTIAL EXTRAPOLATIONS AND ADMINISTRATIVE RECTIFICATION

The deleterious impact of such administrative inertia, compounded by the Respondents' pattern of obfuscation, finds clarity in the observations of the Honourable Justice Akazaki in Zurich Insurance Company Ltd. v. TD Home and Auto Insurance Company, 2025 ONSC 151 (the "Zurich 2025"), where his Honour stated:

"[16] As described in the prevailing appellate decisions, the purpose of this regulation was to prevent SABS claims, including vital treatments and income benefits, from being delayed while insurers fought over priority under s. 268(2) of the Insurance Act."

This syllogism underscores the legislative intent of the Insurance Act, R.S.O. 1990, c. I.8 (the "Insurance Act") and its associated regulations: the facilitation of expeditious relief for the injured. While the Respondents have frequently misled the Divisional Court, the conduct of Ms. Tashekah Gentles (the "Former Registrar Gentles"), in her erstwhile capacity as the leader of the court clerks and staff, has stained the reputation and integrity of the Divisional Court. This administrative malaise must be corrected instanter.

The Moving Party kindly reminds Former Registrar Gentles, appreciating that she was absent from her duties for a duration of one month spanning December 10, 2025, to January 9, 2026, of the necessity of rectifying administrative errors of the past. This mandate includes addressing and attending to the discharge of duties involving requisitions so filed or submitted for filing within the Justice Services Online Portal (the "JSO Portal"). It matters not who was specifically responsible for the original delay; what is paramount from a standpoint of justice is the immediate identification of a First Insurer (the "First Insurer") and the restoration of proper record management through Health Claims for Auto Insurance (the "HCAI") and related protocols. The persistence of this delay serves to subvert the very consumer protection objectives that the Insurance Act was enacted to preserve, effectively allowing administrative dysfunction to trump substantive statutory rights.

V. PROCEDURAL STANDING AND THE DEFICIENCY OF RESPONDING INSTRUMENTS

The Moving Party formally confirms that, as of the date of this correspondence, there has been no filing or delivery of any First Defence (the "First Defence") by any of the Respondents. Consequently, pursuant to the provisions of Form 68A (the "Form 68A") of the Rules, there exists no extant procedural requirement for the Moving Party to serve the Respondents with the current instruments, save for the inherent right of the Attorney General of Ontario (the "AGO") to be heard at the plenary hearing of the JRPA Application.

It is of paramount importance to distinguish that Motions #3 (which encompass Notice of Motion #1 (the "NOM #1") and Notice of Motion #2 (the "NOM #2")) through Motion #5 do not constitute the final hearing of the JRPA Application itself; they are interlocutory restorative measures necessitated by the Respondents' non-compliance and administrative failures. Therefore, the Moving Party's standing to proceed with these motions is unimpeachable, particularly given that the Respondents have effectively abdicated their right to respond by failing to file a First Defence within the timeframes mandated by the Rules.

VI. NON-OPPOSITION TO ADMINISTRATIVE COMPULSION (MOTION #4)

I confirm that the Former Registrar Gentles and the Current Registrar (Acting Registrar) have not opposed the relief sought in Motion #4 (the "Motion #4 Relief") despite being duly served with the same since prior to Christmas Day, specifically on December 23, 2025. Their continued silence and failure to file responding materials constitutes a de facto admission of the administrative deficiencies particularized in the moving materials.

In the law of evidence, such silence in the face of serious allegations often permits an adverse inference, and in this context, it further underscores the necessity for the President to grant the restorative orders sought to compel the discharge of their statutory and judicial duties. The lack of opposition from those tasked with the administration of the court's business suggests a recognition of the procedural failures that Motion #4 seeks to rectify.

VII. THE 403 BARRIER: DIGITAL GATEKEEPING AND THE RULE OF LAW

It is formally confirmed that the 403 Forbidden Error Code (the "403 Barrier") persists as of the date of this correspondence, effectively severing the Moving Party's access to the Ontario Courts Public Portal (the "OCPP"). This digital disenfranchisement is viewed as an impermissible and likely ultra vires encroachment upon the Constitution Act, 1867 (the "1867 Act") and the ROL.

The 403 Barrier, if not corrected forthwith and/or ordered to be corrected by this Honourable Court, may necessitate the formal intervention of the Auditor General of Ontario (the "Auditor General") to investigate the systemic failure of the court's digital infrastructure and the potential misappropriation of administrative authority. While the Moving Party maintains the utmost respect for the considerable resources and competing demands upon the President, these matters are unprecedented in nature, involving serious allegations of fraud, bribery, and extortion. These concerns are compounded by various misrepresentations made to the Moving Party by previous court staff, some of whom are no longer employed in their current roles. While the Moving Party is empathetic to any personal loss experienced by these individuals, the institutional integrity of the Divisional Court must remain the paramount consideration.

In light of the landmark determination in Trial Lawyers Association of British Columbia v. British Columbia (Attorney General), 2014 SCC 59 (the "TLABC 2014"), it is a settled principle that access to the superior courts is a constitutionalized prerequisite for the maintenance of the ROL. The 403 Barrier functions as an unconstitutional gatekeeper, preventing the Moving Party from exercising the core right of access to the judiciary. The integrity of the Divisional Court depends upon its transparency; a "forbidden" screen is the antithesis of the open court principle and risks creating a tiered system of justice where only those with specific digital permissions may seek relief.

VIII. THE ROLE OF THE PRESIDENT AS PRIMUS INTER PARES

The circumstances particularized herein require the immediate and sustained attention of the President. It is respectfully submitted that the relief sought in the draft orders falls within the exclusive supervisory jurisdiction of the President in his capacity as the primus inter pares of the Divisional Court and the ultimate guardian of its functional efficacy. The Moving Party seeks the granting of relief in substantially the same form as the draft orders to ensure the due execution of office and prevent a multiplicity of proceedings.

It is further confirmed that the Honourable Madam Justice Shore (the "Justice Shore") is to have no involvement in the adjudication or management of this matter. Any such involvement would be viewed as a violation of judicial duties and a breach of the requirements for an impartial tribunal. It is asserted that Justice Shore must be relieved of all duties, specifically if not generally, pending comprehensive investigations into the conduct particularized in the Motion #5 Factum. The Moving Party contends that the removal of Justice Shore from this file is a mandatory step to preserve the appearance of judicial impartiality and to restore public confidence in the administration of justice within this region.

IX. FISCAL CONSIDERATIONS AND THE EFFICACY OF MOTION #5

The Moving Party expresses a profound reluctance to seek costs against the public purse (the "Public Purse"), cognisant that such expenditures are drawn from taxpayer resources. I would loathe to seek costs against the Public Purse as it is taxpayer money, but I have paid Prescribed Fees (the "Prescribed Fees") continuously without the law being followed.

As noted, Motion #5 will assist the Public Purse through the power of the robe in avoiding a multiplicity of proceedings and having to follow up on outstanding obligations of various persons. By centralizing these restorative measures and providing the President with the tools to rectify the technological and administrative failures in a single, comprehensive order, the court can mitigate the long-term fiscal impact of continued litigation and administrative rework. The granting of Motion #5 represents the most economically and procedurally efficient path forward for all stakeholders, including the public whose taxes fund the judiciary.

X. CONCLUSION AND RESERVATION OF RIGHTS

The Moving Party remains available should the President require clarification in relation to any of the instruments mail filed with the Divisional Court or contained in the record of proceeding by filings within the JSO Portal. Furthermore, the Moving Party remains available to finalize a fulsome book of authorities and a hyperlinked index to follow this transmission.

Should the continued silence in the face of these grave administrative and constitutional concerns remain, the Moving Party reserves all rights to ensure that the President has full notice of the same so he can discharge his responsibilities to the public and the legal profession. I reserve the right to include all correspondence into further evidence and seek costs and full indemnification for the disbursements necessitated by this forced reliance on physical mail filing as a measure of mitigation against digital exclusion.

Yours most appreciatively and gratefully,

/S/ Mr. Kevin A. McLean (BA, JD, CIM)

II. Short Style of Cause: McLean v. TD Home and Auto Insurance Company, et al. (the "McLean* Proceeding")
III. Subject I: McLean v. TD Home and Auto Insurance Company, et al. (Court File No. DC-24-00000718-00JR)
IV. Subject II: Comprehensive Expansion of the Electronic Book of Authorities and Formal Submissions regarding Jurisdictional Vitiation, Administrative Mandamus, the Remediation of Procedural Nullities, and the Preservation of the Open Court Principle.
Dear Sirs/Mesdames/Other Gender-Neutral Pronouns:

I cordially write regarding the above. The undersigned adopts all definitions from previously, indirectly or directly, cited correspondence.

I. PRELIMINARY TRANSMISSION OF ELECTRONIC COMPENDIA AND THE CONSTITUTIONAL IMPLICATIONS OF TECHNOLOGICAL VICISSITUDES It is with distinct professional gratification and a steadfast commitment to the efficiency of the curia that a comprehensive Book of Authorities (the "BOA") is provided to this Honourable Court in an electronic format, meticulously bifurcated by indexed tabs and enumerated pagination. The undersigned has done the utmost to confine the volume of pages within these authorities to relevant passages, executive summaries, and essential pages to ensure judicial economy and facilitate an expeditious review, thereby avoiding the presentation of superfluous data. To the extent that further authorities would assist this Honourable Divisional Court and the Honourable Divisional Court President, I will provide them by referencing the version and date.

Owing to the substantial magnitude of the digital data comprising these authorities, which encompass several decades of binding appellate jurisprudence and complex statutory instruments, the BOA shall be transmitted via successive electronic mail attachments. This incremental delivery is necessitated to circumvent the constraints of digital throughput and server-side limitations inherent in the current judicial infrastructure. The undersigned hereby confirms the persistence and validity of all prior testamentary filings delivered via physical post, which remain the primary record of truth and the definitive evidentiary foundation of this application, notwithstanding these supplemental digital transmissions.
Furthermore, a contemporaneous verification shall be conducted to ascertain the status of the "403 Forbidden" error code (the "Access Impediment") currently plaguing the digital filing interface. This technological obstruction constitutes a prima facie barrier to the administration of justice and a fundamental frustration of the litigant's right to file and be heard within a reasonable timeframe. The "Open Court Principle" (the "Open Court Principle") is rendered illusory if the electronic portal serves as a digital blockade rather than a gateway. I note that the credit card payment remains in a finalized transaction status (the "Finalized Payment") for the motion, yet the administrative processing remains in a state of stasis, suggesting a disconnect between the financial and procedural arms of the Registry. The implications of this blockade are not merely technical but constitutional in nature, as they impede the movement of a proceeding toward its rightful adjudication and create a state of procedural ossification.
Should this administrative paralysis remain unresolved by the meridian of the forthcoming Monday, a formal application shall be commenced to seek the indemnification of substantial costs and disbursements necessitated by this forced procedural detour and the resulting expenditure of legal resources. This technological gatekeeping results in a disparate impact on those seeking judicial review, effectively creating a procedural lacuna that prejudices the Applicant and privileges the administrative inertia of the Respondents. The state's failure to maintain a functional digital infrastructure is a form of administrative negligence that cannot be permitted to viciate the substantive rights of the parties or the integrity of the status quo ante.

II. JURISDICTIONAL INFELICITY AND THE VITIATION OF THE CASE MANAGEMENT DIRECTIVE

An exacting historical exegesis of the Rules of Civil Procedure, R.R.O. 1990, Reg. 194 (the "Rules") reveals that the procedural maneuvers executed by the Honourable Madam Justice Shore (the "Interlocutory Justice") constitute a profound departure from the post-2010 legal landscape. It is submitted that the purported directives are not merely irregular but are void ab initio, representing a nullity upon a nullity. The jurisdiction to invoke the mechanism of case management is strictly contingent upon the satisfaction of the filing of a first defence (the "Filing Requirement") pursuant to Rule 77.05.

In the context of an application for judicial review under the Judicial Review Procedure Act (the "JRPA"), this jurisdictional predicate is analogous to the delivery of a Notice of Appearance (the "NOA"). As the Respondents failed to effectuate the delivery of their respective NOAs with requisite proof of service, the court remained divested of the statutory authority to trigger case management. The principle of ex debito justitiae dictates that no court may assume a management function over parties who have not yet submitted to the jurisdiction of the court through the requisite responsive pleadings. To allow a judge to "manage" a file where no party has appeared is to invite a form of judicial overreach that subverts the adversarial foundations of our legal system. Jurisdictional competence is not a matter of judicial convenience but a requirement of natural justice (audi alteram partem). The absence of an NOA means the Respondents have no locus standi; ergo, there are no "sides" to manage, and the attempt to do so is a jurisdictional felo de se.
To suggest that there have been profound transgressions of ethics, statutes (inclusive of the Constitution of Canada), regulations, and foundational ethical requirements would be an understatement; indeed, it constitutes a fundamental erosion of procedural due process. The fons et origo of this error lies in the assumption that judicial discretion can override the mandatory statutory preconditions for case management. Consequently, the purported assignment and the subsequent directive issued on January 7, 2025 (the "January Directive"), were executed ultra vires. The law does not permit a tribunal to "manage" parties into compliance; rather, procedural compliance remains the sine qua non for the invocation of management authority. To permit the January Directive to stand would be to endorse a jurisdictional overreach that undermines the structural integrity of the Rules. The court cannot grant itself jurisdiction through a case management order when the statutory preconditions for that order have not been met. This failure to adhere to the ratio decidendi of the Rules creates a procedural vacuum that threatens the stability of the entire proceeding and necessitates an immediate restitutio in integrum to return the parties to their rightful procedural positions.

III. THE PARADIGMATIC "CULTURE SHIFT" AND THE MISAPPLICATION OF RULE 77 A general question of law of central importance arises regarding the undisclosed prior judicial involvement (the "UPJI") of a presiding member and whether such an omission constitutes a fraud upon the court. The 2010 reforms inaugurated a categorical "Culture Shift" (the "Culture Shift") in Ontario litigation, prioritizing proportionality and the mitigation of administrative "over-administration." This shift was intended to facilitate the "resolution of the dispute on the merits," as articulated in Hryniak v. Mauldin, 2014 SCC 7 (the "Hryniak Decision"). However, Rule 77.01(1) provides for judicial intervention only where a demonstrated necessity exists, yet here, the intervention occurred in a vacuum of procedural standing. The "Culture Shift" was never intended to serve as a license for judicial officers to bypass the foundational requirements of the Rules or to ignore the mandatory hierarchy of procedural steps.

Pursuant to Rule 77.02(4), the provisions of Rule 77 maintain paramountcy over all conflicting Rules, including Rule 50. In the instant McLean Proceeding, no valid assignment under Rule 77.05 or Rule 77.06 transpired. Ergo, the direction issued via the "Ibula Email" on January 7, 2025, lacked legal validity as:

(i) no Filing Requirement was satisfied, leaving the court without a functional record to manage;
(ii) no exercise of discretion under Rule 77.05(4) was manifest, recorded, or justified by any exceptional circumstance; and
(iii) the Respondents, having failed to "deliver" their NOAs, forfeited their standing to participate in any procedural steps, let alone a case management conference.

This misapplication of Rule 77 creates an untenable precedent wherein administrative convenience is elevated above the mandatory strictures of the Rules. The consequence of "over-administration" is the creation of an administrative straitjacket that stifles substantive justice under the guise of efficiency. Management without pleadings is akin to a trial without a jury where the law requires both. Without the Filing Requirement being met, any attempt at "management" is a hollow exercise in procedural fiction that fails to satisfy the prima facie requirements of the law. This is the very definition of procedural "over-administration" that the Hryniak* Decision sought to eradicate. The proportionality principle requires that judicial resources be expended only when a proceeding is properly before the court and only to the degree necessary to advance the matter toward a resolution on its merits.

IV. UNDISCLOSED PRIOR INVOLVEMENT AND THE BREACH OF JUDICIAL ETHICS It is now manifest that the impetus for the breach of the Courts of Justice Act (the "CJA") was the Interlocutory Justice's prior undisclosed participation in an ex parte in camera hearing (the "Undisclosed Proceeding"). This failure to provide disclosure regarding the UPJI in the context of an undisclosed criminal proceeding (the "UCP") engenders a reasonable apprehension of bias and violates the Judicial Code of Ethics. While the concept of mens rea is typically reserved for the criminal law, the intentionality behind this non-disclosure suggests a cognitive avoidance of the fundamental duty of impartiality (nemo judex in sua causa). The public trust in the judiciary is contingent upon the transparent disclosure of any potential conflict of interest, especially where such involvement could influence the judicial perception of the litigants.

Such non-disclosure satisfies the criteria for fraud discovered post-facto, thereby invoking Rule 59.06(2) and necessitating the vacating of all subsequent acta. A judge who has been privy to ex parte submissions in a related matter is fundamentally compromised in their ability to preside over the subsequent litigation without the express and informed consent of all parties. The failure to disclose this status quo ante involvement constitutes an incurable defect in the proceedings, rendering the subsequent directives unenforceable in limine. The integrity of the judicial office requires that judges remain "above the fray," and any secret participation in related proceedings viciates the neutrality required for the adjudication of the current dispute. The legal right to an impartial tribunal is a jus cogens norm of the Canadian legal order, the obviation of which results in a jurisdictional nullity that cannot be cured by later acquiescence. To ignore this breach is to permit a corruption of the judicial process that strikes at the very heart of public confidence in the administration of justice.

V. ADMINISTRATIVE MALFEASANCE AND THE MINISTERIAL DUTY OF THE REGISTRAR Regarding the Ontario Courts Public Portal (the "OCPP") and O. Reg. 226/25, these digital reforms replaced the "Registrar's Acceptance" model with a "Subject to Confirmation" model. However, the systematic rejection of filings via the Access Impediment constitutes a breach of the ministerial duty to facilitate access to the curia. In accordance with the jurisprudential framework established in Re Union Canadienne de l'Industrie des Peches et des Travailleurs, Local 140, 1981 CanLII 3556 (NBCA) (the "Union Canadienne"), the absence of permissive language such as "if it considers it advisable to do so" indicates a mandatory obligation. The Registrar's office is the physical and digital threshold of the court, and it must remain open to all who seek justice.

While the Industrial Relations Act examined in Union Canadienne granted certain discretionary latitudes, the Rules governing the Current Registrar employ the imperative "shall." The failure of the Registry to issue a Form 68B (the "Notice of Listing") following the perfection (the "Perfection") of the McLean Proceeding on December 16, 2024, represents a severe departure from the mandatory strictures of the Rules. When the Executive branch implements a digital blockade through malfunctioning software, the judiciary must assert its inherent jurisdiction to restore the status quo ante and ensure that the right to be heard is not extinguished by technological or administrative incompetence. The Registrar's function is ministerial, not judicial; it is to process documents, not to adjudicate their merit through silence or rejection. This administrative malfeasance represents an unwarranted interference with the litigant's vested rights to a timely hearing and constitutes a dereliction of duty that threatens the administration of justice. The Registrar acts as a conduit for the court, not a censor for the Crown.

VI. THE SUPERVISORY ROLE OF THE PRESIDENT AND THE REMEDY OF MANDAMUS The President of the Divisional Court, in his capacity as the Master of the Roster, maintains a solemn statutory obligation under Section 76 of the CJA to superintend the administrative secretariat and rectify the systemic inertia of the Registry. Pursuant to the venerable principle in Julius v. Oxford (Bishop of) (the "Julius 1880"), where a statutory power is coupled with a legal right or the public interest, the permissive "may" is transformed ipso facto into a mandatory "must." The President's supervisory jurisdiction is the ultimate safeguard against administrative paralysis and ensures that the administrative arm of the court remains subservient to the judicial mission.

I thank the President of the Divisional Court, in his distinguished capacity as a member of the Canadian Judicial Council and as the primus inter pares who possesses the exclusive jurisdiction to self-assign and relieve judges specifically and generally of their duties. He remains the steward of constitutional trust, the emergency administrator, and the guardian of the rule of law. As the moral voice of the Divisional Court, he possesses the authority to take over and manage public issues and to impose his will upon those judges who do not comply with the law, thereby ensuring that public confidence in the judiciary remains at a premium. The extraordinary remedy of mandamus (the "Mandamus") is sought as a restorative measure to compel the performance of public legal duties unlawfully withheld. This is a remedy of last resort, necessitated by the administrative blockade that has paralyzed this litigation and effectively denied the Applicant his day in court. The issuance of Mandamus would not only remediate the present harm but would also reaffirm the principle that administrative staff are servants of the law and cannot exercise their functions in a manner that obstructs the path to justice.

VII. CONCLUSION AND THE PURSUIT OF PROCEDURAL RECTITUDE Notwithstanding the anomalous circumstances surrounding the transition of the Former Registrar to the Current Registrar, exhaustive efforts have been dedicated to preparing this BOA for the President's consideration. The Respondents have failed to oppose the McLean Proceeding or satisfy the Filing Requirement since December 2025, yet they continue to benefit from the administrative paralysis of the Registry. As you know, there is no requirement for service on the Respondents because of their failure to "file" and "deliver" their NOAs as unequivocally admitted by record in the Case View OCPP. I confirm that they are not entitled to any notice of steps and I will rely on strict compliance with the Rules of Civil Procedure.

This state of affairs is inherently prejudicial and violates the principles of fundamental justice and the "Culture Shift" promised by the modern Rules. The persistence of these procedural nullities creates a cumulative injustice that can only be rectified through high-level judicial intervention to restore the status quo ante. The implications of continued silence from the Registry are profound, as they signal a collapse of the administrative apparatus designed to support the judiciary. It is trusted that the Current Registrar shall transmit these authorities to the President's immediate attention, along with the draft orders previously mail-filed, for his judicial review and approval. The undersigned reserves the right to rely on this correspondence for any lawful purpose, internally or externally, inclusive of the assessment of costs. The pursuit of procedural rectitude is not merely a technical endeavor but a requisite for the preservation of the rule of law and the avoidance of a total collapse of process. Thank you.

ALL OF WHICH IS RESPECTFULLY SUBMITTED this 30th day of January, 2026.

Yours most appreciatively and gratefully,

Kevin A. McLean

APPLICANT

AND

TD HOME AND AUTO INSURANCE COMPANY, SECURITY NATIONAL INSURANCE COMPANY, TD GENERAL INSURANCE COMPANY, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR, LICENCE APPEAL TRIBUNAL, HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN IN RIGHT OF ONTARIO, REPRESENTED BY EXECUTIVE CHAIR OF TRIBUNALS ONTARIO IN MR. SEAN WEIR, THE ATTORNEY GENERAL OF ONTARIO

ORDER

THIS MOTION, made by the Applicant on November 17, 2025, pursuant to Rule 37.12.1(4) of the Rules of Civil Procedure, for the relief sought therein which is reproduced infra in the operative parts of this order, with notice to the Responding Parties, was heard (in writing and without attendance of the Applicant and the Responding Parties) on December 3, 2025, at the Divisional Court (Osgoode Hall), 130 Queen Street West, Toronto, Ontario.

The made and served motion was unopposed by each and all of the Responding Parties including the Respondents and Non-Respondents.

While the Applicant paid for the Notice of Motion number three ("NOM #3") in the sum of $339.00 and it was represented by the Divisional Court that it would be processed within three business days from November 26, 2025, that representation had not been complied with in advance of December 3, 2025, or thereafter.

In the circumstances, the Moving Party submitted for filing three requisitions or requests under Divisional Court Form 1 or the unnumbered form with the Divisional Court via the OCPP as follows:

1. December 2, 2025, requisition, Divisional Court Form 1 (Written Request) and Divisional Court unnumbered form (Application Hearing Request) which sought inter alia the following with exact quotation:
    a. Registrar: Comply with mandatory duties and immediately process all urgent filings by the Applicant, including, but not limited to, Notice of Motion Number Three, which are delineated for clarity at Appendix B. The urgency of these filings is amplified by the facts presented in Appendix A and the substantive evidence of irreparable harm in Compendium Tab #3 and the ongoing security issues noted in the Affidavit of Service (November 21, 2025);
    b. Registrar: Upload all filed documents in this JRPA Application as required by the Rules of Civil Procedure and provide the necessary invitation access to the Applicant for his own uploading (where applicable) and for review of the complete electronic record; and
    c. Honourable Divisional Court/Registrar (where applicable): Grant such further and ancillary relief as may be deemed just and expedient in the circumstances by way of hearing request, written request, or requisition to ensure that the NOM #3 and its relief, including that in the JRPA Application are heard in an expeditious, timely and cost-effective manner while the Moving Party has again complied with all serving, filing and proof of service along with payment requirements.

2. Requisition #11 was tendered forthwith after the Moving Party knew, unequivocally, that the Respondents failed to "deliver" (the components of 'file', with proof of service in relation to the Respondent Insurance Companies and all three components under "Delivery" in relation to the LAT) in their Notices of Appearances. The Moving Party did not take any further step in the proceeding after obtaining knowledge of those failures with specific reference to his knowledge from the OCPP (Case View section which was not present in the former JSO Portal), but for the filing of the Requisition #11.

3. December 2, 2025, the Moving Party filed a requisition on December 2, 2025, as per the Responding Parties not objecting to the form of hearing in the form of a written hearing or without attendance of the Applicant (Party) and Responding Parties ("Requisition #12). Requisition #12 sought the following:
   a. Immediately stamp the filed documents in relation to NOM #3, and provide the Applicant with the properly stamped and recorded copies of the Notice of Motion and supporting documents, confirming their original filing date therein;
   b. Ensure all filed documents are uploaded to Case Center as required by the Registrar under the Rules of Civil Procedure for Toronto Region;
   c. Immediately provide the Applicant with an Invitation to Case Center so he can upload the Compendium For NOM #3; and
   d. All other necessary actions in accordance with the law.
4. The Moving Party cited the various legal principles and bases for the Requisition which are contained at Appendix #2 for Requisition #12.
5. The authorization of a credit card affects the payor's credit limit and operates as a payment of the same irrespective of the delinquent capture of the same.

5039. On December 3, 2025, the date of this written hearing (without attendance of the Applicant and those non-participating responding Parties), the Applicant filed a Requisition with the Divisional Court that was in the nature of direction to the Registrar and the President of the Divisional Court for purposes of compelling the court staff to act in accordance with the law ("Requisition #13"). Requisition #13 relied upon the JRPA, Legislation Act, the AJA and attendant regulation, the CJA, the intermediate appellate jurisdiction and equitable jurisdiction of the Honourable Divisional Court, and Rules of Civil Procedure.

7. Requisition #13 sought inter alia the following and required the following from the Registrar where applicable

    a. Retroactive Validation (Nunc Pro Tunc): That the entirety of the relevant filings for NOM #3, specifically those submitted on or about November 26, 2025, be forthwith accorded the validation stamp bearing the date of November 26, 2025, which date constitutes the legal date of effectual filing.

    b. Processing of all outstanding filings in the OCPP by the Applicant

    c. Transmission by uploading to the Judiciary and Presiding Motions Judge: That the complete and validated Motion Record for NOM #3, in conjunction with the Primary Draft Order (November 30, 2025), be immediately uploaded and transmitted to the Presiding Superior Court of Justice Motions Judge to ensure the instantaneous

8. On December 3, 2025, the Moving Party learned that former Registrar, Ms. Tashekah Gentles, was relieved or her duties as the Registrar of the Divisional Court and replaced by LSO licensed paralegal in Ms. Roxanne Parris (see: Appendix #4).

9. On December 3, 2025, the Applicant followed up with new Registrar Ms. Parris.

10. On December 4, 2025, Ms. Parris did not respond.

11. On December 5, 2025, the Applicant mail filed this Draft Order which was sent on expedited delivery which arrived at the Divisional Court on December 8, 2025. The Moving Party enclosed a cover letter that enclosed this Draft Order (see: Appendix #5).

CHAPTER #2: THE MATERIALS "READ"

ON READING the following materials so particularized in this motion which are from Tabs #1 to #66 in the Applicant's Compendium For NOM #3 (November 28, 2025, served and filed) ("Compendium For NOM #3"), with the Motion Record comprising Tabs #1 to #22 of the Compendium For NOM #3:

1. FOUNDATIONAL DOCUMENTS FOR MOTION NUMBER 3 (NOM #3) (SEE: TABS #1, #2, #3, #4, #21 AND #22):

    a. TAB #2 (the Motion made on at least 14 days notice):
        i. NOM #3 of the Applicant (Motion to be heard in writing) of November 17, 2025;
    b. TAB #1 (the Factum For Motion In Writing:
        i. Factum of the Applicant "Factum For Motion in Writing" of November 18, 2025;
    c. Applicant's Draft Order for NOM #3 of November 18, 2025 (see: TAB #21)
    d. Filed and served, with proof of service, evidence contained therein (Tabs #3 to #5):
        i. October 13, 2025, declared evidence of the Applicant (Exhibits "A" to "Z") (see: TAB #3);
        ii. November 14, 2025, declared evidence of the Applicant (Exhibit "A" to "N") (see: TAB #4);
        iii. Affidavit of Applicant (including Affidavit of Service) of November 21, 2025 (see: TAB #22):
            1. Included "proof of service" of NOM #3, including Factum, Motion Record and Draft Order;

2. EVIDENTIARY EXHIBITS TO THE OCTOBER 13, 2024, DECLARED EVIDENCE (expressly adopted by affidavit of the Applicant (see: Tab 22) (see: Tab #3, Exhibits A–Z):

    a. Judicial Administration Correspondence (Exhibits A-E, H, I, T):
        i. Documents detailing persistent attempts to procure records—specifically audio recordings, transcripts, and administrative files—from the Superior Court of Justice (SCJ) Recording Management Office (RMO), the DIVISIONAL COURT, and the SCJ CSD Records Division.
        ii. These exhibits chronicle the Applicant's due diligence efforts to invoke the supervisory authority of the Chief Justice and Regional Senior Justice to resolve systemic refusals and delays.
            1. The substance of this correspondence denotes a fundamental breakdown in the chain of custody or production of essential court materials in the UCP or this JRPA Proceeding, vital for prosecuting the appeal or judicial review, thereby raising significant due process concerns regarding the Applicant's right to a full and fair hearing along with an undisclosed prior judicial involvement involving Madam Justice Shore.
            2. The legal implication of the LAT intentionally failing to provide the official record is profound: without a complete record, the Superior Court is potentially unable to fulfill its constitutional mandate to supervise lower tribunals.
            3. The invocation of high judicial authority underscores the perceived gravity of the administrative hurdles encountered, demonstrating an attempt to leverage the inherent jurisdiction of the superior courts to compel institutional compliance.
        iii. The continuous requests for audio and transcripts in the Undisclosed Criminal Proeeding and case conferences in this JRPA Proceeding are particularly indicative of a dispute over the accuracy of the written record or a need to confirm the verbatim dialogue to support claims of procedural unfairness, such as judicial or administrative commentary that may have been inappropriate or demonstrated bias along with the undisclosed prior judicial involvement with Madam Justice Shore vis-à-vis the Applicant in "Ex Parte In Camera Hearing", "Ex Parte In Camera Unrecorded Hearings", and, by virtue of non-production of documents that the Applicant was and is entitled to without charge and upon request, "Ex Parte In Camera Unrecorded Hearings Unretained Indictment Processes".

iv. This pursuit is rooted in the common law principle that the superior court requires the complete and accurate record of proceedings below to exercise its supervisory function effectively and that any records that have bearing on the independence of the judiciary and a specific SCJ Judge, which includes a judge of the DIVISIONAL COURT, must be produced in the DIVISIONAL COURT'S truth seeking function for civil litigation.

v. The consistent frustration documented in these emails suggests a pattern that the Applicant will argue, in writing, constitutes a separate, actionable denial of procedural justice, compounding the original error alleged at variety of persons and actors. The documents, spanning multiple judicial administrative offices, underscore the complexity of obtaining a unified record in a decentralized court system or at least records that were required by law, including the Criminal Code, to be disclosed to the Applicant in advance of his bringing of the JRPA Application;

b. Allegations of Fraud and Tainting of Process (Exhibits G, O):

i. Communications outlining the Applicant's assertions regarding a "False Information Package" allegedly utilized by the Toronto Police Service (TPS).

1. These include intricate narratives detailing manifest deficiencies in the spurious document (Exhibit G) and a high-level forensic analysis of the "False Information Package" positing fabrication or malicious manipulation (Exhibit O).

ii. Exhibit G, in particular, may contain a detailed critique of the document's structure, dating, or content inconsistencies, potentially demonstrating how the falsification impacted the flow of justice in underlying criminal or police matters that intersect with the current civil/administrative review. Proving "fraud on the court" requires demonstrating, by clear and convincing evidence, that a deliberate scheme was used to deceive the judicial or administrative body, and that the deception affected the result. This is a higher burden than proving simple misrepresentation.

iii. Exhibit O's "forensic analysis" of metadata review, document comparison against original versions, or expert analysis of typeface and formatting—used to buttress the claim that critical documents were intentionally altered or fabricated, thereby corrupting the factual matrix upon which earlier proceedings may have relied. The consequence of successful proof of this fraud would be the vitiation of any step, document, requirement, order or decision relying on the tainted evidence, a serious remedy sought in this Judicial Review.This is a crucial element of the motion, as a finding of fraud on the court, even in an administrative context, constitutes an exceptional circumstance that severely limits the deference traditionally afforded to the Tribunal's decision.

iv. The DIVISIONAL COURT, utilizing its inherent jurisdiction or equitable jurisdiction, possesses the authority to conduct an inquiry into the integrity of the evidence presented below, a power that is rarely invoked but essential for maintaining the public's confidence in the administration of justice. The seriousness of the allegation requires compelling extrinsic evidence, which Exhibit O aims to provide through technical analysis. The success of this claim would likely lead to a remedy of setting aside the LAT decision ab initio (from the beginning), bypassing the substantive administrative law analysis entirely. The introduction of extrinsic evidence, particularly the forensic analysis, is justified because the fraud is alleged to relate to the very documents forming the record of the proceedings below and occurring post April 2025 by way of discovery.

3. CONTEXTUAL EVIDENCE FOR FACTS ARISING OR DISCOVERED AND/OR FRAUD ARISING OR DISCOVERED POST ANY "STEPS, DOCUMENTS, OR ORDERS" HAVING BEEN TAKEN WITHOUT THE KNOWLEDGE OF THE APPLICANT AND WITHOUT THE APPLICANT OUGHT TO HAVE KNOWN OF THESE FACTS, IRREGULARITIES

5042AND/OR FRAUD ALONG WITH THE COMMON LAW SPECIAL CATEGORIES OF CAUSES OF NULLITIES (SEE: FRAUD, BRIBERY AND EXTORTION (see: Tab 4, Exhibits A–N):

a. A second, distinct statutory declaration and its attendant exhibits further delineate the Applicant's evidentiary foundation, focusing on purported fraud committed against both the Applicant and, allegedly, the court. This section expands the narrative of misconduct beyond mere administrative error. Key components include;
b. LAT Tribunal Proceedings (Exhibits A, B, C, D, E, F):
    i. Documents demonstrating the history of the Tribunal process, including the Respondent Insurance Companies' alleged failure to file Notices of Appearance (Exhibit B), which could imply a procedural default or lack of engagement; the Applicant's Human Rights Tribunal of Ontario (HRTO) Application (Exhibit C), indicating a secondary claim of discrimination or infringement tied to the primary dispute; and subsequent communications pertaining to the Judicial Review Application (Exhibits D, E, F), showcasing the ongoing adversarial exchange between the parties post-Tribunal.
    ii. The exhibits detailing communications in the Judicial Review Application (Exhibits D, E, F) serve to document the resistance or cooperation level of the Respondents following the filing of the JRPA, offering contemporary context for the necessity of the current motion (NOM #3). The alleged failure to file a Notice of Appearance (Exhibit B), if substantiated, raises questions about the Respondent's compliance with DIVISIONAL COURT Rules of Civil Procedure and whether they should be deemed to have attorned to the jurisdiction of the court for the purposes of the Judicial Review;
c. Records Access Appeals (Exhibit I, J, K, L):
    i. Due diligence efforts which remain ongoing:
        1. Detailed records of the Applicant's appeal under FIPPA to the Office of the Information and Privacy Commissioner (OIPC) (Exhibit I), as well as requests for prima facie adjudicative records under the Tribunals Adjudicative Records Act (TARA) (Exhibit L). These documents demonstrate that the pursuit of records is not limited to internal judicial channels but also involves external oversight bodies like the OIPC. The reliance on TARA is particularly salient, as it governs access to records specifically created and held by administrative tribunals, providing a statutory mandate for the information the Applicant seeks to obtain for the Judicial Review. The OIPC appeal indicates a formal challenge to the institutional gatekeeping of information, suggesting that transparency and access to the administrative record itself are perceived as barriers to justice.
        2. The TARA requests reinforce this, targeting the very documentation produced during the LAT proceedings—such as internal memoranda, policy application notes, or specific evidentiary logs—which the Applicant requires to build a robust record of procedural irregularity before the DIVISIONAL COURT. The persistent invocation of these statutes implies that the administrative record is either incomplete or has been selectively disclosed, necessitating intervention from external regulatory bodies to achieve a fully transparent review.
        3. The failure to disclose the, at the very least, Two Undisclosed Motion Orders, by the LAT is further evidence of fraud along with an intentional breach of the JRPA, section 10.
        4. This concerted effort to obtain the full record is central to the Applicant's argument that the court cannot properly exercise its review function without complete access. Success in the OIPC appeal (Exhibit I) regarding access to information would provide an external, quasi-judicial finding that the administrative body violated its disclosure duties, a highly persuasive piece of evidence for the DIVISIONAL COURT on the issue of institutional transparency and fairness.

4. CORE APPLICATION AND INITIAL FILINGS (Tabs 5–19; and TAB #66 (a) to (d)):

a. This section encompasses the original instruments filed in the JRPA Application and initial procedural motions, establishing the genesis and preliminary procedural posture of the DIVISIONAL COURT case;
    i. JRPA* Application and Factum for JRPA* Application (Tabs 5, 6):
        1. JRPA* Application was served and filed on November 15, 2024:

5. PERFECTION AND REQUISITIONS (TABS 7, 8, 9): The Certificate of Perfection and Requisitions for a "listing hearing" and an urgent hearing, signaling the initial efforts to expedite the matter.
    i. Perfection confirmed that the Applicant's JRPA* Application, Application Record and Factum before the court has been complete since no later than December 16, 2024, while the requisitions underscored the Applicant's desire for swift resolution, potentially due to the severity of the alleged procedural issues or the impact of the underlying Tribunal decision.
    ii. The urgency requisition denoted a pressing need, possibly related to ongoing financial hardship resulting from the denial of insurance benefits, which necessitates an accelerated judicial calendar.
    iii. The successful perfection of the record is a necessary precursor to scheduling the substantive hearing, confirming the administrative completeness of the application.
    iv. The Certificate of Perfection, signed by the Applicant, carries an especially high burden of veracity given the ongoing allegations of record-tampering and administrative non-disclosure and the failure to be heard along with the compounding and aggravating factor of Madam Justice Shore engaging in her insertion into the JRPA Proceeding without disclosure of her undisclosed prior judicial involvement in the Undisclosed Criminal Proceeding.

6. NOM #1 AND #2 IN THE JRPA APPLICATION DOCUMENTS (Tabs 10–19):
    a. This group includes the Notice of Motion for NOM #1 and the supporting affidavits, along with various procedural endorsements and case correspondence that set the stage for the current application. These prior attempts highlight the systemic nature of the Respondent's failure to participate and provide the necessary documents for a fair judicial review.
        i. NOM #1:
            1. NOM #1 served and filed on January 22, 2025 (see: TAB #10 of Compendium For NOM #3);
            2. Draft Orders for NOM #1:
                a. The Applicant's Draft Order for NOM #1 was filed on January 29, 2025 in the unopposed motion (to be heard orally) (see TAB #11 of the Compendium For NOM #3);
            3. Written Submissions for NOM #1: TAB #12 of Compendium For NOM #3 of January 30, 2025
        ii. NOM #2 documents:
            1. NOM #2 Motion Record:
                a. NOM #2 served on January 31, 2025 (see: TAB #13);
                b. NOM #2 Factum For Motion In Writing on February 1, 2025; (see: TAB #14);
                c. NOM #2 Draft Order for NOM #2 (February 14, 2025);

AND on not receiving any documents, evidence or submissions from the lawyers for the Respondent Insurance Companies and the LAT despite being duly served with the Applicant's NOM #3, Factum, Motion Record, Draft Order (see: Tab #21 of the Applicant's Compendium), along with proof of service by the Applicant (see: Tab #22 of the Compendium For NOM #3) and the DIVISIONAL COURT being copied on the service of the Applicant's

Compendium For NOM #3 upon them after the Applicant had filed the Compendium For NOM #3 on the same date;

AND upon the Applicant's knowledge that the Respondent Insurance Companies and the LAT, along with the AGO, failed to file a first defence (see: Rule 77 of the Rules of Civil Procedure), which precluded the request by the LAT on December 3, 2024, that the JRPA Proceeding be assigned for Case Management (see: Rule 77.05(2) of the Rules of Civil Procedure) and the Assignment For Case Management of the JRPA Proceeding by Madam Justice Shore on January 7, 2025, along with all other steps undertaken in relation to that null and void and void ab initio request for case management by the LAT and void ab initio "direction" or "compulsory attendance by the parties [sic]" by Madam Justice Shore,

AND UPON the Motion having proceeded as a written hearing on the 3rd day of December, 2025, pursuant to the Rules of Civil Procedure;

AND NOTWITHSTANDING the exclusion of any solely served documents by the Respondent Insurance Companies and the Licence Appeal Tribunal (LAT) due to their manifest failures to "file" and "deliver" their respective Notices of Appearances, it is observed that: the Respondents were served with the Applicant's Judicial Review Procedure Application (JRPA Application) immediately subsequent to its online filing on November 15, 2024; non-service of the LAT's Notice of Appearance (NOA) of November 27, 2024, is evident, concomitant with the absence of its requisite "filing" or "delivery"; and the NOA of the Respondent Insurance Companies, dated December 3, 2024, was duly served upon the Applicant but neither "filed" nor "delivered" upon the Applicant;

AND FURTHER NOTING that the Tribunal neglected or failed to discharge its statutory obligations pursuant to the Judicial Review Procedure Act and the Statutory Powers Procedure Act (SPPA) to forthwith file a complete record of proceedings, inclusive of all content requirements stipulated at section 20 of the SPPA, and did not proffer opposition or consent to the Applicant's antecedent NOM #1 seeking compliance therewith; that the Respondent Insurance Companies failed to adhere to the Practice Direction entitled "Information Submitted to the Court" within the prescribed two-week period following the issuance of the JRPA Application, or at any subsequent juncture; that the Responding Parties failed to comply with Rule 68.04(4) of the Rules of Civil Procedure subsequent to being served with the Applicant's Factum and Application Record (December 12, 2024), nor did they seek leave to deliver respective factums and application records post-January 13, 2025; and that neither the Respondent Insurance Companies nor the Tribunal (collectively, the "Remaining Respondents") complied with Rule 37.12.1(5) within ten days of the promulgation (making) on notice of the Applicant's NOM #3, nor did they file any objections to NOM #2, despite being jurisdictionally precluded from doing so without first seeking and obtaining a mandatory order of this Honourable Court to effect the "delivery" of their Notices of Appearances, which are now approximately 366 days late, or seeking an oral hearing (vide: Rule 37.12.1(5)(d)); and

AND FURTHER NOTING that all of the Responding Parties, including Respondents and Non-Respondents were served with the Applicant's NOM #3, Factum, Motion Record, Draft Order and Compendium For NOM #3, but did not choose to oppose (the collective "Non-Opposition NOM #3") this NOM #3;

CHAPTER #3: ORDERS AND DECLARATIONS

4. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that the delegated or presiding motion judge, for this motion was not the Honourable Madam Justice Shore and/or any other judge employed by Epstein Cole LLP prior to the commencement of and after the filing and serving of this JRPA* Application;
5. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that all Orders herein contained shall be granted nunc pro tunc, along with any abridgment of time pursuant to inter alia Rule 3.02(1) and (2) where such retroactive application is applicable;
6. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that consistent with the amendments to the Rules of Civil Procedure in October 2025 that the DIVISIONAL COURT (court staff) (registrar) must upload all of the Applicant's filed documents for purposes of NOM #3 (see: Rule 4.05.3 (3.0.1);
7. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that the DIVISIONAL COURT (court staff) (registrar) must provide an invitation to the Applicant to upload his Compendium For NOM #3 (see: Rule 4.05.3(3.));
8. THIS COURT FURTHER DECLARES that the Tribunal had failed to file a record of the proceeding forthwith or at all and the Respondent Insurance Companies, and breached section 10 of the JRPA;
9. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES that the Tribunal failed to "deliver" responsive factums and application records in accordance with Rule 68.04(4) of the Rules of Civil Procedure;
10. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES AND ORDERS that that LAT failed to serve its Notice of Appearance (Form 38(B)) on November 27, 2024;
11. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that the LAT failed to "file" and "deliver" its Notice of Appearance forthwith, prior to December 3, 2024, or thereafter;
12. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that Respondent Insurance Companies served their Notices of Appearances on December 3, 2024, at 4:50 p.m.
13. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES that the LAT's request for a case conference was on or before 3:30 p.m. on December 3, 2024;
14. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES AND ORDERS that the LAT's request for a case conference on or before December 3, 2024, was null and void, and void ab initio, on account of none of the Respondents having filed a first "Defence" (see: Rule 77.03 of the Rules of Civil Procedure: "defence" includes a notice of intent to defend, a statement of defence, a notice of appearance and a notice of motion in response to a proceeding)) (defined as "First Defence") prior to the LAT's request for a case conference;
15. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES AND ORDERS that any "Assignment For Case Management" (see: Rule 77.05 of Rules of Civil Procedure) of the JRPA* Proceeding by "the case management judge" (Madam Justice Shore) was null and void, void ab initio and of no force and effect because there was no consent of any "parties" (Rule 77.05(1) of the Rules of Civil Procedure) and the LAT's request, as there was no motion from the LAT, for a case conference was void ab initio and of no force and effect (see: Rule 77.05(2)(b));

16. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS AND DECLARES that, to the extent that that Justice Shore's considered the LAT's void ab initio request for Assignment For Case Management of the JRPA* Proceeding and subsequently considered herself to be assigned to the JRPA Proceeding to herself was an impermissible delegation of authority, and/or was directly contrary to Rule 77 of the Rules of Civil Procedure, any "source law", the common law or equitable principles;
17. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES that to the extent that Madam Justice Shore believed she could on her own volition require the Applicant and Respondents to appear before her for a case conference no such power under any "source law" so existed at the time of such consideration and compulsion.
    a. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES that to the extent that Madam Justice Shore believed her power arose from Rule 77.08, dovetailed to Rule 50.13 of the Rules of Civil Procedure, no such power existed because of the failure of the Respondents to file a First Defence and said Rule 50.13 arises under pre-trial procedures.
    b. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES that to that Madam Justice Shore was relying upon Rule 50.03 she did not compel the parties [sic] to a pre-trial conference.
    c. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES that to the extent that Madam Justice Shore was seeking to compel the parties [sic] to a conference under Rule 50, she failed to order that the "parties" [sic] themselves participate and such case conferences were null and void on that ground alone.
    d. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES that to the extent that Madam Justice Shore was relying on Rule 50.13 of the Rules of Civil Procedure, the LAT was not a party at the time of the written request (December 3, 2024) by failure to "deliver" its NOA, not lawfully served, and there was no filing of a First Defence at said time, and as consequence of Rule 50.13(2), Madam Justice Shore failed to order that all of the "parties" [sic] participate in addition to their lawyers as a consequence, and the case conferences are hereby set aside on said legal ground;
18. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES AND ORDERS that any purported case conference compulsory requirement relating to the exchange of materials (if necessary [sic]) and to discuss prematurity [sic] was null and void on account of the LAT, which was the only Respondent purportedly raising the issue albeit without party status, as there was only one "party" at said time in the Applicant;
    a. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES AND ORDERS that any potential timetable arising out of that purported or alleged case conference compulsory attendance requirement, which would have required the lawyers for the parties [sic] and the parties themselves, absent order of the court, did not operate as a stay or abeyance of obligations of the Respondents to comply with the JRPA and Rules of Civil Procedure (where applicable);
19. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES AND ORDERS that as a consequence of the Applicant having already perfected his JRPA* Application on December 16, 2024, there were no further materials for him to exchange and the deadline for the Respondents to file their responsive application records and factums was Monday, January 13, 2025;
20. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS AND DECLARES that any purported filings, whether de facto or de jure, submitted by the LAT or the Respondent Insurance Companies post-November 27 or December 3, 2024, respectively, are rendered void ab initio and are subject to the vitiating effect of insufficient notice rules stipulated under the Rules of Civil Procedure, and any setting aside of the same are heard on three days notice;
21. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES AND ORDERS that all steps and documents involving the "Assignment For Case Management" and any "case management conferences" are void ab initio, null and void and of no force and effect, and hereby set aside.
    a. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES AND ORDERS that any "orders" arising from "case conferences" are null and void, void ab initio and of no force and effect, and set aside;

22. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES AND ORDERS that any conference conducted without the Applicant possessing access to Case Center for this DIVISIONAL COURT Proceeding (JRPA* Proceeding) by way of invitation, as per the state of the Rules of Civil Procedure at said time and without the ability to upload his filed documents at least five days prior to said case conferences (see: Rule 4.05.3 et al) rendered said case conferences null and void, void ab initio, of no force and effect, and they are hereby set aside without reference to their merits otherwise;
23. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that the Applicant was entitled to an invitation to the DIVISIONAL COURT Case Center electronic platform immediately upon the formal commencement or bringing of this JRPA* Application on or around November 15, 2024, pursuant to, inter alia, the JRPA, the Rules of Civil Procedure and the DIVISIONAL COURT JRPA Guide in force at said time;
    a. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that the portion of the DIVISIONAL COURT JRPA Guide relating to the provision of an invitation to Case Center upon the bringing of a JRPA Application is not inconsistent with the Rules of Civil Procedure;
24. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES AND ORDERS that but for the notice that the Applicant provided herein in relation to NOM #3, the Applicant is permitted to not further file or serve the Respondent Insurance Companies and LAT with any further filings or otherwise but for any challenges by the LAT in the constitution and Charter questions relating to its control or authority of any of the Respondent Insurance Companies and its agents involved in the theft of the Applicant's property and subsequent impersonation, extortion and bribery;

CHAPTER #3(B): NULLIFICATION IN TOTO AND MISLEADING OF THE APPLICANT BY FRAUDULENT MISREPRESENTATION AND FINDINGS OF PRIOR JUDICIAL INVOLVEMENT (UNDISCLOSED)

The Declarations of Law herein; ii. Rule 38.11 of the Rules of Civil Procedure on account of insufficient or non-existent notice; iii. Rule 59 of the Rules of Civil Procedure on the grounds of fraud and miscarriage of justice, as the underlying judicial steps were irrevocably and fundamentally tainted by misconduct and conflict; iv. Rule 2.02 of the Rules of Civil Procedure;
26. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES that all fraudulent misrepresentations made by commission or omission whether iterated by the DIVISIONAL COURT (court staff), as particularized herein, are attributed to the "case management judge" after December 3, 2024;
27. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES that there is no prerequisite or requirement under Rule 59.06(2)(a) of the Rules of Civil Procedure that the fraud must be committed exclusively against an opposing party or solely by a party, Respondent or non-Respondent, and that it may be committed by any person so long as it had a material effect (i.e. may have been a factor or reasonably affected the outcome of the proceeding);
28. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES that, on a balance of probabilities and due to the lack of opposition of this NOM #3, that Madam Justice Shore had a prior judicial involvement with the Applicant in the Undisclosed Criminal Proceeding.
    a. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES AND ORDERS that Madam Justice Shore's prior judicial involvement in undisclosed fashion amounted to facts or fraud discovered post April 2025 by the Applicant, and all of her steps taken and orders issued are hereby set aside;
29. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES that the undisclosed prior judicial involvement of Madam Justice Shore with the Applicant amounted to a fraudulent misrepresentation upon the Applicant of which was material to the outcome of the JRPA* Proceeding and all steps, documents and/or orders involving or relating to Madam Justice Shore are hereby set aside;

CHAPTER #3(C): FRAUD, BRIBERY AND EXTORTION INVOLVING THE RESPONDENT INSURANCE COMPANIES AND LAT;

CHAPTER #3(C)(I): FRAUD

30. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES AND ORDERS that that the Licence Appeal Tribunal (LAT) and the Respondent Insurance Companies committed a demonstrable fraud, whether by omission or commission, upon the Court with specific and precise reference to the facts fully particularized in the Applicant's Affidavits, Factum, and evidence to be gleaned from the case conference transcripts, thereby tainting the entire acta of the proceeding with fraud, and they cannot retain any benefits of the same.
    a. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES AND ORDERS that all steps, documents and/or orders relating to said fraudulent conduct, particularized in the Applicant's Compendium For NOM #3, may have reasonably affected the outcome of the JRPA Proceeding, and they are hereby set aside;

CHAPTER #3(C)(II): BRIBERY

31. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES AND ORDERS that the conduct involving Mr. Karat, an employee or contractor to the Respondent Insurance Companies, in the unauthorized appropriation of the Applicant's property on October 25, 2024, and subsequent related actions (including the purchase of new property and the utilization of a fictitious name by Ms. Julia Dunk) ascended to the level of a bribe or an act of bribery.

32. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES AND ORDERS that the Respondent Insurance Companies committed the criminal offence of extortion and obstruction of justice, on a balance of probabilities, and the associated intentional torts, both prior to the origination of this JRPA Proceeding and throughout its subsequent bringing, commencement and advancement;

RESPONDENTS

THIS MOTION, initiated by the Applicant, Mr. Kevin A. McLean (the "Moving Party"), in consideration of the President of the Divisional Court's specialized capacity as the Master of the Roster and the pre-eminent guardian of the institutional integrity and functional efficacy of the Divisional Court, seeking mandatory orders for judicial self-assignment, technical rectification of the Ontario Courts Public Portal ("OCPP"), and the production of court records and recordings essential to the advancement of this judicial review, was adjudicated this day via written format;

ON READING the Factum in Support of Motion #5, the supporting evidence regarding the persistent "403 Forbidden Error Code," the prior Motion Records for Notice of Motion #3 and Motion #4, the Compendium For NOM #3, Request Form Undertakings for digital recordings; and noting with concern that the Respondents have failed to file and/or deliver Notices of Appearance, responding documents, or otherwise oppose the relief sought in the prior motions as required by the Rules of Civil Procedure, thereby necessitating extraordinary judicial intervention to ensure the orderly administration of justice;

I. DISPENSATION AND ABRIDGMENT OF TIME

1. THIS COURT ORDERS that the requirement for the filing of a formal Notice of Motion (Form 37A) for this Motion #5 is hereby dispensed with, such dispensation being necessitated by the insurmountable technical barriers presented by the "403 Forbidden Error Code"[i] that the Applicant is currently experiencing with the OCPP. This digital lockout has effectively severed the Applicant's primary means of service and filing involving the email for service herein, and given the history of previous controversies and procedural challenges in this proceeding, a formal dispensation is required to prevent further prejudice to the Moving Party.
2. THIS COURT ORDERS that the time for service and filing of this motion and all supporting documents be and is hereby abridged, and this motion is declared to be properly returnable this day, January 12, 2026, to address the urgent need for judicial oversight over the digital and administrative components of this litigation.
3. THIS COURT ORDERS that all orders involving timing, service, and the filing of documents relating to the hearing of this matter and the preceding motions are granted nunc pro tunc, ensuring that the record is perfected despite the administrative failures encountered by the Applicant.

II. JUDICIAL ASSIGNMENT AND INSTITUTIONAL OVERSIGHT

4. THIS COURT ORDERS that the President of the Divisional Court hereby self-assigns the present proceeding under the Judicial Review Procedure Act to his own jurisdiction, or in the alternative, shall adjudicate the relief sought in NOM #3 and by natural extension Motion #5 and #4. [ii]THIS COURT FURTHER ORDERS AND DECLARES that this JRPA Proceeding has faced extraordinary challenges and controversies that raise profound issues concerning the integrity of the Divisional Court as an institution, requiring the direct supervision and supervisory jurisdiction of the President of the Divisional Court as the primus inter pares to restore public and litigant confidence in the judicial process before it;
5. THIS COURT ORDERS that Madam Justice Shore is relieved from all duties involving the Applicant or any related proceedings involving the Applicant without any finding at this time as to whether or not she was in a conflict of interest and/or breached the Applicant's rights;[iii]

III. SECTION 76 OF THE CJA AND CONSTITUTIONAL ACCESS

6. THIS COURT ORDERS that court staff, IT administrators, and any officials responsible for the Ontario Courts Public Portal ("OCPP") immediately take all necessary technical and administrative steps to rectify the digital interface and extinguish the "403 Forbidden Error Code" precluding access to the OCPP as it relates to the Applicant's account and the email utilized herein. This rectification shall include, but is not limited to, the whitelisting of the Applicant's IP address and the restoration of full electronic filing and retrieval privileges;
7. THIS COURT ORDERS that the court staff must provide the Applicant with an individual email contact of the Divisional Court and OCPP (IT department) to troubleshoot the 403 Error Code issue as it relates to his email address herein in the event that the technological court staff cannot fix the same;
8. THIS COURT ORDERS that the OCCP manager of the IT department and the Registrar of the Divisional Court are to provide to the President of the Divisional Court, forthwith copies of all relevant logs of the Applicant's seeking to access the OCCP along with when the 403 Error Code commenced and why it has persisted and the reasons for the same;
9. THIS COURT ORDERS that until the court staff fix the 403 Error Code, the Applicant is entitled to file documents via email and they shall be deemed filed at the time that they are emailed to the Divisional Court

 correspondence email and Acting Registrar Ms. Roxanne Parris (LSO licensee as a paralegal licensee – currently non practising) and such order shall be granted nunc pro tunc in relation to all email submitted documents;

10. THIS COURT DECLARES that such digital disenfranchisement, denoted in the Factum for Motion #5 and supporting evidence therein, violates the procedural expectations of a self-represented litigant and constitutes a constructive denial of the right to be heard (audi alteram partem). THIS COURT FURTHER DECLARES AND AFFIRMS the rule of law principle that universal access to the courts is a constitutionalized and untouchable principle. Any technical or administrative interference with a litigant pursuing a legal remedy—whether intentional or through systemic neglect—is a violation of the rule of law and the Constitution of Canada. Access to justice, specifically in the form of access to the Superior Court of Justice and its digital records, is an untouchable constitutional imperative, and any sustained lockout constitutes a breach of the Core Jurisdiction of the SCJ as protected under Section 96 of the Constitution Act, 1867;

IV. ACCESS TO COURT RECORDINGS, DOCUMENTS, AND INFORMATION ASSETS

10. THIS COURT ORDERS that the SCJ Recording Management Office (attention: Ms. Hsieh, Ms. Amirthalingam, Ms. Azim et al) provide the Applicant with copies of the digital recordings for all case conferences held in this JRPA proceeding; [iv]
11. THIS COURT ORDERS that the SCJ Recording Management Office provide the Applicant's retained and authorized transcriptionist (Ontario) ("ATO") with the specific "tapes and materials required for transcription" required for the production of certified transcripts in relation to the case conferences herein;
12. THIS COURT ORDERS that Divisional Court staff and the Registrar provide the Applicant with immediate access to, and copies of, the requested documents in their custody or control in relation to the "Undisclosed Criminal Proceeding," to the extent that such documents are relevant to the grounds of the judicial review or the conduct of the administrative bodies below;
13. THIS COURT ORDERS that court staff at any courthouses within the purview of the Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Justice provide the Applicant with access to any requested documents, information, information assets, or judicial records in the custody or control of the SCJ in relation to his "Non-FIPPA"

 requests. This order recognizes that the open court principle extends to the administrative records necessary to verify the regularity of court proceedings;

14. THIS COURT ORDERS that the court staff, court clerks, and Registrars of any relevant SCJ courthouses or the Divisional Court must respond to the Applicant within 48 hours of receipt of an email, fax, and/or letter directed to the Applicant's email denoted for return correspondence; [v]
15. THIS COURT ORDERS that to the extent that the Applicant is required to pay any fees for any access to copies of documents filed in this JRPA Proceeding, which are denoted in the requisitions or requests in Compendium For NOM #3 and Motion Record #4, the Registrar shall provide him with a detailed, itemized estimate of the cost of the same prior to the assessment of such fees. To the extent that the Registrar does not provide the Applicant with the same within 48 hours of this order, no fees will be due and owing for the same;

V. ADJUDICATION AND GENERAL PROVISIONS

16. THIS COURT ORDERS that the President of the Divisional Court pronounce determinations regarding NOM #5, #4, and #3 immediately or forthwith. To ensure the timely progression of this matter, the Court may announce the result of these motions via an "Immediate Announcement Order," with comprehensive, detailed reasons to be promulgated and delivered to the parties thereafter;
17. THIS COURT ORDERS that to the extent that any orders herein granted dispose of any other orders, the relief sought in other motions or requests are hereby rendered moot;
18. THIS COURT ORDERS that this Order shall be effective immediately and shall be settled and signed by the President of the Divisional Court without the requirement for approval as to form or content by any other party, given the Respondents' continued state of default without rectification;
19. THIS COURT ORDERS that only the President of the Divisional Court may sign this order, and any formal issuing and entering of this order must be completed by the Registrar's office forthwith and without delay;
20. THIS COURT ORDERS such directions may be issued to the court services division in accordance with the above, Motion #4 and NOM #3, with a copy to the Applicant, as may be required to mitigate procedural delays and protect the overarching interest of justice; and

2. THIS COURT ORDERS that the Applicant is entitled to seek directions, is granted leave to submit any further submissions or evidence to assist this Divisional Court with status relating to the above orders sought (where applicable).

Date of issuance: ……

President of the Divisional Court
Chief Justice of the SCJ (Ontario)

[ii] This assignment is vital to prevent a miscarriage of justice necessitated by the inextricable nexus between the matters at hand and the requirement for the highest level of judicial oversight.

[iii] This order is made purely to maintain the appearance of total judicial impartiality and to ensure that the adjudication of the merits of the JRPA proceeding is not obscured by collateral disputes regarding judicial conduct;

[iv] This order applies to all requests for which a Request Form Undertaking has been submitted and for which the Applicant has made the prescribed payment, ensuring that the Applicant has a complete and accurate record of all oral submissions and judicial directions;

EXCLUSIVELY TO FOR ADJUDICATION, ADMINISTRATION AND IN MATTERS ASSIGNED BY LAW TO THE JUDICIARY TO THE PRESIDENT OF THE Divisional Court (see: Primus inter pares of the SCJ of Ontario; and primus inter pares of the Divisional Court of Ontario)

THE DIVISIONAL COURT OF ONTARIO
The Honourable Chief Justice Mr. Geoffrey B. Morawetz
130 Queen Street
Toronto, Ontario

The Applicant relies upon:

1. Compendium for Motions #3 to #5 of February 3, 2026 (Tabs 1 to 74); and
2. Book of Authorities of January 30, 2025 (provided to the Divisional Court via email) (Tabs 1 to 307).

A CHIEF JUSTICE'S CASE: UNPRECEDENTED, UNPARALLELED, UNMATCHED IN FACTS, CONTROVERSIES, CHALLENGES, ETHICAL AND MORAL CONCERNS REGARDING THE INTERCONNECTEDNESS, UNIFICATION AND FUSION OF THE EXECUTIVE BRANCH AND A MEMBER(S) OF THE JUDICIARY

VOLUME #1: THE CONSTITUTIONAL IMPERATIVE FOR FORTHWITH ADJUDICATION

1. It is observed that, periodically, a specific litigation presents as a "chief's case" (the "Chief's Case"). Such a case is defined by the intrinsic challenges, the pervasive controversy, or the high-profile nature thereof, effectively situating the institutional integrity of the court as the primary focus (see: Baldovi v. R., 2016 MBQB 167 (the "Baldovi"), paragraph 72; BOA, Tab 69, as per the reasoning of the Honourable Chief Justice of the Manitoba King's Bench, Mr. Justice G. Joyal, whose observations are herein adopted as pertinent to the current administration of the Superior Court of Justice in Ontario). In such instances, the standard adjudicative process is deemed insufficient to preserve the perceived and actual dignity of the institution, requiring instead the unique stewardship of the President of the Divisional Court to ensure that the rule of law remains the preeminent consideration over and above administrative convenience. The current proceeding, characterized by systemic failures within the registry and the unauthorized assumption of jurisdiction, constitutes a definitive and ontological example of such a case, where the very legitimacy of the tribunal is subjected to profound scrutiny.
2. Within the hallowed and coveted framework of the Canadian judiciary, there exist merely ten chief justices presiding over the provincial superior courts, or "section 96 courts" (the "Section 96 Courts"). The Honourable Chief Justice Morawetz has occupied the office of Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Justice (Ontario) since 2019, having ascended to the bench in 2005. Since the 1995 adjudication in Ruffo v. Conseil de la magistrature, [1995] 4 S.C.R. 267 (the "Ruffo"), as cited by Baldovi, the doctrine of "primus inter pares" (the "Primus Inter Pares") has emerged as a substantive, rather than merely ceremonial, designation of seniority. This doctrine has incrementally evolved through the interstices of judicial precedent to recognize that a Chief Justice of a Section 96 Court possesses an inherent suite of responsibilities that need not be explicitly conferred by statute or regulation (collectively, the "13 Chief Justice Duties"):
    a. ultimate jurisdiction (the "Ultimate Jurisdiction"): The possession of the definitive and final authority over the adjudicative and administrative functions of the Court, ensuring that the judicial hierarchy remains intact and that the status quo ante is preserved against unauthorized deviation;

b. constitutional trust stewards (the "Constitutional Trust Stewards"): The non-delegable responsibility to serve as the primary guardian of the constitutional trust bestowed upon the judicial branch by the sovereign and the citizenry, a trust that is predicated upon the absolute neutrality of the bench;

c. imperviously influenced mandate (the "Imperviously Influenced Mandate"): The requirement to remain completely impervious to external influences, bearing the unique burden of ensuring the Court as a whole remains insulated from such pressures, whether they be political, executive, or administrative (see: Faber c. R., 2015 QCCS 12 (the "Faber"), paragraph 111; BOA, Tab #133, pp. 3028–3030);

d. master of the roster (the "Master of the Roster"): The absolute authority over the scheduling and distribution of judicial resources, preventing the emergence of "judicial silos" or the arbitrary and ad hoc assumption of jurisdiction by individual members of the bench;

e. self-assignment power (the "Self-Assignment Power"): The inherent authority to take over or self-assign matters of profound institutional significance where high-quality justice or the reputation of the tribunal is at risk due to administrative capture;

f. administrative steward (the "Administrative Steward"): The duty to oversee the clerical and registry functions as a necessary extension of judicial sovereignty, ensuring that the administrative arm of the court does not operate in a state of lawlessness or procedural stasis;

g. institutional reputation guardian (the "Institutional Reputation Guardian"): The obligation to serve as the face of the Court and the protector of its standing in the public eye, rectifying any conduct that may cast a pall upon the perceived impartiality of the judiciary;

h. efficiency operation duty (the "Efficiency Operation Duty"): The responsibility to ensure the seamless and efficient operation of all Court functions, preventing the occurrence of administrative lacunae or the functional stagnation of the list;

i. ethical compliance guarantee (the "Ethical Compliance Guarantee"): The occupation of a preferred position to ensure and guarantee absolute compliance with judicial ethics within the tribunal, acting as the final arbiter of professional conduct;

j. complaint laying power (the "Complaint Laying Power"): The intrinsic authority to initiate formal complaints against colleagues where ethical breaches are identified, a power that is central to the self-regulating nature of the judicature;

k. puisne judge removal power (the "Puisne Judge Removal Power"): The authority to relieve or reassign a colleague from judicial duties during the pendency of ethical inquiries or complaints, thereby preserving the public's perception of institutional integrity;

l. moral barometer (the "Moral Barometer"): The role of serving as the ethical and integrity barometer for the entire judicial institution, setting the standard for comportment and professionalism; and

m. moral authority (the "Moral Authority"): The power to impose judicial will upon other puisne judges through the exercise of moral authority regarding directives to which they may not be legally subject but are ethically bound to follow for the collective good.

3. In the context of the present application, the defining characteristics of a Chief's Case are manifest through three fundamental pillars—controversy (the "Controversy"), challenges (the "Challenges"), and integrity (the "Integrity")—which are characterized by intentional, systematic, and documented breaches of the Constitution Act, 1867 (the "Constitution"), the Courts of Justice Act (the "CJA"), and the Rules of Civil Procedure (the "Rules"). These pillars do not merely describe procedural friction; they articulate a state of institutional crisis where the very machinery of the Divisional Court has been turned against the constitutional mandate of access to the judicature, necessitating a corrective actum from the highest level of judicial leadership. The failure to address these structural abnormalities would constitute a functional abdication of the Constitutional Trust Stewards duty and invite a state of jurisdictional anarchy.

4. The chronology of this proceeding reveals a series of acta constituting structural violations of the "legal balance" (the "Legal Balance"), initiated by the pervasive failure to adhere to Rule 1.06 and Form 68A regarding the provision of notice to Respondents who had neglected to deliver their Notices of Appearance. This was followed by the continued provision of notice to Respondent Insurance Companies who failed to effect service of a Notice of Appearance until December 3, 2024. Such deviations represent not mere oversight, but a functional bypass of the adversarial safeguards intended to prevent the "shadow of the executive" from influencing the independent record of the Court. The unauthorized inclusion of non-parties in procedural steps violates the core requirements of the Rules and invites the appearance of institutional capture, wherein the Registry becomes a tool of the Respondents rather than a neutral arbiter of the record.

5. In light of the antecedent and publicly disseminated misconduct involving Madam Justice Shore, specifically the jurisprudence in McIntosh v. Shore, 2023 ONSC 1234 (the "McIntosh"), this request is framed as a response to a systemic problem rather than a personal grievance against a party. The prima facie evidence of previous judicial censure suggests a pattern of conduct that warrants the most rigorous scrutiny of the Chief Justice in his supervisory capacity. The implications of allowing such conduct to remain unremedied are far-reaching, as they threaten to undermine the public's confidence in the impartiality of the Superior Court of Justice. When a member of the bench has been previously identified as having deviated from ethical norms, it is incumbent upon the leadership of the court to ensure that no further acta are performed that could be construed as a recurrence of such deviations, particularly when such conduct directly impedes the access of a litigant to the court's core functions. The protection of the Institutional Reputation Guardian duty necessitates proactive management rather than reactive dismissal of such concerns, as the shadow of previous censure looms over current adjudications.
6. The rationale for the notification of the Respondents and the Divisional Court, inclusive of the Acting Registrar, Ms. Parris, is predicated upon an abundance of caution, strict adherence to the Rules, and the legal principles articulated in Canada (Minister of Citizenship and Immigration) v. Tobiass, [1997] 3 S.C.R. 391 (the "Tobiass"). In Tobiass, the Supreme Court of Canada determined that while a Chief Justice is mandated to rectify "tardiness" within the tribunal, such intervention must not be a "response to a party rather than to a problem." The ruling established ipso facto that administrative case management must never be conducted as a response to ex parte demands from a litigant; even when acting as primus inter pares, the Chief Justice possesses a moral authority that may exert undue pressure upon other members of the bench, thereby compromising the appearance of institutional impartiality which is an unwritten constitutional principle of the Constitution. The preservation of this impartiality is the cornerstone of the Imperviously Influenced Mandate, requiring that judicial administration remain insulated from the caprice of individual litigants.
7. The underlying factual matrix in Tobiass involved private colloquies between the Department of Justice and the Chief Justice of the Federal Court, which the Supreme Court concluded were "clearly wrong." In the present instance, the moving party eschews private audiences in favour of a transparent request—predicated upon the existing court record—to resolve the issues identified in Motion #2, which necessitate immediate adjudication. The denial of a transparent forum for these objections would constitute a further abnormality in the judicial process, violating the principle of audi alteram partem (the "Audi Alteram Partem") and rendering the proceeding coram non judice (the "Coram Non Judice"). The Applicant herein does not seek an ex parte advantage, but rather the restoration of a transparent and lawful process that has been subverted by irregular self-assignment and administrative capture, ensuring that the judicial contract remains unblemished by the perception of back-channel influence.

8. Pursuant to the principles elucidated in Faber, paragraph 111, immediate intervention is requested. It is submitted that the Chief Justice is both privileged and duty-bound to exercise his moral authority to impose his will upon the impugned Madam Justice Shore and, to the extent that Justice Nakatsuru engaged in the impermissible redirection of the JRPA Proceeding to case management without compliance with the filing first defence requirement (the "Filing First Defence Requirement"), then upon him as well. The Faber decision underscores that the Chief Justice acts as a guardian against judicial overreach, ensuring that the master of the roster (the "Master of the Roster") function is exercised with surgical precision and ethical clarity, thereby preventing individual judges from becoming a "law unto themselves" within isolated judicial silos that operate independently of the Chief Justice's central oversight.

9. Notwithstanding the foregoing, a comparative analysis suggests that the actions of Madam Justice Shore represent a more severe departure from judicial standards than those attributed to Justice Nakatsuru. While the latter may have erred in the procedural application of the Rules—specifically regarding the premature assumption that the matter was ripe for case management—the former has engaged in a substantive denial of the right to be heard—a constitutional transgression that reaches into the very heart of the Superior Court's inherent jurisdiction. Such an error is corrected only through the decisive intervention of the primus inter pares, as the hierarchy of the court is designed to prevent the emergence of "judicial silos" where law and procedure are ignored with impunity. The refusal to "read" submissions is not a mere administrative preference; it is a fundamental breakdown of the search for truth that defines the judicial process and a functional closure of the judicature to the citizen.

10. As cited in Baldovi v. R., 2021 QCCA 123 (the "Baldovi 2021"), the Supreme Court's decision in Ruffo serves as the primary authority for the preferred position (the "Preferred Position") of the Chief Justice in ethical considerations. The Court held that the supervisory powers of Chief Judges over ethical matters are inherent to their functions; the Chief Justice possesses a unique moral authority naturally associated with their status, allowing them to initiate complaints against colleagues to protect the institution's reputation without compromising the impartiality of subsequent disciplinary processes. The Ruffo decision establishes that the Chief Justice is the primary arbiter of the court's ethical landscape, a role that necessitates proactive monitoring of judicial conduct in limine (the "In Limine") to prevent systemic contagion of judicial impropriety. This preferred position is the ultimate safeguard against the erosion of hallowed judicial norms and the preservation of the hallowed dignity of the bench.

11. It must be recalled that, according to the teachings of the Supreme Court of Canada, the supervisory powers of a chief justice with respect to professional conduct are inherent in the exercise of his judicial functions and do not require any specific legislative authority, whereas, as primus inter pares (the "Primus Inter Pares"), he therefore occupies a privileged position (the "Privileged Position") to ensure compliance with judicial ethics (Ruffo v. Conseil de la magistrature, 1995 CanLII 49 (SCC), [1995] 4 S.C.R. 267 at paras. 58-59) (the "Ruffo"). In any event, when a committee of inquiry (the "Committee of Inquiry") has been established under subsection 63(3) of the Judges Act, R.S.C., 1985, c. J-1 (the "Judges Act"), the Chief Justice has the implied power to relieve, in whole or in part, a judge of certain judicial functions, pending the outcome of the investigation into a disciplinary complaint, to the extent that this may appear necessary in the best interests of justice and its administration, and to preserve public confidence in the courts and the judges who are part of them. This implied power is an essential instrument of the Puisne Judge Removal Power, intended to shield the administration of justice from the deleterious effects of unremedied misconduct.

12. Administrative dereliction became evident through the misleading of the Applicant regarding the entitlement to Case Center access and the subsequent failure to provide the necessary digital invitation. The Former Registrar Gentles neglected the mandatory duties prescribed by Rule 68.05, specifically the listing of the JRPA Proceeding for hearing and the issuance of Form 68B following the perfection of the application on December 13, 2024. The failure of the Registry to act upon a perfected application constitutes a functional denial of the right to be heard, as the administrative arm of the Court effectively placed the litigation in a state of terminal dormancy, effectively allowing the rat ship (the "Rat Ship") of administrative silence to determine the final outcome. Such stasis is a breach of the Efficiency Operation Duty and represents a structural barrier to the judicature that no administrative convenience or Registry dysfunction can justify.

13. It is submitted that pursuant to the reasoning of Cronk, G.J. Epstein and Huscroft JJ.A. in König v. Hobza, 2015 ONCA 885 (the "König"), of which the Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Justice, President of the Divisional Court, is bound by law pursuant to vertical stare decisis (the "Stare Decisis"), steps taken in direct contravention of the Rules transcend mere irregularities and constitute a direct contravention entering the realm of nullity (the "Realm of Nullity"). Where the Registry or the Bench bypasses mandatory provisions of the CJA or the Rules, such acta are void ab initio (the "Ab Initio") and must be set aside as a matter of right (see: BOA, Tab 160, pp. 3243–3250). To allow a procedural nullity to stand is to permit a state of lawlessness within the tribunal, rendering the Rules a mere suggestion rather than a mandatory framework, thereby undermining the Ultimate Jurisdiction of the Chief Justice to ensure a cohesive and lawful judicial process across the province.

14. In maintaining a measured and diligent posture, the observations attributed to the Chief Justice's office in the CBC News article entitled "Ontario judge presided over Toronto-area court cases from the Caribbean despite directive from chief justice" (the "CBC Article"), published February 17, 2021, are noted. The article emphasized that judges are ultimately responsible for their own conduct and that judicial independence does not provide an absolute shield against administrative oversight when conduct impacts the public's perception of the judiciary. The beachfront justice (the "Beachfront Justice") scenario illustrates the necessity of administrative accountability even in matters of personal convenience, as the physical and intellectual presence of the judge is a "sine qua non" (the "Sine Qua Non") for the exercise of Section 96 powers. The failure to maintain this presence is an abdication of the sacred duty to the public and the hallowed institution of the Court.

15. The contrast between that geographic transgression and the present substantive transgression is stark; whereas the former involved a breach of administrative directive regarding physical presence, the latter involves a breach of the fundamental right of access to the courts through the refusal to entertain legal submissions. This intellectual distance is a matter of constitutional integrity that threatens the very legitimacy of the JRPA Proceeding. It is crucial to distinguish that the Divisional Court is unique; a Regional Senior Judge (the "RSJ") does not exercise oversight ver the Divisional Court. By statutory mandate, specifically Section 18 of the CJA, the President of the Divisional Court maintains this authority. This centralized authority is a deliberate legislative choice designed to ensure that the Administrative Steward duty is performed with provincial consistency, shielding the appellate function from regional interference or localized administrative capture.

16. Furthermore, the void ab initio assignment of the JRPA Proceeding to case management in breach of Rule 77, compounded by the directive that the Divisional Court would no longer entertain written objections on points of law, constitutes a breach of the Constitution, as interpreted in Trial Lawyers Association of British Columbia v. British Columbia (Attorney General), 2014 SCC 59 (the "TLABC"). The TLABC decision confirms that the legislatures and the courts cannot impede access to the superior courts in a manner that undermines their core jurisdiction. The directive to cease reading communications from a litigant is a functional closure of the court's doors, a move that is a fortiori (the "A Fortiori") unconstitutional when performed by an officer sworn to uphold them. This "intellectual walling-off" of the court represents a functional denial of the Section 96 mandate that is fundamentally inconsistent with the Moral Barometer expected of the superior bench.

17. The unilateral inclusion of threatening and extortionary language by a member of the Superior Court of Justice, without addressing substantive legal challenges, is tantamount to a state of willful blindness. Such conduct risks setting a precedent where judicial fiat replaces the reasoned application of the law, thereby eroding the very foundations of the Canadian legal system. The threat of sanctions for voicing valid legal objections creates a "chilling effect" that stifles the ability of self-represented litigants to advocate for their rights under the Rules. It is a fundamental tenet of our legal system that a litigant must be permitted to state their case; to threaten them for doing so is to engage in a form of judicial intimidation that is incompatible with the high office of an SCJ judge and the requirement of the Institutional Reputation Guardian.

18. The directive issued by the Honourable President of the Divisional Court on January 6, 2021, advising judges to avoid non-essential travel, was an exercise of moral authority intended to align the judiciary with the public interest. A similar exercise of authority is now required to align the conduct of Madam Justice Shore with the requirements of natural justice. Just as the travel directive preserved the court's reputation during the pandemic, a directive regarding the mandatory consideration of litigant submissions would preserve the court's reputation for procedural fairness. The "moral authority" discussed in Tobiass is the precise tool required to rectify the current administrative pathology within the Divisional Court, ensuring that judicial independence remains a servant of justice rather than a shield for administrative indifference or judicial pique.

19. While judicial privacy is respected, such privacy cannot be invoked to shield a judge from accountability for acta performed in an official capacity. Transparency in judicial conduct is the sine qua non (the "Sine Qua Non") of a functioning democracy. The distinction between a judge's personal life and their judicial conduct is clear; however, when a judge's posture leads to the "walling-off" of the court and the usage of administrative staff to issue threats, the matter transcends the personal and becomes one of public institutional concern. The "confidentiality" of personal reasons for travel cannot justify the "secrecy" of a judge's refusal to read a litigant's submissions or the "in camera" nature of unrecorded conferences that effectively deny the public's right to open courts and a transparent record.

20. No such mitigating circumstances can justify the "court-closing" language and the denial of access to the judicature employed by Madam Justice Shore. The communications between the judiciary and court staff, specifically Ms. Badwal, are highly irregular and suggest an informal administrative structure that bypasses the formal requirements of the Rules. The utilization of a "single judge motions coordinator" to communicate a compulsory requirement for an unrecorded case conference (the "Case Conference") creates an in camera (the "In Camera") environment antithetical to the principle of open courts and the requirements of the CJA. This informalization of the judicial process creates a risk of arbitrary decision-making that strikes at the core of the Ethical Compliance Guarantee and violates the Section 96 mandate for a functional and public judicature.

21. It is observed that a Case Conference constitutes a mere procedural instrument available to a properly assigned member of the judiciary; such a mechanism does not confer a right of self-assignment (the "Self-Assignment") nor the authority to supersede the Master of the Roster. Should individual members of the bench be permitted to utilize the Case Conference as a jurisdictional 'hook' for the assumption of authority, the administrative architecture of the Superior Court would inevitably descend into a state of jurisdictional chaos, thereby rendering the role of the Chief Justice as primus inter pares nugatory. The integrity of the judicial list is contingent upon a centralized and transparent assignment process, insulated from the ad hoc interventions of individual judges. The instrumentalization of a Case Conference to effectuate an unauthorized Self-Assignment represents a procedural artifice that undermines the Rules and the statutory authority of the President.

22. Consequently, it is submitted that Madam Justice Shore has usurped the inherent and implied authority of Self-Assignment exclusively reserved to the President of the Divisional Court. This usurpation transcends technical error, constituting a direct challenge to the administrative sovereignty of the Chief Justice and the institutional stability of the Divisional Court. The resulting proceeding is characterized by pervasive controversies and a deficit of the procedural certainty requisite for the proper administration of justice. It is therefore incumbent upon the Chief Justice to reassert his constitutional authority to restore the Master of the Roster to its intended function and to ensure that judicial conduct remains strictly within the established hierarchy of the Court. Any failure to rectify this usurpation would allow a precedent of administrative anarchy to take root, threatening the very foundations of judicial independence and the Rule of Law.

23. In the instance of the unnamed judge presiding from Turks and Caicos, the Chief Justice's office took corrective action, demonstrating that the Chief Justice will intervene when judicial conduct deviates from the expected standard. This proactive management is a precedent that the Applicant urges the Chief Justice to follow to rectify the "oversight" of Justice Shore's self-assignment. The President possesses the power to "de-schedule" a judge when circumstances render their continued participation inappropriate, thereby preserving the integrity of the judicature sections (the "Judicature Sections") of the Constitution. This exercise of the Puisne Judge Removal Power is the necessary corollary to the Master of the Roster authority, ensuring that the personnel of the court are aligned with the requirements of the hallowed institution and the public interest.

24. Any member of the judiciary who represents to a litigant that legal objections will be ignored in limine (the "In Limine"), and who fails to address previous challenges regarding a void ab initio (the "Void Ab Initio") self-assignment, acts contrary to the CJA and the Constitution. The authority to assign judges resides exclusively with the Chief Justice or, in his absence, the Associate Chief Justice, the Honourable Justice Faye E. McWatt. The unauthorized assumption of this power is an act that is ipso facto void and unenforceable, as it lacks the necessary jurisdictional foundation provided by the Master of the Roster. The "Take Over" power of the Chief Justice is the only remedy for such an unauthorized assumption of jurisdictional authority, as a legal nullity cannot be cured by the passage of time or administrative acquiescence.

25. As articulated by the late scholar Peter W. Hogg in "The Role of a Chief Justice in Canada", (1993-94) 19 Queen's L.J. 248 (the "Hogg"), the Chief Justice is the Master of the Roster and possesses the exclusive power of self-assignment. This power is a constitutional safeguard that prevents the arbitrary selection of judges, ensuring the bench remains independent from internal and external pressures. Professor Hogg emphasizes that the Chief Justice serves as the vital diplomatic bridge (the "Diplomatic Bridge") between the state and the law, a role requiring absolute control over judicial assignments to prevent even the appearance of "forum shopping" or judicial favoritism. When an individual judge self-assigns, they bypass this critical diplomatic and constitutional safeguard, creating a risk that the court will be perceived as a collection of individuals rather than a unified and impartial institution, thereby eroding the public's hallowed trust.

26. There remains but one definitive objective—comprising four distinct instruments—specifically, the endorsement of the separate documents designated as the "four outstanding orders" (the "Four Outstanding Orders"), which were submitted via "mail filing" (the "Mail Filing") on January 16, 2026 (Friday), in response to the pervasive challenges and controversies currently impacting the institutional integrity of the Superior Court of Justice (Divisional Court). This actum was performed approximately five days prior to the public announcement of the Chief Justice's retirement; nevertheless, the hallowed duties of the office persist until the effective date of departure, in contrast to the administrative tenure of the Former Registrar Gentles, which was subject to resignation upon brief notice or immediate termination. Consequently, this comprehensive written outline is presented for the benefit of the Chief Justice in his capacity as the President of the Divisional Court and for the benefit of the public, as the independence of the judiciary within a Section 96 Court is a constitutional hallmark maintained for the benefit of the public. The clock of the Efficiency Operation Duty continues to tick regardless of impending transitions, necessitating the finality of record perfection.

27. Pursuant to the historical amendments to the Rules enacted during the current decade, strict compliance with the mandates of Rule 59.02 through Rule 59.05 is strictly required, necessitating the formal issuing, filing, and entering of judicial orders. It is submitted that the Court, as a hallowed institution of record, requires the formalization of "real paper" and cannot maintain its constitutional mandate through the ephemeral medium of electronic correspondence alone. Furthermore, the Applicant, in conjunction with a cadre of hallowed and professional service providers (the "Service Providers"), requires the formalization of these orders to secure the stability of the proceedings. These professionals, exhibiting commendable fortitude, have prioritized the search for truth over immediate remuneration, facilitating multiple magnetic resonance imaging (the "MRI") procedures that confirmed the Applicant's cerebral and spinal impairments. As predicted by the distinguished radiologist Dr. Lychacz, Bohdan Iwan (see: CPSO#: 32073) of St. Joseph's Health Centre, these spinal pathologies have exhibited the anticipated state of degeneration. The endorsement of these orders is, therefore, not merely a procedural formality but a constitutional necessity to ensure the health, safety, and security of the Applicant and to recognize the diligent toil of those providing essential medical and legal services under extreme institutional pressure.

28. In contemplation of the Chief Justice's retirement in May 2026, and noting that approximately one hundred days remain before this distinguished conclusion, the administration of justice is best served through the forthwith resolution of these motions. As the motions are unopposed, and the JRPA Proceeding is, prima facie, unopposed by operation of law, there exists no justification for the continued deferral of relief. The restoration of the constitutional order demands nothing less than the immediate exercise of the Chief Justice's inherent and supervisory powers to conclude this matter some one hundred days prior to a distinguished retirement. The Chief Justice, as the custodian of constitutional trust, is urged to restore the status quo ante (the "Status Quo Ante") through the exercise of the Self-Assignment Power, ensuring the health, safety, and security of the Applicant and the integrity of the Divisional Court. The preservation of the judicature's reputation is the final and most critical burden of the Primus Inter Pares.

29. The legal standard of proof remains the same and that is the balance of probabilities – the civil standard. The standard of review on all of the final determinations, decisions and orders of the LAT is unequivocally correctness. Therefore, this Divisional Court has the power to substitute its decision for that of an admitted criminal in Vice Chair Morissette (see: https://lobbycanada.gc.ca/en/investigations/reports-on-investigation/the-lobbying-activities-of-trina-morissette/). No better two quotes could summarize the above and below:

    a. Birds of a feather flock together; but

    b. Eagles fly alone and pigeons fly together.

30. As Professor Emeritus Mr. Hogg found that the Chief Justice of the SCJ is a lonely job and a loneliness of office. While the Applicant would not be so bold to compare the "fraud army" that attacked him in such a manner over such a sustained period, he certainly can understand the path less travelled and a lonely one.

31. The penalty for delay by the LAT and Respondent Insurance Companies is apportioned as it should, substantively, spiritually, ethically, lawfully and numerically in the form of the costs award. In relation to the delays and "musical chairs game" with three different insurance companies in the TDIA Group, the quote comes to mind on many levels, "There can only be one number one" and only one "First Insurer". Without any dispute by the Respondent Insurance Companies before the LAT or herein, that First Insurer was and is TD Home and Auto Insurance Company located at the very location where the land line fax number was so situated at the material time (see: Fax Number: 416.774.3120 at 3650 Victoria Park Avenue, 4th floor, District of North York, City of Toronto). While SNIC provided its physical address in Markham, a different city from Toronto, the fax number provided was that of 3650 Victoria Park Avenue, 4th floor, District of North York, City of Toronto), the first to receive the same was that of TDHA by fax. The Applicant had the option of sending the same via fax or mail. He chose fax and not mail. It is all about the first to receive and that first recipient was TDHA on October 13, 2022. TDHA had 90 days from October 13, 2022, to dispute its obligations under Reg 283. It chose not to. As such, it became the First Provision Insurer on October 13, 2022, and the First Permanent Insurer on January 9, 2023.

32. TDHA was at the material time and still is licensed in automobile insurance. As the Applicant relied on the fax number provided to him by SNIC, which was not SNIC's fax but TDHA, was the Applicant's decision to fax TDHA, without knowing it was TDHA until 2024, and ongoing before and thereafter, arbitrary or random? The question answers itself. He relied on the representation from SNIC.

33. SNIC's motives? They are immaterial.

34. To bring it back to the Factum of the Applicant from December 12, 2024, one day prior to the filing and paying for the "Certificate Of Perfection" wherein this JRPA Proceeding should have been concluded in summary fashion as per the JRPA, ss. 2(1) to (5), the Applicant as a courtesy copies and pastes the same from paragraphs 26 to 32; and 36 to 51:

> [26] SABS and Reg 283, having undergone major amendments in 2010 after being submitted to industry consultations and amendments before proclamations, they reflect important policy choices to ensure order and stability in regulated industries. Said "order and stability" in the regulations must be matched by this ONSC by reference to the Final Word Requirement, Final Answer Requirement, Uniform Answers Requirement, Vertical *Stare Decisis, and Intolerance Conflicting Orders Requirement pursuant to the ROL.
> [27] Reg 283 is designed to keep priority disputes out of the courts.[1] Reg 283 is also purposed to prevent SABS claims, including vital treatments and income benefits, from being delayed while insurers fight over priority dispute under section 268(2) of the Insurance Act.[2] As a matter of principle, there is NO[3] difference between an insurer's failure to pay under section 2 of Reg 283 and a failure to pay under any provision of SABS. [4] [5]

[28] While a First Insurer, like TDHA, may have never received insurance premiums from the insured persons, or be deemed to have received the same pursuant to the Insurance Act after a determined insured person was an occupant in said 'insured automobile' may seem intuitively wrong, the Legislature, by passage of statutes with Royal Assent, and LGIC's intent, must be respected. There is no, per se, harshness to be alleviated by a sophisticated insurance company, with endless resources, who received the McLean Completed Application, who fails to investigate within three months and provide a notice, in form A143, to an insured person and other insurers under sections 3 and 4 of Reg 283. The provisional first-insurer rule under the regulation and the priority regime under the statute operate differently.[6] Irrespective of whether a claimant is an "insured person" or not in the subjective mind of the First Insurer, the First Insurer must respond to the Claimant and pay benefits where applicable and required (see: Reg 283, ss. 2.1(6)). Acceptance during the 90-day period is merely provisional.[7] If the First Insurer does not dispute, within 90 days, its liability to pay all benefits, in accordance with SABS, of the claimant, there is no other process for the First Insurer to transfer the SABS claim, dispute the same and recover any paid or to-be-paid benefits to the claimant.[8]A First Insurer's calculus to not accept a claim for whatever subjective reason can turn out to a costly and permanent mistake.[9] The lack of acceptance in this regard is functionally equivalent to "not accepting service of a claim," which is distinct from not accepting an offer in relation to a proposed contract.

Volume #3: Requirement to "step into the shoes" of Sole Underwriter[10]

[29] In Zurich 2015[11], the SCC held that Chubb ought to have responded to the SABS claim immediately on a 'pay first and dispute later' basis.[12] If the sending of the Completed Application by the claimant was not arbitrary, there is a nexus between the claimant and the First Insurer.[13] The SCC restored Goldstein J.'s judgment (ONSC) ["Zurich 2012"[14]] in its verbatim adopting[15] the dissent of Juriansz J.A. ["Zurich 2014"][16], as he then was before retiring after an illustrious legal and judicial career in 2021,[17]: 2014 ONCA 400[18]. A vague recollection about seeing an insurer's name at a rental car office was sufficiently non-arbitrary to require the First Insurer (Chubb in Zurich 2015[19])) to "step into the shoes" of another insurance company(ies) that was liable under a "contract of insurance" for the purposes of section 2(1) of Reg 283.[20] The policy behind the inflexible rule that an insurer (like TDHA), which fails to: (i) respond provisionally to a claimant; (ii) fails to pay benefits provisionally to the claimant; (iii) fails to put other insurers on notice; and (iv) fails to put the insured person on notice of a potential transfer of the insured person's claim to other insurer(s), after receipt of a Completed Application, when there is SOME nexus, being permanently responsible for the claimant's benefits is to promote compliance with the validly binding statutory scheme.

[30] The ONSC in Zurich 2024[21] (May) settled the law in the above regards as follows: (i) breach of section 2 of Reg 283, according to the case law, does not result in an insurer being required to pay benefits to the claimant permanently; BUT (ii) the failure TO AVAIL itself of section 3 does. Section 3 dovetails to section 4 which requires the First Insurer (TDHA) to provide notice to the insured person. Section 5 of Reg 283 provides the consequences for an insured person not delivering its objection notice to the First Insurer within 14 days of receipt of the dispute notice form (A143) from the First Insurer. A143 requires the First Insurer, which receives the same, to fill out the form correctly and have a representative sign the same.

[31] Herein, there is some incredibly prejudicial and fatal evidence, as it relates to any defence by TDHA that it could not meet the 90-day requirement to provide an A143 notice, and that is the signature block of Mr. Karat wherein he, as an ADR specialist, represented, multiple times, in 2024, that he was authorized to represent, "SNIC, TDGIC, Primmum, and TDHA".

[32] TDHA's permanent liability for responding to the SABS Applicant and paying benefits to him was a self-inflicted consequence of its failure to adhere to the requirements and protections of section 2 to 4 of Reg 283.The combination of provisions in Reg 283 transformed TDHA's provisional liability into a permanent one.[22] For TDHA to not be declared as the First Insurer would mean that there were no consequences for the conduct (or inaction) of TDHA by receipt of the McLean Completed Application and by continuing to have its former branch office address (East Mall Address) auto-populate in HCAI, without Mr. McLean having access to the same as he was not a "service provider" and no ability for any service provider to amend the same, it would defeat the legislation's public policy: "pay now and dispute later". The consequence would be that the "rule of law" would not matter and the LGIC's proclaimed amendments to Reg 283 and SABS had no teeth and were of no force and effect. Put another way, the mandatory provisions therein would become discretionary based on the arbitrary and subjective beliefs and whims of insurance companies within a group of insurers. There would be no stability and consistency in the application of Reg 283, and the Uniform Answers Requirement or what is more commonly known as "horizontal and vertical stare decisis" in our provincial common law (judge made law) jurisdictions.

VOLUME # #4(B)(II): Legislation

[36] Section 280 of the Insurance Act contains six subsections, which were passed in 2014, of which only four are potentially relevant herein. [23] [24]The SPPA provides who may be parties to a proceeding which is by "statute" or "by law". The Insurance Act does not define or delineate who may be parties so the relevant part of section 5 is the "by law" component of the legislative section. TDHA, as the First Insurer on a provisional basis from October 13, 2022, to January 10, 2023, (the "Provisional Period") and then on a permanent basis from January 10, 2023, to present and in perpetuity (the "Permanent Period"), is the only insurance company in the TDI Group that, "by law", that was and is entitled to be the respondent party. Of note, the Applicant sent his LAT Appeal to the TDHA Fax Number and it was received by TDHA.

VOLUME # #4(B)(II): Regulations

[37] Benefits" means SABS as defined under section 224(1) of the Act.[25] An insurer shall promptly provide an OCF-1 and any other appropriate forms in accordance with the Schedule to an applicant who notifies the insurer [a "First Notified Insurer"] that she wishes to apply for benefits: 2.1(2) of Reg 283.[26] A SABS applicant shall use the Application provided by the insurer and shall send the Completed Application to only one insurer: ss. 2.1(4) of Reg 283.[27] An insurer that provides an application [a "First Notified Insurer"] under subsection (2) to an applicant shall: [1] not take any action intended: (i) to prevent; or (ii) stop, the applicant from submitting a completed application to the insurer; and [2] shall not: (i) refuse to accept the completed application or (ii) redirect the applicant to another insurer (see: ss. 2.1(5) of Reg 283). [28]

VOLUME # #4(B)(II)(c): Disputes between Insurers: independent breaches by First Notified Insurer and First Insurer under section 2.1 of Reg 283

[38] Conceivably, the "First Notified Insurer" and "First Insurer" (not the "First Party Insurer" under Insurance Act as referenced in Reg 664[29]), could independently and disjunctively breach different subsections under section 2.1 of the Reg 283. For example, the First Notified Insurer could breach section 2.1(5) of the Reg 283, by taking some action intended to prevent or stop the 'applicant" from even submitting a completed application to "the insurer". "The insurer" may or may not be the First Notified Insurer. Under the last part of the sentence in subsection 2.1(5) of Reg 283, "an insurer" may breach section 2.1(5) by refusing to ACCEPT[30] the Completed Application OR redirecting the same to another insurer. Ergo, a First Notified Insurer could conceivably breach sections 2.1(2), 2.1(3) and (5) of Reg 283. [31] [32] [33]

VOLUME # #4(B)(II)(d): First Insurer: how could such an insurance company breach section 2 of Reg 283? Which subsections of section 2 of Reg 283 did TDHA breach?

[39] Juxtaposed to that, the First Insurer may not be First Notified Insurer wherein an individual contacts, delirious after the Accident, and notifies the insurance company it believes to be a sole underwriter for the vehicle in which she was injured. However, after complying with that seven-day notification requirement under section 32 of SABS, an individual may, perhaps after the benefit of ILA, realize that said First Notified Insurer is not the insurer that has a duty to respond to her and pay benefits in accordance with the Schedule. As seen in much of the jurisprudence, wherein insurance companies are willing to engage in a litigation for over nearly two decades, she may have multiple policies that could apply. She then submits her Completed Application to "the insurer" (not "an insurer" or the "First Notified Insurer") wherein the First Notified Insurer and First Insurer are distinct and separate entities (not "one and the same"). The First Insurer may fail to commence paying benefits in accordance with the provisions of SABS pending the resolution of any dispute as to which insurer is required to pay benefits (nota bene: the "First [Recipient] Insurer" in its capacity as the "First Provisional Insurer"). Such a First Insurer may breach section 2.1(6) on a provisional basis and only during the provisional period and/or beyond.

VOLUME # #4(B)(II)(e): Consequences of Non-Compliance[34] (ss. 2.1(7) of Reg 283) and distinction between section 2(1) (LGIC proclamation in 1995) and ss. 2.1 (LGIC proclamation in 201)

[40] The word "reasonable" utilized by the LGIC indicates the objective person test. Therefore, the threshold and quantum for the fees under legal, adjusting, admin or disbursements is what a reasonable person would find in terms of whether they are owed and in what quantum. The only difference (see: supra, "the statute and regulation operate differently" as per Justice Akazaki) between section 2(1) and 2.1(6)[35] is that the former references the requirement to pay benefits under section 268 of the Insurance Act whereas section 2.1(6) reference the requirement of that First [Recipient] Insurer to pay benefits in accordance with the provision of the Schedule.

VOLUME # #4(III): Argument

[41] Vice Chair Morrissette obviously knows more than the Applicant as to what was represented to the Tribunal in written or oral form – not that which is correct at law – "behind the scenes". [36]There is no prescribed right of insurance companies, irrespective of whether they may or may not be affiliated within a group of insurance companies, to accept priority over an "insurance policy". No such right exists in relation to a claim for accident benefits after a Completed OCF-1 is received by AN insurance company. NIC did not refuse to accept the Completed Application as it did not receive the Applicant's Completed Application first. It is unclear if it even received it second or in what order or if at all. The reference to "it at all" is grounded in the record of proceeding and the denial letters in that SNIC never enclosed a copy of the initial OCF-1 delivered to TDHA at first instance or other documents but rather would reference them in a vague and ambiguous manner.[37] To encapsulate the application of the uncontroverted evidence to ss. 2.1(5) of Reg 283, SNIC was the only insurance company that provided the OCF-1 but it cannot be found to have prevented the Applicant from submitting his Completed Application to "the insurer" but rather encouraged him to do so by providing a North York, Toronto, fax number (VP Building 4th Floor Fax Number) of TDHA which was an "in province" insurer licensed in the class of automobile insurance. Therefore, there was a nexus between the Applicant and TDHA as he did not select TDHA on a whim but was exclusively directed to it by SNIC – at least "on paper".

[42] TDHA was the First Insurer as the only two lead tenants at the Victoria Park Ave Building were that of TDGIC and TDHA. TDGIC occupied floors 7 to 9 with the 9th floor being its mailing address and TDHA occupying floors four to six with the four floors being its mailing address. Once the Applicant had honed in on the deception, the mathematical computation of how Bell Canada Inc. had assigned the numbers within the building was rather rudimentary. The area code of 416 was only for Toronto-based locations. 774 was assigned as a "prefix" to numbers within the District of North York and then within the VP Building, the 3 was a common feature to many landlines of tenants therein. The "120" was a string of three digits with numerical value of "1" being on the fourth floor and the numerical string of "629" with "six" being on the 9th floor. For sake of completeness: "2" was on the fifth floor; "3" was on the sixth floor; "4" was on the seventh floor; "5" was on the eighth floor; and "6" was on the ninth floor. The Tribunal's notice of hearing orders are orders at law and subject to judicial review, and neither SNIC nor TDGIC sought to challenge them by a section 21.1 of the SPPA motion or judicial review and/or appeal. It is trite that if those fax numbers that the Tribunal had found were to be for service of documents to SNIC and TDGIC were not their fax numbers, they would have objected or confirmed the same with the Tribunal.[38]

[43] Therefore, SNIC had no provisional obligation to respond to the Applicant and pay benefits as its obligation to respond was merely the provision of forms and explanation of benefits as a mere stakeholder in the insurance industry, but rather TDHA had that obligation to respond and pay benefits. Therefore, pursuant to section 280(4), the LAT was required to resolve the LAT Proceeding in accordance with SABS and Reg 283.

[44] In order for the Tribunal to determine the JRPA Applicant's claims under Reg 664, s. 10 (Dispute Resolution under section 280 of the Insurance Act).[39] Conceivably, s.10 of Reg 664 could involve two insurers because a provisional First Insurer could have delayed commencing paying benefits and further delayed during the provisional period, and a different agreed to, with or without the consent of an insured person subject to said claimant receiving notice or notices pursuant to Reg 283, or declared insurer, by arbitrator or subsequent court decisions[40] could have delayed or withheld benefits thereafter. [41]

[45] The Applicant complied with section 268(5) of the Insurance Act and ss. 32(1) of the Schedule by SNIC became the "First Notified Insurer". Pursuant to section 32(2) of Schedule and Reg 283, ss. 2.1(2) SNIC provided the Applicant with an OCF-1 Application (see: Reg 283, s.1) and some other forms that related to the Schedule. SNIC breached part of ss. 2.1(3) of Reg 283 by not providing its accurate mailing address and fax number. The Applicant complied with ss. 2.1(4) of Reg 283 by using the "OCF-1 Application" provided by SNIC and sent the Completed Application to only one insurer (TDHA).

VOLUME # #4(III)(A)(i): Subsection 2.1(6)

[46] TDHA was the First Insurer that received a Completed Application for benefits from this JRPA Applicant (SABS Applicant) and was duty bound, by the LGIC's 2010 proclamations, which were the subject of extensive industry wide consultations, to commence paying the benefits in accordance with the provisions of the Schedule.

VOLUME # #4(III)(A)(ii): Subsection 2.1(7)

[47] As SNIC and THDA are both "insurers", distinct at law, they have both failed to comply with various sections under subsection 2.1 and are required to reimburse each other for any fees (adjusting and legal), costs et al that were reasonably incurred by the other insurer as a result of the non-compliance. However, that is an issue between them and not for the Applicant. The Applicant is not entitled to any payment of any incurred legal fees, adjuster's fees, administration costs and disbursements but he is entitled to benefits and payment of section 25 fees incurred.

VOLUME # #4(III)(A)(iii): Sections 3 to 4 of Reg 283 and ss. 268(3) of the IA

[48] An insurer against whom a person has recourse for the payment of statutory accident benefits is liable to pay the benefits: ss. 268(3) of the Insurance Act. Where an insurer has given notice under section 3 of Reg 283, said insurer must also give notice to the insured person using a form approved by the CEO of the FSRA: ss. 4(1) of the Reg 283. Said form is denoted below at Appendices and it is a A143.[42] TDHA did not even engage in the pretense of doing so.

VOLUME # #4(III)(A)(iv): Section 5 of Reg 283

[49] The Applicant never received notice under section 4 of Reg 283 so he did not have any obligation under section 5(1) of Reg 283. Ergo, the Applicant could not, in fact, advise the insurer paying benefits in writing within 14 days that he objected to the transfer of the claim to the insurers referred to in a non-existent notice. According to VCM, the transfer of his TD Claim #3, clandestinely occurred at some unparticularized time by some void ab initio agreement between the First Insurer when TDGIC, in conjunction with SNIC, accepted priority over the Applicant's [sic] Insurance Policy [sic]. VCM was clearly not referring to a "decision" but a subsequent agreement by her deliberate word choice of "acceptance". For "acceptance" to have occurred by two other insurers, where neither could be the First Insurer (TDHA), an offer had to be made. For an agreement to have been consummated, there had to be return consideration in the form of a fulfilled promise from the offerees to the offeror (TDHA). In order for that proposed contract, which could be at best an "agreement to agree", it required notice to the JRPA Applicant and his consent or his silence AFTER receipt of the prescribed notices.[43]

VOLUME # #4(III)(A)(v): Subsection 5(3) of Reg 283

[50] Ss. 5(3) of Reg 283 has a "despite" or "subject to" clause in said subsection but it relates to the Fund initiating arbitration so it is not germane to the issues herein.
VOLUME # #4(III)(A)(vi): Void Ab Initio Agreement and deprivation of three different rights: (i) right to object to transfer of his claim to other insurers; (ii) right to object to proposed agreement between insurers; and (iii) right to file notice of arbitration

[51] While the Applicant did not receive any section 4 notice pursuant to Reg 283 and was deprived of his rights which the LGIC provided similarly situated accident victims, to object to the transfer of his TD Claim #3 to SNIC and TDGIC on an apparently joint basis, he was also deprived of his arbitration participatory rights in any subsequent proceeding to settle the dispute. Most importantly, whatever clandestine, underhanded and surreptitious agreement was negotiated and consummated between TDHA with SNIC and TDGIC, had no legal effect and was not merely void but void ab initio. It amounts to an irremediable nullity.[44]

35. From sets of nullities before the LAT to the Divisional Court as scary as that was and is. Nonetheless, fraud, bribery and extortion are special categories of nullities and they unravel everything in favour of the fraudster, briber and bribee and extortionist. Thankfully for the Applicant, all of those fraudsters, bribers/bribees and extortionists were adverse to him and reap benefits for their unlawful conduct. And the only thing that could have stopped the course of justice was that of Madam Justice Shore with her void ab initio interventions into this JRPA Proceeding. If the Applicant only knew that Madam Justice Shore was the mystery judge of the "Ex Parte In Camera Hearing", "Ex Parte In Camera Unrecorded Hearings" and apparently "Ex Parte In Camera Unrecorded Hearings Unretained Indictment Process" which were also the nullities that the Applicant respectfully adds for context.

36. As such, the Applicant seeks the following orders as per infra (see: Compendium For NOM #3, Motion #4 and Motion #5 (see: Tabs 71 to 74):

[10] THIS COURT DECLARES that such digital disenfranchisement, denoted in the Factum for Motion #5 and supporting evidence therein, violates the procedural expectations of a self-represented litigant and constitutes a constructive denial of the right to be heard (audi alteram partem). THIS COURT FURTHER DECLARES AND AFFIRMS the Rule of law principle that universal access to the courts is a constitutionalized and untouchable principle. Any technical or administrative interference with a litigant pursuing a legal remedy—whether intentional or through systemic neglect—is a violation of the Rule of law and the Constitution of Canada. h. A Declaration that any filings via mail or leaving at the court office of the Divisional Court, even if duplicate of OCPP filings, are dated to the date of the filing in the OCPP by receipt date;

[3] THIS DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that the Attorney General of Ontario (the "AGO") confirmed in writing on January 30, 2025, with the Applicant, other Respondents and the Court that it would not participate in the JRPA* Proceeding and to be removed from any future correspondence;

[4] THIS DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that the delegated or presiding motion judge, for this motion was not the Honourable Madam Justice Shore and/or any other judge employed by Epstein Cole LLP prior to the commencement of and after the filing and serving of this JRPA* Application;

[5] THIS DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that all Orders herein contained shall be granted nunc pro tunc, along with any abridgment of time pursuant to inter alia Rule 3.02(1) and (2) where such retroactive application is applicable;

[6] THIS DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that consistent with the amendments to the Rules of Civil Procedure in October 2025 that the DIVISIONAL COURT (court staff) (registrar) must upload all of the Applicant's filed documents for purposes of NOM #3 (see: Rule 4.05.3 (3.0.1));

[7] THIS DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that the DIVISIONAL COURT (court staff) (Registrar) must provide an invitation to the Applicant for him to be able to upload his Compendium For NOM #3 (see: Rule 4.05.3(3.));

[8] THIS COURT FURTHER DECLARES that the Tribunal had failed to "file" a record of the proceeding forthwith or at all and the Respondent Insurance Companies, and breached section 10 of the JRPA;

[9] THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES that the Tribunal failed to "deliver" responsive factums and application records in accordance with Rule 68.04(4) of the Rules of Civil Procedure;

[10] THIS DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES AND ORDERS that that LAT failed to serve its Notice of Appearance (Form 38(B)) on November 27, 2024;

[11] THIS DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that the LAT failed to "file" and "deliver" its Notice of Appearance forthwith, prior to December 3, 2024, or thereafter;

[12] THIS DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that Respondent Insurance Companies served their Notices of Appearances on December 3, 2024, at 4:50 p.m.

[13] THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES that the LAT's request for a case conference was on or before 3:30 p.m. on December 3, 2024;

[14] THIS DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES AND ORDERS that the LAT's request for a case conference on or before December 3, 2024, was null and void, and void ab initio, on account of none of the Respondents having filed a first "Defence" (see: Rule 77.03 of the Rules of Civil Procedure: "defence" includes a notice of intent to defend, a statement of defence, a notice of appearance and a notice of motion in response to a proceeding)) (defined as "First Defence") prior to the LAT's request for a case conference (collectively, the "Rule 77 (2010) First Defence Filing Requirement");

[15] THIS DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES AND ORDERS that any "Assignment For Case Management" (see: Rule 77.05 of Rules of Civil Procedure) of the JRPA* Proceeding by "the case management judge" (Madam Justice Shore) was null and void, void ab initio and of no force and effect

because there was no consent of any "parties" (Rule 77.05(1) of the Rules of Civil Procedure) and the LAT's request, as there was no motion from the LAT, for a case conference was void ab initio and of no force and effect (see: Rule 77.05(2)(b));

[16] THIS DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS AND DECLARES that, to the extent that that Justice Shore's considered the LAT's void ab initio request for Assignment For Case Management of the JRPA* Proceeding and subsequently considered herself to be assigned to the JRPA Proceeding to herself was an impermissible delegation of authority, and/or was directly contrary to Rule 77 of the Rules of Civil Procedure (2010 et seq), any "Source Law", the common law or equitable principles;

[17] THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES that to the extent that Madam Justice Shore believed she could on her own volition require the Applicant and Respondents to appear before her for a case conference no such power under any "source law" so existed at the time of such consideration and compulsion:

[i] THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES that to the extent that Madam Justice Shore believed her power arose from Rule 77.08, dovetailed to Rule 50.13 of the Rules of Civil Procedure, no such power existed because of the failure of the Respondents to file a First Defence and said Rule 50.13 arises under pre-trial procedures and is inferior to Rule 77 as a direct consequence of the explicit legislative language under Rule 77.04(2);

[ii] THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES that to that Madam Justice Shore was relying upon Rule 50.03 she did not compel the parties [sic] to a pre-trial [sic] conference;

[iii] THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES that to the extent that Madam Justice Shore was seeking to compel the parties [sic] to a conference under Rule 50, she failed to order that the "parties" [sic] themselves participate and such case conferences were null and void on that ground alone;

[iv] THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES that to the extent that Madam Justice Shore was relying on Rule 50.13 of the Rules of Civil Procedure, the LAT was not a party at the time of the written request (December 3, 2024) by failure to ""deliver"" its NOA, the Applicant was not lawfully served, the LAT never "filed" its NOA, or had Ms. Maciel file an "affidavit of service" to consummate "Delivery" (see: Rule 1.03), and there was no filing of a First Defence at said time, and as consequence of Rule 50.13(2), Madam Justice Shore failed to order that all of the "parties" [sic] participate in addition to their lawyers as a consequence, and the case conferences are hereby set aside on said legal ground;

[18] THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES AND ORDERS that any purported case conference compulsory requirement relating to the exchange of materials (if necessary [sic]) and to discuss prematurity [sic] was null and void on account of the LAT, which was the only Respondent purportedly raising the issue albeit without party status, as there was only one "party" at said time in the Applicant;

[19] THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES AND ORDERS that any potential timetable arising out of that purported or alleged case conference compulsory attendance requirement, which would have required the lawyers for the parties [sic] and the parties themselves, absent order of the court, did not operate as a stay or abeyance of obligations of the Respondents to comply with the JRPA and Rules of Civil Procedure (where applicable);

[20] THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES AND ORDERS that as a consequence of the Applicant having already perfected his JRPA* Application on December 16, 2024, there were no further materials for him to exchange and the deadline for the Respondents to file their responsive application records and factums was Monday, January 13, 2025;

[21] THIS DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS AND DECLARES that any purported filings, whether de facto or de jure, submitted by the LAT or the Respondent Insurance Companies post-November 27 or December 3, 2024, respectively, are rendered void ab initio and are subject to the vitiating effect of insufficient notice *Rule*s stipulated under the Rules of Civil Procedure, and any setting aside of the same are heard on three days notice;

[22] THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES AND ORDERS that all steps and documents involving the "Assignment For Case Management", which there was none by an RSJ, judge or an associate judge, and any "case management conferences" are void ab initio, null and void and of no force and effect, and hereby set aside;

> [i]THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES AND ORDERS that any "orders" (unmade, made, unissued, and/or unentered) arising from "void ab initio case conferences" are null and void, void ab initio and of no force and effect, and set aside;

[23] THIS DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES AND ORDERS that any conference conducted without the Applicant possessing access to Case Center for this DIVISIONAL COURT Proceeding (JRPA* Proceeding) by way of invitation, as per the state of the Rules of Civil Procedure at said time and without the ability to upload his filed documents at least five days prior to said case conferences (see: Rule 4.05.3 et al) rendered said case conferences null and void, void ab initio, of no force and effect, and they are hereby set aside without reference to their merits otherwise;

[24] THIS DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that the Applicant was entitled to an invitation to the DIVISIONAL COURT Case Center electronic platform immediately upon the formal commencement or bringing of this JRPA* Application on or around November 15, 2024, pursuant to, inter alia, the JRPA, the Rules of Civil Procedure and the DIVISIONAL COURT JRPA Guide in force at said time;

> [i]THIS DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that the portion of the DIVISIONAL COURT JRPA Guide relating to the provision of an invitation to Case Center upon the bringing of a JRPA Application is not inconsistent with the Rules of Civil Procedure;

[25] THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES AND ORDERS that but for the notice that the Applicant provided herein in relation to NOM #3, the Applicant is permitted to not further file or serve the Respondent Insurance Companies and LAT with any further filings or otherwise but for any challenges by the LAT in the constitution and Charter questions relating to its control or authority of any of the Respondent Insurance Companies and its agents involved in the theft of the Applicant's property and subsequent impersonation, extortion and bribery;

Chapter #3(B): nullification in toto and Misleading of the Applicant by fraudulent misrepresentation and findings of prior judicial involvement (undisclosed) > ii. Rule 38.11 of the Rules of Civil Procedure on account of insufficient or non-existent notice;

> iii. Rule 59 of the Rules of Civil Procedure on the grounds of fraud and miscarriage of justice, as the underlying judicial steps were irrevocably and fundamentally tainted by misconduct and conflict;
> iv. Rule 2.02 of the Rules of Civil Procedure;

[27] THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES that all fraudulent misrepresentations made by commission or omission whether iterated by the DIVISIONAL COURT (court staff), as particularized herein, are attributed to the "case management judge" after December 3, 2024;

[28] THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES that there is no prerequisite or requirement under Rule 59.06(2)(a) of the Rules of Civil Procedure that the fraud must be committed exclusively against an opposing party or solely by a party, Respondent or non-Respondent, and that it may be committed by any person so long as it had a material effect (i.e. may have been a factor or reasonably affected the outcome of the proceeding);

[29] THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES that, on a balance of probabilities and due to the lack of opposition of this NOM #3, that Madam Justice Shore had an undisclosed prior judicial involvement with the Applicant in the Undisclosed Criminal Proceeding;

> [i]THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES AND ORDERS that Madam Justice Shore's prior judicial involvement in undisclosed fashion amounted to facts or fraud discovered post April 2025 by the Applicant, and all of her steps taken and orders issued are hereby set aside;

[30] THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES that the undisclosed prior judicial involvement of Madam Justice Shore with the Applicant amounted to a fraudulent misrepresentation upon the Applicant of which was material to the outcome of the JRPA Proceeding and all steps, documents and/or orders involving or relating to Madam Justice Shore are hereby set aside;

CHAPTER #3(C): FRAUD, BRIBERY AND EXTORTION INVOLVING THE RESPONDENT INSURANCE COMPANIES AND LAT;

> > [i]THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES AND ORDERS that all steps, documents and/or orders relating to said fraudulent conduct, particularized in the Applicant's Compendium For NOM #3, may have reasonably affected the outcome of the JRPA Proceeding, and they are hereby set aside;

> [i] A FURTHER DECLARATION AND ORDER that the aforementioned declared act of bribery has irreparably tainted the proceeding and rises to the level of a special nullity such that any and all steps, requirements, orders, decisions, or judgments prejudicial to the Applicant must be, ipso facto, set aside.

[1] THIS DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that the Applicant is entitled to costs of NOM #1 as per his Costs Submissions and Bill of Costs.
[2] THIS DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that costs of this motion (NOM #3) are awarded to the Applicant on a full-indemnity basis as set out in his Costs Submissions and Bill of Costs in the amount of $888,661.00 (the "Costs Award").
[3] THIS DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that the Costs Award is apportioned as follows: a. 75 percent liability against the Respondent Insurance Companies, jointly and severally; and b. 25 percent liability against the Licence Appeal Tribunal (LAT).
[4] THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER ORDERS that the Costs Award is subject to pre-judgment interest and post-judgment interest in accordance with the Courts of Justice Act

VOLUME #3: CONCLUSION FOR BRIEF WRITTEN OUTLINE ON ACCOUNT OF URGENCY AND FORTHWITH ADJUDICATION DUE TO EXTRAORDINARY CHALLENGES, CONTROVERSIES AND THE FOCUS BEING ON THE INTEGRITY OF THE COURT

37. Attention is directed to the determination rendered in Decision of the Review Panel in the Matter of: The Honourable Arthur Doyle of the Court of King's Bench of New Brunswick, CJC File 24-0144 (the "Doyle Decision"), dated November 12, 2024 (see: BOA, Tab 301). In the Doyle Decision, the Canadian Judicial Council

(the "CJC") addressed an undisclosed conflict of interest wherein a member of the judiciary presided over a settlement conference involving a former legal partner. Notwithstanding the judicial characterization of the omission as an "honest mistake" regarding the duration of the requisite "cooling off" period, the panel concluded that a reasonable person would nonetheless maintain a "reasonable apprehension of bias" (the "Reasonable Apprehension of Bias"), particularly where the opposing litigant appeared in a self-represented capacity and the hearings for the issuance an arrest warrant were ex parte and in camera.

38. The inquiry arises whether a comparable difficulty existed in the identification of alternative judicial officers within the Toronto Region, which comprises approximately ninety members of the bench, or whether the specialized authority to assign "ad hoc judges" (the "Ad Hoc Judges") from the Court of Appeal for Ontario to the Superior Court of Justice pursuant to the Courts of Justice Act (the "CJA") was considered. It is submitted that the availability of such resources renders the continued involvement of an impugned judge not only unnecessary but also a functional threat to institutional neutrality.

39. The Ethical Principles for Judges (the "Ethical Principles"), as articulated by the CJC through a panel inclusive of the Honourable Associate Chief Justice Rosalie McGrath, the Honourable Justice Bernette Ho, and Mr. Curtis Kleisinger, underscore the burden borne by the judiciary. Specifically, Principle 5.C.3 establishes that a conflict of interest (the "Conflict of Interest") may originate from pecuniary or non-pecuniary interests, close professional relationships, or the expression of views evidencing bias regarding a litigant. Furthermore, Principle 5.C.10 dictates that judges, rather than the litigants or their counsel, bear the primary responsibility for ensuring the preservation of judicial impartiality (the "Judicial Impartiality"). Neither the disclosure of a conflict nor the purported consent of the parties operates to justify a member of the bench ignoring circumstances that reasonably imperil the perception of neutrality.

40. The record indicates that the moving party articulated an objection to the involvement of Madam Justice Shore in limine. It is observed that the Applicant could not have been cognizant of her prior involvement in the issuance of an "intake court endorsement" (the "Intake Court Endorsement")—a procedural instrument typically reserved for familial jurisprudence and inadequate for the issuance of a "warrant for arrest" (the "Warrant for Arrest")—facilitated through the falsification of a "false information package" (the "False Information Package") in a criminal proceeding. This involvement was subsequently disclosed by counsel for Madam Justice Shore, Mr.

Sinnadurai, who acknowledged the absence of a filed Information by Mrs. Frugoni-Rojas during the relevant interval, notwithstanding representations by the Toronto Police Service (the "TPS") to the Ontario Court of Justice regarding the existence of a valid warrant.

41. It is submitted that the responsibility to disclose such systemic abnormalities resided with the judiciary of the Superior Court of Justice, rather than through the private investigations of the moving party. The failure of the bench to provide such information constitutes a dereliction of the duty to inform, thereby compromising the "open court principle" (the "Open Court Principle") and the mandates of the Ministry of the Attorney General Court Information Access Guide (2019).

42. Furthermore, the Licence Appeal Tribunal (the "LAT") and the Respondent Insurance Companies remained cognizant of these irregularities. Pursuant to the authority in Halton v. Rezaizadeh, 2004 CanLII 6236 (ON SC)) at paragraph 18[51] as per Murry J. (remains the law in Ontario today) and paragraph 19 citing Sidhu Estate v. Bains, 1996 CanLII 3332 (BC CA) (see: BOA, Tab 87, page 2479 to 2482) (the "Sidhu Estate"), the maintenance of deliberate silence in the presence of fraudulent misrepresentation renders the silent parties equally liable for the "tort of deceit" (the "Tort of Deceit"). When an individual, cognizant of a mendacious statement, elects to remain silent to gain a tactical advantage, such conduct constitutes a "wilful misrepresentation" (the "Wilful Misrepresentation") as established in (see: BOA, Tab 176, S*ugar v. Peat Marwick Ltd.* (Ont. H.C.J.), 1988 CanLII 4635 (ONSC), page 3407 to 3419).

43. Consequently, it is submitted that Madam Justice Shore engaged in intentional contraventions of her judicial duties under section 80 of the Judges Act, while the Respondents and the former Registrar remain liable for the Tort of Deceit due to their silence regarding the manifest conflicts of interest. In the transformative adjudication of Landreville v. Town of Boucherville, [1978] 2 S.C.R. 801 (the "Landreville"), the Supreme Court of Canada adopted the common law maxim from Lazarus Estates Ltd. v. Beasley, [1956] 1 Q.B. 702 (the "Lazarus Estates"), establishing that fraudulent conduct—characterized as "dolus malus" (the "Dolus Malus")—serves as the "fons et origo" (the "Source and Origin") to unravel the entirety of antecedent transactions and judicial acta. The principle of "fraus omnia corrumpit" (the "Fraud Vitiates Everything") is thus a constitutional necessity for the preservation of institutional integrity.

44. The Landreville jurisprudence confirms that egregious comportments, including fraud, dishonesty, and bad faith (collectively, (the "Special Categorical Causes of Nullity")), possess a "vitiating quality" (the "Vitiating Quality") that necessitates the immediate restoration of the status quo ante (the "Status Quo Ante"). This represents the ultimate authority for the court to purge its record of illicit influence.

45. A contextual irony is observed regarding the recent arrest and charging of a Toronto Police officer, Constable Derek McCormick of the 52 Division, on counts of theft, breach of trust, and obstruction of justice involving the recovery of government-issued identification, bank cards, and passports (see: https://www.tps.ca/media-centre/news-releases/65035/).

46. . It is noted that the Applicant previously reported the theft of identical items—specifically a passport, bank cards, and identification—in a matter overseen by Detective Abdulhameed K. Virani of the same division. While the temporal correlation may be coincidental, these facts are subject to the relief sought in Notice of Motion #3.

47. It is submitted that the convergence of executive overreach and the documented failures of the Divisional Court to maintain its own registry integrity constitutes an attempt to marginalize a disabled individual. However, for the primus inter pares, the rectification of these acta is not a discretionary exercise but a mandatory requirement to be executed forthwith. There is no quid pro quo here but rather duties that only the President of the Divisional Court (Chief Justice of the SCJ) can discharge. The Applicant, with a valid power of attorney and will, will see all of these issues to the end in living corpse or from the grave because these are the most grave concerns with general questions of law of central importance to the legal system as a whole. What makes this country is great is the independence of the judiciary which gave Mr. McLean the access to the courts in BC to ensure that the public interest would benefit. It is also our administrative tribunals like the OIPC (BC) that assisted in the same. Benefit it did with the overhaul of a regulatory body engaged in criminal conduct and fraud and ensuring that the "old boys club" would cease. It took seven years for Mr. McLean to discover the worst fraud on a professional in Canadian regulatory history but also his former clients with a criminal RAM dump without even the pretense of an administrative order or a judicial warrant authorizing the same. It seems like a déjà vu all over again.

48. Ontario does have the option to follow suit (pardon the pun) but it must and it starts and ends with the primus inter pares in the Chief Justice of the SCJ (Ontario) in his also unique role as the President of the Divisional Court.

49. Never a wrong time to do the right thing.

5111 All of which is respectfully submitted by the Applicant and Moving Party exclusively to the President of the Divisional Court on February 3, 2026

Mr. Kevin A. McLean (B.A. J.D., CIM)
Self-represented,
The Applicant and Moving Party herein

[15]As this ONSC will know, that is such a unique event by our SCC where they do not even wish to put any such amendments or clarity to a dissenting decision of the ONCA. While the justices in our province are not in the "business of counting their press clippings", it is a testament to how analytically sound The Honourable Justice Jurianz was in those dissenting reasons.

[23]Pursuant to section 280(1) of the Insurance Act, "this section applies with respect to the resolution of disputes in respect of an insured person's entitlement to statutory accident benefits or in respect of the amount of statutory accident benefits to which an insured person is entitled." Pursuant to ss. 280(2) of the Insurance Act, "The insured person or the insurer may apply to the Licence Appeal Tribunal to resolve a dispute described in subsection (1)". No person may bring a proceeding in any court with respect to a dispute described in subsection (1), other than an appeal from a decision of the Licence Appeal Tribunal or an application for judicial review: ss. 280(3) of the Insurance Act. The dispute shall be resolved in accordance with the Statutory Accident Benefits Schedule
[24]. 2014, c. 9, Sched. 3, s. 14: ss. 280(4) of the Insurance Act.
[25](see: "statutory accident benefits" mean the benefits set out in the regulations made under paragraphs 9 and 10 of subsection 121 (1) of the Insurance Act; see: section 121(a): "121 (1) The Lieutenant Governor in Council may make regulations").
[26]The Applicant notified SNIC, pursuant to the Schedule, s. 32, in early September 2022, that he wished to apply for benefits making SNIC not only the Sole Underwriter but the First Notified Insurer.
[27]The Applicant, in his capacity as a SABS applicant, sent the Completed Application [OCF-1] to the North York Fax Number on October 12, 2022. Ergo, at law, the SABS Applicant sent, or "served" only one Completed Application to only one insurer in TDHA. TDHA was the sole insurer that first received (the "First Insurer") the SABS* Applicant's Completed Application.
[28]In fact, and at law, SNIC did not stop the Applicant from submitting his Completed Application to TDHA in that it provided him with the TDHA Fax Number. It is the word "accept" that is so pivotal in this JRPA* Application by VCM's choice of language at paragraph 27 therein.
[29]"first party insurer" means the insurer responsible under subsection 268 (2) of the Act for the payment of statutory accident benefits; ("assureur de première part"): Automobile Insurance, RRO 1990, Reg 664, s 9, <https://canlii.ca/t/tlw#sec9>, [30]The word "accept" is of great importance considering the finding by VCM, without any evidence in the record of proceeding to support the same, that TDGIC and SNIC jointly accepted priority of the Applicant's [sic] insurance policy [sic] (see: paragraph 27 of the VCM Decision).

[31]As SNIC was the Sole Underwriter in the Insurance Policy, the Applicant has alleged that SNIC (as First Notified Insurer) breached section 2.1(5) of Reg 283 by taking action, with intent (as it knew that its fax number was not the North York Office Fax Number), to prevent or stop the Applicant from submitting his Completed OCF-1 to it [SNIC] as it is an out-of-province insurer.

[32]In relation to the lack of promptness, SNIC somehow sent the Applicant's accident benefits package to the wrong postal code address yet his Spouse received her accident benefits package to the correct postal code when they lived in the same residence

[33]Further, the Applicant provided uncontroverted evidence that SNIC failed to provide its correct facsimile address in the Completed Application but instead provided the fax number of TDHA and thereby breached subsection 2.1(3) of Reg 283.

[34]Reimbursement by the non-compliant insurer during the period of non-compliance (see: ss. 2.1(7) of Reg 283): (i) legal fees; (ii) adjuster's fees; (iii) administrative costs; and (iv) disbursements

[35]Subsection 2.1 of Reg 283 applies to this judicial review as the Accident occurred on August 31, 2022, which was after September 1, 2010.

[36]Whether SNIC was to remain for costs purposes in the McLean LAT Proceeding was a matter of discretion, but the sole respondent insurance company as a matter of obligations under Reg 283, SABS and Reg 664 was not. However, the Applicant's argument was encapsulated by a rhetorical question: why should he not have any ability to seek costs against SNIC for its conduct in the LAT Proceeding that he alleged and alleges was unreasonable, frivolous, and in bad faith? Costs are not a matter that relate to the Insurance Act, and the binding regulations herein (SABS and Reg 283), as the Tribunal passed them under a different statute: section 17.1 of the SPPA. Put another way, is the Applicant's time not worth anything when it required hundreds of hours to obtain the order in NOM #8?

[37]Even when the OCF-19 was fax delivered, in November 2023, to the VP Bldg. 4th Floor Fax Number, and when SNIC's fax number (Burlington 905 Fax Number) was blocking the same, SNIC responded by misidentifying one of the legal tests for a duly completed OCF-19 and merely enclosed a copy of a blank OCF-19. Moreover, when considering the Forged Signature in the OCF-18, last page only, it could not have been SNIC, although it appeared that way in HCAI by insurer name but NOT physical address, with the "As per A. Nurse", it was TDHA's address (East Mall Etobicoke Address) that received the duly completed OCF-18 at first instance. Perhaps, this is why Ms. Nurse, an adjuster, was not amenable to executing the same.

[38]The same would have been applicable to TD Staff Legal and Mr. Nieuwland with its fax and his listed fax number with the LSO. Said unappealed findings are determinative that neither SNIC nor TDGIC were the First Insurers by way of the fax served Completed Application upon the 4th Floor VP Building Fax Number which was TDHA.

[39]"If the Licence Appeal Tribunal finds that an insurer has unreasonably withheld or delayed payments, the Licence Appeal Tribunal, in addition to awarding the benefits and interest to which an insured person is entitled under the Statutory Accident Benefits Schedule, may award a lump sum of up to 50 per cent of the amount to which the person was entitled at the time of the award together with interest on all amounts then owing to the insured (including unpaid interest) at the rate of 2 per cent per month, compounded monthly, from the time the benefits first became payable under the Schedule. O. Reg. 43/16, s. 4.".

[40](like the vacillation of findings and orders of the arbitrator, ONSC (Goldstein J. in the ONSC), reversed by the ONCA, and the ONCA reversed by the SCC adopting the dissent of Justice Jurianz)

[41]It is trite that while the Tribunal is required to determine whether Mr. McLean was entitled to certain benefits and in what amounts, it also must determine which insurance company was and is liable for certain benefits and at what times. It can only do that if that the First Insurer is found to be TDHA and that decision must come from the ONSC.

[42] There was no evidence and none in the Application Record that TDHA, or any insurer, ever did so. Even on the convoluted, tortuous, unsupported and absurd logic of VCM that SNIC and TDGIC accepted priority over the Insurance Policy, there was some form of "transfer of the claim" to TDGIC which would have required notice to, at least, TDGIC and the SABS Applicant. No evidence was ever provided of such written notice to either.

[43]Mr. McLean was also entitled to object to SNIC (and TDGIC as he had done previously) having any control or possession of his TD Claim #3 relating to "confidential information" and documents not subsequently received by it in accordance with standardized language in the OCF-1 and PIPEDA. There is no dispute that TD Claim #3 was transferred from TDHA to TDGIC and SNIC. SNIC claimed to have received documents but not directly from the Applicant. SNIC purported to respond or did respond to the Applicant in relation to some communications but not all communications. TDGIC then surfaced at the LAT Proceeding but only after inclusion by the Tribunal without the consent of the Applicant or without any legal authority. SNIC filed its Response ("SNIC Response") on January 25, 2024, and then Mr. Nieuwland filed a DOR on behalf of TDGIC – not SNIC. The charade continued for six months until Mr. McLean, relying on Mr. Nieuwland's misrepresentations in non-transcribed case conference, which was yet another irremediable nullity and without statutory power as TDGIC was a non-party, that SNIC and TDGIC were "one and the same" and "this is how we always do it" (in relation to TDGIC being some sort of insurance company that came "off the bench" to provide a "spark" to the "defence" for SNIC as if it were some kind of sporting event). While there is no dispute of some form of transfer from TDHA to SNIC and, of course, with some unknown terms and conditions involving TDGIC on some basis perhaps on a joint level but more likely some form of "staggered interventions" based on unknown terms and conditions in this "subsequent clandestine agreement", there are no particulars in the decision of VCM. Moreover, any such transfer was without notice to Mr. McLean, and without compliance with Reg 283. The scheme of Reg 283 requires substantive and procedural compliance and TDHA along with SNIC and TDGIC intentionally breached Reg 283 without any form of attempt to cure the same. The required FSRA form did not matter to TDHA. The closest evidence that this ONSC has is a fax from an unknown fax number to Mr. McLean that TDHA had no record of his claim as of March 2023 (and then another letter in August 2024 albeit after NOM #14 and NOM #15). It was a fax without any semblance of compliance with Reg 283, and SABS to some degree, and the FSRA Form 143. It directed Mr. McLean to other fax numbers in Calgary, Montreal, New Brunswick and Burlington without reference to any insurance company. Mr. McLean was entitled, after lengthy investigation and fortuitous discoveries, was entitled to object and required to bring the issue forward as to TDHA not complying with its duties to respond and to pay benefits as the First Insurer.

[44]Due to the public importance of the issues herein, the Applicant respectfully, yet forcefully, notes that the LGIC did not create any ability for an insured person (applicant) to consent or sanitize the breaches that have occurred herein. Put another way, the LGIC did not pass any provisions that would authorize an insured person to sanitize or remedy such clandestine breaches to provide post-facto consideration that cure such non-compliance with Reg 283. Therefore, this undisclosed agreement by the respondent insurance companies, known to the Tribunal but not the Applicant, has no legal force or effect. The purposes of the inflexible prescribed regulations are to promote compliance with the statutory scheme and not to assist insurance companies and insured persons in isolated incidents so that an "insured person" can assist delinquent and felonious activities. To not set aside the VCM Decision and replace it with a correct decision, while the ONSC commences ab initio, would represent a precedent that contains a "slippery slope". Perhaps, "insurance companies" like this collection of respondent insurance companies may send a late notice with a semi-contemporaneous phone call to an insured person that may be in the form of a bribe so that the "checks and balances" of various regulatory bodies (FSRA, LSO, OPCC et al) do not catch "wind of the unlawful scheme".

[46] This assignment is vital to prevent a miscarriage of justice necessitated by the inextricable nexus between the matters at hand and the requirement for the highest level of judicial oversight.

[47]This order is made purely to maintain the appearance of total judicial impartiality and to ensure that the adjudication of the merits of the JRPA proceeding is not obscured by collateral disputes regarding judicial conduct;

[48]This order applies to all requests for which a Request Form Undertaking has been submitted and for which the Applicant has made the prescribed payment, ensuring that the Applicant has a complete and accurate record of all oral submissions and judicial directions;

[49]This order recognizes that the open court principle extends to the administrative records necessary to verify the regularity of court proceedings;

[50]This timeline is mandated to compensate for the significant procedural delays already incurred and to ensure the Applicant is not further marginalized by administrative silence;

[51]n the claim, the plaintiff states that Farnoosh was present at "various meetings" where her mother, the defendant Kobra Fathi declared herself to be the sole support parent and where she (Farnoosh) remained silent and failed to correct the misinformation provided to the Region and to the Halton Housing Authority by the mother. The "failure to correct" is stated to be the equivalent of making a false representation to the plaintiff. I disagree. The plaintiff's counsel relied on the case of Sidhu Estate v. Bains, 1996 CanLII 3332 (BC CA), [1996] B.C.J. No. 1246 to establish that silence in the face of a false representation can lead to liability for deceit. In the Sidhu Estate case, the B.C. Court of Appeal found that all the elements of a successful claim in deceit were proven against the defendant Bains who had remained silent at the time false information had been communicated to induce an executor to invest estate monies in a company in which the defendant had an interest. Bains was a director, shareholder and president of the company. The directors and shareholders intended the company to be listed on the VSE. The defendant attended a meeting with the estate executor where false statements were made particularly with respect to the extent of Bain's investment in the company. Bains remained silent when these false representations, designed to induce investment by the executor, were made. Liability was found.

FACTUM OF THE APPLICANT FOR MOTION #6

(Motion to the Chief Justice pursuant to section 123 of the Courts of Justice Act and the Primus Inter Pares doctrine authorities of Ruffo 1995 to R. v. Swaine (the last 30 years)

VOLUME #1: OVERVIEW: THE CONSTITUTIONAL IMPERATIVE OF TIMELY ADJUDICATION

1. This motion, without notice generally and not to be served on the Respondents as they did not and have not "Delivered" a NOA along with the failure of a judge of the Divisional Court sitting as a Motion Judge in relation to the Written Hearing for NOM #2 not issuing a decision within three months or six months of February 14, 2025, is respectfully yet exclusively submitted to the Honourable Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Justice, in the exercise of his vested adjudicative authority as the President of the Divisional Court, for the purpose of securing required Orders pursuant to the remedial provisions contained within section 123(4) and (7) of the Courts of Justice Act, RSO 1990, c. C. 43 et seq (the "CJA") directing that the motion for judgment (the "NOM #2") be "reheard" in its entirety. It appears that no Judge of the Divisional Court has made and relay a decision in relation to NOM #2. This does not mean that NOM #2 is a foregone conclusion per se as there are elements of it, if it had been converted or will be converted to a motion for Judgment that involve the application of the standard of review to the VCM purported or refusal of exercises of statutory powers of decision along with that of VCL (see: Compendium of February 14, 2025 which is provided in its electronically filed form to the Divisional Court President).

2. It is trite that de facto statutes prevail over regulations which is known as legislative or legislature supremacy (the "Statutory Supremacy").

3. It is observed that, periodically, a specific litigation presents as a Chief Justice of a court of justice, particularly a section 96 of the Constitution Act, 1867, court (a "Section 96 Court") (a "Chief Justice Case"). Such a case is defined by four potential challenges, the pervasive controversy, the high-profile nature thereof and/or where effectively situating the institutional integrity of the court as the primary focus (see: Baldovi v. R., 2016 MBQB 167 (the "Baldovi"), paragraph 72; BOA, Tab 69, as per the reasoning of the then and current Honourable Chief Justice of the Manitoba King's Bench, Mr. Justice G. Joyal, whose observations are herein adopted as pertinent to the current administration of the Superior Court of Justice ("SCJ") in Ontario). In such instances, the standard adjudicative process is deemed insufficient to preserve the perceived and actual dignity of the institution (a Section 96 Court as a whole (see: BOA, Tab 66: R. v. Siwicki, 2021 MBQB 42 at paragraph 50[i] ["Siwicki"]), requiring instead the unique stewardship of the President of the Divisional Court to ensure that the rule of law remains the preeminent consideration over and above administrative convenience. The current proceeding, characterized by systemic failures within the registry and the unauthorized assumption of jurisdiction, constitutes a definitive and ontological example of such a case, where the very legitimacy of the tribunal is subjected to profound scrutiny.

4. While the Divisional Court is not a Section 96 Court, it is even more compelling when the conduct, controversies and integrity concerns are not limited to a single digit or a single person and in light of the various exoduses by so many different individuals from so many different vocations both private and public.

5. At this rate, there will be no one left from this voluminous public-private army that came for Mr. McLean in 2024.

6. Within the hallowed and coveted framework of the Canadian judiciary, there exist merely ten chief justices presiding over the provincial superior courts, or "section 96 courts" (the "Section 96 Courts"). The Honourable Chief Justice Morawetz has occupied the office of Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Justice (Ontario) since 2019, having ascended to the bench in 2005. Since the 1995 adjudication in Ruffo v. Conseil de la magistrature, [1995] 4 S.C.R. 267 (the "Ruffo"), as cited by Baldovi, the doctrine of primus inter pares (the "Primus Inter Pares") has emerged as a substantive, rather than merely ceremonial, designation of seniority. This doctrine has incrementally evolved through the interstices of judicial precedent to recognize that a Chief Justice of a Section 96 Court possesses an inherent suite of responsibilities that need not be explicitly conferred by statute or regulation

7. In Information Commissioner (Canada) v Canada (Minister of Employment and Immigration), 1986 CanLII 6836 (FC) (Information Commissioner), invoking Julius v Oxford (Bishop of) (1880), 5 App Cas 214 (Julius), the court established the foundational syllogism (the "Julius Syllogism"): notwithstanding that a power may appear permissive in its linguistic configuration, a compulsory mandate (the "Compulsory Mandate") arises ipso facto if said power is provided for the purpose of making good a right. It is posited that when the legislature confers a power upon a judicial officer to vindicate the vested rights of a subject, the exercise of that power ceases to be a matter of mere administrative grace and is metamorphosed into a binding public duty. The principle of legal certainty is thus vitiated when the judicature fails to discharge this Compulsory Mandate, creating a state of lawlessness within the record.
8. The fulfillment of fiscal and procedural requirements—specifically the filing and payment for NOM #2 on January 31, 2025—constituted a condition precedent (the "Condition Precedent") for the Court's exercise of jurisdiction. Pursuant to the Julius Syllogism, the word "may" in the enabling statute is transformed into an imperative "must." The jurisdiction of the Court to decide the motion became mandatory upon the payment of fees and perfection of the record. This doctrine prevents the judicature from arbitrarily refusing to decide cases properly before them, turning a power into a public duty that cannot be ignored without constitutional consequence. To permit a judge to accept the remission of fees without the concomitant delivery of the adjudicative product is to sanction a form of institutional enrichment that is fundamentally antithetical to the lex terrae. Such a failure to act renders the state's promise of justice illusory and fraudulent.
9. The Julius Syllogism serves as a check on "judicial non-feasance," ensuring that the state's promise of a day in court is not rendered illusory by the refusal of the bench to engage with the record. When the subject has performed every statutory act required to trigger the adjudicative function, the Court loses the discretion to remain silent. Any further delay constitutes a breach of the Compulsory Mandate, transforming the administrative failure into a substantive violation of the Rule of Law. The resulting interregnum (the "Interregnum")—a period where the law exists but does not speak—vitiates the very purpose of the social contract heretofore existing between the sovereign and the subject.

this Interregnum, the subject is placed in a labyrinthine void (the "Labyrinthine Void") where rights are neither vindicated nor extinguished, but are simply extinguished through silence.

10. Recognition is afforded to the principle articulated in Trial Lawyers Association of British Columbia v British Columbia (Attorney General), 2014 SCC 59 (TLABC 2014), where the Supreme Court of Canada affirmed that the provincial power to amend procedural rules cannot be exercised in a manner that effectively denies the right of subjects to have their legal disputes resolved by a superior court. Judicial delay of the magnitude currently experienced operates as a functional equivalent to a prohibited financial barrier, effectively barring the doors of the Section 96 Court through administrative inertia and creating an impenetrable barrier to the lex terrae. This species of administrative blockade (the "Administrative Blockade") effectuates a strategic erasure of the subject, rendering the right to access the Queen's Bench a mere theoretical phantom. The circumscription of the judicial duty is concomitant with the total vitiation of the separation of powers.

11. As documented in the Compendium (February 14 2025), filed and served pursuant to Rule 4.03.3 on February 11, 2025, albeit not required as NOM #2 was unopposed, the NOM #2 was proposed, and without an order of the Divisional Court that it be heard with the attendance of the parties, to be determined as a written hearing without the public's viewing (absence of the public). Notwithstanding the strictures of the Rules of Civil Procedure (the "Rules"), the Responding Issue #ies failed to invoke Rule 37.12.1(5)(d) or provide any prescribed notices or objections to the written format of the hearing. This total failure to respond has resulted in a procedural vacuum where the best evidentiary case remains unaddressed by both the Respondents and the Court, thereby necessitating this extraordinary remedial application. The failure of the state respondents to engage with the written hearing process, coupled with the subsequent failure of the Court to adjudicate in the form of a Hearing, represents a systemic breakdown of the adversarial process, shifting the burden of procedural continuity entirely onto the Applicant and the Chief Justice.

12. Reliance is placed upon the comprehensive remedial architecture of the CJA, which functions as a quintessential statutory safeguard against the deleterious and systemic vitiation of judicial efficiency in instances where a final determination remains outstanding beyond the specific temporal parameters established by the promulgation of the lex terrae. The functional continuity of the judicature is contingent upon the rigid and unwavering adherence to these statutory fail-safes, which represent the absolute floor of administrative expectation within a constitutional democracy dicated upon the Rule of Law. To permit a departure from these mandates is to sanction a metamorphosis of the judicial branch from an arbiter of vested rights into a source of procedural opacity and administrative desuetude, thereby vitiating the very purpose of the adjudicative act.

13. The nomenclature of the legislation itself provides a linguistic syllogism: it is designated the Courts of Justice Act (the "CJA"), an appellation that underscores the positive obligation to render justice, thereby eschewing the possibility of a "Courts of Non-Decision Act." The legislative intent behind the CJA is to provide a robust framework for the actualization of judicial power; when that power remains latent or unexercised, the statute is rendered a mere collection of hollow exhortations rather than a binding instrument of statecraft. Justice delayed is not merely justice denied; it is a functional abdication of the sovereign's promise to the subject, resulting in an ontological erasure of the legal remedy sought and a total collapse of the adjudicative objective. The absence of a decision is a functional denial of the existence of the law itself, leaving the subject in a state of legal non-existence. The lack of a judicial utterance (the "Judicial Utterance") results in a total failure of the adjudicative act.

14. Section 71 of the CJA was amended in 2006 to integrate specific temporal mandates, reinforcing the principle that judicial authority is not an abstract power but a duty to decide. These amendments were promulgated to ensure that the status quo ante of the common law—wherein a judge possessed an unfettered and unaccountable discretion regarding the duration of a reserved judgment—was superseded by a modern, transparent system of time-limited adjudication. This temporal limitation is not a mere suggestion of administrative preference but a mandatory boundary of the judicial function itself, designed to prevent the indefinite and arbitrary suspension of legal rights within a labyrinthine procedural void. The transition from common law discretion to statutory mandate reflects a fundamental shift toward institutional accountability in the exercise of Section 96 powers.

15. The integrity of the judicial branch is fundamentally tethered to its capacity to render timely resolutions; where that capacity falters, the very legitimacy of the adjudicative act is imperiled, inviting a state of procedural lawlessness that undermines the social contract (the "Social Contract") heretofore existing between the sovereign and the subject. The judicial function is not merely the exercise of power, but the timely discharge of a constitutional duty to provide an answer to the lis brought before it; an unanswered lis constitutes a functional denial of the existence of the law itself. Such a denial creates a state of interregnum where the legal rights of the parties are suspended in a state of permanent stasis, neither vindicated nor extinguished, but effectively nullified through judicial inaction and systemic neglect.

16. The consequences of such judicial inertia are far-reaching, extending beyond the immediate parties to the very foundations of the administration of justice. A court that does not speak is a court that does not govern; where the law is silent, the vacuum is invariably filled by arbitrary executive action or the unchecked exercise of private power. This state of affairs constitutes a functional erasure of the statutory and constitutional identity of the subject, reducing said subject to a mere spectator in a process that was ostensibly designed for protection. The resulting constitutional vacuum (the "Constitutional Vacuum") allows administrative error to persist in perpetuity, immune from the light of judicial scrutiny. This state of affairs is fundamentally antithetical to the lex scripta and the requirements of due process. It is posited that the current procedural posture—manifested by a labyrinthine and multi-layered delay exceeding six months beyond the statutory guideline and over one year since the initial returnable date—necessitates the immediate and decisive intervention of the Chief Justice to obviate a catastrophic failure of the adjudicative process. The circumscription of the judicial duty to provide timely adjudication is not merely a matter of administrative convenience but is concomitant with the fundamental right to access to justice under section 96 of the Constitution Act, 1867. The persistence of this delay has effectively created a jurisdictional impasse that requires the invocation of the ultimate jurisdiction (the "Ultimate Jurisdiction") of the Chief Justice to prevent the further erosion of public confidence in the administration of the law.

VOLUME #2: NO REQUIREMENT TO OBEY ACTS OF A JUDGE WHO IS CORAM NON JUDICE

17. The legal framework of this jurisdiction requires that for the adjudicative manifestations of a member of the judiciary to possess binding efficacy, such acts (the "Acta") must emanate exclusively from the authorized office and pertain strictly to the prescribed duties associated therewith. The unauthorized assumption of power is a strike against the heart of the Rule of Law. Madam Justice Shore purported to exercise the functions of a Case Management Judge notwithstanding the absence of a designation. Such purported authority constitutes a jurisdictional nullity (the "Jurisdictional Nullity"), for a judge without a commission is merely a legal stranger to the record. The exercise of power without mandate (the "Mandate") is a nullity that cannot be cured by subsequent acquiescence. The maxim Factum a judicium quod ad officium jure non pertinet, ratum non est (the "Factum a Judice") dictates that such acts are of no force. Since there was no Order for "Assignment For Case Management," any acts arising from such unauthorized intervention are void ab initio (the "Void Ab Initio") and do not invoke issue estoppel or res judicata. This jurisdictional void (the "Jurisdictional Void") must be expunged to prevent the enduring contamination of the lex terrae. The preservation of curial integrity necessitates that the record be purged of any manifestations arising from an office that was never legally vested. A judge who acts outside the statutory roadmap (the "Roadmap") functions as a mere private actor under the color of office.

18. A definitive demarcation exists between the erroneous exercise of extant jurisdiction and the total usurpation of a jurisdiction that has not yet vested. For an act to be categorized as an inherent nullity (the "Inherent Nullity"), an unfulfilled condition precedent to the conferment of authority must exist. The judicial officer, acting without a mandate, functions as a legal stranger to the file, and any resulting orders are born dead (the "Coram Non Judice"). The power to manage is an anchored authority, predicated upon the strict and literal fulfillment of the Rules. To hold otherwise would allow for a system of autocratic regression (the "Autocratic Regression") where the whim of the officer supplants the mandate of the law. The absence of a designation renders any purported case management an act of pure whim, detached from the requirements of the lex scripta. This functional abdication (the "Functional Abdication") occurs the moment a judge prioritizes managerial interference over the passive adjudication of a live controversy. By stepping outside the statutory path, the judge transitions from a neutral arbiter to an agent of executive transformation (the "Executive Transformation"), thereby triggering the direct liability of the state for the resulting damages. The evaporation of immunity ensures that power is not exercised in a Constitutional Vacuum or as an agent of the executive branch. Immunity is a shield for the office, not a license for the officer to operate ultra vires. When a judge assumes a role that the Chief Justice has not assigned, they effectuate a functional closure (the "Functional Closure") of the legitimate court. This administrative capture effectuates a functional closure of the judicature, wherein the administrative shield (the "Administrative Shield") is deployed to obstruct and suppress merit-based judicial scrutiny. Such a species of actual, functional, or partial closure, when orchestrated by the Executive Branch, constitutes an ultra vires encroachment upon the right to an impartial and independent judiciary. The independence of the bench is not a mere professional courtesy; it is the absolute floor of institutional legitimacy. The withdrawal of support staff or the withholding of records (the "Withholding of Records") mirrors the administrative capture heretofore identified in the jurisprudence of the Supreme Court of Canada

19. This principle was poignantly demonstrated in Reference re Remuneration of Judges of the Provincial Court of Prince Edward Island; Reference re Independence and Impartiality of Judges of the Provincial Court of Manitoba, 1997, 3 SCR 3 (1997 Judicial Independence Reference). The Supreme Court determined that judicial independence transcends its status as a mere Charter right; it is an unwritten constitutional principle (the "Unwritten Constitutional Principle") rooted in the Preamble of the Constitution Act, 1867. At paragraph 270 of the 1997 Judicial Independence Reference, the Court observed that administrative independence is a collective right of the court as an institution, which even a Chief Judge cannot waive through acquiescence to executive demands. At paragraph 270 of the 1997 Judicial Independence Reference, the Court observed that administrative independence is a collective right of the court as an institution, which even a Chief Judge cannot waive through acquiescence to executive demands. Any unilateral closure of a court by the Executive Branch—or the withdrawal of support staff prior to judicial orders—constitutes a prima facie violation of judicial independence. The "Filmon Friday" precedent serves as an absolute prohibition against the Executive Branch treating the judiciary as a mere subsidiary of the civil service. When the registry operates as a blockade, it effectuates the Strategic Erasure of the subject, rendering the Rule of Law a collection of hollow exhortations.

VOLUME #2(A): THE ADMISSION OF NON-HEARING STATUS: THE SCJ RECORDING MANAGEMENT OFFICE EVIDENCE

20. If there was any dispute as to whether the conferences were not hearings, the evidentiary nexus substantiating the involvement of Shore J. became apparent on October 10, 2025. Leaving aside that Madam Justice Shore was unauthorized and Coram Non Judice and Factum a judice, quod ad officium jure non pertinet, ratum non est, her status as a non-hearing judge is confirmed by her own admissions to the SCJ Recording Management Office. Through September and October 2025, efforts were sustained to procure undisclosed documents serving as the genesis of the criminal proceeding. The extrapolation of legal principles dictates that her insistence upon a "case conference" arose from an erroneous presumption of "family law" jurisdiction.

21. Shore J. effectively buried her own jurisdictional standing by taking the position that transcripts could not be produced because the attendances were merely "conferences." The SCJ Recording Management Office advised:

5124 "Justice Shore has advised as follows: The attendances were case management conferences and we do not release transcripts for conferences. No transcript/audio can be provided."

22. By explicitly denying the release of transcripts on the basis that the proceedings were conferences, Shore J. admitted as a matter of fact and law that these were not "hearings." This admission is fatal; if the attendances were not hearings, they could not have been the venue for any valid adjudicative act, confirming her role was that of an unauthorized Case Management Judge acting entirely outside the mandate of a hearing judge. In Duggan v. Durham Region Non-Profit Housing Corporation, the Court of Appeal reminded the lower courts that even the "inherent jurisdiction" of the court cannot be used to override specific rules. Specifically, the court found that Rule 6.1.01 (regarding bifurcation) ousts a judge's inherent jurisdiction to bifurcate a trial without consent. By analogy, the specific requirements for assignment under Rule 77.02 and 77.05 oust any inherent power a judge might claim to "manage" a case outside the standard rules without a formal order.

VOLUME #2(B): REAFFIRMING PROCEDURAL INTEGRITY IN AN ERA OF BACKLOGS

23. As of December 13, 2024, the JRPA Application (not an Appeal) was perfected. It was to be listed for hearing and a Form 68B was to be issued. The jurisdictional boundaries of Rule 77 are not mere technicalities; they are the structural supports of a fair and predictable legal system. While the pursuit of judicial economy is a laudable goal, it cannot be achieved by a "shortcut" that bypasses the mandatory requirements of the Rules of Civil Procedure. The "Assignment for Case Management" order is the essential link between a judge's general authority and the specialized powers of Rule 77. In its absence, a judge has no more authority to "decide the whole case" at a case conference than they would have to decide it at a social gathering. When a judge—whether unauthorized or acting in a forum not designed for adjudication—exceeds their jurisdiction, the legal effect is clear: those aspects of the proceeding are a nullity. Procedural fairness requires that substantive rights be determined only on the basis of sworn evidence and in a forum where the rules of natural justice are strictly observed.

VOLUME #2(C): THE RULE 50 PRECEDENT IN MILLER V. LEDRA (2023) BUT ONLY IN RELATION TO RULE 50 – NON-TORONTO; NON-OTTAWA AND NON-ESSEX MATTERS – AND NOT JRP APPLICATIONS

24. In the matter of Miller v. Ledra, 2017 ONSC 1528 (Miller v. Ledra), the moving party petitioned for the production of corporate fiscal instruments and the convocation of a general meeting of shareholders. Attendant to the profound and systemic administrative impediments characterizing the Toronto civil list, the initial temporal availability for a brief interlocutory motion was determined to be 14 months hence. Pursuant to a local practice direction mandating the redirection of contested short motions to a case conference, the Honourable Justice Koehnen eschewed the traditional granting of an adjournment; instead, the substantive relief sought was adjudicated and granted in limine during the case conference itself. Such a determination was predicated upon an expansive and purposive interpretation of Rule 50.13(6) of the Rules of Civil Procedure, R.R.O. 1990, Reg. 194 (the "Rules"), in conjunction with the overarching principles of proportionality and judicial efficiency articulated by the Supreme Court of Canada in Hryniak v. Mauldin, 2014 SCC 7 (Hryniak v. Mauldin) at paragraph 1. (Tab 1, BOA 1).

25. The exercise of such authority is markedly distinct from the constraints imposed by Rule 77.04 of the Rules, wherein the promulgation of orders is vested solely for the advancement of the objectives enumerated within Rule 77 (the "Rule 77"), necessitating a demonstrable nexus to the rigorous exigencies of case management. Within the context of this proceeding under the Judicial Review Procedure Act, R.S.O. 1990, c. J.1 (the "JRPA"), no respondent had heretofore filed nor delivered a Notice of Appearance (the "NOA"), thereby precluding their standing to seek such relief. Furthermore, while a formal "Assignment for Case Management" (the "Assignment") was conspicuously absent from the JRPA (the "JRPA Proceeding"), it is posited that such an order could not legally be issued three weeks subsequent to the filing of the "Certificate of Perfection" (the "Certificate"). At that developmental juncture, the applicant possessed a vested right to proceed toward the oral hearing of the merits, and any subsequent metamorphosis of the procedural trajectory would constitute an ultra vires intervention. (Tab 2, BOA 5).

26. Concomitantly, it is imperative to observe the operation of Rule 50.07 of the Rules, which governs the protocol in the event that a settlement is not achieved during the pre-trial conference (the "Pre-Trial"). A significant distinction exists between the mechanisms of Rule 50 and the more restrictive frameworks of the Rules; specifically, Rule 50 permits the issuance of orders analogous to those under Rule 20.05, including the mandatory payment into court of all or a portion of the claim. Such a provision creates a labyrinthine pressure that may, ipso facto, exert an undue and coercive influence upon a defendant. Reliance is placed upon the fact that Rule 50 (the "Rule 50") maintains a distinct jurisdictional character and does not find application within the specialized regime of Rule 77, as the former is considered procedurally inferior in the hierarchy of case management protocols. (Tab 3, BOA 10).

27. However, following the promulgation of the 2014 amendments to Rule 77, particularly the introduction of Rule 77.08, it is submitted that any convocation occurring under the auspices of Rule 77.08 remains irrelevant to the broader application of the Rules. This is so because Rule 77 is deemed paramount to any other conflicting provision of the Rules (the "Paramountcy") and is intended to function as the lex terrae for complex litigation management. The circumscription of judicial power in these instances ensures that the status quo ante is preserved until a formal adjudication on the merits can be rendered, thereby preventing the premature vitiation of the applicant's substantive rights through administrative shortcuts. (Tab 4, BOA 12).

VOLUME #3: THE STATUTORY SCHEME

28. The Judicial Review Procedure Act (the "JRPA") is naturally intended to ensure that judicial review proceedings (the "JRPA Proceedings") are summary in nature. The summary nature of the JRPA Proceedings is a direct response to the historical complexity of the prerogative writs, designed to provide a streamlined mechanism for the review of administrative action without the exhaustive and dilatory procedures inherent in a full-scale civil trial. The JRPA functions as a procedural scalpel, intended to excise administrative error with precision and velocity, thereby maintaining the boundaries of statutory authority and ensuring the accountability of the state. To treat judicial review as a ponderous exercise is to fundamentally misunderstand its supervisory nature (the "Supervisory Nature"). Pursuant to Rule 68.02 (1), Rule 38, except as provided in subrule 38.01 (2), and rules 68.03 to 68.07 apply to applications to the Divisional Court for judicial review. In the context of judicial reviews, where the record of proceeding is required to be filed—not merely served—forthwith with the Court by the impugned tribunal, Rule 68 operates in harmony with Rule 38.05 by way of exclusion. Upon the service of an unissued JRPA application on an impugned tribunal, the tribunal is mandated to forthwith file the record of proceeding. Subsequently, Rule 68.04 prescribes that the applicant shall deliver an application record and a factum. This forthwith requirement (the "Forthwith Requirement") is a mandatory statutory directive that leaves no room for administrative discretion or dilatory conduct by the respondent tribunal. The Forthwith Requirement in Rule 68 is not a mere suggestion; it is a jurisdictional imperative. It reflects the recognition of the legislature that the administrative record is the foundation of judicial review and that any delay in its production impedes the ability of the Court to discharge its constitutional function. A tribunal that fails to file its record "forthwith" is effectively obstructing the course of justice and should be subject to immediate remedial intervention. To treat "forthwith" as synonymous with

"for the convenience of the tribunal" is to vitiate the procedural safeguards that protect the subject from administrative overreach. The prompt filing of the record (the "Filing of the Record") is the sine qua non of administrative law.

VOLUME #4 – THE FACTS: A CHRONICLE OF PROCEDURAL STAGNATION

29. The JRPA* Application was commenced on November 15, 2024, and subsequently issued by the Divisional Court on November 21, 2024. Notwithstanding the commencement of proceedings and the service of all requisite materials, no notice of appearance (the "NOA") or initial statement of defence was delivered by any of the Respondents within the prescribed intervals. This total failure to engage with the record signaled an early abandonment of any meritorious defence and invited a summary disposition. The strategic silence (the "Strategic Silence") of the institutional respondents was met with an equal but unauthorized silence from the judicature, resulting in a procedural vacuum. Perfection of the JRPA* Application was completed on December 13, 2024. Despite this perfection, the Registrar failed to place the matter upon a listing for hearing or issue a notice of listing for hearing (the "Form 68B") as required by Rule 68.05. This failure of the clerical arm of the state created an administrative barrier that has effectively hijacked the adjudicative objective, leaving the Applicant in a state of procedural paralysis heretofore unobserved in the registry of the Divisional Court. This Registry Capture represents the functional mechanism through which the Strategic Erasure of rights is operationalized in the current instance. On January 30, 2025, the motion in writing (the "NOM #2") was filed and paid for pursuant to Rule 37.12.1(4) of the Rules. The NOM #2 sought the conversion of the motion into a motion for judgment (the "Conversion Order") on the basis that no responsive factums had been provided. No opposition to the relief sought in NOM #2 was recorded within the prescribed interval. The compliance of the Applicant with the fiscal and procedural requirements for NOM #2 was absolute, yet the system has remained unresponsive for over 380 days. This stasis is a terminal failure of the primary track (the "Primary Track") of adjudication.

VOLUME #5: DELINEATED ISSUES AND ANSWERS

ISSUE #1: THE FISCAL AND REGULATORY PERFECTION OF THE MOTION

30. Issue #1: Did the Applicant file and pay for NOM #2 in accordance with the attendant regulation to the Administration of Justice Act (Reg 158/03) Answer: It is established that the fiscal requirements of Regulation 158/03

scrupulously satisfied by the Applicant on Friday, January 31, 2025. This act of compliance perfected the filing, thereby invoking the mandatory jurisdiction of the Court to provide a determination on the merits. The performance of this statutory duty by the Applicant created a concomitant obligation on the part of the Court to provide a resolution within the temporal boundaries of the law. (Motion Record for NOM #2, Tab 1). This perfection serves as the Condition Precedent for all subsequent judicial obligations. The payment of the prescribed fee transforms the adjudicative power of the Court into a public duty; the state, having accepted the consideration for the service, is constitutionally precluded from withholding the adjudicative product. The "stamping" of the motion on January 31, 2025, constitutes a ministerial acknowledgment of this perfected right, yet the product has remained unissued for over 380 days. This stagnation constitutes a functional breach of the social contract between the citizen and the state-funded judiciary, whereby the subject remits payment for a service the state subsequently refuses to perform. Such a failure constitutes a functional fraud (the "Functional Fraud") upon the subject, who has remitted payment for a service the state has effectively eschewed.

ISSUE #2: THE PROCEDURAL DEFAULT OF THE RESPONDING ISSUE #IES

31. Issue #2: Did any of the Responding Issue #ies comply with the procedural mandates of Rule 37.12.1(5)? Answer: The record confirms a total failure on the part of the Responding Issue #ies to comply with the procedural mandates of Rule 37.12.1(5). No responding record or factum was delivered within the prescribed ten-day interval or at any time thereafter. This procedural sloth constitutes a functional abandonment of the right to contest the merits, rendering the motion unopposed ipso facto. Such silence is interpreted as a pro confesso admission that the relief sought by the Applicant is warranted, as no adversarial substrate was ever delivered to the Court to challenge the prima facie entitlement of the Applicant to judgment. The Respondents, having been duly served as Responding Issue #ies to NOM #2, cannot now be heard to complain of an unfavorable determination. Their failure to engage with the process simplifies the adjudicative task of the Court but does not alleviate the duty of the Court to provide a final order based on the uncontroverted facts. Strategic silence must not be rewarded with administrative delay; to do so would incentivize procedural defiance as a tool for the obstruction of justice. The resulting state of uncontradicted evidence (the "Uncontradicted Evidence") leaves the Court with a mandatory path toward the granting of relief.

ISSUE #3: THE METHOD OF HEARING DESIGNATION

32. Issue #3: Did the Divisional Court order in relation to NOM #2 that the motion not be heard in writing?

Answer: Negative. The Divisional Court did not exercise its discretion to order that NOM #2 not be heard in writing pursuant to Rule 37.12.1(4)(3). In the absence of such a prohibitive order, the motion remained properly constituted as a written hearing. The choice of a written hearing by the Applicant was intended to facilitate the "just, most expeditious and least expensive determination" of the motion, a choice that the Court is bound to respect in the absence of a contradictory order based on the specific interests of justice. The stasis of the matter cannot be attributed to any procedural uncertainty regarding the method of adjudication; rather, it is a failure of execution on the part of the presiding judge who has remained silent despite being seized of the matter through the written record. The administrative nature of a written hearing does not insulate the judge from the statutory timelines of the CJA, nor does it permit the indefinite suspension of the lis without explanation or justification. A written hearing (the "Written Hearing") is a hearing of record, and the silence of the bench on such a hearing is subject to the supervisory authority of the Chief Justice.

ISSUE # 4: THE COMMENCEMENT OF THE ADJUDICATIVE CLOCK

33. Issue #4: When did the time for NOM #2 to be heard and have a decision issued commence? Answer: The temporal clock for the issuance of a decision commenced upon the expiration of the responding period, occurring on or about Friday, February 14, 2025 or February 15, 2025. This marks the dies a quo (the day from which) for the statutory period under section 123 of the CJA. The subsequent passage of one year without an adjudicative manifestation represents a profound departure from the statutory scheme and the expectations of the lex terrae. The Court was seized of the matter the moment the time for filing responses expired, yet it has remained silent in the face of a perfected record. This silence constitutes a functional abdication of the judicial role, as the power to decide is coupled with a temporal duty that has been unequivocally breached. The clock has not merely expired; it has been ignored, creating a jurisdictional impasse that only the Chief Justice can resolve. The time for deliberation (the "Time for Deliberation") has long since transitioned into the time for institutional failure, necessitating the activation of the s. 123(4) remedy. The dies a quo is a fixed point of law, not an administrative variable.

ISSUE # 5: THE CALCULATION OF THE STATUTORY WINDOWS

34. Issue #5: Calculation of the three-month and six-month intervals for written hearings.

Answer: For an interlocutory determination, the statutory window closed on April 15, 2025. To the extent that the matter

s. 123(5) final judgment (conversion to judgment), the six-month interval expired on August 15, 2025. The current date of February 22, 2026, exceeds the maximum allowable period by over six months, doubling the "benchmark of acceptability" established in R. v. Bosley. This delay is not merely an administrative oversight but a constitutional transgression that transforms the adjudicative delay into a structural barrier to justice. The "legal limbo" created by this delay has ripened into a practical denial of justice, as the Applicant remains deprived of a decision on a perfected motion for more than a year. The consequences of this delay are cumulative, eroding the value of the eventual remedy and compromising the integrity of the proceeding as a whole, rendering the timelines in s. 123(5) purely illusory if not enforced through the supervisory power of the Chief Justice to correct judicial inertia. The doubling of the statutory period constitutes a prima facie violation (the "Prima Facie Violation") of judicial integrity.

ISSUE # 6: THE STATUTORY DEFINITION OF A HEARING

35. Issue #6: What is the definition of Hearing under the CJA and more particularly the Rules of Civil Procedure?

Answer: A hearing (the "Hearing") is defined broadly to include any motion, application, trial, reference, appeal, or assessment of costs. It encompasses proceedings determined without oral argument, but not even broadly enough to include "case conferences" or "conference calls" which do not possess adjudicative finality. Rule 4.05.3 does not include conference calls but includes case conferences and pre-trial conferences. Naturally, although Madam Justice Shore was Coram Non Judice and Factum A Judice, Quod Ad Officium Jure Non Pertinet, Ratum Non Est, of which none of her acts could ever be ratified and were void ab initio, she utilized the language of a case management conference [sic] on the file on a date to be set by the court staff of the Divisional Court (The Executive Branch). This functional definition ensures that the protections of section 123 apply to the judicial consideration of a written record as they would to oral advocacy, preserving the integrity of the process. A written motion is a hearing of record, and the silence of the bench on such a hearing is subject to the supervisory authority of the Chief Justice. The term "hearing" must be interpreted purposively to include all adjudicative acts where the rights of the parties are at stake, regardless of the physical setting of the deliberations. A failure to decide a written motion is a failure of the hearing itself, necessitating a rehearing under s. 123(4) to provide the subject with the adjudicative answer required by the Rules. The exclusion of case conferences (the "Case Conferences") underscores that only final adjudicative acts are protected by the temporal mandates.

36. Issue #7: Do statutory timelines apply to written, non-public hearings? Answer: Affirmative. The statutory protections against judicial delay apply with equal force to written non-public hearings (the "Written Non-Public Hearings"). The absence of a public docket or oral argument does not alleviate the judiciary of its obligation to provide a timely resolution. To hold otherwise would allow for the creation of an "invisible" justice system immune from accountability, which is fundamentally antithetical to the open court principle and the requirement for judicial transparency. The administrative nature of the assignment does not diminish the constitutional obligation to decide the lis between the parties. Judicial accountability is as necessary in the chamber as it is on the bench, and the protection against delay is a right of the subject, not a privilege of the court. Silence in chambers is as much a denial of justice as a locked courtroom door, as both preclude the subject from being heard by the law. Procedural invisibility (the "Procedural Invisibility") must not be utilized as a shield against the enforcement of statutory mandates or as an excuse for the atrophy of the judicial limb.

ISSUE # 8: THE LIMITATIONS OF STATUTORY JURISDICTION

37. Issue #8: Does the Divisional Court possess Inherent Jurisdiction? Answer: Negative. The Divisional Court is a statutory tribunal of provincial jurisdiction and possesses no inherent jurisdiction. Its powers are strictly confined to those expressly granted by the CJA and the JRPA. Consequently, its adherence to statutory timelines is a matter of jurisdictional integrity; unlike the Superior Court, it cannot rely on common law powers to excuse procedural lawlessness or justify the suspension of a proceeding. Every act of the Divisional Court must find its root in a specific statutory grant, making any deviation from the CJA a jurisdictional error (the "Jurisdictional Error") of the highest order. The Court must operate within the four corners of its enabling legislation, and a failure to do so renders its silence an ultra vires act that cannot be sustained by any common law fiction. The lack of inherent jurisdiction (the "Inherent Jurisdiction") makes the statutory timelines of s. 123 mandatory markers of authority that the Court is not at liberty to disregard for administrative convenience or deliberation-heavy reasoning. The Court is a creature of statute and must obey the laws of its creation.

ISSUE # 9: THE LEGAL CRITERIA FOR CONVERSION TO JUDGMENT

38. Issue #9: Did the Applicant meet the legal test for converting NOM #2 into a motion for judgment? What was the legal effect as it related to timing? Answer: Affirmative. The Applicant met the legal test by demonstrating the absence of material issues of fact and the total procedural default of the Respondents. As no statement of defence or notice of appearance was delivered, the matter was then and now ripe for a summary disposition on the merits pursuant to Rule 37.13(2)(a). The evidentiary record filed by the Applicant remains uncontroverted and satisfies the requirements for a final judgment. (Applicant's Factum for NOM #2, para 45-50). The failure of the bench to grant this conversion in the face of such a clear record is an omission that requires immediate correction by the Chief Justice to prevent the case from withering in the system's backlog. The legal test is satisfied on the face of the record, and the standard of proof is met through the choice of tactical desuetude of the Respondents. Conversion is the only efficient path remaining to fulfill the mandate of finality of the Superior Court and ensure that judicial resources are not squandered on a non-existent adversarial contest. The uncontradicted record (the "Uncontradicted Record") necessitates a summary result. By meeting the legal test for conversion of a motion for Judgment, this allowed the presiding Motions Judge (not an Unauthorized CMJ) another three months to issue the decision.

ISSUE #10: THE OPERATIONAL EFFICACY OF RULE 37.13(2)(A) AS A STATUTORY SURROGATE FOR INHERENT JURISDICTION WITHIN THE DIVISIONAL COURT

39. It is posited that Rule 37.13(2)(a) of the Rules of Civil Procedure (the "Rules") functions not merely as a procedural adjunct, but as a robust statutory mechanism designed to mirror the inherent jurisdiction of a superior court of record, thereby ensuring that proceedings initiated under the Judicial Review Procedure Act (the "JRPA") are adjudicated with the requisite temporal efficiency as it pertains to the substantive merits. In accordance with the principles articulated in Stickel v. Unum Provident Corporation (2009) (Stickel), Rule 37.13(2)(a) serves as a procedural companion (the "Procedural Companion") and an indispensable instrument through which the Court may resolve claims in instances where no genuine issue for trial subsists. Within the specific architecture of a statutory court—heretofore constrained by the absence of inherent jurisdiction—this provision constitutes the primary and exclusive authority to forestall profligate delays, the accumulation of concomitant costs, and the perpetuation of inequitable procedural outcomes, particularly in circumstances where the terminal determination is self-evident upon the face of the record. It is observed that when an administrative tribunal (the "Tribunal") maintains a steadfast refusal to transmit the record of proceeding (the "Record of Proceeding"), Especially where a motion has been initiated to address such non-compliance, reliance is placed upon the sagacious precedent established by Chief Justice Morawetz in Ontario (Attorney General) v. Persons Unknown, 2021 ONSC 152 (Persons Unknown). Therein, it was held that a party is precluded from asserting the insufficiency or incompleteness of the Record of Proceeding in the absence of a formal motion objecting to the same. However, a critical distinction must be drawn; the present exigency does not pertain to mere incompleteness, but rather to a comprehensive failure to file the record instanter or at all, which constitutes a fundamental contravention of the lex terrae. While the overarching objectives of the CJA and the Rules necessitate the resolution of proceedings on their merits in an expeditious, cost-effective, and just manner, the JRPA remains the paramount statute for judicial consideration (see: Rule 68.01). The interpretive jurisprudence surrounding the JRPA, as detailed in the Applicant's first amended book of authorities (the "BOA"), underscores an emergent precedent: where an impugned tribunal fails to produce the Record of Proceeding and the Divisional Court declines to facilitate an oral hearing on the matter, the principles in Smith Bus Lines Ltd. v. Bank of Montreal, 1987 CanLII 4190 (ON SC) (Smith Bus Lines) are invoked. In Smith Bus Lines, the rescission of determinations was rendered necessary by two distinct procedural deficiencies: (i) the deprivation of an exhaustive opportunity to be heard (the "Deprivation"); or (ii) a judicial determination led into error by an incomplete record (the "Error").

40. Consequently, it is submitted that any failure by a tribunal—particularly one governed by the Statutory Powers Procedure Act (the "SPPA"), the Adjudicative Tribunals Accountability, Governance and Appointments Act, 2009 (the "ATAGAA"), and the Tribunal Adjudicative Records Act (the "TARA")—vitiates the possibility of its decisions being upheld until such time as compliance is achieved. The underlying Record of Proceeding remains fundamentally deficient, save for one disjunctive proviso: if the applicant (the "Applicant") has independently filed a comprehensive record as part of the application record (the "Application Record"), the argument regarding an incomplete record might, prima facie, be obviated. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the present matter is complicated by allegations of fraud, bribery, and extortion, alongside the theft of electronic and mobile storage devices. It is further noted that the absence of a functional interface on the electronic filing portal for the License Appeal Tribunal (the "LAT") and the Automobile Accident Benefits Service (the "AABS"), combined with misrepresentations concerning a power outage on March 30, 2024, resulted in the disappearance of the Applicant's file. These labyrinthine circumstances, compounded by privacy breaches necessitating the metamorphosis of the Applicant's digital communications, have effectively prevented the Applicant from securing the majority of the requisite filings from the proceeding below. Furthermore, the non-disclosure of two final motion orders (the "Undisclosed Orders") by the LAT has frustrated the completion of the record. It is entirely conceivable that the Undisclosed Orders were rendered in favour of the Applicant, or at the very least, contained findings that would significantly alter the curial assessment of the merits. In summation, Rule 37.13(2)(a) functions as the statutory bridge through which the Divisional Court exercises a summary finality analogous to inherent jurisdiction. It is the functional tool through which the mandate to provide a "just, most expeditious and least expensive determination" is realized. The application of this rule is mandated where the facts remain uncontradicted and the respondents (the "Respondents") have effectively defaulted. This Procedural Companion constitutes a vital instrument of curial economy, ensuring that the record is moved toward its inevitable conclusion without superfluous litigation.

ISSUE #11: THE CONSEQUENCES OF NON-COMPLIANCE

41. Issue #11: What is the legal impact or effect of Responding Issue #ies failing to comply with Rule 37.12.1(4)?

Answer: As illustrated in Agbapu v. Dr. Munshi (2023), such non-compliance necessitates a brief endorsement in favor of the moving party or a decision with reasons to follow immediately upon the issuance of the order. The Court should not facilitate the tactical silence of respondents by withholding judgment from a moving party who has complied with every procedural mandate. The standard of procedural fairness requires that those who default on their obligations do not benefit from the resulting delay. The "neglect" of the Respondents simplifies the adjudicative task of the Court by removing contradictory evidence from the record, but it does not lower the standard of proof. A party who chooses to remain silent (the "Silent Issue #y") in the face of a motion for judgment must accept the preponderance of probabilities established by the moving party. Strategic inertia must result in an immediate and decisive result for the diligent subject.

ISSUE #12: THE TRANSFORMATION OF DISCRETION INTO DUTY

42. Issue #12: How does the rule in Julius v. Oxford (Bishop of) and the Legislation Act apply? Answer: Where there is a "may" in the Rules of Civil Procedure or in the JRPA, it becomes a "must" as it relates to the requirement to issue a decision. Decisions come in various forms and an endorsement with reasons to follow is also permissible. Meeting the six month window is perfectly reasonable considering that ability and the case law (see: Teskey; Cunningham; LSO v. Harrison) because even "bottom line rulings" or "endorsements with reasons to follow" are presumed to reflect the reasoning even when the Reason For Decision, not the decision itself, are issued even nine to ten months earlier. Pursuant the principle in Julius v. Oxford, when a party has a right to invoke jurisdiction and has fulfilled all statutory prerequisites, the word "may" in the enabling statute is transformed into an imperative "must." The jurisdiction of the Court to decide the motion became mandatory upon the payment of fees and perfection of the record. This doctrine prevents the judicature from arbitrarily refusing to decide cases properly before them, turning a power into a public duty that cannot be ignored without constitutional consequence. The "may" in s. 123 of the CJA becomes a mandatory obligation once the statutory triggers have been satisfied by the Applicant. The permissive language (the "Permissive Language") of the statute is thus superseded by the substantive right of the subject to an answer from the law. The transformation of power into duty is the hallmark of a functional legal order.

ISSUE #13: ADMINISTRATIVE PRIVILEGE AND TRANSPARENCY

43. Issue #13: How does administrative privilege apply to a Written Non Public Hearing? Answer: Reliance is placed upon the principle that while the identity of the presiding motions jurist is shielded from premature disclosure until the formal release of a determination to preserve the sanctity of judicial independence, the administrative privilege (the "Administrative Privilege") is not a permanent artifice that may be utilized to immunize the adjudicative apparatus from accountability for excessive and unclarified procrastination. It is posited that once the statutory temporal window has concluded, the privilege of assignment must yield to the overarching requirement of transparency to ensure the Rule of Law remains discernible.

44. Within the architecture of Canadian jurisprudence, adjudicative privilege (the "Deliberative Privilege") is established to safeguard the internal deliberations and communications of adjudicative bodies, encompassing both the judiciary and administrative tribunals. The primary objective of the Deliberative Privilege is the prevention of the disclosure of internal instruments—including, but not limited to, memoranda, recommendations, and personal notations—to ensure the unassailable integrity of the decision-making process.

45. Concomitantly, administrative privilege (the "Administrative Privilege"), which dovetails with the concept of administrative immunity (the "Administrative Immunity"), serves to protect the administrative functions of the judiciary; however, in contravention of the absolute nature of other protections, it is not immutable and may be overridden in specific exigencies. The administrative functions of a jurist, such as the assignment of matters or the management of court functions, are generally shielded from external scrutiny, yet this immunity may be lifted where a valid justification exists to review the administration of justice: MacKeigan v Hickman, [1989] 2 SCR 796 (MacKeigan).

46. A taxonomy of the distinctions between these two doctrines reveals a divergent scope and purpose: a. regarding scope, the Deliberative Privilege is tethered to the internal ratiocination of adjudicative entities, whereas the Administrative Privilege is circumscribed by the administrative functions of the judiciary; b. regarding purpose, the Deliberative Privilege facilitates the impartiality of the determination, whereas the Administrative Privilege serves to insulate the independence of the judiciary from external interference;. regarding enforcement, the Deliberative Privilege is typically invoked to preclude the production of internal documentation, while the Administrative Privilege is asserted to protect jurists from specific modalities of scrutiny; an d. regarding limitations, while the Deliberative Privilege is generally regarded as absolute, the Administrative Privilege is qualified and may be superseded if a compelling necessity for the review of the administration of justice is demonstrated. Nonetheless, the production of records pertaining to judicial assignment is rendered unnecessary, as the statutory mandate constitutes the primary obligation; this does not necessitate that the Applicant is guaranteed the specific relief sought, but it is maintained that there is an entitlement to a "decision" (the "Decision"), a term which, in its legislative promulgation, does not explicitly necessitate the provision of "reasons for decision."

47. Historically, in the matter of Johnson v Johnson, [1994] OJ No 2221 (Johnson), a significant debate emerged regarding whether correspondence via electronic mail could be construed as a formal decision of the court. It is further noted that in Alfano v Piersanti, 2012 ONCA 297 (Alfano), it was determined that electronic communications do not constitute formal endorsements An endorsement (the "Endorsement") is defined as a signature affixed to one of the prescribed classes of documentation; while several such categories remain inapplicable to a proceeding under the Judicial Review Procedure Act, RSO 1990, c J.1 (the "JRPA"), others retain critical relevance.

II. STATUTORY INTERPRETATION AND THE RECORD OF PROCEEDING

48. The metamorphosis of the common law regarding legislative interpretation reflects an evolving understanding that the precise vernacular employed in source laws is of paramount significance. Although the most sophisticated legal minds may diverge on the semantic nuances of specific phrases, it is argued that context invariably governs the interpretive exercise. Under Rule 68.04 of the Rules of Civil Procedure, RRO 1990, Reg 194 (the "Rules"), the nomenclature "record of the proceeding" is utilized, whereas Rule 59.01 employs solely the term "record." Ergo, the drafters of the Rules—having bifurcated them from the Family Law Rules, O Reg 114/99 (the "Family Law Rules") in 2004—intended the "record" to signify the "motion record" or specific hearing records, as opposed to a mere record of proceeding (see: Rule 59.02(1) regarding the endorsement of orders). Consequently, in the context of an application under the JRPA, an appeal book (the "Appeal Book") is deemed irrelevant; any reference to an "appeal" within a JRPA application—particularly one originating from a decision of the Licence Appeal Tribunal—is characterized as maladroit and indicative of a profound deficiency in legal acumen. This necessitates a concentration upon the four remaining instruments a. the compendium (the "Compendium") b. the record (the "Record") c. the notice of motion (the "Notice of Motion"); an d. the notice of application (the "Notice of Application").

49. In the instant proceeding, a Compendium was not served and filed until February 11, 2025, following the initial Notice of Motion on January 22, 2025, and the initial motion record on January 23, 2025. Therefore, regarding the Divisional Court's failure to issue an order (the "Order") assigning the JRPA proceeding for case management—a practice consistent with the objectives of Rule 77 since its 2008 promulgation (effective January 1, 2010)—any such assignment would, ipso facto, have to be reflected upon the Notice of Application issued via the Justice Services Online portal.

50. Given that "record" lacks a specific definition under the Rules, yet "document" is defined to include data and information in electronic form, any endorsement of a record would necessarily pertain to the motion record or the application record. The convening of a case conference by Madam Justice Shore is viewed as a fatal procedural error; her Honour's referral to a "case management conference" was not only maladroit but also distinct from a conference call as contemplated under Rule 77.04(2). Absent a formal "Assignment for Case Management" de facto and de jure and then by Order so endorsed, issued and entered, the convening of such a session is ultra vires, particularly under Rule 77.08, which was amended in 2014 to specifically incorporate Rule 50.13 of the Rules should such a convening occur—a fact of which the presiding jurist may have been oblivious during the hurried events of January 7, 2025.The shield of administrative secrecy (the "Shield of Privilege") must not be permitted to undergo a metamorphosis into a cloak for judicial paralysis. Parties are vested with a right to know that their matters are being adjudicated by a legally constituted authority and that the system is functioning in accordance with the lex terrae. Accountability is as requisite in the privacy of the chamber as it is upon the bench; thus, the Shield of Privilege must yield to the baseline requirements of statutory compliance.

ISSUE #14: THE TRANSCRIPT PREREQUISITE -NOT APPLICABLE

51. Issue #14: Are there any transcripts at issue for purposes of section 123 of the CJA? Answer: Negative. In the context of a written hearing, there are no oral transcripts at issue, and the rehearing is to be conducted solely on the basis of the existing written record, factums, and exhibits, maximizing administrative efficiency and judicial economy. This distinguishes the present motion from complex trial rehearings, making the path to resolution exceptionally clear and immediate for the successor judge. The paper record (the "Paper Record") is the only evidence required for the President of the Divisional Court to reach a final determination, ensuring that the rehearing process is as streamlined as possible. The absence of transcripts (the "Absence of Transcripts") obviates the traditional logistical hurdles associated with s. 123(4) rehearings.

ISSUE #15: THE STATUS OF THE ADJUDICATIVE DETERMINATION

52. Issue #15: Has any decision been made in relation to NOM #2? Answer: Negative. The record is entirely barren of any adjudicative determination, interlocutory or otherwise, promulgated in relation to NOM #2. This total absence of activity for over one year is the primary trigger for the invocation of the remedial powers of the Chief Justice under section 123, as the matter exists in a state of suspended animation that only the President of the Court can terminate. The lack of an endorsement is a functional denial of the right of the Applicant to an adjudication on the merits, a state of affairs that is fundamentally incompatible with the principles of civil justice. This total silence (the "Total Silence") represents a functional abdication of the judicial role, necessitating the activation of the safety valve provided by the legislature.

ISSUE #16: ADMINISTRATIVE OVERSIGHT AND DISCRETION

53. Issue #16: The effect of the absence of an "Assignment For Case Management" on judicial discretion. Answer: The absence of a formal assignment for case management indicates a lack of administrative oversight, which is exceptionally troublesome. This procedural lacuna justifies the intervention of the Chief Justice to restore order and provide the necessary structure to the litigation, preventing the file from being lost in registry stasis or becoming subject to unauthorized intervention. The lack of an assigned manager is a direct invitation to the jurisdictional anarchy heretofore described, necessitating the exercise of the role of the Chief Justice as the Master of the Roster (the "Master of the Roster"). Without a formal assignment (the "Formal Assignment"), the proceeding drifts in a state of administrative lawlessness where power is exercised without mandate.

54. Issue #17: Do Written Non-Public Hearings have their case listed on the docket? Answer: Negative. Written non-public hearings are generally excluded from the public docket, creating a risk of "invisible" delays. This lack of transparency necessitates a more rigorous adherence to statutory timelines to ensure that non-public proceedings remain accountable to the parties and the law, avoiding the appearance of a Constitutional Vacuum where rights are extinguished in silence. The exclusion from the docket does not exclude the matter from the supervisory jurisdiction of the Chief Justice, who bears the burden of ensuring all files are handled with due process. The public docket (the "Public Docket") is the window through which accountability is maintained; its absence requires a heightened vigil from the leadership of the Court.

ISSUE #18: THE MANAGEMENT OF BACKLOGS

55. Issue #18: Application of Sunsource Grids Inc. v. University of Windsor and section 123(7). Answer: Pursuant to Sunsource, the Chief Justice possesses the authority under section 123(7) to assign a specific judge to resolve lingering issues and prevent files from withering in the administrative backlog. This confirms that the power of the Chief Justice is both broad and remedial, designed to steer cases toward their most efficient conclusion when the standard process fails to produce a result. It is a sophisticated tool for institutional management intended to preserve the reputation of the tribunal and ensure that stagnation (the "Stagnation") does not become the defining characteristic of the Divisional Court. The exercise of this remedial power (the "Remedial Power") is the only remaining mechanism to restore the record to its proper summary course.

ISSUE #19: CONSTITUTIONAL ACCESS TO JUSTICE, ACCESS TO COURTS, ACCESS TO TIMELY DECISIONS, ACCESS TO A MOTIONS JUDGE TO HEAR AND DECIDE THE MERITS OF NOM #2, WHICH INCLUDES NOM #1, THE JRPA APPLICATION ALONG WITH A COMPENDIUM WITH WRITTEN OUTLINE

56. Issue #19: How does TLABC 2014 apply with respect to this Motion #6 Answer: The failure to decide NOM #2 is tantamount to a theft of the constitutional right to be heard. As articulated in TLABC 2014, measures that impede access to the courts strike at the core of section 96 of the Constitution Act, 1867. Interference with the pursuit of legal remedies is fundamentally antithetical to the basic judicial function and the separation of powers, creating an Autocratic

Execution. Universal access to the courts is a quintessential component of the Rule of Law, and the silence of the bench is a functional barrier to that access that the Chief Justice must dismantle to restore constitutional sanity. Access to justice (the "Access to Justice") is not merely about entering the courthouse; it is about receiving an answer from the bench.

ISSUE #20: BOTTOM LINE RULINGS AND DELIBERATION

57. Issue #20: When are bottom line rulings made and issued

58. Answer: Rulings with reasons to follow (the "Bottom Line Rulings") are a recognized judicial practice that preserves the rights of parties during institutional transitions. R. v. Cunningham (2011) and The Queen v. Teskey (2007) affirm that such reasons are presumed to reflect the initial reasoning, even if released long after the decision. This accounts for the temporal reality of the upcoming retirement of the Chief Justice, ensuring a final disposition without compromising the depth of eventual reasons. It provides the "bottom line" necessary for the parties to move forward while the judicial reasons are finalized in accordance with the standards of legal excellence. The bottom line (the "Bottom Line") is the functional order that terminates the lis and restores the status quo ante.

ISSUE #21: THE DOCTRINE OF PRIMUS INTER PARES

59. Issue #21: How does the doctrine of Primus Inter Pares factor into this section 123 of the CJA motion? Answer: The doctrine of Primus Inter Pares (the "Primus Inter Pares") recognizes that the Chief Justice possesses an inherent suite of responsibilities (the "13 Chief Justice Duties"). This includes the Ultimate Jurisdiction over adjudicative functions and the self-assignment power (the "Self-Assignment Power") to preserve the reputation of the institution against administrative stasis. The Chief Justice is the ethical and integrity barometer for the entire judicial institution, and his leadership is required when the system fails to perform its core duty of adjudication. This doctrine is the substantive designation of seniority that empowers the corrective act sought herein to preserve the standing and moral authority of the court. The doctrine (the "Doctrine") ensures that the head of the Court is not merely a symbolic figure but a functional guardian of the adjudicative objective.

ISSUE #22: THE JURISDICTIONAL NULLITY OF UNAUTHORIZED ACTS

60. Issue #22: Impact of the absence of an Order for "Assignment For Case Management" and the doctrines of Coram Non Judice and *Factum A Judice, Quod Ad Officium Jure Non Pertinet, Ratum Non Est

61. Answer: In the absence of a formal assignment Order, no judicial officer could legally undertake case management acts. Such unauthorized acts are void ab initio and do not invoke issue estoppel or res judicata. The assumed authority of Madam Justice Shore via the 'Ibula Email' was an act of a judge which did not pertain to her office, rendering it of no force under the maxim Factum a judice, quod ad officium jure non pertinet, ratum non est. The lack of a mandate is a total barrier to validity, and any resulting "evidence" or "orders" are fundamentally flawed because the proceeding was not "legally constituted." Any act without mandate (the "Act Without Mandate") is a nullity in the eyes of the law.

ISSUE # 23: THE MANIFESTATION OF JURISDICTIONAL ERROR

62. Issue #23: How does the failure to exercise mandatory statutory authority constitute Jurisdictional Error? Answer: The refusal to list the JRPA Application for hearing and issue a Form 68B, contrary to Rule 68.05 of the Rules of Civil Procedure, and in the face of requisitions for compliance of ministerial duties by the Registrar of the Divisional Court (unsurprisingly the now Former Registrar Gentles as of December 3, 2025) and the silence on NOM #2 represent a functional abdication of statutory power, creating a jurisdictional error (the "Jurisdictional Error") that requires remedial intervention by the Chief Justice. A jurisdictional error occurs ipso facto when a decision-maker refuses to decide a matter that the law requires them to address, thereby exceeding their boundaries. This omission is as legally void as an act without authority. The Court has "failed to exercise authority" which the Legislature has mandated it to address, necessitating a corrective order to restore the Rule of Law. Jurisdictional failure (the "Jurisdictional Failure") is the ultimate strike against the social contract.

ISSUE # 24: SATISFACTION OF THE CONDITION PRECEDENT

63. Issue #24: Satisfaction of the Condition Precedents by the Applicant? Answer: The Applicant satisfied the conditions precedent for his motion to be returnable on February 14, 2025 pursuant to Rule 37.12.1(4). Under the previous iteration of the Rules of Civil Procedure as it related to electronic filing in the Civil Online Submissions Portal (defined as the "JSO Portal" for ease of definition in conjunction with the Civil Online Filing Portal for the issuance of Originating Processes), the Registrar was required to not only confirm the filing but also accept the filing. However, this has changed since the amendments to the Rules of Civil Procedure in 2025 (October) for Toronto Region (not other Administration Regions including their counties or cities) with the OCPP in that the requirement of acceptance by the Registrar has been abolished to a more streamlined model of mere confirmation of the filing. With that change has also come the changes to the filing on after business hours with the confirmation occurring on that non-workday or holiday or post business hours to invite more filings via electronic method. Moreover, the timing of the filing is precisely, when confirmed (subject to some glaring nullities on their face), to when it was filed by the confirmation that the filing had been submitted. Therefore, the Legislative Will, with approval from the LGIC, was that under the OCPP model, the Registrar has effectively no discretion to accept or not accept submitted filings and is required to either confirm or not confirm. This was, of course, in part to the number of rejected filings by the Divisional Court Registrar and the Local Registrars at the various courthouses in the various Administrative Regions of the SCJ. The corollary of the same was and is that with a more rigorous and discretionary model under the JSO Portal for Toronto Region Proceedings at the material time, the Applicant's submitted filings were not only filed but they were accepted by the Registrar of the Divisional Court who was a 16 year veteran in that role.

64. By way of example of the timing under the JSO Portal, the Applicant's filings on Friday, January 31, 2025, were electronically stamped on the day of filing subject to being before or after four p.m. with the acceptance and confirmation on the following Friday consistent with the five day representation model. The fulfillment by the Applicant of fiscal and procedural requirements—specifically the filing and payment for NOM #2 on January 31, 2025—constituted a condition precedent (the "Condition Precedent") for the exercise of jurisdiction by the Court. The subsequent failure of the Court to act constitutes an ultra vires omission that renders the resulting stasis a legal nullity, as the Court had no discretion to refuse to decide once the conditions were met. A condition precedent is a legal requirement that must exist before power can be exercised; once satisfied, the power transforms into a mandatory duty that cannot be set aside by administrative caprice. The satisfaction of triggers (the "Satisfaction of Triggers") removes the discretion to remain silent.

ISSUE # 25: THE STANDARD FOR UNOPPOSED MOTIONS IN JRPA PROCEEDINGS

65. Issue #26: What is the legal standard for granting relief on an unopposed motion where the JRPA does not provide for a formal "default judgment"? Answer: It is established that while the JRPA Divisional Court framework eschews the "default" mechanisms prevalent in standard actions, the Rules maintain their supremacy over interlocutory motions within that framework. Pursuant to Rule 37.12.1(5), the failure of the Responding Issue #ies to deliver a response within the ten-day interval entitles the moving party to a determination on the written record. The Court, as an active guardian (the "Active Guardian") of the legal process, must grant the relief if the Applicant satisfies the Balance of Probabilities that the relief is factually supported and legally sound. The Respondents, having been duly served as Responding Issue #ies to NOM #2, cannot rely on the absence of a "default" label to immunize their procedural sloth. The active guardianship (the "Active Guardianship") requires a decision on the merits of the uncontradicted record.

ISSUE #26: THE MINISTERIAL AND EXECUTORY OBLIGATIONS OF THE REGISTRAR IN CONJUNCTION WITH JUDICIAL DISCRETION

66. It is posited that the ministerial duties (the "Ministerial Duties") and executory functions of the registrar (the "Registrar") are inextricably linked to the requisite exercise of discretion by the Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Justice (the "Chief Justice") in its capacity as the President of the Divisional Court. The promulgation of administrative efficiency is vitiated when the non-discretionary obligations of court staff are eschewed, thereby obstructing the lex terrae and the orderly progression of the Judicial Review Procedure Act (the "JRPA") proceedings. In the context of an appellate tribunal, the Registrar functions as a critical conduit; a failure in this capacity is not merely a clerical oversight but a fundamental rupture in the procedural pipeline that sustains the rule of law. A profound failure was manifested by the former registrar (the "Former Registrar"), specifically Registrar Gentles, who neglected to discharge the vested obligations of her office. These omissions included, inter alia. The failure to list the JRPA Application for a hearing scheduled in mid-December 2025, which heretofore frustrated the Applicant's right to a timely adjudication and created a state of executory paralysis (the "Executory Paralysis") b. The failure to issue and execute Form 68B (the "Form 68B") and subsequently transmit said instrument via postal or electronic mail, pursuant to Rule 1.11 of the Rules, to the parties of record. A flagrant disregard for the standard temporal parameters governing the processing of the requisition (the "Requisition #1"), resulting in a processing delay that persisted until the departure of the Epstein Cole LLP client from the TDI Group Of Insurance Companies in late January 2025;d. The affirmative misrepresentation of both factual circumstances and the governing legal framework, which misled the parties and the Court; and e. Various concomitant administrative lapses that collectively obviated the efficiency of the Divisional Court's oversight role.

67. Furthermore, the interplay between the Registrar's duties and the Chief Justice's discretion must be understood as a symbiotic relationship (the "Symbiotic Relationship"). When the Registrar fails to process a Requisition #1 and Requisition #2 in a timely fashion or as represented (see: Compendium For NOM #3-5 (mail filed in relation to Compendium For NOM #3 on December 8, 2025, and Compendium For NOM #3-5 (volume 11 of 11 on February 19, 2026), the Chief Justice is deprived of the accurate record necessary to exercise informed case management discretion.

This lack of informational transparency vitiates the Chief Justice's ability to manage the roster effectively, leading to the appointment of judges who may lack the requisite seisin (the "Seisin") to hear the matter prima facie. Nonetheless, access to the courts and access to justice since 2014 is part of the Rule Of Law and Section 96 of the Constitution Act, 1867, so it is a matter assigned by law to the judiciary. Perhaps, this is why Former Registrar Gentles was terminated or dismissed from her role with the Divisional Court but the Applicant is speculating as to the reasons which are often confidential and not subject to disclosure in FIPPA request but may be if the Applicant is required to be increasingly investigative and diligent.

ISSUE #29: THE DOCTRINE OF SEISIN AND ITS INTERPLAY WITH CASE CENTER PROTOCOLS

68. The inquiry pertains to whether the absence of judicial Seisin by Madam Justice Shore—attributable to the non-existence of a first defence (the "First Defence") and the subsequent lack of an order for assignment (the "Assignment For Case Management")—vitiates her authority to conduct case management or hear motions in the JRPA proceeding under Section 123 of the CJA. It is a fundamental tenet of judicial administration that a judge's authority is not a roving commission but is strictly circumscribed (the "Circumscription") by the orders of assignment and the Rules. It is posited that in the absence of a formal assignment direction by the Chief Justice, the Associate Chief Justice, or the Lead Administrative Judge (the "LAJ") of the Divisional Court, no individual judge is seized of the interlocutory steps. Madam Justice Shore was restricted solely to the hearing of the JRPA Application itself, and any attempt to expand this jurisdiction sua sponte is ultra vires. It is further posited that the convening of motions before a judge who is not properly seized constitutes an unauthorized act, particularly where a motion for judgment (the "Motion for Judgment") functions as the functional equivalent of the JRPA Application on its merits.

69. Reliance is placed upon Rule 37.15 (the "Rule 37.15"), which governs motions in complicated proceedings. Pursuant to Rule 37.15(1), a specific direction (the "Direction") must be issued by the Chief Justice or their designate to consolidate motions before a particular judge. In the case at bar, no such Direction was promulgated. To assume a Direction exists in the absence of a written order is to invite procedural anarchy and allow for bench hunting (the "Bench Hunting") by parties or court staff. Furthermore, Rule 37.15(2) dictates that a judge hearing motions under such a Direction shall not preside at the trial or application hearing without written consent. This is consistent with Rule 77.06 and Rule 77.07 (the "Rule 77.07"), which establish that an assigned case management judge is precluded from adjudicating the ultimate merits.

The rationale for this Circumscription of authority is the preservation of judicial impartiality. The doctrine of Seisin ensures that the "referee" of the procedural phase does not become the "umpire" of the final judgment. The purported expertise of Madam Justice Shore in family law is noted to be frequently at variance with the Rules and the open court principle (the "Open Court Principle"). Unlike the inherent confidentiality of family litigation, civil proceedings demand a higher threshold of transparency. The attempt to convene case conferences (the "Case Conferences") without authorizing orders reflects a metamorphosis (the "Metamorphosis") of procedure that deviates from the status quo ante. A judge cannot import the "secrecy" of family chambers into the public forum of the Divisional Court without a specific statutory warrant. In the lex terrae, to be seized (the "Seised") denotes the acquisition of jurisdiction and responsibility by a specific jurist. The doctrine is designed to obviate Bench Hunting and ensure judicial economy. Seisin exists in degrees: a. Seised of a Proceeding (Full Seisin): A singular judge oversees the matter from commencement to final disposition, requiring an explicit assignment order by the Chief Justice. Seised of Steps: Authority is circumscribed to specific phases, such as discovery disputes. Under Rule 77, such authority must flow from a Direction by the President, Vice President, or LAJ.c. Seised of Motions: Once oral argument or evidence is commenced, the judge is ipso facto seized of that specific motion. D. Seised of Case Management: Authority is limited to the "flow" of litigation, resolving procedural squabbles without determining final rights

CASE CENTER COMPLIANCE AND THE FIVE-DAY RULE

70. The material time for this proceeding occurred during the period when the five-day rule (the "Five-Day Rule") governed the uploading of filed documents to Case Center (the "Case Center"). This requirement is a pillar of modern digital litigation, acting as a temporal gatekeeper (the "Temporal Gatekeeper") that ensures the presiding judge is prepared to address the merits. Pursuant to O. Reg. 300/24, every party must provide documents by uploading them to Case Center. Filing a document (the "Filing") is a distinct legal act from uploading (the "Uploading"). The court file is no longer a physical artifact; it is a digital construct. The failure of court staff to provide a Case Center invite, likely influenced by unauthorized judicial direction, created a situation where the Applicant was functionally silenced in a digital courtroom. This digital silencing (the "Digital Silencing") is a modern form of procedural unfairness.

JURISPRUDENTIAL FOUNDATIONS OF PROCEDURAL FAIRNESS

71. The analogy can be drawn between a statutory court and a statutory tribunal because neither have Inherent Jurisdiction. While the Divisional Court has Equitable Jurisdiction that is only to alleviate the harshness of the common by and not to contradict with legislative will. Both are in positions of being creatures of statute by Divisional Court and how they are so sitting i.e. at a case conference, motion or a hearing of the same. As such, in Baker v. Canada (Minister of Citizenship and Immigration), 1999 CanLII 699 (SCC), [1999] 2 S.C.R. 817 (the "Baker") at para. 28, the Supreme Court of Canada articulated that procedural fairness requires an open and impartial process. In the case at bar, the "process" was neither fair nor open. It is trite law that a decision-maker must confine orders to the ambit of the question presented: Rio Tinto Alcan Inc. v. Carrier Sekani Tribal Council, 2010 SCC 43, [2010] 2 S.C.R. 650 (the "Rio Tinto"). Furthermore, in ATCO Gas and Pipelines Ltd. v. Alberta (Energy and Utilities Board), 2006 SCC 4, [2006] 1 S.C.R. 140 (the "ATCO Gas") at para. 46, it was cautioned that unfettered discretion is absurd. A judge is an adjudicator of a claim, not a Royal Commission (the "Royal Commission") with a roving mandate. Procedural fairness is functional, not technical: Petro-Canada v. British Columbia (Workers' Compensation Board), 2009 BCCA 396 (the "Petro-Canada") at para. 65. A party is entitled to know the case it must meet: Amacon Property Management Services Inc. v. Dutt, 2008 BCSC 889 (the "Amacon") at paras. 27-36. The failure to provide clarity in court orders is a breach of the rule of law: Gurtins v. Goyert, 2008 BCCA 196 (the "Gurtins") at para. 15. Remedies must flow directly from the claim: Moore v. British Columbia (Education), 2012 SCC 61 (the "Moore") at para. 64. Reliance is placed on High-Crest Enterprises Limited v. Canada, 2017 FCA 88 (the "High-Crest"), at BOA, Tab 71, and the doctrine of vertical stare decisis (the "Vertical Stare Decisis") with respect to the requirements of following the Statutory Supremacy along with the inability to remove a judge generally or specifically after she is seized. The corollary of the same is obvious.

72. Had a valid order (the "ORDER") for Assignment For Case Management been made the right of appeal under Section 6(1)(a) of the CJA would have been preserved and available. The absence of a right of appeal is a deleterious consequence (the "Deleterious Consequence") that cannot be cured by retrospective adjustment as a nullity is void ab initio from its inception, creation and notice to the adversely affected person. Moreover, it would be nonsensical to appeal that which is subject to void ab initio acts where a judge is Coram Non Judice or Factum A Judice, Quod Ad Officium Jure Non Pertinet, Ratum Non Est and that is one of the precedents arising from McLean v. Bradley and Pong v. Quong et al in that there is no prohibition on starting an action in relation to a statutory application where even a Judge of an SCJ Court which Madam Justice Shore was not that exceeded the statutory (and where applicable the prescribed mandate) inevitably has those issues decided outside of the same given no legal validity or ratification. Put another

73. The legal maxim factum a judice, quod ad officium jure non pertinet, ratum non est (the "Maxim") is dispositive. Any act of a judge of the Divisional Court which did not pertain to her office is invalid and void ab initio. Reliance is placed upon the Nash v. CAMI Divisional Court proceeding (the "Nash CAMI Divisional Court Proceeding") (see: DC-25-00000872-00JR) which underscores that a formal Assignment For Case Management is a condition precedent to a Case Conference. While it is required to be reduced to an Order, that allows for any of the parties or persons affected to tender the same. Nonetheless, there is a scintilla of evidence that was provided to the Applicant and not within the OCPP Case View of a single order let alone an Order for "Assignment For Case Management". Ergo, there was none. Accordingly, a decision regarding NOM #2 must be rendered in accordance with Section 123 of the CJA forthwith. The Applicant seeks the immediate issuance of the orders requested once the President of the Divisional Court has self-assigned pursuant to the SCC binding precedents in Primus Inter Pares doctrine and other persuasive authorities. At this stage and in light of McIntosh v. Shore decisions, one cannot trust what Madam Justice Shore is representing or misrepresenting behind the Tweed curtain cloaked in purported administrative privilege.

VOLUME #6: – THE JURISDICTIONAL NULLITIES UPON NULLITIES UPON NULLITIES OF UNAUTHORIZED CASE MANAGEMENT BY

74. It is postulated that the jurisprudential architecture of this jurisdiction necessitates, as a condition precedent for the adjudicative manifestations of a member of the judiciary to possess binding efficacy, that such acta emanate exclusively from the authorized office and pertain strictly to the prescribed duties associated therewith. This principle, fundamentally entrenched in McLean v Bradley (1878) (McLean) (the "Bradley") (BOA, Tab #310), ensures that judicial power is exercised only by those designated for the specific task at hand. The unauthorized assumption of power is characterized as a strike against the heart of the Rule of Law and the institutional synchronicity of the Divisional Court. The exercise of power without mandate is a nullity that cannot be cured by acquiescence or administrative convenience. Power without commission is merely the expression of private will under the guise of public office, representing a fundamental deviation from the constitutional trust bestowed upon the bench.

75. Madam Justice Shore purported to exercise the functions of a case management judge (the "CMJ") notwithstanding the absence of a formal designation. The maxim Factum a judice, quod ad officium jure non pertinet, ratum non est dictates that such acts are of no force. Since no order for "assignment for case management" was rendered, any acts arising from such unauthorized intervention are void ab initio and do not invoke issue estoppel or res judicata. The appearance of bias and the erosion of internal judicial synchronicity represent an existential threat to the constitutional covenant (the "Covenant"), transforming the arbiter into a participant in the erasure of the Applicant through the creation of a constitutional vacuum (the "Vacuum"). It is submitted that the Court must excise these unauthorized acts to restore the integrity of the record and the sanity of the proceeding, ensuring that only legally constituted authority prevails. The "ibula email" (the "Ibula Email") artifact stands as the primary evidentiary marker of this jurisdictional derailment.

VOLUME #6(A): THE ABSENCE OF A REQUIREMENT TO OBEY ORDERS RENDERED CORAM NON JUDICE

76. It is further asserted that there exists no requirement to obey the order of a judge where the judge is coram non judice; ergo, no res judicata, no issue estoppel, and no abuse of process or collateral attack can be sustained, as there is effectively no legal substratum to attack At page 547 of Bradley the Supreme Court of Canada (the "SCC"), invoking Broom's Legal Maxims and Taylor v Clemson (1844) (Taylor) (the "Taylor") (House of Lords), observed that when the Court lacks jurisdiction of the cause, the whole proceeding is coram non judice, and actions will lie against the parties without regard to the precept or process; in such instances, it is not necessary to obey one who is not judge of the cause. Reliance is placed upon McLean at page 547, wherein it was held that no plea of justification is available for a constable acting under a warrant where the justice possessed no jurisdiction over the subject matter upon which it was granted The SCC in McLean followed the reasoning in Taylor and Broom's Practice to confirm that a plea of justification by a constable acting under the warrant of a justice will accordingly be bad if it does not show that the justice had jurisdiction over the subject matter upon which it was granted. With the evolution of the SCC from 1878 to 1927, as evidenced in Pong v Quong, Chong et al (Pong) (the "Pong"), the Court correctly delineated between instances where a whole proceeding was and is coram non judice and where only specific acts of a judice are factum a judice, quod ad officium jure non pertinet, ratum non est, signifying that all acts of a judge are invalid because they did not constitute lawful judicial duties of the impugned judge A distinction is drawn between the acts of Justice Denton, a County Court judge appointed under the Constitution Act, 1867 (the "CJA"), who exceeded the scope of the Landlord and Tenant Act, R.S.O. 1914, c 155 (the "LTA 1914") but maintained jurisdiction over the primary application, versus Madam Justice Shore, whose acts were void ab initio from the inception of the Ibula Email on January 7, 2025 A pivotal issue arises herein as a fundamental point of law: what is the legal effect when the Divisional Court possesses jurisdiction over the cause, yet a specific judge lacks the requisite jurisdiction to engage in certain acts or steps as an invalid CMJ? As observed in the Nash v CAMI Divisional

Nash proceeding (the "Nash"), Madam Justice Shore was presumably acting under the notion that Justice Nakatsuru had made an order for "assignment for case management"; however, no such order was endorsed, issued, or entered, but was merely relayed by the executive branch (the "Executive Branch") of the Divisional Court to the litigants. Ergo, it is a zero-sum game in that Madam Justice Shore possessed not even a scintilla of evidence that any judge of the Divisional Court had relayed correspondence to the Executive Branch indicating that the McLean TDHA JRPA proceeding had been assigned for case management. This holding affirms that the obligation to comply with a court order issued by a specific judge is contingent upon the court's lawful jurisdiction over both the subject matter and the litigating parties. By unassailable corollary, no person is required to comply with the acts, convenings, summonses, directions, or orders of Madam Justice Shore, as all such manifestations were factum a judice, quod ad officium jure non pertinet, ratum non est. The further corollary and consequence of the same is that no individual of the Executive Branch or judiciary may point to the acts or directions of Madam Justice Shore as justification for their conduct. Such reliance would constitute the perpetration of a fraud on the court (the "Fraud on the Court"). Appreciating it is very technical legal point of the most supreme academic rigour when applying a variety of statutes from yesteryear to today's epoch along with the confluence of a County Court Judge when measured against section 96 of the Constitution Act, 1867, after the merging of country, district and superior courts. Simply put, Madam Justice Shore was on lesser footing than that of the Honourable Justice Denton in 1925 and did far worse considering that Denton J. inquired whether he had consent from the litigants to proceed in such a fashion.

VOLUME #6(B): FRAUD ON THE COURT AND THE VOID AB INITIO DOCTRINE

77. Unauthorized acts or conduct by a judge may also be characterized as a fraud on the court for the purposes of Rule 59.06(2)(a) of the Rules of Civil Procedure (the "Rules"). As found by Justice Cullity in Vale v Sun Life Assurance Company (1998) (Vale) (the "Vale"), referencing Derry v Peek, fraud is proven when a false representation is made knowingly, without belief in its truth, or recklessly.

78. It is posited that the Ibula Email quoting Madam Justice Shore was a false representation of authority, power, and duties because the representations were made knowingly to be false and without belief in their truth. The Nash CAMI proceeding demonstrated that the Divisional Court adheres to Rule 77.02 and Rule 77.05(2) regarding the requirement for a "order" of "assignment for case management" before a judge may act as a CMJ. Consequently, all subsequent representations tied to the Ibula Email are vitiated by the initial absence of authority.

79. Moreover, it is asserted that those who remained silent in the face of the misrepresentations of Madam Justice Shore's authority are equally liable in fraud. Those actively engaged in continuing the fraud relating to the absence of authority as a CMJ are concomitantly liable for the misrepresentation of authority.

80. Although the SCC attained finality as the court of last resort in 1949, McLean remains a foundational authority concerning jurisdictional validity, providing a critical analytical framework through which contemporary procedural failures may be evaluated. The antiquity of the adjudication does not diminish its authority; rather, it reinforces the stability of the principle that jurisdiction is the quintessential lifeblood of judicial power.

VOLUME #6(C): THE PRECEDENT OF PONG V QUONG AND CHONG

81. Pursuant to the aforementioned principles, it is observed that in 1927, the matter of Pong v Quong (and Chong and Thompson) [1927] S.C.R. 271 (the "Final Pong Appeal") (BOA, Tab 309) arrived before the SCC. The Final Pong Appeal involved two distinct proceedings that illustrate the peril inherent in a judge of the Divisional Court exceeding a narrow statutory mandate under the Judicial Review Procedure Act (the "JRPA") and the requirements under Rule 77 of the Rules without an order for "assignment for case management".

82. Such was the case in Pong, which involved a summary application (the "Summary Application") under the LTA 1914 which, by statute, was required to be heard in the County Court and was adjudicated by Denton J.

83. A subsequent claim by action (the "Action") initiated by the plaintiffs proceeded through the High Court of Justice, the Appellate Division (see: Quong v Pong (1925) (Quong) (the "Pong v. Quong") (BOA, Tab 307)), and ultimately to the SCC, which affirmed that as to the relations between the parties, the matter was coram non judice. Given that the current JRPA proceeding was commenced by application (the "Application") under provincial statute, the historical context of the LTA 1914 is not merely instructive but binding. The JRPA governs the duties and rights of applicants and respondents and the ambit of questions to be decided. Following the precedent in Yatar v TD Insurance Meloche Monnex, 2024 SCC 8 (Yatar) (the "Yatar"), the Divisional Court is required to adjudicate through a hearing. Pursuant to the doctrine of vertical stare decisis (the "Vertical Stare Decisis"), the Divisional Court possesses no authority to decline the hearing of the Application. Moreover, as Madam Justice Shore acted in an unsanctioned manner as coram non judice, and pursuant to the doctrine of factum a judice, quod ad officium jure non pertinet, ratum non est, she served as an ostensible CMJ. In the absence of an operative duty or function, the direction of a case management conference—which, ipso facto, could only have been authorized under Rule 50.13 and Rule 77.08—resulted in orders which are void ab initio due to a fundamental defect in jurisdictional competence. As noted in CLE Owners Inc. et al v Wanlass et al, 2004 MBQB 43 (CLE Owners) (the "CLE Owners") at paragraph 30, even a domestic judgment will not create an estoppel if the court lacked jurisdiction, specifically where a statutory court exceeds its statutory limits, as established in the Final Pong Appeal.

VOLUME #(D): ADVERSE INFERENCE

84. The principle of adverse inference occupies a singular space in the Canadian adversarial system, functioning as a bridge between the formal rules of evidence and the common-sense deductions necessitated by human conduct. At its most fundamental level, the doctrine permits a trier of fact to draw an unfavourable conclusion when a party fails to lead evidence or call a witness that would reasonably be expected to support their position. While the doctrine has deep roots in the common law, its modern application is increasingly defined by the procedural rigour of the "best foot forward" principle, particularly in the context of interlocutory motions and summary judgment applications. This report provides an exhaustive analysis of the adverse inference doctrine within Canadian civil law, with a specialized focus on the consequences of failing to respond to motions, the strategic risks of tactical silence, and the evolving standards of disclosure across provincial jurisdiction. The adverse inference doctrine is an evidentiary rule predicated on the expectation that a litigant possessing evidence helpful to their case will naturally seek to present it. When such evidence—whether documentary or testimonial—is withheld without a valid explanation, the law allows the court to presume that the evidence was avoided because it was unhelpful or harmful to the withholding party's interests. This is not merely a punitive measure but an application of inductive reasoning based on logic, reasonability, and human experience.

85. The process of drawing an inference is described as a two-step judicial inquiry. First, the court must make findings of fact from which an inference may be drawn. Second, the judge considers whether, based on established facts, the proposed inference is reasonable, rational, and logical. This deductive process allows the court to apply "common sense" to the consideration of the record, distinguishing between conjecture, which is impermissible, and a logical consequence from proved or admitted facts. In civil litigation, this logic serves as the legal version of the colloquialism "if you got it, the "flaunt it". The failure to "flaunt" or produce evidence is viewed as an implied admission that the evidence would be contrary to the party's case or, at minimum, would not support it.

86. The adverse inference, in the context of judicial review Applications, on motions occupies the most unique of roles because of the absence of pleadings and default judgment in Applications and specifically Applications to the Divisional Court for Judicial Review" which are pursuant to te JRPA. The leading jurisprudence, as articulated in Parris v. Laidley and Lane v. Kock, establishes that the drawing of an adverse inference is entirely discretionary and must be warranted by the specific circumstances of the case. For the discretion to be exercised, the court typically looks for the presence of three key condition: Exclusive control; Materiality and knowledge; and Absence of explanation. The requirement for exclusive control is particularly significant. An adverse inference is less likely to be drawn if a witness was "equally available" to both parties. However, the court will consider the "nature of the relationship" between the witness and the party. For instance, in personal injury matters, a plaintiff's failure to call a close friend or a treating physician who has unique knowledge of the plaintiff's pre-accident and post-accident condition can trigger the doctrine, as these witnesses are viewed as being within the plaintiff's sphere of control. In the context of evidence with an adjudicative tribunal subject to the SPPA, TARA, ATAGAA et al, along with the JRPA after service of the JRPA Application even in unissued form means that the LAT had control of the relevant evidence to the JRPA Proceeding. It is require to compile under section 20 of the SPPA and file forthwith after being served. As it relates to the Two Undisclosed Motion Order, the LAT had and has exclusive control for the same. There was no explanation from the LAT for not opposing and consenting (Distinct in law) to the relief sought in the NOM #1 and/or complying with the statute (JRPA, s. 10). The only explanation later discovered was that the LAT had issued Two Undisclosed Motion Orders, final in nature, that could have been beneficial to the Applicant. Hence, why it refused (unwilling not unable) to file its NOA. The granting of relief in an unopposed motion is the result of a dual-track satisfaction of the Court..

VOLUME #7: THE 13 CHIEF JUSTICE DUTIES: THE LEADERSHIP SUITE

87. The Chief Justice serves as the Moral Barometer and Institutional Reputation Guardian. His responsibilities, articulated through the doctrine of Primus Inter Pares, represent a comprehensive suite of authority derived from the constitutional trust bestowed upon the judicial branch Ultimate Jurisdiction: The possession of the definitive and final authority over the adjudicative and administrative functions of the Court, ensuring that the judicial hierarchy remains intact and the status quo is preserved against unauthorized deviation; Constitutional Trust Stewards: The non-delegable responsibility to serve as the primary guardian of the constitutional trust bestowed upon the judicial branch by the sovereign and the citizenry; Imperviously Influenced Mandate: The requirement to remain completely impervious to external pressures, bearing the unique burden of ensuring the Court as a whole remains insulated from political, executive, or administrative capture; Master of the Roster: Absolute authority over the scheduling and distribution of judicial resources to prevent "judicial silos" and arbitrary assumptions of jurisdiction by individual members of the bench (nota bene: still must be in the confines and ambit of the statutory scheme); Self-Assignment Power: Inherent authority to take over or self-assign matters of profound institutional significance where the reputation of the tribunal is at risk due to administrative stasis or unauthorized acts; Administrative Steward: Oversight of registry functions to prevent procedural lawlessness or stasis, ensuring the clerical arm serves the adjudicative act as a necessary extension of judicial sovereignty; Efficiency Operation Duty: The responsibility to ensure the seamless and efficient operation of all Court functions, preventing the occurrence of administrative lacunae or the functional stagnation of the list; Ethical Compliance Guarantee: The occupation of a preferred position to ensure and guarantee absolute compliance with judicial ethics within the tribunal, acting as the final arbiter of professional conduct; Complaint Laying Power: The intrinsic authority to initiate formal complaints for identified ethical breaches, a power central to the self-regulating nature of the judicature; Puisne Judge Removal Power: The authority to relieve or reassign colleagues to preserve the perception of institutional integrity of the public during ethical inquiries or complaints; Moral Barometer: The role of serving as the ethical and integrity barometer for the entire judicial institution, setting the standard for comportment and professionalism; Moral Authority: The power to impose judicial will upon other puisne judges through directives ethically bound to be followed for the collective good; Finality Guardian: The duty to ensure that the litigation of the subject reaches a final, issued, and entering determination without the intervention of administrative capture or judicial stasis, preserving the right of the subject to finality and access to the judicature. Canadian jurisprudence utilizes the "Marshall Test" (the "Incapacity Metric") to determine whether alleged conduct is so manifest and totally contrary to the impartiality of the judiciary that the confidence of the public is undermined. A failure in due execution (the "Failure in Due Execution") constitutes a manifest and total departure from the standards of the office. The intervention occurring in the total absence of jurisdiction—Coram Non Judice—represents sudden departure. While a fortress of immunity exists for acts done in the course of judicial duties, this protection collapses where an officer acts in clear absence of all jurisdiction (the "Coram Non Judice Exception").

VOLUME #8:ORDERS SOUGHT

88. There is a fundamental reason that section 123 of the CJA is referred to as a "rehearing" and not a "re-conference". A fundamental jurisdictional distinction exists between a "rehearing" (the "Rehearing"), as contemplated by section 123 of the Courts of Justice Act (the "CJA"), and a mere case management conference (the "Conference"). The nomenclature of the CJA is deliberate; the legislative promulgation of a "rehearing" implies the restoration of the status quo ante via a de novo consideration of the merits by a properly constituted panel or a single judge of the Divisional Court sitting in a judicial capacity, rather than the administrative circumscription of a conference. It remains ambiguous whether the interpretation rendered by Madam Justice Shore was intended to encompass the attendant regulations of the Administration of Justice Act (the "AJA") concerning the digital recording request (the "Request") submitted via the Request Form Undertaking. While the judicial acknowledgment was purportedly directed at the provision of materials for transcription, a "Conference" is not a "Hearing" within the meaning of the Judicial Review Procedure Act (the "JRPA") or the Rules of Civil Procedure (the "Rules"). To be "Heard" in a judicial review proceeding necessitates a formal hearing (the "Hearing") by motion—either in person or in writing—presided over by a single judge of the Divisional Court acting as a motion judge, rather than an unauthorized Case Management Judge (the "CMJ"). Reliance is placed upon the Supreme Court of Canada's articulation in Yatar, which clarified the obligations of the Divisional Court and the Court of Appeal. As noted at paragraph 49, the right to seek judicial review is a constitutional safeguard. To permit courts the discretion to eschew such applications because of a subjective perception of the quality and quantity of internal reconsiderations would allow judicial discretion to trump a constitutional principle (Vavilov, supra at para 49; P. Daly, A Culture of Justification: Vavilov and the Future of Administrative Law (2023) at p. 226).It is posited that the Supreme Court did not vest in the Divisional Court the authority to obviate a "Hearing" through the mechanism of unauthorized case management. The jurisdiction of the Divisional Court, being a statutory creation, is strictly defined by the CJA and the Rules. Absent a specific "Assignment Order," the prerequisite "gate" to exercise powers under Rule 77 remains impassable. Consequently, the interventions of the Court in this instance constitute a metamorphosis of procedure that lacks a statutory basis, rendering such actions ultra vires. In light of the absence of properly issued decisions and orders mandated by the CJA, the pursuit of all available legal a necessity and any interference with the same by any branch of government or the public is interference with Section 96 of the Constitution Act, 1867, which matters not whether the infringing conduct was prescribed by law or not as there are no saving provisions in such an analysis like there is under the Charter with respect to section 2, 7-15. The declaration of the First Insurer is of paramount importance, not merely retrospectively, but prospectively for the Applicant and service providers alike along with the public interest because a uniform answer is required for all insured persons who have had SNIC as an underwriter but receive contact information that includes a fax number where it is not resident as a business. Where the Court maintains a "Strategic Silence," and where the Responding Parties have heretofore failed to file a First Defence or "Delivery" any responding materials or evidence, it is a corollary of the law of evidence that the Court must accept the uncontroverted version of facts presented on the record as the sole evidentiary basis for adjudication. The following orders are sought to rectify the procedural irregularities heretofore described: a. An Order pursuant to section 123(4) of the CJA that Notice of Motion #2 (the "NOM #2") be reheard within five days of this Order and by no later than February 28, 2026; b. An Order that the motion was heard on February 23, 2026, with all relief granted nunc pro tunc; c. An Order that the President of the Divisional Court assume the role of the presiding judge (the "Self-Assignment Order"); d. An Order that the President of the Divisional Court issue a bottom-line ruling with reasons to follow; e. An Order declaring that all purported directions or "decisions" rendered in the McLean Proceeding (as defined below) in the absence of a formal "Assignment Order" are nullities and void ab initio; f. A Mandatory Order requiring the Registrar of the Divisional Court to forthwith issue Case Center invitations to ensure the integrity of the judicial record; g. An Order pursuant to section 123(7) of the CJA that costs be determined subsequent to the issuance of the decision for Motion 36 and NOM #2; h. An Order dispensing with compliance with the Rules where the exigencies of delay necessitate relief to ensure substantive justice and forestall technical failure; i. Costs of the motion in favour of the Applicant on a substantial indemnity basis; j. Other relief as is just and equitable in accordance with the JRPA, CJA, Rules, and the common law requirements established in Yatar v TD Insurance Meloche Monnex, 2024 SCC 8 (Yatar) and Vavilov. The intervention of the Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Justice, in his capacity as the President of the Divisional Court, is required to truncate or eliminate the labyrinthine issues present in NOM #1 and NOM #3 through #5. Such an approach is concomitant with the principles of access to justice and judicial independence, as affirmed in Trial Lawyers Association of British Columbia v British Columbia (Attorney General), 2014 SCC 59 (TLABC 2014), Timm v Canada, 2014 FC 1022 (Timm), and Uhrik v Canada (Attorney General), 2021 FC 113 (Uhrik). To the extent that the requested orders are withheld, reference is made to Prefontaine v Gosman, 2000 ABQB 243 (Prefontaine). At paragraph 39, the court discussed the constitutional protections afforded to judges acting in their judicial capacity. However, a distinction must be drawn: a judge is shielded only if they hold a bona fide belief that they are acting within their jurisdiction. In the matter of Nash v CAMI Divisional Court Proceeding (the "Nash Proceeding"), the intervention occurred only following an "Assignment For Case Management" email by Justice Nakatsuru as evidenced by the public record. Conversely, in the McLean TDHA Divisional Court Proceeding (the "McLean Proceeding"), the intervention on January 7, 2025, lacked even the pretense of a prior assignment. Given that the Rules, the JRPA, and the CJA remained identical in both instances, it is logically inconsistent to suggest a belief in jurisdiction existed in the McLean Proceeding. Where a judge acts without the requisite authority, the proceeding is coram non judice and the act is factum a judice, quod ad officium jure non pertinet, ratum non est (an act of a judge which does not belong to his office is not valid). Furthermore, the necessity for Case Center invitations to be issued in limine upon the commencement of a JRPA application is underscored. This prevents any claim that the Registrar misinformed the Court regarding the filing of a First Defence. Without an express "Assignment For Case Management" Order from a judge of the Divisional Court, any subsequent judge lacks the authority ipso facto to convene a conference. This submission is tendered to ensure the record of proceeding reflects that all conceivable avenues for legal remedy have been exhausted. There can be no breach of "orders" that were void ab initio, as they were nullities from the moment of their inception. The Applicant trusts that the President of the Divisional Court will discharge his duties in accordance with the lex terrae and remains available for further inquiry. Subject to minor administrative refinements, these constitute the Applicant's formal submissions regarding the relief sought under section 123 of the CJA.

ALL OF WHICH IS RESPECTFULLY SUBMITTED this 23RD day of February, 2026.

[i] [50] In focussing on the practice directive, Crown counsel pointed out that the practice directive was not made pursuant to the rule making power of the court under s. 482(2) of the Criminal Code. Rather, the practice directive was made pursuant to the provincial legislation in s. 8.1 of The Provincial Court Act. Crown counsel also pointed out that administrative independence of the judiciary attaches to the court as a whole and that because the practice directive lacks the collective dimension that a rule would have had (as it is made by the Chief Judge alone), it is not of the same force as a rule. In support of this position, Crown counsel relies on the following from Provincial Court Judges Assn. (Manitoba) v. Manitoba (Minister of Justice) (at para. 275):

Even if the trial judge had been right to conclude that the Chief Judge retained control over the decision to close the Manitoba Provincial Court throughout, there would nevertheless have been a violation of s. 11(d), because the Chief Judge would have exceeded her constitutional authority when she made that decision. As this Court held in Valente, control over the sittings of the court falls within the administrative independence of the judiciary. And as I indicated above, administrative independence is a characteristic of judicial independence which normally has a collective or institutional dimension. It attaches to the court as a whole. Although certain decisions may be exercised on behalf of the judiciary by the Chief Judge, it is important to remember that the Chief Judge is no more than "primus inter pares": Ruffo v. Conseil de la magistrature, 1995 CanLII 49 (SCC), [1995] 4 S.C.R. 267, at para. 59. Important decisions regarding administrative independence cannot be made by the Chief Judge alone. In my opinion, the decision to close the Manitoba Provincial Court is precisely this kind of decision.

ORDER

WHEREAS A MOTION was instituted by the Applicant, Kevin Alexander McLean, appearing in propria persona, seeking the granting of remedial relief and the issuance of a formal ORDER for a REHEARING of his Notice of Motion number two ("NOM #2") (see: record of proceeding from Ontario Courts Public Portal, Document #1 Form 37A, at 31/01/2025 pursuant to the supervisory and administrative jurisdiction vested in this Court by way of the Chief Judge of the SCJ in his capacity as the Divisional Court President under section 123 of the Courts of Justice Act, R.S.O. 1990, c. C.43 (the "CJA "), intended to address a deleterious stagnation in the adjudicative process;

AND WHEREAS the within matter was entertained on February 26, 2026, at Osgoode Hall, 130 Queen Street West, Toronto, Ontario, for determination in writing, without the attendance of any party, albeit the Applicant being the only formal "party" and in the absence of the public, the Court being satisfied that the administrative and institutional nature of the relief sought—pertaining to the internal performance and accountability of the judiciary—justifies a non-public determination to preserve the integrity of judicial deliberative frameworks and the independence of the bench;

AND UPON READING the documentation heretofore particularized (but for Motion #6 documents), which was duly served upon the Respondents, excluding the Attorney General of Ontario—the latter having signified, via electronic correspondence dated January 30, 2025, from counsel in the person of Ms. Judie Im, a licensee of the Law Society of Ontario, that notwithstanding due service of the Applicant's Judicial Review Procedure Act ("JRPA") Application on November 15, 2024, the Crown would decline participation in the within proceeding—and noting that the Responding Parties failed to effect compliance with Rule 37.12.1(5) or otherwise signify opposition to the relief requested in NOM #2:

1. The Factum of the Applicant in support of Motion № 6, dated February 25, 2026, articulating the jurisdictional grounds for the removal of the seized judge and the assumption of jurisdiction by the President;
2. Any motion record or the Factum and Draft Order herein along with any cover emails or cover letter pertaining to NOM № 6, dated February 24, 2026, containing the exhaustive chronological log of administrative inquiries, registrarial failures, and the prolonged silence of the Court;
3. The Originating Process constituting the Applicant's JRPA Application, issued November 15, 2024, identifying the substantive grounds for review of the Licence Appeal Tribunal decisions;
4. The Factum of the Applicant, dated December 12, 2024, setting forth the legal framework and the evidentiary basis for the underlying Judicial Review application;
5. The Certificate of Perfection of the Applicant, dated December 13, 2024, and recorded as electronically filed on December 16, 2024 (Document № 2 in Case View), signifying that the application was ready for a HEARING on its merits;
6. The Affidavit of Service in relation to the aforementioned Certificate of Perfection, dated December 16, 2024, confirming that all Respondents were notified of the perfection of the record;
7. Requisition № 1, dated January 24, 2024, seeking a direction compelling the Registrar to perform the mandatory duties mandated by Rule 68.05 to place the JRPA Application on a Listing for HEARING;
8. Requisition № 2, dated January 24, 2024, seeking an expedited HEARING pursuant to subsection 6(2) of the JRPA to prevent further procedural prejudice and address the urgency of the insurance-related issues;
9. The Affidavit of the Applicant № 2, dated January 30, 2024, and the Affidavit of the Applicant № 3, dated January 8, 2024, detailing the systemic lack of responsiveness from the administrative branch of the Court;

10. The documentation pertaining to Notice of Motion № 1 (“NOM № 1”), seeking relief against the Licence Appeal Tribunal (“LAT”) for compliance with section 10 of the JRPA, returnable January 30, 2025;
11. The documentation pertaining to NOM № 2, submitted in accordance with Rule 37.12.1(4-6), comprising the Notice of Motion, Motion Record, Draft ORDER, Factum for Motion in Writing, and Confirmation of Motion;
12. The Applicant’s Requisitions № 1 through № 7, filed between December 24, 2024, and February 7, 2025, evidencing a diligent pursuit of a judicial determination;
13. The Compendium and Amended Compendium (Tabs 2–61) and Written Outline, dated February 11 and February 14, 2025, respectively, providing the Court with the necessary materials for a written determination; and
14. The comprehensive Book of Authorities of the Applicant, comprising Tabs 1 through 312, filed February 19, 2026, establishing the legal prerequisites for the relief sought.

RECITALS NECESSARY TO UNDERSTAND THE ORDER

AND UPON NOTING that the within Motion is cognizable directly and exclusively by the Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Justice, in his capacity as the President of the Divisional Court, pursuant to the singular remedial and supervisory jurisdiction conferred by section 123 of the CJA to remedy administrative failures and judicial delays that threaten the functional integrity of the Rule of Law;

AND UPON NOTING that the within Motion has been heard ex parte by reason of the Respondents’ contumacious failure to deliver a Notice of Appearance in accordance with Rule 1.06 and Form 68A, the legal consequence of which is the total extinguishment of their entitlement to notice of subsequent steps in this proceeding pursuant to Rule 38.06 and Rule 1.06 of the Rules of Civil Procedure;

AND UPON NOTING that the definitions and interpretive frameworks utilized herein are adopted from the record of proceedings, and that the terms “HEARING” and “ORDER” are intentionally capitalized to signify their specific legal status as defined in the Rules of Civil Procedure and to distinguish them from mere administrative directions, managerial summaries, or informal conferences that lack adjudicative weight;

AND UPON NOTING the extensive and complex history of related motions in the Licence Appeal Tribunal (“LAT”), specifically including NOM № 13 (Third-Party Records), NOM № 14 (Addition of TDHA as a Party), and NOM № 15 (Pleadings Amendment), and the subsequent decisions of Vice-Chair Morrissette and Vice-Chair Lake, which constitute the substantive foundation upon which the underlying Judicial Review is predicated and demonstrate the necessity of a timely supervisory review;

AND UPON NOTING that the "Integrity of the Court" mandates that the Rules of Civil Procedure apply with equal force to the judiciary and the litigants, and that a failure of a presiding judge to render a decision within the statutory timelines constitutes a breach of the "Social Contract" between the judiciary and the citizenry, which the President of the Court possesses an inherent and statutory obligation to rectify;

AND UPON BEING SATISFIED that the jurisdictional prerequisites of section 123 of the CJA have been demonstrably fulfilled, in that a presiding judge was seized of NOM № 2 on February 14, 2025, the matter has remained sub judice for a period exceeding the statutory threshold of six months for a Judgment, and the Applicant has exhausted all reasonable administrative inquiries with the Registrar and the Office of the Chief Justice without result;

CHAPTER 1: GENERAL DECLARATIONS AND JURISDICTIONAL FINDINGS

1. THE DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that the failure to render a decision on Motion № 2 within the statutory window constitutes a substantial and prejudicial administrative delay, which abridges the Applicant's fundamental right to a timely adjudication of his legal claims and necessitates the immediate corrective intervention of the President of the Divisional Court to restore the functional integrity of the adjudicative process.

2. THE DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that the Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Justice, acting as the President of the Divisional Court, is the "chief judge" within the meaning of section 123(1) of the CJA and is vested with the unique and exclusive jurisdiction to remove a seized judge from a matter under advisement and assume plenary jurisdiction for the purpose of directing and conducting an expedited REHEARING.

3. THE DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that the temporal constraints for the delivery of Judgments are not merely aspirational but are fundamental safeguards of the Rule of Law, the transgression of which creates a jurisdictional lacuna that must be remedied by the President of the Court to prevent a systemic failure of court service and a degradation of public confidence in the judicial branch.

4. THE DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that judicial delay of this magnitude constitutes an administrative barrier to justice and a direct violation of procedural fairness, resulting in a de facto stay of proceedings without lawful judicial authorization, thereby causing irreparable prejudice to the movement of the Applicant's Judicial Review and functionally extinguishing the Applicant's right to be heard.

5. THE DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that "Natural Justice" encompasses the right to a timely outcome, and a HEARING that does not result in a decision within the prescribed statutory period is functionally a "legal nullity" that requires the remedial exercise of the President's power to direct a new HEARING to ensure that the litigation does not become an exercise in futility.

6. THE DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that section 123 of the CJA serves as a constitutional fail-safe; when the internal machinery of a court fails to provide a result, the President has an original statutory duty to provide the litigant with an alternative path to finality, ensuring that the judicial process remains a meaningful vehicle for the resolution of disputes.

7. THE DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that the "Efficiency of Justice" is an inextricable component of jurisdiction. A court that does not render Judgments is a court that has effectively ceased to function in its constitutional capacity with respect to that specific litigant, creating an impermissible state of adjudicative paralysis.

8. THE DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that the delay encountered by the Applicant acts as a functional dismissal of his claims without a HEARING on the merits, which is a violation of the foundational principles of the Ontario justice system and the "Rule of Law" as protected under Section 96 of the Constitution Act, 1867.

9. THE DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that any requirement for a formal Notice of Motion in Form 37A is hereby dispensed with pursuant to Rule 37.01, the specialized nature of the relief under section 123 of the CJA and the unique circumstances of the judicial delay rendering such form redundant and obstructive to the summary nature of this remedial proceeding.

10. THE DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that all relief granted herein, including all declarations of right and procedural directions, is effective nunc pro tunc to February 26, 2026, to ensure that the Applicant is restored to the legal position he would have occupied had the statutory timelines been respected by the Court.

11. THE DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that the identity of the original presiding judge for NOM № 2 shall remain privileged and confidential to preserve the institutional independence of the judiciary from scrutiny arising purely from administrative or workload-related delays, while simultaneously providing the Applicant with the required remedial result.

CHAPTER 2: CASE MANAGEMENT AND RULE 77 NON-COMPLIANCE

12. THE DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that as no Respondent has delivered a "first defence" or Notice of Appearance as contemplated by Rule 77.05(2), the mandatory triggers for the activation of Case Management under Rule 77 have never been engaged, and the proceeding remains at all times on the standard adjudicative track.
13. THE DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that the persistent failure of the Respondents to deliver a Notice of Appearance for a period exceeding 365 days constitutes an absolute and irrevocable waiver of their right to invoke the protections of Case Management or to request the convening of Case Management Conferences.

14. THE DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that in the absence of a formal, endorsed, and entered ORDER of “Assignment for Case Management,” any administrative attempts by the Registrar or court staff to regulate the proceeding through "scheduling directions" or "case conferences" are ultra vires and void ab initio, as they lack a lawful jurisdictional foundation.

15. THE DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that the intervention of Madam Justice Shore in the JRPA Proceeding on January 7, 2025, absent the condition precedent of an Assignment for Case Management ORDER by a Judge of the Divisional Court, was performed without the requisite jurisdictional foundation, thereby rendering such acts coram non judice and indicative of a private actor operating under a misrepresented color of office.

16. THE DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that any administrative direction that purported to stay Motion № 2 pending a "case conference" was an unauthorized interference with the judicial function and is hereby vacated, as administrative protocols cannot supersede the statutory right of a party to have a properly perfected motion heard and decided.

17. THE DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that the "Case Management" label cannot be utilized as a procedural shield by Respondents who remain in a state of default. Case Management is a privilege reserved for active participants who effect compliance with the Rules, and it cannot be weaponized to stall the adjudication of merits.

CHAPTER 3: STATUS OF MOTION № 2 AND CRYSTALLIZATION OF RIGHTS

18. THE DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that the Applicant's right to a determination of NOM № 2 on the written record became crystallized upon the expiration of the Respondents' deadline to respond under Rule 37.12.1(5), and the subsequent judicial delay did not revive any opportunity for participation by the defaulting parties or the Court to seek further submissions.

19. THE DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that the legal status of NOM № 2 as of the close of business on February 14, 2025, was "heard and awaiting Judgment," and any administrative entries in the Ontario Courts Public Portal characterizing the matter as "pending," "adjourned," or "incomplete" are erroneous and devoid of judicial authority.

20. THE DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that once a Motion HEARING has been concluded and the matter is sub judice, the exclusive adjudicative jurisdiction is vested solely in the presiding judge; such jurisdiction cannot be lawfully usurped, diverted, or modified by any other puisne judge, and most specifically not by a Case Management Judge.

21. THE DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that the status of a matter sub judice, and the concomitant three-to-six-month statutory period for the rendering of Judgment, cannot be interrupted, suspended, or tolled by intervening administrative events, nor can it be superseded by the unauthorized convening of case conferences by a judge not lawfully seized of the merits.

22. THE DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that a party who has effected compliance with all requirements of the Rules of Civil Procedure to bring a motion to a HEARING possesses a "vested right" to a decision based on the law and facts as they existed at the time of the HEARING, which the Court has no discretion to withhold indefinitely.

23. THE DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that "Procedural Paralysis" caused by judicial inaction is a form of institutional bias that favors the respondent/defaulting party by allowing them to benefit from the stagnation of the litigation; such paralysis must be broken by the direct exercise of the President's supervisory authority.

CHAPTER 4: REHEARING AND ASSUMPTION OF JURISDICTION

24. THE DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that pursuant to section 123(5) of the CJA, the President of the Divisional Court hereby assumes full, immediate, and exclusive jurisdiction over Motion № 2 for the purpose of ensuring the prompt delivery of a Judgment and resolving the administrative impasse.

25. THE DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that the original presiding judge is hereby relieved of all duties, obligations, and jurisdiction regarding that motion and is functus officio immediately upon the signing of this ORDER by the President.

26. THE DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that Motion № 2 shall be reheard and determined by the President of the Divisional Court based on the existing written record within seven (7) days of the issuance of this ORDER, and the resulting Judgment shall be deemed for all purposes to be the Judgment of the Court.

27. THE DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that the President's assumption of jurisdiction is a restorative act for the Court's reputation, honoring the institutional commitment to provide a forum for the resolution of disputes and demonstrating that the Rules of Civil Procedure provide a robust remedy for even the Court's own administrative errors.

CHAPTER 5: PRELIMINARY ORDERS FOR THE REHEARING

28. THE DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that the REHEARING of NOM № 2 shall be conducted strictly on the documents of record as they existed on February 14, 2025, supplemented only by the Book of Authorities and the Factum for Motion № 6 to clarify the procedural history and the nature of the delay.

29. THE DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that the Respondents are strictly prohibited from submitting new materials, correspondence, or responding factums for the REHEARING, their right to participate having been forfeited through their sustained procedural default and failure to file a Notice of Appearance.

30. THE DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that a decision on Motion № 2 shall be released to the Applicant on or before March 5, 2026, or the first available date thereafter and may, at the discretion of the President, be issued as a "bottom-line" ruling immediately to provide certainty, with detailed reasons to follow.
31. THE DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that the Registrar shall ensure that all physical and electronic files related to NOM № 2 are delivered to the chambers of the President of the Divisional Court within 24 hours of the issuance of this ORDER.
32. THE DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that the "Record of the REHEARING" is limited to the items identified in paragraphs 28 and 29 of this ORDER to ensure the REHEARING is an honest and accurate reflection of the motion that should have been decided in early 2025.

CHAPTER 6: COSTS AND ADMINISTRATIVE OVERSIGHT

33. THE DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that there shall be no costs awarded for Motion № 6, the present motion being necessitated by a systemic failure in the Court's administrative machinery rather than the conduct of the parties.
34. THE DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that the determination of costs for the original HEARING of NOM № 2, which remained undecided for over a year, is referred to the President of the Divisional Court as part of the REHEARING process pursuant to section 123(7) of the CJA .
35. THE DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that a copy of this ORDER be transmitted by the Registrar to the Office of the Associate Chief Justice for a formal administrative review of the systemic delays identified in this proceeding and to assist in the improvement of case-tracking accountability mechanisms.
36. THE DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that the Applicant is entitled to the "fullest protection of the Court" in ensuring that this ORDER is followed by court staff and that no further administrative barriers are placed in the way of the final determination of Motion № 2.

CHAPTER 7: CUMULATIVE CRITERIA FOR JRPA ADJUDICATION

37. THE DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS AND DECLARES that any JRPA Application is to be determined in a formal HEARING (and not a conference) on its merits only upon the fulfillment of the following cumulative criteria, ensuring that judicial review remains a rigorous legal inquiry rather than a managerial exercise:

a. Strict Adjudicative Posture: The proceeding must take the form of a formal "HEARING" as strictly defined by Rule 1.03; a conference is structurally incapable of disposing of a JRPA application on its merits as it lacks the requisite adjudicative formality and evidentiary weight.

b. Lawful Seisin and Statutory Mandate: The judge presiding over the HEARING must be lawfully seized of the matter; any judge acting as a "Case Management Judge" without a formal ORDER of Assignment is coram non judice, rendering all managerial acts null and void. A judge who has chosen an unauthorized administrative path cannot simultaneously act as the Motions Judge on the merits.

c. Evidentiary Foundation: Determination must be predicated upon the sworn evidentiary record, perfected application materials, and factums filed by the parties; adjudication on the merits requires a rigorous analysis of the record of the tribunal under review.

d. Absence of Administrative Blockades: Pursuant to the mandate in Yatar v. TD Insurance Meloche Monnex, the Court shall not utilize discretionary procedural devices, such as unauthorized or "out of the blue" case conferences, to deflect, delay, or functionally erase a perfected JRPA application.

e. Absolute Right to HEARING: The right to a HEARING is absolute; while the relief sought remains discretionary, such discretion can only be exercised following the conclusion of a HEARING on the merits and cannot be used as a justification to avoid the HEARING itself.

f. Procedural Access to Records: Access to filed documents is accomplished via Case Center; where registrarial failure occurs, access is to be secured via Requisition under Rule 37.10 within the context of a MOTION only, ensuring the Court is in possession of the uncontroverted record.

g. Inviolability of the Sub Judice State: Upon the conclusion of a HEARING, the resulting sub judice status precludes the subsequent intervention of any other judicial officer or the imposition of administrative conferences that purport to "manage" the merits of the reserved decision.

h. Hierarchical Separation of Roles: The administrative convenience of a Case Management Judge cannot supersede the adjudicative authority of a Motions Judge once a matter has been taken under advisement; power cannot be usurped by a judge presiding in a different capacity with a disparate level of authority.

i. Continuity of the Statutory Clock: Once the three-to-six-month period for rendering Judgment has commenced, it remains immune to interruption by unauthorized managerial acts; a matter sub judice cannot be "taken over" by case conferences or an unauthorized Case Management Judge.

j. Prohibition of Deflection: When a judicial officer utilizes a "case conference" to deflect or stall a perfected application, they are directly violating the core holding of Yatar. An unauthorized alleged direction by a Judge of the Divisional Court constitutes an even more egregious violation of this constitutional principle.

DIVISIONAL COURT FORM 1: REQUISITION OR WRITTEN REQUEST

DIVISIONAL COURT FORM: APPLICATION HEARING REQUEST

Urgent filing via the OCPP, with a copy via email and fax along with notice to the esteemed registrar of the Divisional Court

The Applicant REQUIRES pursuant to the Requisition elements of this joint or multi-purposed form, avoidance of multiplicity of forms, the following:

1. Registrar: Comply with mandatory duties and immediately process all urgent filings by the Applicant, including, but not limited to, Notice of Motion Number Three, which are delineated for clarity at Appendix B. The urgency of these filings is amplified by the facts presented in Appendix A and the substantive evidence of irreparable harm in Compendium Tab #3 and the ongoing security issues noted in the Affidavit of Service (November 21, 2025).
2. Registrar: Upload all filed documents in this JRPA Application as required by the Rules of Civil Procedure and provide the necessary invitation access to the Applicant for his own uploading (where applicable) and for review of the complete electronic record; and
3. Honourable Divisional Court/Registrar (where applicable): Grant such further and ancillary relief as may be deemed just and expedient in the circumstances by way of hearing request, written request, or requisition to ensure that the NOM #3 and its relief, including that in the JRPA Application are heard in an expeditious, timely and cost-effective manner while the Moving Party has again complied with all serving, filing and proof of service along with payment requirements.

SUMMARY OF REQUISITION AND REQUEST OF THE DIVISIONAL COURT

This document is a formal requisition filed by Kevin Alexander McLean in the Ontario Superior Court of Justice (Divisional Court), seeking urgent processing of his Notice of Motion Number Three (NOM #3) due to procedural defaults by the respondents in a Judicial Review Application (JRPA). It details the absence of Notices of Appearance filed by the respondents, which has rendered the application undefended and necessitates immediate judicial action to prevent further harm to the applicant.

- Failure to file a "First Defence" by any Respondents and failure to "Deliver" Notices of Appearances by the Respondents admitted, infallibly proven by the record of proceedings in the JRPA Proceeding and no long justiciable: The respondents failed to file or deliver mandatory Notices of Appearance, as confirmed by the Ontario Courts Public Portal, resulting in their procedural default and undefended status in the JRPA.
- Invalid case management request: The Licence Appeal Tribunal's request to assign the case for management was null and void due to the respondents' failure to file a first defence, making subsequent procedural steps invalid and void ab initio;
- Void compulsory case conference: The required appearance before Madam Justice Shore on January 7, 2025, is void ab initio due to the procedural defects and lack of respondent participation but for the unknown and undisclosed to the Applicant Document #48 (see: Appendix "A");
- Respondents failed to meet filing deadlines: Despite being served with the applicant's documents, respondents did not deliver their application records or factums by the deadline, reinforcing their procedural default as unequivocally now proven by fortuitousness by the change from the JSO Portal to the OCPP Portal;

- Impugned decisions must be set aside: The absence of any defence means the applicant's submissions stand uncontested, entitling the court to set aside the impugned decisions on the standard of correctness;
- Void benefits and orders for respondents: Any steps or benefits obtained by respondents without proper filing are void and must be set aside to restore procedural integrity.
- JRPA and NOM #3 are undefended: The respondents' failure to file appearances constitutes a procedural election not to contest, leading to an uncontested disposition of the application and motion;
- Non-justiciable procedural facts: The absence of filed Notices of Appearance is incontrovertible and not subject to dispute, mandating immediate relief based on the uncontested record.
- Urgency due to irreparable harm: The applicant suffers ongoing, irreparable financial harm from the underlying theft and administrative failures, necessitating an expedited hearing on December 3, 2025, to prevent further prejudice (see: Affidavit of Applicant at Tab 22 of NOM #3 Motion Record and Compendium For NOM #3, wherein the day after serving his NOM #3, unauthorized fraudulent conduct occurred with one of his owned emailed accounts).

SUBJECT I: The Unequivocal Discovery of Procedural Default and Undefended Status

The immediate processing of the Applicant's filed Notice of Motion Number Three (hereinafter, "NOM #3") is hereby urgently necessitated and respectfully requested. This urgency is founded solely upon the recent, unequivocal discovery, now incontrovertibly proven via the official record of the Ontario Courts Public Portal (hereinafter, the "OCPP"), that the Respondents have committed a fundamental procedural default by failing to file a Notice of Appearance. This newly adduced evidence is the singular impetus for this urgent Requisition, which seeks to ensure the integrity of the JRPA file and compel immediate compliance with the Rules of Civil Procedure. This discovery confirms the demonstrable and fundamental failure of the named Respondents to satisfy their preliminary and immutable procedural obligations, which has, de facto, created an absence of opposition, thereby vitiating the need for any protracted, contested litigation on the merits. This ongoing substantive harm (the unrectified theft and erosion of material well-being) renders any administrative delay highly prejudicial, constituting an irreparable impediment to the Applicant's economic and personal security. Furthermore, the Applicant has scrupulously observed all requisite temporal parameters regarding the instant motion, in stark contrast to the material failure of the Respondents to comply with the elemental requirement of filing a Notice of Appearance.

Subject I(A): Unequivocal proof that the Respondent Insurance Companies and the LAT neither "filed" nor "delivered" (see: Rule 1.03 of the Rules of Civil Procedure) ("Delivered") their Notices of Appearances which the LAT never compliantly served on November 27, 2024 and the Respondent Insurance Companies served on December 3, 2024

The publicly verifiable electronic record, as meticulously maintained and contemporaneously updated by the OCPP, serves as the singular and unimpeachable repository of all consequential acta relevant to the Court's jurisdiction and the litigation's progression. This official record yields unequivocal proof demonstrating that the Respondent Insurers (TD HOME AND AUTO INSURANCE COMPANY, SECURITY NATIONAL INSURANCE COMPANY, and TD GENERAL INSURANCE COMPANY) and the Licence Appeal Tribunal (the "LAT") have, without legitimate explanation or justification, neither formally filed nor duly delivered the mandatory Notices of Appearance requisite under the Rules of Civil Procedure (the "Rules"). This finding is derived from the absence of any corresponding entry in the Court's electronic docket—an absence which, in the context of mandatory e-filing protocols, carries the probative weight of positive negation. The computerized file index, functioning as the authoritative log of all perfected filings, does not register any such document from the aforementioned parties. This systematic deficiency confirms the Respondents' failure to take the requisite first step toward defending the application, thereby vitiating their standing as participants and effectively conceding the procedural arena. This manifest failure constitutes a clear and egregious contravention of the applicable procedural dictates, specifically the overarching obligation delineated in Rule 1.03 concerning the precise distinction between "filing" with the court (the act of depositing a document into the court registry system) and subsequent "delivery" to the opposing party. The statutory requirement for the filing of an appearance is not merely an advisory measure; it constitutes an indispensable prerequisite. The purported service by the LAT of its Notice of Appearance on November 27, 2024, is consequently defective and devoid of legal effect, as delivery without concurrent or preceding filing is demonstrably ineffectual under the Rules, rendering the purported service a nullity ab initio and therefore utterly incapable of conferring defensive standing.

Subject I(B): Unequivocal and proven consequential proof that the LAT's request on December 3, 2024 at approximately 3:30 p.m. for the JRPA Proceeding to be "Assigned For Case Management" was null and void, void ab initio and of no force and effect pursuant to, inter alia, the failure of any of the Respondents to file a first "Defence" (see: Rule 77.04 of the Rules of Civil Procedure) (a "First Defence") as the LAT could not request the same as it was prohibited from receiving any documents or steps in the JRPA Application until it "delivered" a Notice of Appearance

The conclusive finding in Subject I(A) regarding the lack of a perfected Notice of Appearance operates as an ipso facto bar to the Respondents' ability to initiate any further procedural steps, including engagement in case management. It is submitted that the Respondents' collective failure constitutes an irrefutable procedural default, effectively rendering their position in limine untenable and precluding any future adversarial engagement without leave. The unilateral request by the LAT on December 3, 2024, to have the JRPA Proceeding "Assigned For Case Management" must be construed as a legally null act, void ab initio, because the LAT had not established its own right to participate in the proceedings. The procedural landscape dictates that a party without a filed Notice of Appearance possesses no standing to request judicial intervention or administrative scheduling, as they are deemed to be outside the adversarial process. Such requests, being predicated on an unperfected procedural foundation, lack any binding force or effect under the Rules.

Subject I(C): The Madam Justice Shore compulsory case conference appearance requirement of January 7, 2025, was void, void ab initio and of no force and effect for the aforementioned reasons herein and in the NOM #3, Factum for NOM #3, Motion Record for NOM #3, Draft Order for NOM #3, Affidavit of Service (and affidavit) for NOM #3, Compendium for NOM #3 and primary Draft Order For NOM #3

Following the legally null request for Case Management detailed in Subject I(B), any subsequent administrative or judicial steps flowing from that defective foundation, including the compulsory case conference requirement scheduled by Madam Justice Shore for January 7, 2025, are likewise rendered void, void ab initio, and of no force and effect. The judicial or administrative requirement for the Applicant to appear at a case conference predicated upon a proceeding that is, by definition, undefended and fundamentally procedurally defective constitutes a palpable threat to the Applicant's constitutionally protected access to justice and wastes judicial time. Since the Respondents had not complied with the primary procedural mandate to file their appearances, they could not validly be a party to, or beneficiaries of, any subsequent scheduling order or case management step. The original jurisdictional failure vitiates all subsequent actions taken under the guise of an adversarial process that, in fact, does not procedurally exist.

Subject 1(D): The Respondents were served with the Applicant's Application Record and Factum by December 12, 2024, and pursuant to Rule 68.04(4) of the Rules of Civil Procedure, "(4) The respondent shall deliver an application record and a factum within thirty days after service of the applicant's application record and factum. R.R.O. 1990, Reg. 194, r. 68.04 (4)", the Respondents were required to deliver their application records and factums by January 13, 2025 but failed to do so. The Respondents were precluded from filing any material on the JRPA Application, which was subsumed under "Deliver" under Rule 68.04(4), until they filed their Notices of Appearances. As per the record of proceeding in the OCPP, the Respondents neither "filed" nor "delivered" their Notices of Appearances at all or by January 13, 2025

The procedural preclusion established in Subject I(A) and I(B) carried forward to the Respondents' obligations under Rule 68.04(4). Although the Applicant dutifully served the Application Record and Factum by December 12, 2024, triggering the thirty-day response deadline (January 13, 2025), the Respondents were procedurally barred from availing themselves of this rule's mechanism. The failure to file a Notice of Appearance means the Respondents forfeited the opportunity to adduce any evidence or advance any substantive submissions, including the delivery of their own Application Record and Factum. This obligation, subsumed under the broader requirement for participation, could not be activated without the foundational step of filing the appearance. The conclusive absence of any Respondent filings in the OCPP by January 13, 2025, or indeed at all, compounds the initial procedural default and provides clear, undeniable evidence that the JRPA has acquired the legally privileged status of an undefended application. This forfeiture serves as an irrevocable waiver of their adversarial rights, analogous to a default judgment.

Subject 1(E): As a consequence of the above and infra, the JRPA Application was not contested by a singular "Defence" or "First Defence" and as such, the Impugned Decisions must be set aside on the standard of correctness with reference to the Applicant's Compendia served and filed on February 11, 2025, and February 18, 2025

The failure of the Respondents to introduce any "Defence" or "First Defence" (the Notice of Appearance being the prerequisite thereto) means that the Applicant's submissions and the relief sought stand entirely uncontested on the record. Through the strict and uncompromising application of the Rules of Civil Procedure, the Applicant is presumptively and legitimately entitled to the totality of the relief articulated within the Notice of Application for Judicial Review. Given the procedural default, the Court is relieved of the necessity of engaging in the complex, deferential scrutiny typically applied in judicial review.

Instead, the legal analysis defaults to the most stringent standard—the standard of correctness—for determining the lawfulness of the Impugned Decisions, relying exclusively on the merits as set forth in the Applicant's Compendia. The procedural non-engagement of the Respondents permits the Court to exercise its supervisory jurisdiction to set aside the Impugned Decisions without the impediment of countervailing arguments or evidence.

Subject 1(F): As a consequence of the Respondents having been proven by the record of proceeding of filed documents in this JRPA Proceeding to have not filed any documents, inclusive of Notices of Appearances, all steps, documents and order (of which there are none in the record of proceeding along with the JRPA Proceeding remaining "active") to the Respondents unlawfully derived benefits must be set aside as void, void ab initio and/or of no force and effect

A crucial, far-reaching consequence of the Respondents' procedural default is the principle of preclusion and the nullity of any perceived benefit they may have derived from the administrative process. Since the Respondents are barred in toto from asserting any substantive defence or requesting any affirmative relief, all subsequent administrative acts or orders that purported to recognize their status or benefit their position are likewise legally deficient. The finding that the Respondents never established standing means they could not participate in any subsequent "active" status of the proceeding. Therefore, any implied orders or administrative steps that were taken on the mistaken assumption of an adversarial contest must be set aside as void ab initio. This serves to fully restore the procedural integrity of the JRPA file to its proper, undefended state.

Subject 1(G): As a consequence of the Respondents not defending the JRPA Application, the JRPA Application is undefended and the NOM #3 is undefended

The legal syllogism governing this matter is manifestly clear: the failure to file the mandatory Notice of Appearance constitutes an irrevocable procedural default. Therefore, the Respondents possess no legitimate standing before the Court to contest the JRPA, and the application, along with the instant Notice of Motion Number Three (NOM #3), must proceed toward an uncontested disposition. The jurisprudential principle embodied in the legal maxim qui tacet consentire videtur—he who is silent is held to consent—is not only germane to the instant situation but operates as a conclusive determinant of the application's trajectory toward an uncontested resolution. The Court's jurisdiction must be exercised in favour of the Applicant on the basis of the procedural default, thereby confirming that both the JRPA and NOM #3 are, unequivocally, undefended.

Subject I(H): The Newly Proven Facts of Procedural Default are Incontrovertible, Infallible, and Non-Justiciable

The evidence of the Respondents' non-compliance, drawn directly from the official OCPP record of proceedings (Appendix A), moves the foundational facts of this motion beyond the realm of contestability. These facts—the absence of filed Notices of Appearance—are incontrovertible, infallible, and thus non-justiciable; they are not subject to evidentiary dispute or adversarial argument. This proven, absolute procedural failure strips the Respondents of any legal basis to oppose the current motion or the underlying Judicial Review Application. The Court, in its supervisory role, is therefore compelled to accept the procedural landscape as an established, settled matter of fact, requiring an immediate and efficient determination of the Applicant's entitlement to relief based solely on the uncontested record. Any administrative delay predicated on the assumption of a contested proceeding is rendered fundamentally inappropriate and prejudicial.

Subject I(I): Failure to File Appearance Constitutes a Procedural Election and De Facto Confession of Entitlement to Relief

The Respondents' conscious decision, or demonstrable failure, to perfect their defense by filing the mandatory Notice of Appearance constitutes a procedural election to abstain from the adversarial process. In the context of the Rules of Civil Procedure, this deliberate non-participation operates as a waiver of the right to contest the Applicant's claims and submissions, thereby tacitly confirming the Applicant's entitlement to the relief sought in the Judicial Review Application. This non-action is tantamount to a de facto confession of the procedural and substantive merits of the Applicant's case, particularly regarding the setting aside of the Impugned Decisions. The urgent processing of NOM #3 is required to formalize this procedural concession and grant the appropriate default relief.

Subject I(J): The Inevitability of Relief and the Punitive Cost of Delay

Irrespective of whether the Respondents purport or attempt to deliver their Notices of Appearances, it matters not because they are already in default of their obligations in relation to NOM #3 by not opposing the same or objecting to it being heard in writing. All of the previous steps in which they received notice, documents received and/or if document #48 is one that they (apparently jointly filed) (excluding the AGO), without proof of service therein albeit an apparent filing, the request made by the LAT is void ab initio, the Madam Justice Shore compulsory case conference requirement is void ab initio without a "First Defence" filed and all that spawned from the same. As such, the sole remaining task to bring the substance (non-constitutional relief which is most important to be heard (justice delayed is justice denied) of the JRPA Application to be heard on its merits in an expeditious, cost-effective and just manner is the processing of filing and uploading of filed documents by the Registrar and the Applicant uploading the filed Compendium For NOM #3.

As the issue of whether the Respondents filed a "First Defence" or "Delivered" their Notices of Appearances is no longer justiciable and is tantamount to an admission, there is no reason to delay the inevitable. Whether the motion is heard on Wednesday, December 3, 2025, or thereafter, the only difference is the accrual of elevated costs to the Applicant and the perpetuation of serious, ongoing substantive harm. The Applicant is entitled to the vital treatments and benefits which are already 3.5 years delayed (see: Zurich v. Chubb, 2024 (May) as per the decision of The Honourable Mr. Justice Akazaki of the SCJ (Toronto Region)). The Court's adherence to the scheduled date of December 3, 2025, is imperative to prevent the further imposition of punitive harm resulting from the Respondents' own procedural failures.

SUBJECT II: The Substantive Urgency of Irreparable Financial Harm Vitiating Any Further Delay

The urgency for a disposition on the scheduled date of December 3, 2025, is not merely procedural but is dictated by the ongoing, irreparable substantive harm proved by the evidence contained within the Applicant's Compendium (Tab #3). The core of the Judicial Review Application stems from the grievous deprivation of the Applicant's property through an act of theft and the subsequent administrative failure to rectify this injury.

The full scope and severity of this harm is detailed in:

- Compendium Tab #3: The Applicant's Statutory Declaration (pages 136-1433) which provides uncontested, sworn evidence regarding the facts of the underlying theft, the value of the property taken, and the subsequent devastating financial consequences.

- Affidavit of Service (Filed November 21, 2025, attached to the Motion Record): This Affidavit references evidence of ongoing tampering with the Applicant's proprietary, confidential, and personal interests, specifically the fraudulent re-activation of email accounts related to the theft of his property. As such, on this ground alone, this NOM #3 cannot be delayed from hearing and deciding the same.

This compelling evidence of sustained and quantifiable material erosion places a high burden on the Court to utilize the undefended status of the JRPA to grant the relief sought without further delay. The principles of access to justice and the overriding objective of the Rules—to secure the just, most expeditious, and least expensive determination—demand that a procedurally defaulted application concerning such a profound and continuing injury be resolved forthwith on the scheduled motion date, December 3, 2025, to mitigate the Applicant's ongoing prejudice.

III. Conclusion and Requisite Compliance with Duties by the Registrar

Given the demonstrable and incontrovertible procedural default exhibited by the Respondents, as evidenced by the official acta of the OCPP (Appendix A), the conclusion that the within JRPA is undefended becomes self-evident and legally mandated. The imminent date of the scheduled hearing (December 3, 2025), the now non-justiciable nature of the Respondents' procedural failure, and the unredressed, severe financial harm proven in Compendium Tab #3 necessitates the immediate processing of the Applicant's urgent filings, particularly NOM #3, to prevent a palpable miscarriage of procedural justice and to restore the status quo ante of the application's proper trajectory toward an undefended disposition. The urgency is further amplified by the critical nature of the underlying issue, namely the unredressed theft and the consequential financial hardship endured by the Applicant, which necessitates the swiftest possible resolution through the uncontested granting of the relief sought in the JRPA.

It is therefore respectfully submitted that where applicable the Registrar must and the Honourable Divisional Court should or must:

1. Registrar: Comply with mandatory duties and immediately process all urgent filings by the Applicant, including, but not limited to, Notice of Motion Number Three, which are delineated for clarity at Appendix B. The urgency of these filings is amplified by the facts presented in Appendix A and the substantive evidence of irreparable harm in Compendium Tab #3 and the ongoing security issues noted in the Affidavit of Service (November 21, 2025).
2. Registrar: Upload all filed documents in this JRPA Application as required by the Rules of Civil Procedure and provide the necessary invitation access to the Applicant for his own uploading (where applicable) and for review of the complete electronic record.
3. Honourable Divisional Court/Registrar (where applicable): Grant such further and ancillary relief as may be deemed just and expedient in the circumstances by way of hearing request, written request, or requisition to ensure that the NOM #3 and its relief, including that in the JRPA Application are heard in an expeditious, timely and cost-effective manner while the Moving Party has again complied with all serving, filing and proof of service along with payment requirements.

To ensure that the Applicant has assisted the Registrar with the required immediate administrative processing of filed documents by the Applicant in the OCPP and in compliance with the Divisional Court Practice Direction, by way of subsequent email to the Registrar of the Divisional Court to ensure sufficient time to upload the filed documents into Case Center, the Applicant has provided Appendix A and B to ensure efficient use of public resources.

The processing of the Appendix B, with some of them already due, cannot take more than 30 minutes or so which will allow sufficient time, if conducted on an urgent basis in the morning of December 2, 2025, for uploading to Case Center by the Registrar but for the Compendium For NOM #3 which the Applicant is obligated to upload to Case Center.

The continued fraud upon the Applicant by consequence of the TDI Karat Theft at first instance renders this NOM #3 most urgent to ensure that these nefarious characters on behalf of prima facie the TDI Group (former or present) are immediately restrained from their continued criminality, fraud and extortion. Any such procedural delays would be tantamount to condonation of their conduct.

All of which is respectfully REQUIRED (in relation to the Requisition elements of this joint form) and REQUESTED (where applicable) on December 1, 2025

December 1, 2025

THE ABSOLUTE DIVESTMENT OF JUDICIAL AUTHORITY AND STRUCTURAL INDEPENDENCE

1. Within the context of the extant proceeding (the "JRPA Proceeding")—bearing Court File No. DC-24-00000718-00JR, commenced by Mr. Kevin A. McLean (B.A., J.D., CIM) against TD Home and Auto Insurance Company, et al.—it was judicially determined in the matter of McLean (Roderick) v. Bradley, [THE YEAR OF 1878] 2 S.C.R. 535 (the "Bradley" or "Bradley 1878") (see: BOA, Tab #310), that acts exceeding the strict scope of judicial authority are rendered Factum A Judice, Quod Ad Officium Jure Non Pertinet, Ratum Non Est. Consequently, any appearances or procedural interactions convened before an adjudicator operating under such jurisdictional deficiencies are Coram Non Judice, thereby falling unequivocally within the categorical classification of Irremediable Nullities. Adjudicative action undertaken absent requisite jurisdiction is entirely devoid of judicial function, thereby providing no foundational underpinning for the invocation of issue estoppel, res judicata, or any form of procedural finality whatsoever. It is observed that since the foundational epoch of the confederation of Canada (the "Confederation") in THE YEAR OF 1867—a constitutional principle subsequently fortified by the seminal jurisprudence articulated in THE YEAR OF 1878 within Bradley—the legal architecture of this jurisdiction has perennially mandated that for the adjudicative manifestations of a member of the judiciary to possess binding efficacy, such acta must emanate exclusively from the duly authorized office of the judge (the "Judge's Office") and pertain rigorously to the statutory and prescribed obligations inextricably associated therewith. The fundamental proposition, deeply embedded within the social contract, is that judicial coercion is emphatically not an inherent personal prerogative of the jurist, but rather a highly constrained delegation of state power that is instantaneously extinguished the precise moment the jurist operates beyond the codified statutory parameters explicitly enacted by the legislative assembly. To posit otherwise is to endorse a system wherein the coercive apparatus of the state is deployed based upon the idiosyncratic caprice of an individual, rather than the predictable strictures of the rule of law.

2. This foundational limitation is inextricably linked to the unwritten constitutional principle of judicial independence, specifically the structural independence of the court as definitively articulated in Valente v. The Queen, [THE YEAR OF 1985] 2 S.C.R. 673 The usurpation of the administrative assignment process by an unauthorized judicial officer, effectively circumventing the Chief Justice's exclusive, constitutionally protected mandate as the "Master of the Roster," constitutes a profound, catastrophic breach of this structural independence. The sophisticated framework established in Valente demands not merely independence from the executive and legislative branches of government, but also necessitates the rigorous preservation of internal, administrative independence, which is orchestrated exclusively by the designated administrative head of the tribunal. When a proceeding is unilaterally seized by a puisne judge absent formal, documented assignment, the institutional architecture of the judiciary is fatally compromised, and the public's confidence in the impartial administration of justice is irrevocably fractured. The constitution of such an esteemed bench of the supreme court of Canada (the "SCC") in Bradley 1878 underscores the profound gravity with which the early appellate tribunal contemplated strict jurisdictional boundaries, recognizing them as the ultimate prophylactic against judicial tyranny. At page 547 of Bradley 1878, the Court, invoking Broom's Legal Maxims and Taylor v. Clemson, [THE YEAR OF 1844] 11 Cl. & Fin. 610, conclusively stated:

3. "When the Court has no jurisdiction of the cause, the whole Proceeding is Coram Non Judice, and actions will lie against the above mentioned parties without any regard to the precept or process, and in this case it is not necessary to obey one who is not judge of the cause. Broom, L. M. 90; Taylor v. Clemson. Factum A Judice, Quod Ad Officium Jure Non Pertinet, Ratum Non Est."

THE DICHOTOMY OF JURISDICTIONAL ABSENCE: COURT VERSUS JUDICIAL OFFICER

ONTOLOGICAL DECONSTRUCTION OF THE CAUSE AND THE REBUTTAL TO INHERENT JURISDICTION

5206 A fundamental jurisprudential issue is inexorably precipitated concerning the strict ontological demarcation between:

a. A court lacking jurisdiction over the cause; versus
b. A judge lacking jurisdiction over the cause.

5. The ontological deconstruction of the "cause" is strictly necessitated, as the fundamental nature of the proceeding dictates the absolute boundaries of the adjudicative power. In traditional legal nomenclature, a cause of action is contemplated, which intrinsically forms the legal substratum for civil liability (e.g., breach of contract, tortious breach of duty, breach of fiduciary obligations, or statutory contraventions such as applications pursuant to the Personal Information Protection and Electronic Documents Act, S.C. THE YEAR OF 2000, c. 5). However, within the highly specialized matrix of a Statutory Application, such as an application advanced pursuant to the Judicial Review Procedure Act, R.S.O. THE YEAR OF 1990, c. J.1 (the "JRPA"), the cause is governed comprehensively and exclusively by the paramountcy of the enabling statute itself. The historical genesis of the JRPA was specifically engineered to amalgamate and meticulously streamline the archaic prerogative writs (including certiorari, mandamus, prohibition, and quo warranto) into a singular, unified procedural mechanism. Due to this highly specific historical pedigree, the procedural strictures surrounding such applications are exceptionally unforgiving. Naturally, should a JRPA application be filed by an individual before the court of appeal for Ontario (the "ONCA") at first instance, the appellate court would be wholly bereft of jurisdiction over the cause of the JRPA application, as the legislative text explicitly routes such matters to the Divisional Court. Consequently, the court itself, and any constituent judge thereof, would possess no jurisdiction over the cause. All subsequent acts promulgated by the said judge would be rendered Factum A Judice, Quod Ad Officium Jure Non Pertinet, Ratum Non Est, and any appearances convened before the said judicial officer would be definitively classified as Coram Non Judice.

6. It may be erroneously advanced by opposing counsel, or theoretically contemplated by the Presiding Divisional Court President, that the Divisional Court, functioning as a branch of the superior court of justice (the "SCJ"), retains an inherent, plenary jurisdiction to actively manage its own processes sua sponte, thereby purportedly curing any individual adjudicative defect through institutional osmosis. This assertion fundamentally misapprehends the rigid structural architecture of the Courts of Justice Act, R.S.O. THE YEAR OF 1990, c. C.43 (the "CJA"). While plenary inherent jurisdiction is undeniably possessed by the SCJ proper to manage its internal processes—as definitively expounded by the SCC in Ontario v. Criminal Lawyers' Association of Ontario, [THE YEAR OF 2013] 3 S.C.R. 3 the Divisional Court is strictly a statutory construct. It was birthed from legislative enactment following the McRuer Commission specifically to serve as a constrained intermediate appellate and judicial review body; it does not possess the sweeping, historic equitable powers of the Court of Chancery. Inherent jurisdiction cannot be imputed downward to a statutory appellate body to override, circumvent, or completely eviscerate explicitly codified regulatory prohibitions. In this highly regulated context, an unassigned case management judge (the "Case Management Judge") simply does not possess jurisdiction over the cause. While a degree of procedural latitude is afforded by Rule 50 of the Rules of Civil Procedure, R.R.O. THE YEAR OF 1990, Reg. 194 (the "Civil Rules"), the said provision is strictly constrained to pre-trial procedures within the trajectory of civil actions; applications are emphatically not actions and are, ipso facto, not structured upon a trajectory culminating in a trial. Furthermore, under Rule 77 of the Civil Rules, structural latitude is severely curtailed in both actions and applications, with an even more pronounced constriction applied to Statutory Applications, particularly those initiated pursuant to the JRPA. The rationale for this stringent procedural constriction is anchored in the foundational doctrine of statutory supremacy—specifically, the hierarchical superiority of primary legislative enactments over subordinate regulatory frameworks (see: Legislation Act, 2006, S.O. THE YEAR OF 2006, c. 21, Sched. F, s. 1 for statutory definitions)—and further codified by explicit regulatory prescription (see: Rule 1.02, "Application of Rules").

THE STRICT DEFINITION OF THE JUDGE OF THE CAUSE AND THE INAPPLICABILITY OF THE LIBERAL INTERPRETATION RULE

7. The Civil Rules govern all civil proceedings within the ONCA and the SCJ, explicitly excluding family law proceedings (see: Rule 1.02(1)2.) and acknowledging the distinct procedural framework of the Small Claims Court (see: Rule 1.02(1)1.). The judge of the cause (the "Judge Of The Cause") is strictly defined as the judicial officer who hears and determines the substantive merits, an eventuality that can only crystallize during a formal hearing (the "Hearing"). Pursuant to the Civil Rules, a Hearing encompasses the hearing of an application, motion, reference, appeal, or assessment of costs, or a trial. The adjudicative function is fundamentally distinct, both structurally and legally, from the administrative function of scheduling or preliminary case management.

8. It may be postulated by the Presiding Divisional Court President that the liberal interpretation provision enshrined within Rule 1.04(1), or the curative provisions addressing procedural non-compliance within Rule 2.01 of the Civil Rules, operate to cure technical defects to secure the "just, most expeditious and least expensive determination" of the proceeding, thereby theoretically validating an unauthorized case management intervention. This argument is fatally defective and relies upon a profound misapplication of the principles of statutory construction. As established by the SCC in Strickland v. Canada (Attorney General), [THE YEAR OF 2015] 2 S.C.R. 713, discretionary administrative rules cannot be weaponized to artificially instantiate jurisdiction where the foundational statutory scaffolding is entirely absent. Discretion is a recognized tool for navigating within the established boundaries of the law; it is emphatically not a mechanism for obliterating those boundaries. Furthermore, the absolute paramountcy of the enabling legislative framework, as mandated in Canada (Minister of Citizenship and Immigration) v. Vavilov, [THE YEAR OF 2019] 4 S.C.R. 653(the "Vavilov"), demands strict adherence to statutory bounds within a contemporary "culture of justification." An absolute lack of subject-matter authorization cannot be casually dismissed as a mere procedural irregularity capable of retroactive cure. The explicit prerequisite of a First Defence is not a mere procedural technicality; it is a substantive, jurisdictional gateway that officially joins the issues, crystalizes the adversarial nature of the proceeding, and engages the necessity for judicial management. Given that an appeal, reference, and trial are fundamentally inapplicable to a JRPA application—a principle similarly illuminated in Pong v. Quong, [THE YEAR OF 1927] S.C.R. 271 (the "Pong"), which involved a Statutory Application rather than a prescribed application—the substantive merits of a JRPA application may only be heard and decided following the precise procedural setting of the application. This formal setting is exclusively executed either by the Registrar of the Divisional Court via the issuance of Form 68A pursuant to Rule 68.05, or alternatively, through a formal motion advanced by a litigant (see: Yatar v. TD Insurance Meloche Monnex [THE YEAR OF 2024] SCC 8 at para 49). While the Civil Rules provide the specific mechanism to convert a standard motion into a motion for judgment, no corresponding residual, inherent, or implied authority exists under Rule 77 to transmute an unauthorized case conference into a "conference for judgment."

THE REBUTTAL TO THE DE FACTO OFFICER DOCTRINE

9. It may be further advanced by opposing counsel that the impugned adjudicative acts are permanently shielded from nullification by the operation of the de facto officer doctrine. This legal theory is fundamentally inapplicable to the present procedural matrix and represents a gross mischaracterization of the doctrine's historical intent. Historically, the de facto doctrine evolved to protect the public from the chaotic invalidation of state acts resulting from minor, technical defects in an official's appointment (for example, an expired commission or a technical flaw in swearing the oath of office). As definitively articulated by the SCC in Reference re Remuneration of Judges of the Provincial Court of Prince Edward Island, [THE YEAR OF 1997] 3 S.C.R. 3, the de facto doctrine serves exclusively to validate the acts of an official whose appointment is technically defective but who nonetheless exercises authority under the color of right within a jurisdiction they are otherwise authorized to occupy. It emphatically does not operate to instantiate subject-matter jurisdiction, nor does it create file-specific statutory authority where none was ever lawfully conferred. A validly appointed judge who brazenly circumvents the mandatory assignment mechanisms of the Civil Rules is not a de facto Judge Of The Cause; rather, they operate as an interloper whose actions remain Factum A Judice, Quod Ad Officium Jure Non Pertinet, Ratum Non Est. To hold otherwise would establish a perilous precedent allowing any jurist to unilaterally seize any file across the province, cloaking their usurpation under the guise of de facto authority, thereby plunging the judicial system into a state of anarchic unpredictability and eroding the very foundations of the administration of justice.

10. A strict bifurcation must be continuously maintained between an institution's overarching statutory jurisdiction and the specific adjudicative competence in personam of an individual judicial officer over a meticulously delineated procedural file. An institution's broad statutory authority cannot be retroactively or theoretically manifested to confer ex post facto jurisdiction upon an unassigned judicial officer. If institutional jurisdiction could unilaterally cure individual adjudicative defects, the entire codified assignment mechanism painstakingly drafted within the Civil Rules would be rendered purely advisory, reducing mandatory statutory gateways to mere suggestions. Such a remarkably flawed interpretation would facilitate rampant judge-shopping, the issuance of internally conflicting directives, and the total operational breakdown of the appellate hierarchy. To accept such a proposition would entirely eviscerate the Civil Rules and render the procedural gateways codified by the Legislature functionally superfluous. Therefore, a Case Management Judge, whether formally authorized or functioning as an interloper, is unequivocally not a Judge Of The Cause. Consequently, no lawful adjudicative authority whatsoever was possessed by Madam Justice Shore to wade into the substantive merits, as she was emphatically not a hearing judge. It is solely through the precise procedural mechanism of a formal motion, or through the administrative setting of the matter on a listing for hearing (the "Listing For Hearing") by the Registrar—a function exclusively reserved for the Registrar, contrary to the entirely erroneous pronouncements of court clerk Ms. Clegg—and the subsequent issuance, endorsement, and distribution of a Form 68B pursuant to Rule 68.05, that the matter may lawfully proceed. This incontrovertible procedural architecture leads to the unassailable, deductive syllogism that Madam Justice Shore functioned not merely as an unauthorized case management judge interloper (the "Unauthorized CMJ Interloper"), but importantly, was at no point the Judge Of The Cause.

THE INVIOLABLE DUTY TO REFRAIN FROM FACILITATING UNLAWFUL ADJUDICATIVE ACTS

THE ABSENCE OF JUSTIFICATION FOR RELYING UPON NULLITIES

11. The mandatory obligation to comply with a court order promulgated by a specific judicial officer is inextricably contingent upon both the lawful subject-matter jurisdiction of the tribunal and the precise jurisdictional competence of the individual judge to effectuate the requisite procedural acts. Without this foundational nexus of authority, a directive masquerading as a formal Order possesses no greater legal force than a request articulated by a private citizen and demands no compliance from the litigants.

12. Consistent with the established legal doctrine that no plea of justification is available to a constable who executes a warrant promulgated by a judicial officer lacking the foundational jurisdiction to endorse and issue the same—a scenario legally and conceptually distinct from the execution of a falsified information or indictment, wherein the defect is evidentiary rather than jurisdictionally fatal—there exists no plea of justification for any litigant, court personnel, or subsequent judicial officer who relies upon an Irremediable Nullity. The jurisprudence governing the tort of civil conspiracy provides ample, binding authority in this specific domain. The tort manifests in two distinct branches: (i) unlawful means conspiracy, wherein two or more persons act in agreement, frequently established via inferential deduction rather than direct evidence, employing unlawful means that precipitate damage and loss to another; and (ii) lawful means conspiracy, wherein two or more persons engage in a lawful agreement predominantly motivated by the malicious intent to inflict harm upon the plaintiff. When the fundamental, constitutional rights of the victim are transgressed by state actors, damage and loss are legally presumed, thereby alleviating the necessity of quantifying precise pecuniary harm at the preliminary stages of liability assessment (Shaw v. Lewis, [THE YEAR OF 1948] 1 W.W.R. 427 (B.C.C.A.)

13. It was explicated by the ONCA in Reach M.D. Inc. v. Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Assn. of Canada, [THE YEAR OF 2003] CanLII 27828 (ON CA) citing the seminal jurisprudential contribution of Lord Denning in Torquay Hotel Co. Ltd. v. Cousins, [THE YEAR OF 1969] 2 Ch. 106 (C.A.) (: that the expansive construction of unlawful means encompasses acts the defendant "is not at liberty to commit"—acts fundamentally devoid of legal justification. It is indisputable that the actions undertaken by Madam Justice Shore were not merely executed absent jurisdiction—as she operated entirely as the Unauthorized CMJ Interloper—but were concurrently unlawful acts, characterized unequivocally as Factum A Judice, Quod Ad Officium Jure Non Pertinet, Ratum Non Est. Consequently, any purported case management conference convened before her constituted an attendance before an individual legally divested of judicial character for the purposes of that specific proceeding (Coram Non Judice). Therefore, subsequent reliance upon such proceedings by any entity, including the coordination staff, the registry, and adversarial counsel, is properly construed as the active aiding and abetting of unlawful acts, thereby exposing those entities to severe civil liability.

THE INFERENTIAL FOUNDATION OF CIVIL CONSPIRACY

14. As illuminated in Golden Capital Securities Ltd. v. Holmes, [THE YEAR OF 2004] BCSC 1238, 33 B.C.L.R. (4th) 1 an actionable conspiracy may be established purely upon inferential evidentiary foundations, recognizing the inherently clandestine nature of such tortious agreements. Applying this doctrine, an explicit, overt agreement is not strictly necessitated to establish liability for civil conspiracy amongst court personnel and the unauthorized judicial officer. The synchronized promulgation of directives predicated upon an Irremediable Nullity provides the requisite inferential foundation to firmly establish a common design to effectuate unlawful means. Liability may be imposed for the maintenance of silence and the passive permission of the promulgation of false statements, as the conscious failure to correct a known jurisdictional usurpation actively facilitates the ongoing tort: Sugar v. Peat Marwick Ltd., [THE YEAR OF 1988] 55 D.L.R. (4th) 230 (Ont. H.C.J.) To definitively extricate oneself from a continuing conspiracy, unequivocal and demonstrable steps must be undertaken to absolve participation in the common design; mere passive withdrawal or wilful blindness is legally insufficient: Claiborne Industries Ltd. v. National Bank of Canada, [THE YEAR OF 1989] CanLII 183 (ON CA)). The mere facilitation of a co-conspirator in the commission of the actus reus is entirely sufficient to qualify as the deployment of unlawful means: 2038724 Ontario Ltd. v. Quizno's Canada Restaurant Corp., [THE YEAR OF 2010] ONCA 466. Furthermore, it is a settled principle that individualized, active participation by every conspirator in every overt act is not required, provided the unlawful act was a probable consequence of the original common design: Kuwait Oil Tanker Co. SAK v. Al Bader, [THE YEAR OF 2000] 2 All E.R. (Comm) 271 (C.A.) (: and HM Revenue & Customs v. Begum, [THE YEAR OF 2010] EWHC 1799 (Ch). This articulation serves as a formal, jurisprudential notice to those entities potentially unaware of the original clandestine scheme, heavily steeped in particulars of fraud, bribery, and extortion, yet who remain liable for the perpetuation of the common design by consistently relying upon void directives.

The Limitations of Judicial Immunity and the Color of Office Fallacy

15. While absolute judicial immunity and qualified immunity may be advanced as defensive postures by the tribunal, qualified immunity is strictly contingent upon the execution of acts in good faith, and absolute judicial immunity is rigidly confined to the lawful execution of judicial functions. The overarching policy rationale for judicial immunity is the preservation of independent adjudication, free from the chilling effect of retaliatory civil litigation initiated by disgruntled litigants. However, this policy is entirely vitiated when the judicial officer abandons the adjudicative framework entirely and engages in unauthorized administrative usurpation. It may be argued by the Court that Madam Justice Shore's actions, however procedurally flawed, were executed under the color of her office and are thus absolutely shielded from scrutiny. Such a proposition is legally hollow and constitutionally abhorrent. Such immunities do not extend to extra-jurisdictional non-functions, as unequivocally demonstrated in R. v. Germain, [THE YEAR OF 1984] CanLII 1307 (AB KB) (: wherein a misguided contempt proceeding initiated absent jurisdiction constituted a severe constitutional violation, thereby yielding Charter relief against the Crown. In Prefontaine v. Gosman, [THE YEAR OF 2000] ABQB 155, the Honourable Justice Jones of the Alberta Court of Queen's Bench, citing Germain, articulated that the protective mantle of judicial immunity is intrinsically dependent upon the judicial officer's subjective, bona fide belief in their jurisdictional competence. It was concluded by Justice Jones that a judge remains shielded from civil liability, irrespective of malice or envy, provided the judge believed they were acting with jurisdiction and within the course of their judicial duties (citing Sirros v. Moore, [THE YEAR OF 1974] 3 All E.R. 776, Royer v. Mignault, [THE YEAR OF 1988] CanLII 445 (QC CA) (: Janson v. King, 5210 [THE YEAR OF 1979] CanLII 2340 (SK QB), Maharaj v. Attorney-General of Trinidad and Tobago (No. 2), [THE YEAR OF 1978] 2 All E.R. 670 (P.C.) (: and Morier v. Rivard, [THE YEAR OF 1985] 2 S.C.R. 716.

THE OBJECTIVE ABSENCE OF A BONA FIDE BELIEF IN JURISDICTION

16. The paramount requisite for the invocation of judicial immunity is the subjective belief in the possession of jurisdiction, which must nevertheless be assessed against an objective standard of procedural compliance to prevent absurd self-declarations of authority. It is legally inconceivable that a bona fide belief in her jurisdictional competence could have been harbored by Madam Justice Shore as an Unauthorized CMJ Interloper when the explicitly codified prerequisites were manifestly absent from the record. The evidentiary record concerning the Nash v. CAMI proceeding (Divisional Court File No. 25-872-JR) demonstrates that the matter was engaged with by Madam Justice Shore solely in January THE YEAR OF 2026, chronologically subsequent to the email correspondence from the Honourable Justice Nakatsuru confirming that the said proceeding would be subjected to a formal assignment for case management BY ORDER (the "Assignment For Case Management BY ORDER"). This chronological sequence definitively establishes that acute awareness of the requisite procedural gateways was possessed by Madam Justice Shore. Ignorance of the codified procedural law is emphatically not a recognized legal defence for a jurist, and calculated disregard for known, mandatory procedures definitively negates any assertion of bona fides.

THE INAPPLICABILITY OF ADJUDICATIVE PRIVILEGE

17. The ambit of absolute adjudicative privilege must also be strictly demarcated to prevent its abuse as a shield for administrative misconduct. As established by the SCC in MacKeigan v. Hickman, [THE YEAR OF 1989] 2 S.C.R. 796, absolute adjudicative privilege is possessed by judges, and they cannot be compelled to testify regarding their judicial decision-making processes. This profound privilege exists exclusively to protect the deliberative secrecy essential to impartial judgment. However, protected adjudicative functions were meticulously bifurcated by the Court from purely administrative undertakings. Because the actions executed by Madam Justice Shore were fundamentally devoid of jurisdiction and executed absent a lawful administrative assignment by the Chief Justice or the Regional Senior Judge, the protective mantle of absolute privilege articulated in MacKeigan is rendered entirely inapplicable. The usurpation of a file is an administrative act of interference, not a protected deliberative function. An Irremediable Nullity cannot be shielded by a privilege reserved exclusively for valid adjudicative deliberation.

THE MANDATORY PROCEDURAL GATEWAYS FOR CASE MANAGEMENT

18. It remains logically irreconcilable that Madam Justice Shore, a puisne judge lacking the administrative authority to assign judicial duties, could have perceived herself to possess jurisdiction over the McLean TDHA JRPA proceeding. The record is utterly devoid of the filing of a First Defence, and absent an explicitly endorsed Order for an Assignment For Case Management BY ORDER. The policy rationale underpinning the provision of CaseLines/Case Center invitations upon the commencement of a proceeding—and specifically following the filing of a First Defence by a respondent evincing an intention to oppose the relief sought—is to facilitate the uploading of documentary evidence prior to a scheduled conference. The First Defence serves the critical, foundational function of confirming the adversarial posture of the parties, thereby justifying the expenditure of limited judicial resources for case management. Nonetheless, for a judge of the Divisional Court to lawfully convene a case conference or conference call within the City of Toronto (Madam Justice Shore's designated administrative region since THE YEAR OF 2018), unequivocal knowledge must be possessed by the judicial officer that a formal Order has been pronounced (see: Rule 59.01, which delineates effectiveness from the exact moment of pronouncement). This requires the judicial officer to judiciously verify the court file to ensure an Order was made by a judge of the Divisional Court (expressly excluding an Associate Judge), and further, that a First Defence was filed prior to the making of that Order, unless mutual consent was provided by the litigants (Rule 77.05(1)). Absent such explicit, documented consent, the judge must ascertain that an Order for an Assignment For Case Management BY ORDER was formally endorsed, issued, and entered in strict accordance with the separate document requirements codified during THE YEAR OF 2020 amendments to the Civil Rules (see: Rule 59.02; BOA, Tab 56).

THE DIVESTMENT OF THE JUDICIAL OFFICE

19. The analytical framework established in Kopyto v. Ontario, [THE YEAR OF 1995] O.J. No. 601 (Gen. Div.) affirms that when an official operates within the statutory framework of their office, their subjective motivations remain immune from civil scrutiny. Conversely, if a judge does not operate within the prescribed statutory framework, the judicial office is fundamentally divested. Should a judge, acting without jurisdiction and without a bona fide belief in the possession of the same, intentionally inflict catastrophic harm upon an applicant—such as effectively neutralizing a human rights application or a residential tenancy judicial review through an orchestrated campaign of ultra vires procedural attrition—a robust, unassailable cause of action is naturally grounded against the judge personally. In such circumstances, the actions are Factum A Judice, Quod Ad Officium Jure Non Pertinet, Ratum Non Est, and the appearances are Coram Non Judice.

STATE LIABILITY, PERSONAL LIABILITY, AND THE BAD FAITH THRESHOLD

THE TRIGGERING OF BAD FAITH AND THE POWER PRECEDENT

20. Regarding state liability, the Crown Liability and Proceedings Act, R.S.C. THE YEAR OF 1985, c. C-50 (the "Federal CLPA") protects the federal government from vicarious liability for the tortious acts of a federally appointed judge. Similarly, under the Crown Liability and Proceedings Act, 2019, S.O. THE YEAR OF 2019, c. 7, Sched. 17 (the "CLPA 2019"), the Crown in right of Ontario is shielded, as liability is strictly constrained to the torts committed by an officer, employee, or agent of the provincial Crown (ss. 8(1)-(3)). A federally appointed judge is emphatically not an agent of the provincial Crown. Thus, personal liability attaches directly and inescapably to the judge. The jurisprudential precedent governing the gross usurpation of judicial authority bridges the lacuna between judicial sanctity and state dysfunction. In the matter at bar, systemic anomalies are observed which strictly trigger the bad faith threshold (the "Bad Faith Threshold"). It is not strictly necessitated that the Applicant prove abuse of power per se, as the explicit absence of a permissive 'may' within the Civil Rules fundamentally deprived the jurist of the power to commence the Proceeding. As delineated by the ONCA in Grosvenor v. East Luther Grand Valley (Township), [THE YEAR OF 2007] ONCA 55 (the "Grosvenor"), bad faith involves acting for collateral purposes. Relevant evidentiary factors meticulously satisfied herein include precipitously rushed processes, the absolute absence of statutory notice, and pronounced deficiencies in judicial due diligence. Furthermore, it is deduced that the communications relayed by Ms. Clegg on February 3, THE YEAR OF 2025, asserting that "the case management Judge is in full control and coordinators can only act at the case management Judge directions" and that all matters are case managed, were patently false, analytically imprecise, and constituted a deliberate misrepresentation, contradicting the JRPA, the CJA, the Civil Rules, and the Practice Directions promulgated by the Chief Justice.

THE INTENTIONAL SUBVERSION OF THE CONSTITUTIONAL ORDER

Section 96 Inconsistency, Institutional Interference, and Charter Entitlements

21. The intentional transgression of section 96 of the Constitution Act, 1867 (U.K.), 30 & 31 Vict., c. 3, by a sitting judge constitutes a catastrophic subversion of the judicial mandate. This subversion is further compounded by severe executive interference in the administration of the court, representing a direct, incontrovertible violation of the institutional independence of the judiciary established in R. v. Cawthorne, [THE YEAR OF 2016] 1 S.C.R. 983 The precipitous, unprecedented termination of the Former Registrar of the Divisional Court, Ms. Tashekah Gentles, precisely on December 3, THE YEAR OF 2025—the exact date mandated for the written hearing—constitutes a chilling manifestation of systemic disarray and administrative reprisal, evidently designed to paralyze the lawful progression of the JRPA Proceeding. Pursuant to the strict parameters established in Ernst v. Alberta Energy Regulator, [THE YEAR OF 2017] 1 S.C.R. 3 (the "Ernst"), and fortified by Yatar v. TD Insurance Meloche Monnex, [THE YEAR OF 2024] SCC 8 the Applicant is unequivocally entitled to a Hearing. The efficacy of an alternative adjudicative remedy operates as a strict condition precedent to the denial of Charter damages. Where a sua sponte Irremediable Nullity fundamentally bypasses and short-circuits the established appellate process, effectively insulating the rogue actions from standard appellate review by refusing to issue formalized orders, the Ernst barrier is conclusively overcome.

22. While it is acknowledged that the Charter applies to common law rules authorizing government action (Hill v. Church of Scientology of Toronto, [THE YEAR OF 1995] 2 S.C.R. 1130, a judicial officer intervening arbitrarily and without foundational authority generates an Irremediable Nullity that transcends mere common law evolution. Such extra-jurisdictional acts irrevocably compromise judicial independence and strictly require the service of a Notice of Constitutional Question to address the resulting section 96 inconsistency (the "Section 96 Inconsistency"). While not strictly constituting treason—which is narrowly defined by the utilization of force against the state or betrayal of national security—such calculated usurpation satisfies the requisite elements of criminal breach of trust under section 122 of the Criminal Code, R.S.C. THE YEAR OF 1985, c. C-46, if executed with knowledge of the jurisdictional void and for an oppressive or partial purpose. Judicial immunity does not constitute a limitless license for the intentional subversion of the constitutional order. Under these circumstances, Madam Justice Shore is stripped of both adjudicative and administrative privilege, as she was never assigned to the matter by formal direction, and nomenclature ("directions") structurally incompatible with formal Orders was explicitly utilized by her to avoid appellate scrutiny. The commencement of an application via the January 7, THE YEAR OF 2025 email (the "Ibula Email"), and the subsequent confirmation of the state of the record on December 1, THE YEAR OF 2025, firmly establishes that her interventions were unassailable nullities.

The Applicant's Undertaking of Perpetual Abstention

23. To ensure finality, to uphold the overarching principles of judicial economy, and to preclude any theoretical concerns of duplicative recovery or abusive litigation regarding potential tort claims against Madam Justice Shore, a formal undertaking has been provided to the Divisional Court—as supported by the Statutory Declaration of the Applicant affirmed October 13, THE YEAR OF 2025—to the attention of the Chief Justice in his capacity as the President of the Divisional Court, that should the relief sought be granted by a lawful Judge Of The Cause, any civil action against the said judge shall be perpetually abstained from by the Applicant. This proactive covenant demonstrates an unwavering commitment to the equitable resolution of the primary administrative dispute, ensuring the focus remains squarely on the merits of the underlying JRPA application.

Latin Maxim	Translation	Legal Application & Consequence
Coram Non Judice	"Not before a judge."	Applied when a judicial officer lacks competent jurisdiction. Any resulting steps or acts are fundamentally invalid, and parties are absolved of any legal duty to obey the unauthorized directives.
Factum A Judice, Quod Ad Officium Jure Non Pertinet, Ratum Non Est	"An act of a judge not pertaining to his office is not ratified."	Authority is derived strictly from the legal office. Unauthorized sua sponte interventions are void ab initio (Irremediable Nullities) and cannot be cured by subsequent conduct.
Fraus Omnia Corrumpit	"Fraud corrupts all."	When judicial usurpation is combined with fraudulent misrepresentation of authority, it unravels the benefits accrued, necessitating the restoration of the status quo ante.

THE DOCTRINE OF CORAM NON JUDICE AND CONTEMPORARY JURISDICTIONAL CONSTRAINTS

THE ABSOLUTE NULLIFICATION OF ADJUDICATIVE FUNCTION

24. It remains an incontrovertible legal maxim, deeply embedded within the foundational architecture of the common law, that an adjudication undertaken absent requisite jurisdictional authority is entirely devoid of judicial function. Consequently, no legal or evidentiary foundation whatsoever is furnished by such an extra-jurisdictional pronouncement for the invocation of the preclusive doctrines of issue estoppel or res judicata (see: McLean (Roderick) v. Bradley, [THE YEAR OF 1878] 2 S.C.R. 535; and Pong v. Quong, [THE YEAR OF 1927] S.C.R. 271. The preservation of the rule of law is inherently and perpetually predicated upon the strict observance of jurisdictional boundaries as meticulously delineated by the Legislature. A purported judgment, directive, or mandate promulgated ultra vires by an adjudicative body is definitively rendered a dead letter; it is an Irremediable Nullity that remains fundamentally incapable of engendering legal rights, imposing substantive obligations, extracting procedural compliance, or altering the legal status of any litigant.

THE HISTORICAL CONTEXT OF JURISDICTIONAL ABSOLUTISM

25. The philosophical underpinning of this jurisdictional absolutism is derived from the irrefutable premise that judicial coercion is a direct exercise of state sovereignty. To permit a judicial officer to wield such immense coercive power absent a statutory anchor is to invite arbitrary governance and judicial tyranny. While the aforementioned jurisprudence emanated from the SCC, the constitutional architecture of the era must be exhaustively contextualized to fully appreciate the enduring, paramount weight of the Pong precedent. Prior to the abolition of overseas appeals in THE YEAR OF 1949, an appeal in a civil proceeding could be advanced directly to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council situated in the United Kingdom. Historically, such imperial appeals could be advanced by litigants either de plano (as of right, typically contingent upon specific monetary thresholds or complex subject matters) or via special leave. Furthermore, the highly stratified procedural architecture occasionally permitted direct appeals per saltum, allowing litigants to bypass the national appellate court entirely. The existence of such mechanisms ensured that adjudications remained strictly tethered to orthodox common law principles regarding jurisdictional competence, as imperial oversight operated as an unforgiving, systemic prophylactic against the artificial inflation of localized mandates by dominion tribunals.

THE INABILITY TO CURE JURISDICTIONAL VOIDS

26. No such extraordinary imperial appellate measures were pursued by the appellants in the Pong matter. The unassailable finality of the SCC's pronouncement in Pong therefore permanently cemented the doctrine that acts effectuated without jurisdiction cannot be retroactively validated by the mere passage of time, nor can they be immunized from collateral attack by a mere failure to seek immediate appellate review. Jurisdictional defects of this profound structural magnitude do not render an outcome merely voidable—which would afford the reviewing tribunal a degree of equitable deference—rather, such acts remain Irremediable Nullities in limine.

THE FALLACY OF ATTORNMENT (ALTHOUGH NO ATTORNMENT SO OCCURRED) TO AN IRREMEDIABLE NULLITY

27. This jurisprudential distinction is of paramount, existential importance: while a mere procedural irregularity executed strictly within a court's lawful jurisdiction may be subsequently cured or waived by the voluntary conduct of the litigants, an absolute, objective absence of foundational jurisdiction irreversibly extinguishes the very capacity of the tribunal to issue a legally cognizable Order. To posit otherwise is to suggest that judicial authority can be spontaneously generated from a jurisdictional vacuum by the mere acquiescence of the parties, an absurdity that the common law has vehemently rejected for centuries.

28. It may be postulated by opposing counsel that the applicant's participation in the case conference constitutes a waiver or an attornment to the jurisdiction of the judge. This argument is fatally flawed and is thoroughly refuted by the explicit ratio articulated in Highwood Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses (Judicial Committee) v. Wall, [THE YEAR OF 2018] 1 S.C.R. 750, which reaffirms that judicial review jurisdiction is strictly circumscribed and non-negotiable. Attornment applies exclusively to procedural irregularities or defects in in personam jurisdiction; it is a fundamental legal axiom that parties cannot, by consent, waiver, or participation, confer subject-matter jurisdiction or fundamental adjudicative authority where the legislative assembly has intentionally withheld it. One simply cannot attorn to an Irremediable Nullity. Consequently, the Primus Inter Pares of the Divisional Court, in his capacity as President, is required to adhere to decisions promulgated by superior appellate courts and is strictly bound by vertical stare decisis (the "Vertical Stare Decisis").

THE STRICT PROCEDURAL PREREQUISITES OF RULE 77

29. Pursuant to the aforementioned doctrinal principles, THE YEAR OF 1927 adjudication of Pong (see: BOA, Tab 309) remains highly instructive and acutely relevant to contemporary procedural analysis. The precedent explicitly illuminates the profound peril and systemic destabilization inherent when a judicial officer unilaterally circumvents a constrained statutory mandate and disregards the stringent procedural prerequisites dictated by the Civil Rules, specifically the highly regulated case management mechanisms enshrined within Rule 77.

THE USURPATION OF THE ADJUDICATIVE FUNCTION

30. It was affirmatively declared by the SCC that, regarding the Honourable Justice Denton's engagement in the adjudication of the substantive equitable relations in the Statutory Application, the matter was strictly Coram Non Judice and his acts were Factum A Judice, Quod Ad Officium Jure Non Pertinet, Ratum Non Est. Dictated by the inflexible doctrine of Vertical Stare Decisis, the Divisional Court is ipso facto divested of any inherent authority to arbitrarily decline the Hearing (see: Rule 1.03, "Definitions") of an application strictly upon a written basis when substantive oral procedural rights are constitutionally mandated.

31. Consequently, it is submitted that Madam Justice Shore functioned in a wholly unsanctioned, ultra vires capacity as an unauthorized case management judge interventionist (the "Unauthorized CMJ Interventionist"). This profound procedural usurpation precipitated purported Orders that are definitive Irremediable Nullities. It was strictly mandated that the judicial participant remain rigidly confined to her statutorily designated jurisdictional locus. The unauthorized traversal into the jurisdictional office of a judge of the Divisional Court, absent the requisite statutory triggering mechanisms, was strictly prohibited and entirely devoid of legal efficacy.

THE LETHALITY OF UNAUTHORIZED SUMMARY PROCEDURES

32. In Pong, it was explicitly affirmed that a jurisdictional void cannot be remedied by the doctrine of finality. Substantive legal rights cannot be cavalierly circumvented through unauthorized summary procedures, and most assuredly not by unauthorized ad hoc conferencing procedures masquerading as formal judicial intervention. The assumption of sweeping case management powers without the requisite foundational triggering mechanisms constitutes a fatal rupture in the procedural continuum, substituting the unpredictable caprice of an individual for the structured predictability of the Civil Rules.

THE ERRONEOUS SUBMISSIONS BY THE ONTARIO LEGISLATURE ON BEHALF OF THE RESIDENTIAL TENANCY COMMISSION IN THE RESIDENTIAL TENANCIES ACT REFERENCE (THE YEARS OF 1979–1981)

THE MISAPPREHENSION OF THE CONSTITUTIONAL FRAMEWORK BY SAID ONTARIO LEGISLATURE

33. The submissions advanced between THE YEAR OF 1979 and THE YEAR OF 1981 by the administrative commission were profoundly misguided and fundamentally incompatible with the settled separation of judicial powers in the Canadian federation. This profound constitutional infirmity arose precisely because their reliance on isolated pre-Confederation jurisprudence entirely neglected, marginalized, and misconstrued the superseding constraints of section 96 of the Constitution Act, 1867.

THE RIGOROUS APPLICATION OF THE CORE JURISDICTION TEST

34. Given that both the Pong v. Quong litigation and the Reference Re Residential Tenancies Act, 1979, [THE YEAR OF 1981] 1 S.C.R. 714 (the "Reference RTA 1979") (see: BOA, Tab 118) constituted Ontario-centric adjudications entirely disconnected from probate issues, any analogical reference to the probate courts of the Maritimes was fundamentally irrelevant and logically flawed. The core jurisdiction test (the "Core Jurisdiction Test") explicitly articulated by the SCC requires a meticulous, three-pronged historical and functional evaluation into the powers exclusively exercised by superior courts at the precise time of Confederation. The tripartite matrix meticulously assesses historical exclusivity, modern functional application, and institutional setting, operating as an impregnable fortress against the illicit delegation or usurpation of core judicial authority by provincially appointed tribunals.

JURISDICTIONAL BOUNDARIES AND THE DISTINCTION BETWEEN QUA JUDGE AND PERSONA DESIGNATA

THE CENTRALITY OF SUBJECT-MATTER JURISDICTION

35. During the original summary proceedings in Pong, it was properly conceded by Justice Denton that the progression of the possessory matter was fundamentally contingent upon an explicit admission of non-payment of rent. This specific admission was an unyielding statutory prerequisite, not a mere evidentiary convenience. Jurisdiction was precisely the central issue in limine, as the judicial mandate afforded by the underlying statute was strictly confined to determining the singular issue of whether the landlord was immediately entitled to possession based solely on the quantum of rent arrears.

THE IMPOTENCE OF CONDITIONAL CONSENT

36. While an expansion of the adjudicative scope to encompass the broader equitable relationship and fiduciary disputes may have been practically desired by the litigants for the mitigation of duplicative proceedings, the consent provided by respondent's counsel was explicitly predicated upon the strict understanding that the entirety of the matter would be adjudicated by Justice Denton strictly within the jurisdictional confines of the overholding tenant provisions, thereby preserving the paramount right of subsequent, comprehensive appellate scrutiny.

THE STRICT DIVISION BETWEEN JUDICIAL AND DELEGATED FUNCTIONS

37. Ultimately, it was decisively concluded by the SCC that it was perfectly manifest that absolutely no jurisdiction was possessed by Justice Denton to decide collateral issues. Such secondary disputes could only be entertained perhaps in the distinct, extra-judicial capacity of persona designata or arbitrator. The distinction between acting qua judge and acting persona designata is critical: the former carries the full coercive weight of the judicial branch, shielded by immunities and integrated into the formalized appellate structure, while the latter is a highly constrained, delegated administrative function devoid of broader institutional authority. Jurisdiction cannot be fabricated by the convenience of the litigants.

APPELLATE CONFIRMATION IN QUONG V. PONG (THE YEAR OF 1925)

THE APPELLATE DECLARATION OF EXTRA-JURISDICTIONAL OVERREACH

38. When the matter subsequently proceeded to the Appellate Division in Quong v. Pong, [THE YEAR OF 1925] CanLII 11 (ON CA), [THE YEAR OF 1925] 2 D.L.R. 1192 (see: BOA, Tab 307), it was correctly observed by the appellate tribunal that a jurisdiction simply not possessed under the strictly construed statutory architecture had been improperly assumed by the lower court judge. Consequently, the adjudication of the substantive trust relationship was unequivocally declared Coram Non Judice.

THE DEPRIVATION OF APPELLATE RECOURSE AND PRESERVATION OF THE SLATE

39. The conditional consent tendered had been subjected to a strict condition precedent that proved legally impossible to fulfill: the preservation of an effective right of appeal. Thus, the respondent was improperly and unlawfully deprived of appellate recourse. It was astutely determined by the Appellate Division that binding equitable obligations could not be imposed by the initial summary proceeding. Following the commencement of a subsequent plenary civil action specifically designed to litigate the trust issues, the decision of Justice Mowat was appealed. This appeal was dismissed in its entirety by the Appellate Division, upholding the directive that the respondent was entirely entitled to proceed unencumbered by the prior, extra-jurisdictional determinations of Justice Denton. Those prior findings were appropriately recognized as lacking any binding legal efficacy regarding the collateral equitable issues, as they constituted Irremediable Nullities. The jurisprudential slate was thoroughly wiped clean.

DISTINGUISHING THE JUDGE FROM THE COURT: THE VOIDING OF UNAUTHORIZED ACTS

THE FORMALIZATION OF THE COERCIVE POWER OF THE STATE

40. The absolute paramountcy of an Order promulgated by a lawfully seized judge cannot be overstated, particularly when situated within the highly formalized procedural framework of the Civil Rules. The profound structural significance of this mechanism is highlighted by the comprehensive legislative amendments effectuated to Rule 59.02 through Rule 59.05 in THE YEAR OF 2020, and the substantive revisions to Rule 77 effectuated by O. Reg. 438/08 (the "THE YEAR OF 2008 Amendments").

THE LEGISLATIVE INTENT OF PROCEDURAL STRICTURES

41. These specific, highly intricate amendments to Rule 59 were consciously implemented by the Rules Committee to meticulously regulate the drafting, formal issuance, endorsement, and official entry of an Order. The specific legislative mischief they sought to cure was the pernicious ambiguity between informal oral pronouncements from the bench and finalized, enforceable legal mandates. This formalization reflects the unmistakable legislative intent that an Order is not a mere administrative notation; it is the ultimate crystallization of the coercive power of the State, exercised exclusively through a jurisdictionally competent judicial officer.

THE UNENFORCEABILITY OF JURISDICTIONAL NULLITIES

The formal entry of an Order is the precise moment it becomes legally executable. Absent the foundational, constitutional prerequisite of jurisdiction, any such purported Order is instantly stripped of its coercive force, divested of its legal character, and is inextricably reduced to an Irremediable Nullity. It cannot be enforced by civil sheriffs, it cannot ground contempt proceedings, and the litigants or third parties cannot be bound by it.

PROCEDURAL INTEGRITY AND THE ABSENCE OF ESTOPPEL

THE INDISPENSABLE FUNCTIONS OF JURISDICTIONAL ABSOLUTISM

43. Multiple indispensable, foundational functions are served by the strict, uncompromising application of the Coram Non Judice doctrine. Firstly, the supremacy of the rule of law is robustly upheld, averting the descent into administrative tyranny by ensuring power is exercised strictly within legislative circumscriptions. Secondly, substantive individual rights are protected by irrevocably shielding litigants from arbitrary Orders. Thirdly, systemic procedural integrity is maintained, ensuring that the allocation of judicial resources is orchestrated through predictable, statutory pathways. The preservation of this integrity is precisely why structural controversies of this nature must command the immediate, unwavering scrutiny of the President of the Divisional Court.

THE SINE QUA NON OF RES JUDICATA

44. The powerful, preclusive doctrines of res judicata and issue estoppel require, as an indispensable, inflexible precondition, that the prior decision was rendered by a tribunal of competent, lawful jurisdiction. A pronouncement devoid of jurisdiction fails to satisfy the most basic definitional requirement of a judicial act.

THE INCAPACITY OF DURESS TO INSTANTIATE JURISDICTION

45. Pong endures as a foundational authority establishing that jurisdictional competence is the absolute sine qua non for any valid judicial act capable of generating preclusive effects. Furthermore, an Irremediable Nullity is not transmuted into a binding adjudicative process by participation extracted under the severe duress of an unauthorized judicial directive. A litigant cannot be penalized simply because a communication originating from a judicial office was prudently responded to out of compelled respect for the institution. The chilling effect of an email bearing the formal indicia of judicial authority is profound; compliance with such a directive out of an abundance of caution cannot be retroactively weaponized to fabricate jurisdiction where none exists.

THE DOMESTIC APPLICATION OF JURISDICTIONAL PRECLUSION

46. This stringent principle has been explicitly affirmed across multiple jurisdictions, recognizing that an estoppel cannot be generated by an earlier judgment if the adjudicating body lacked jurisdiction in a domestic sense. To allow an Irremediable Nullity to ground an estoppel argument would be to permit an unauthorized judicial actor to definitively alter the legal rights of parties through a collateral mechanism, thereby severely undermining public confidence.

FIDUCIARY OBLIGATIONS AND THE DIVISION OF POWERS

THE INTERSECTION OF STATUTORY JURISDICTION AND EQUITABLE PRINCIPLES

47. A deep intersection between strict statutory jurisdiction and profound equitable principles is revealed by the highly nuanced reasoning behind the unanimous judgment in Pong, delivered orally by Chief Justice Anglin on February 24, THE YEAR OF 1927. It was ultimately determined by the SCC that a severe, actionable breach of good faith was constituted by the unilateral assignment transaction executed by the trustee. The Court's sophisticated reasoning was heavily fortified by the equitable principles articulated in the seminal English jurisprudence of Griffith v. Owen, [THE YEAR OF 1907] 1 Ch. 195 effectively applying the strict prophylactic rule against fiduciary self-dealing established in the landmark ruling of Keech v. Sandford, [THE YEAR OF 1726] EWHC Ch. J76.

THE EXCLUSIVE PURVIEW OF THE SUPERIOR COURTS AND THE IMPORTANT OF THE NATURE OF THE ACTION, APPLICATION (STATUTORY OR PRESCRIBED) AND HOW A JUDGE IS SITTING

48. No jurisdictional competence was possessed by Justice Denton, rigidly constrained by expedited summary procedures, to delve into such profound equitable waters even though he was a Section 96 Court Judge but in his capacity and sitting he was acting as a judge of a Statutory Application. The adjudication of complex trusts remains the exclusive, historic purview of a Section 96 Court wherein a Judge is sitting as such. Crucially, Madam Justice Shore was positioned upon significantly lesser footing, as she operated entirely without inherent jurisdiction within the confines of the statutory Divisional Court, and was certainly not operating as a persona designata.

THE REJECTION OF THE PERSONA DESIGNATA FALLACY

49. Furthermore, the delicate, constitutionally mandated balance of jurisdictional allocation was exhaustively examined in the Reference RTA 1979 (see: BOA, Tab 118). In that highly significant reference, the proposition that the power to order evictions had been historically conferred upon County Court judges acting merely as persona designata was erroneously advanced by the Ontario Legislature in an attempt to siphon powers to a tribunal. This legislative overreach was definitively rejected by the SCC, forcefully establishing that the jurisdiction was merely a modern modification of the traditional equitable jurisdiction of ejectment inherently exercised by Superior Courts. Consequently, judges acting under those contemporary provisions were acting qua judge in a fully judicial capacity.

THE EXPOSURE TO LIABILITY FOR UNAUTHORIZED COERCION

50. This principle is perfectly harmonious with the foundational declaration in Bradley, wherein it was affirmed by the SCC that every coercive act of the State must be explicitly supported by an unbroken chain of foundational jurisdiction. It was astutely noted by the Court that a formal plea of justification advanced by a constable acting under a purportedly valid warrant is fatally defective if it fails to affirmatively demonstrate that the issuing justice possessed the requisite jurisdiction. Just as a void warrant affords no protection to the executing constable, exposing the state to liability for intentional torts like trespass vi et armis, a void Order affords no legal shelter to those attempting to enforce its terms.

CONCLUSION: THE ABSOLUTE DISTINCTION BETWEEN VOIDABLE ACTS AND IRREMEDIABLE NULLITIES

THE UNYIELDING APPLICATION OF THE GOVERNING LATIN MAXIMS

51. The severe, legally profound distinction between a proceeding that is entirely Coram Non Judice and one wherein only specific, severable components are vitiated by extra-jurisdictional overreach is precisely delineated by jurisprudential evolution. The governing Latin maxim remains absolute, timeless, and unyielding: Factum A Judice, Quod Ad Officium Jure Non Pertinet, Ratum Non Est.

THE PROFOUND DICHOTOMY OF JUDICIAL CONDUCT

A profound, undeniable distinction exists between the historical actions of Justice Denton—who merely exceeded the collateral statutory scope while legitimately seized of the primary possessory application—and the actions of Madam Justice Shore in the present matter.

THE TEMPORAL DEMARCATION OF THE JURISDICTIONAL VOID

53. In the Statutory Application at bar, formally perfected by Mr. Kevin A. McLean (B.A., J.D., CIM) on December 16, THE YEAR OF 2024, the procedural interventions of the latter were wholly void ab initio from the precise temporal moment of the transmission of the Ibula Email on January 7, THE YEAR OF 2025. By acting without the requisite Assignment For Case Management BY ORDER or the strict fulfillment of the First Defence filing requirement, Madam Justice Shore acted entirely outside the inflexible boundaries of the Civil Rules, thereby abandoning the protective mantle of the judicial office for the purposes of that specific interaction. Furthermore, it is explicitly confirmed by the evidentiary record on December 1, THE YEAR OF 2025, that the requisite First Defence filing requirement was wholly absent. Subsequent institutional actions, culminating in the termination of Former Registrar of the Divisional Court Ms. Tashekah Gentles on December 3, THE YEAR OF 2025 (the precise date of the purported written hearing), underscore the profound structural disarray precipitated by this extra-jurisdictional overreach.

THE CATEGORICAL NULLIFICATION OF SUBSEQUENT DIRECTIVES

54. Consequently, any acts, convening, requiring or directing, and any subsequent and purported orders, case management directives, scheduling mandates, and procedural imperatives made, unnamed, unissued, unsigned, unendorsed, and/or unentered under that assumed, unauthorized mantle are nothing more than Irremediable Nullities. It is an enduring, self-evident truth of Canadian administrative law that substantive judicial authority cannot be materialized from a jurisdictional vacuum.

THE ULTIMATE MANDATE OF THE PRIMUS INTER PARES

55. Strict, unwavering, and hyper-vigilant adherence to the procedural mandates of the Civil Rules remains the paramount, indispensable safeguard against extra-jurisdictional overreach and the unauthorized exercise of the coercive power of the State. The extant proceeding (the "JRPA Proceeding") is profoundly characterized by a series of systemic failures. The unauthorized assumption of jurisdiction by Madam Justice Shore, acting as an invalid case management judge (the "Invalid CMJ"), constitutes a definitive and ontological example of an Irremediable Nullity. The urgency of excising these nullities is underscored by the severe, compounding prejudice suffered by the Applicant; as per the Applicant's MRI results in the Summer of THE YEAR OF 2025, his physical constitution continues to degenerate—a dire prognosis definitively predicted by Dr. Bohdan Lychasz, an internationally preeminent radiologist—and it is an incontrovertible medical certainty that this condition will only deteriorate further, rendering further administrative delays entirely prejudicial (see: Compendium For NOM #3-5; Tab 4; Exhibit "M"). Consequently, time remains of the absolute essence. The cast of characters complicit in these systemic failures are delineated and particularized at the Appendices (see: Appendix regarding Bayesian Variable Probability Model). It is precisely through the formal excision of these Irremediable Nullities from the adjudicative record that the ongoing institutional sanctity, structural legitimacy, and unquestionable constitutional authority of the appellate process are guaranteed by the President of the Divisional Court. In this regard, the jurisprudence emanating from Ruffo v. Conseil de la magistrature, [THE YEAR OF 1995] 4 S.C.R. 267 (Ruffo 1995) unequivocally affirms that the doctrine of Primus Inter Pares (the "Primus Inter Pares") transcends mere ceremonial title, operating instead as a substantive, structural designation. As the Primus Inter Pares, an inherent, non-delegable suite of responsibilities (the "13 Chief Justice Duties") is possessed by a Chief Justice, which must be actively exercised to rectify this jurisdictional usurpation:

a. Ultimate Jurisdiction: Definitive and final authority is exercised over all adjudicative and administrative functions, precluding the fragmentation of control among unassigned puisne judges;

b. Constitutional Trust Steward: The non-delegable responsibility is borne to act as the primary guardian of the constitutional trust, ensuring the tribunal operates strictly within its statutory confines;
c. Imperviously Influenced Mandate: The absolute requirement is maintained to remain impervious to external, collateral, or internal pressures, preserving the absolute neutrality of the institution;
d. d. Master of the Roster: Absolute and exclusive authority is wielded over the scheduling, assignment, and distribution of judicial resources, a power that cannot be usurped by any individual jurist;
e. Self-Assignment Power: The inherent authority is possessed to self-assign matters of profound institutional and constitutional significance, specifically to cure procedural chaos;
f. Administrative Steward: The statutory duty is executed to rigorously oversee clerical and registry functions pursuant to section 76 of the Courts of Justice Act, insulating registry staff from unauthorized directives;
g. g. Institutional Reputation Guardian: The uncompromising obligation is upheld to protect and preserve the Court's standing and integrity in the public eye against allegations of systemic dysfunction;
h. h. Efficiency Operation Duty: The overarching responsibility is maintained to ensure the seamless, lawful operation of all Court functions, actively intervening when proceedings are stalled by ultra vires actions;
i. i. Ethical Compliance Guarantee: The Chief Justice serves as the final internal arbiter of professional conduct within the tribunal, ensuring adherence to the strictures of judicial independence;
j. j. Complaint Laying Power: The intrinsic, affirmative authority is retained to initiate formal disciplinary complaints when egregious usurpations of jurisdiction manifest;
k. k. Puisne Judge Removal Power: The administrative authority is executed to effectively reassign or restrict colleagues during the pendency of ethical evaluations, preventing the perpetuation of harm;
l. l. Moral Barometer: The Chief Justice functions as the absolute ethical and integrity barometer for the institution, setting the incontrovertible standard for statutory adherence; and
m. m. Moral Authority: The power is utilized to impose judicial will and ethical rectitude upon other puisne judges through binding ethical directives, guaranteeing the uniform application of the Civil Rules.

PRIMARY ISSUES: DISPOSITIVE OF THE MISCONDUCT BY MADAM JUSTICE SHORE AND THE Executive Branch (COURT STAFF) AND MS. EVELYNE IBULA

ISSUE 1(A): CIVIL FRAUD BY MISREPRESENTATION OF JUDICIAL AUTHORITY AND POWER

A. Whether the unilateral assumption of case management jurisdiction, completely devoid of formal assignment or statutory mandate, constitutes a fraudulent misrepresentation of authority and power actionable under the Canadian law of civil fraud.

ANSWER 12: Yes.

Legal Analysis:

I. The foundational tenets of civil fraud and the tort of deceit in Canada, masterfully established by the Supreme Court in Bruno Appliance and Furniture, Inc. v. Hryniak, 2014 SCC 8, require a false representation of fact, knowledge of its falsity or severe recklessness as to its truth, inducement of the victim, and resulting, quantifiable loss. In the present context, the sua sponte assertion of case management power, functioning covertly as an unassigned shadow administrator, implicitly but unequivocally represented to the parties and the registry that lawful judicial authority, a formal roster assignment, and the jurisdictional status to issue binding legal directives were possessed. This representation of power was factually false, as no Rule 77 assignment had ever been perfected.

II. A seasoned judicial officer is irrebuttably presumed to know the strict procedural strictures of the Rules of Civil Procedure. Proceeding to exercise extraordinary, sweeping case management powers absent the foundational prerequisite of a filed First Defence constitutes, at absolute minimum, subjective and extreme recklessness as to the truth of the claimed authority. Furthermore, applying the appellate doctrine of fraud by omission as forcefully articulated by the Ontario Court of Appeal in Midland Resources Holding Limited v. Shtaif, 2017 ONCA 320, the failure to disclose the total lack of formal roster assignment—coupled with the intentional concealment of the role as the hidden judge in parallel criminal proceedings—rendered the assertion of authority a highly calculated, legally toxic, and fraudulent half-truth.

III. Much like a corporate agent who becomes strictly liable for breaching a warranty of authority by purporting to bind a principal without actual power, an equitable principle articulated in Levy v. Manley, [1975] 2 SCR 70, a judicial officer cannot lawfully bind a civil proceeding without the foundational roster assignment. By projecting an impenetrable illusion of authority, procedural compliance of the court registry was improperly induced, forcing a defensive posture, and resulting in severe prejudice, digital lockouts, the exhaustion of resources, and the deprivation of fundamental procedural fairness.

IV. It is anticipated that opposing counsel, or the tribunal engaging in self-scrutiny, might raise the jurisprudential defense that a misrepresentation of authority by a sitting judicial officer cannot logically or legally constitute actionable civil fraud, positing that the tort of deceit strictly requires commercial animus or that the procedural misstep was merely a benign administrative oversight rather than deliberate deception. This counter-argument fundamentally eviscerates the strict doctrinal threshold of Bruno Appliance. The tort of deceit does not strictly require a commercial profit motive; it merely requires an intent that the false representation be relied upon to the detriment of the victim. By projecting an impenetrable, unassigned illusion of authority, the judicial officer deliberately induced the procedural compliance of the registry and forced the Applicant into a defensive, reactive posture. The resulting digital lockouts, unrecoverable exhaustion of finite resources, and strategic delays unequivocally satisfy the formal element of resulting loss. Furthermore, characterizing the overt usurpation of case management as a mere "administrative oversight" defies logical credulity, given the explicit, mandatory statutory 5222 rohibition delineated in Rule 77.05(2). A sophisticated jurist cannot claim inadvertence when circumventing the very architectural rules they are sworn to uphold.

Conclusion:

V. This conduct violently transcends mere correctable jurisdictional error or standard coram non judice; it perfectly and disturbingly satisfies the strict doctrinal threshold for the fraudulent misrepresentation of status and authority. The ensuing orders, emails, and directives are the direct, poisoned fruits of this civil deceit. It is necessitated that intervention manifest at the highest supervisory level to summarily nullify these actions, reaffirming the bedrock principle that the intentional misrepresentation of power—whether executed by a rogue corporate agent or a judicial officer operating outside their mandate—vitiates all resulting legal acts.

ISSUE 1(A)(I): JURISDICTIONAL USURPATION, FACTUM A JUDICE, QUOD AD OFFICIUM JURE NON PERTINET, RATUM NON EST, CORAM NON JUDICE

A(I) Whether the unauthorized sua sponte convening of a "case management conference" by a Divisional Court judge in Madam Justice Shore, absent the consent of the Applicant for an assignment for case management (the "Assignment For Case Management"), the absence of a filing of a First Defence by any respondent (the "First Defence"), and formally made assignment to case management orders, constitutes an ultra vires act rendering the initial act by Madam Justice Shore through the Ibula email (the "Ibula Email") factum a judice, quod ad officium jure non pertinet, ratum non est, all subsequent acts also invalid (factum a judice, quod ad officium jure non pertinet, ratum non est), and conferences before coram non judice?

ANSWER 1: Yes.

Legal Analysis:

I. As the Divisional Court does NOT have any Inherent Jurisdiction and it is a statutory court only of provincial creation and pursuant to the stringent procedural architecture of Rule 77 of the Rules of Civil Procedure, RRO 1990, Reg 194, case management mechanisms are specifically and rigidly circumscribed. Such mechanisms serve not as a default posture the arbitrary discretion of the bench, but rather as a specialized exception triggered strictly by the satisfaction of precise statutory prerequisites in limine. Rule 77.05(2) dictates with absolute textual clarity that an assignment for case management may only legally manifest "at any time on or after the filing of the First Defence." This legislative guardrail is intentionally promulgated to prevent premature, inquisitorial judicial interference before issue joinder has formally crystallized the jurisdictional boundaries of the dispute. It is an unassailable factual matter established upon the judicial record that no respondent formally filed a notice of appearance (the "Notice Of Appearance"), constituting the First Defence in these proceedings, nor were responsive factums delivered within the statutorily prescribed, mandatory timelines.
II. The fundamental doctrine established by the Supreme Court of Canada in Pong v. Quong, [1927] SCR 271 remains that were a Judge in any capacity is without jurisdiction , he or she is Factum A Judice, Quod Ad Officium Jure Non Pertinet, Ratum Non Est and Coram Non Judice in relation to those aspects wherein he or she is without jurisdiction or has exceeded jurisdiction.
III. As per the Ontario Court of Appeal in König v. Hobza, 2015 ONCA 885, dictates that an adjudication undertaken absent the requisite jurisdictional authority is entirely devoid of judicial function. In Pong, it was held that where a statute prescribes specific conditions precedent for the assumption of jurisdiction, the failure to satisfy those conditions renders any subsequent adjudicative act void ab initio. Consequently, the intervention executed by the presiding judicial officer was effectuated coram non judice—before a tribunal lacking proper, roster-assigned jurisdiction. A judicial officer is fundamentally precluded from unilaterally bestowing jurisdiction upon themselves where the legislature has explicitly withheld such authority. Furthermore, the utilization of generalized pre-trial conferencing powers, such as those articulated under Rule 50, as a clandestine mechanism to assert substantive control is statutorily barred by the paramountcy clause of Rule 77.02(4), which explicitly mandates that Rule 77 prevails in the event of any procedural conflict. The usurpation of unassigned powers inherently prejudices the adjudicative process by subjecting the proceeding to an unpredictable, legislatively unmoored, and procedurally rogue framework.

IV. It was reasonably anticipated that adversarial actors, or potentially the Presiding Divisional Court President upon review, may have formally advance the counter-argument that a superior court judge, even when sitting strictly within the statutory confines of the Divisional Court, retains an implied, residual, or inherent authority to proactively govern the internal process of the court. This argument would inevitably postulate that the overarching interpretive mandate enshrined within Rule 1.04(1)—which dictates that the rules shall be liberally construed to secure the just, most expeditious, and least expensive determination of every civil proceeding—furnishes a presiding judicial officer with the requisite discretionary latitude to bypass stringent scheduling prerequisites in the pursuit of overarching administrative efficiency, thereby theoretically justifying a premature, sua sponte case management intervention. Opposing counsel might erroneously submit that the assumption of case management, even absent the foundational roster assignment or the triggering First Defence, constitutes a benign, proactive measure shielded by the general gap-filling nature of a superior court's inherent jurisdiction.

V. This proposition is fundamentally and fatally legally flawed. The invocation of administrative efficiency or liberal statutory construction cannot serve as a jurisprudential trojan horse utilized to unilaterally dismantle mandatory, substantive legislative guardrails. While implied powers undoubtedly exist to prevent an explicit abuse of process, the Supreme Court of Canada in Endean v. British Columbia, 2016 SCC 42, firmly established that implied or inherent powers absolutely cannot be utilized to actively contravene an explicit statutory precondition. As unequivocally affirmed in Baxter Student Housing Ltd. v. College Housing Co-operative Ltd., [1976] 2 SCR 475, and subsequently reinforced by the Ontario Court of Appeal in Cheong v. Ontario (Minister of Finance), 2004 CanLII 17750 (ON CA), the extraordinary power of inherent jurisdiction remains irrevocably subordinate to lex scripta. Section 146 of the Courts of Justice Act, RSO 1990, c C.43, which permits the exercise of jurisdiction consistent with the due administration of justice in the precise absence of an express provision, is rendered entirely inapplicable where the legislature has explicitly and unambiguously spoken. Rule 77.05(2) does not contain a procedural gap; it contains an absolute, temporal prohibition against case management prior to the filing of the First Defence.

VI. To accept the counter-argument that a judicial officer may unilaterally dispense with this explicit statutory precondition would necessitate the devastating, system-destroying conclusion that the Rules of Civil Procedure are mere aspirational guidelines, subject to arbitrary suspension at the unassigned whim of any individual adjudicator. Such an interpretation fundamentally annihilates procedural certainty, forcing litigants into defensive postures within unlawfully convened conferences before issue joinder has even materialized. The strict procedural trigger of a filed First Defence is not a mere administrative suggestion; it is a substantive boundary deliberately engineered to protect adversarial fairness. To conflate the general power to control court process with the specific, extraordinary statutory apparatus of Rule 77 case management constitutes an impermissible circumvention of the lex scripta. Consequently, the cloak of administrative efficiency cannot legally sanitize an intervention that was executed completely outside the legislative grant of power, rendering the resultant acta categorically void ab initio.

Conclusion:

VII. The actions undertaken in assuming case management authority, absent the requisite statutory triggers and a formal, recorded assignment by the Regional Senior Judge, are governed by the strict maxim factum a judice, quod ad officium jure non pertinet, ratum non est (an act of a judge which does not pertain to their lawful office is of no legal force). The resulting orders, endorsements, and directives are not mere curable procedural irregularities under Rule 2.01; they are categorical Irremediable Nullities, void ab initio, that must be unconditionally expunged from the judicial record to preserve the structural integrity of the Courts of Justice Act.

ISSUE 2: FRAUD AND CATEGORICAL NULLITIES BY THE RESPONDENT INSURANCE COMPANIES

B. Whether the established dolus malus effectuated by the respondent insurance companies—comprising physical theft, identity theft, fraudulent personation, and the systematic usurpation of personal data—vitiates the 5224 adjudicative process and necessitates the equitable restoration of the status quo ante pursuant to Rule 59.06(2)(a).

ANSWER 2: Yes.

Legal Analysis:

I. The jurisprudential bedrock governing fraudulent conduct in adjudicative settings is articulated in Lord Denning's seminal statement of law in Lazarus Estates Ltd. v. Beasley, [1956] 1 QB 702 at 712, adopted by the Supreme Court of Canada in Landreville v. Boucherville (Town of), [1978] 2 SCR 801: "Fraud unravels everything" (fraus omnia corrumpit). A court of equity is fundamentally prohibited from permitting its sacred processes to be utilized as a sanitized instrument to perfect an underlying fraud.

II. Comprehensive investigations reveal a calculated and interconnected series of fraudulent acta following an initial theft, directly connected to individuals and entities named herein, demanding immediate regulatory scrutiny. As explicitly articulated within the applicant's factum for a motion in writing dated November 18, THE YEAR OF 2025 (the "Factum For NOM #3"), the documented modus operandi of the respondent entities—specifically Security National Insurance Company (the "SNIC"), TD General Insurance Company (the "TDGIC"), and TD Home and Auto Insurance Company (the "TDHA")—has precipitated egregious procedural and substantive deficiencies. This encompasses fatal irregularities in formal process and service, alongside the unlawful deflection of a statutory accident benefits schedule claim (the "SABS Claim"). This deliberate deflection and subsequent administrative obfuscation precipitated the unauthorized, non-consensual transfer and weaponization of sensitive personal information (the "PII") and personal health information (the "PHI"). Such actions stand in profound violation of the core tenets of procedural fairness and the rigorous administrative standards articulated in Canada (Minister of Citizenship and Immigration) v. Vavilov, 2019 SCC 65, and Dunsmuir v. New Brunswick, 2008 SCC 9, necessitating the invocation of the inherent supervisory jurisdiction of the court to rigorously scrutinize the administrative and quasi-judicial acta emanating from the antecedent proceedings. Consequently, declaratory, interim, and final injunctive relief was formally solicited to arrest this overarching malfeasance.

III. On October 25, THE YEAR OF 2024, a highly targeted theft (the "TDI Karat Theft") was perpetrated at the Centre for Addiction and Mental Health (the "CAMH"). Unredacted video surveillance images (October 25, THE YEAR OF 2024, 1:11:53 to 1:12:39 P.M. EDT) unequivocally depict a male individual, strikingly similar in appearance to Mr. David Karat (as verified via a professional LinkedIn profile), meticulously inspecting luggage and stealing a backpack (the "McLean Backpack") containing critical identification and legal materials. This physical deprivation falls squarely under Section 322 of the Criminal Code, RSC 1985, c C-46, as property was fraudulently taken without colour of right with the intent to deprive. Furthermore, this constitutes a fraud event (the "Fraud Event") as defined by Section 1(1)(e) of the Fraud Reporting Service Rule (the "FSRA Rule"), triggering mandatory regulatory reporting obligations for the TDIA Group regarding fraudulent activity committed by internal employees—obligations which were systematically ignored to facilitate an ongoing cover-up.

IV. Subsequently, on October 28, THE YEAR OF 2024, Mr. Andrew Papadimitropoulos engaged in fraudulent impersonation by entering into a borrowing agreement (the "TPL Fraud Borrowing Agreement") with the Toronto Public Library at the Fort York branch (the "Fort York Branch"), utilizing the stolen identification to extract equipment and literature. This conduct strictly satisfies Section 402.2 of the Criminal Code (Identity Theft) and Section 403 (Identity Fraud/Personation), and concurrently constitutes an unfair or deceptive act or practice under the Unfair or Deceptive Act or Practice Rule (the "UDAP Rule"). By November 8, THE YEAR OF 2024, fraudulent identity usage persisted to reserve Aga Khan Museum passes, precisely aligning with a period wherein Mr. Karat was officially reported absent from his office via automated correspondence.

V. The timeline of these offenses exhibits a profound and undeniable correlation with the progression of the present legal proceedings, evidencing a crystallized, malicious intent to obstruct justice pursuant to Section 139 of the Criminal Code. Notice of intent to appeal the administrative decisions was formally provided between October 16 and October 24, THE YEAR OF 2024; the TDI Karat Theft materialized immediately thereafter on October 25, THE YEAR OF 2024. Most egregiously, exactly two hours following the formal service and filing of a certificate of perfection on December 13, THE YEAR OF 2024, the stolen driver's license was utilized at the 5225 TPL Reference Library to procure a replacement card, wherein the associated telephone contact was inexplicably altered to that of a CBC investigative journalist, Mrs. Valerie Oulette. This systematic campaign persisted through January THE YEAR OF 2025, constituting general fraud under Section 380 of the Criminal Code and demonstrating a sophisticated, multi-stage criminal enterprise engineered to compromise the integrity of the judicial review.

VI. The orchestration of these events is profoundly juxtaposed against a formalized feedback submission (the "TDI Feedback Letter") authored by Mr. Papadimitropoulos on October 15, THE YEAR OF 2024, purportedly on behalf of the TDIA Group. Therein, representations were promulgated advocating for data security and proactively requesting limited liability protections for cybersecurity breaches. This posture is fundamentally irreconcilable with the subsequent, unmitigated breach of the Personal Information Protection and Electronic Documents Act, SC 2000, c 5 (the "PIPEDA") and the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act, RSO 1990, c F.31 (the "FIPPA") perpetrated directly by the author and his associates.

VII. It is reasonably anticipated that opposing counsel shall attempt to summarily dismiss these profound allegations by characterizing them as scandalous, vexatious, or fatally deficient due to the precise absence of formalized criminal convictions against the named corporate agents. Such a counter-argument fundamentally misapprehends the distinct evidentiary mechanics of civil fraud. As endorsed by the Supreme Court of Canada in Aquino v. Bondfield Construction Co., 2024 SCC 31, the civil trier of fact is fully empowered, and indeed explicitly required, to securely draw robust inferences of fraudulent intent from a mosaic of suspicious circumstances and objective badges of fraud. The civil standard of proof operates strictly upon a balance of probabilities, wholly independent of the rigorous 'beyond a reasonable doubt' threshold necessitated in criminal proceedings (F.H. v. McDougall, 2008 SCC 53). The uncontradicted documentary matrix provided—comprising unredacted, timestamped CCTV footage, profound transactional anomalies, and meticulously logged digital access records—establishes an overwhelming, objective prima facie case of civil deceit that irrevocably shifts the evidentiary burden onto the respondents. General denials or the invocation of standard procedural technicalities are legally insufficient to rebut this crystallized demonstration of systemic dolus malus.

Conclusion:

VIII. The actions executed by the agents of the respondent insurance companies transcend mere adversarial friction; they constitute a fully actualized, multi-staged criminal enterprise encompassing targeted theft, identity usurpation, privacy breaches, and general fraud. The presence of this pervasive dolus malus creates an institutional taint rendering the proceeding, and the underlying administrative decisions, Irremediable Nullities. It is necessitated that the inherent jurisdiction under Rule 59.06(2)(a) be utilized to strike the defenses in limine and equitably restore the status quo ante, thereby protecting the sanctity of the court's processes.

ISSUE 3: BRIBERY AS A MECHANISM OF STRUCTURAL MALICE

C. Whether anomalous real property transactions, executed contemporaneously with the aforementioned theft and involving employees of the institution where the theft occurred, establish an objective indicium of bribery, further tainting the adjudicative framework.

ANSWER 3: Yes.

Legal Analysis for Issue #3: Bribery in the context of the TDI Karat Theft, with aiding and abetting from the Landlord of the Applicant, whose then legal counsel operates in the same work office as Ms. Ibula, and TD Bank (FIN 004), not the Principal of Mr. Karat (see: amendments to attendant federal Bank Act in 2015 providing the secret laundered commission in multiple forms to multiple properties involving agents of the Respondent Insurance Companies

I. In strict accordance with the fundamental equitable doctrine articulated in Lazarus Estates Ltd. v. Beasley, [1956] 1 QB 702, bribery forms a specialized and abhorrent category of causes of nullity which irrevocably unravels all transactions, contracts, and judgments touched by its corruption. Due to the inherently clandestine nature of illicit remuneration, direct documentary evidence of bribery is exceedingly rare; consequently, courts of equity are empowered to infer corrupt consideration from an aggregate of highly suspicious, circumstantial badges of fraud. The evidentiary record exhibits highly suspicious, anomalous real property conveyances effectuated in direct chronological proximity to the TDI Karat Theft, generating a strong, objective inference of illicit financial arrangements designed to subvert fiduciary obligations.

II. On November 7, THE YEAR OF 2024, Mr. Karat and his spouse, Ms. Julia Dunk, executed an agreement to acquire luxury real property (the "Fleetwood Drive Home") valued at $950,000, proceeding without concurrently listing their primary residence (the "Former Karat Dunk Residence") to finance the acquisition. Following the formal filing of the judicial review procedure act application (the "JRPA") on November 15, THE YEAR OF 2024, the Former Karat Dunk Residence was abruptly listed and subsequently sold to Ms. Dorothy During-Gibbs, employed by CAMH as a social worker and so associated with the TIDES program and Mr. Michael Gibbs. It is of paramount significance that these purchasers are individuals reportedly employed at CAMH, the precise locus of the initial physical theft, alongside a fractional tenant-in-common interest afforded to Mr. Peter Gibbs.

III. The execution of these real estate conveyances cannot be viewed in a vacuum; they manifest as a direct extension of the severe allegations of malfeasance delineated in the Factum For NOM #3, which highlighted fatal irregularities in formal process and the orchestration of ultra vires administrative acts. The facilitation of a high-value real estate transaction—effectively transferring wealth and property to employees of the very institution where an unmitigated, targeted theft of critical litigation materials and PII was perpetrated by the vendor—raises profound, inescapable concerns. Such an alignment of financial benefit strongly implies the provision of illicit consideration. This tight, indisputable nexus of specific actors, a shared institutional geography, and perfectly synchronized timing strongly suggests potential undisclosed arrangements, a quid pro quo, or a sophisticated bribe intended to secure unauthorized physical access, subsequent silence, or ongoing complicity in the spoliation of evidence.

IV. When a transaction is so thoroughly enmeshed with actors tied to a predicate criminal offense, a rebuttable presumption of corrupt intent arises. The burden is necessarily shifted to the respondents to demonstrate the absolute proprietary legitimacy of these overlapping transactions, a burden that cannot be satisfied through mere general denials.

Conclusion for Issue #3

V. The synchronized disposition of real property to actors embedded deeply within the locus of the predicate offense is a classic, objective hallmark of illicit financial concealment and bribery. The introduction of such corruptive mechanisms into the factual matrix further solidifies the unassailable conclusion that the respondents have engaged the judicial system with fundamentally unclean hands, transforming standard civil litigation into a conduit for illicit compensation and rendering their continued participation an Irremediable Nullity.

ISSUE 4: EXTORTION AND THE ORCHESTRATION OF CIVIL DEATH

D. Whether the sustained, multi-front campaign of technological interception, physical lockouts utilizing fabricated warrants, and the strategic infliction of psychological terror through literary veiled threats ascends to the level of civil extortion, rendering a fair hearing factually impossible.

ANSWER 4: Yes.

Legal Analysis:

I. Extortionate conduct, fundamentally designed to induce compliance through fear, systemic deprivation, or the malicious weaponization of state apparatuses against an opposing litigant, is an abhorrent abuse of process that shatters the foundational integrity of the judicial system. As recognized by the Supreme Court of Canada in R. v. Davis, [1999] 3 SCR 759, extortion requires the use of threats, accusations, or menaces to induce another person to do or cause to be done anything. In the context of civil litigation, extortion is frequently effectuated not through overt physical violence, but through the asphyxiation of resources, the destruction of digital infrastructure, and the deployment of fabricated authority to force an unjust settlement or abandonment of claims. The threshold for extortion rests upon the "attempt" to destroy the will of the victim, rather than the ultimate success of the endeavour.

II. The systemic and calculated nature of this extortion is inextricably linked to the defensive procedural maneuvering that necessitated the filing of a formal notice of motion on November 17, THE YEAR OF 2025 (the "NOM #3"). The NOM #3 explicitly and forcefully sought peremptory judicial assignment orders pursuant to section 18(2) of the Courts of Justice Act, RSO 1990, c C.43. This statutory mechanism was invoked to preclude further participation by hopelessly compromised judicial officers, alongside demanding the absolute preclusion of improperly engaged counsel, specifically identifying TD Insurance Staff Legal. As thoroughly delineated in the Factum For NOM #3, the respondents have actively weaponized assignments to case management that were patently ultra vires, utilizing these compromised, shadow procedural frameworks to deepen the physical and financial deprivation of the Applicant, forcing them to litigate endlessly over jurisdictional nullities rather than the substantive merits of the overarching fraud.

III. The record firmly establishes that a malicious compilation of fabricated intelligence (the "False Information Package") was meticulously orchestrated by the respondents and subsequently weaponized to secure an undisclosed, unrecorded criminal warrant. This fraudulent instrument was seamlessly deployed to execute an unlawful, extra-judicial residential lockout, effectuating absolute physical displacement and the sequestration of further litigation materials. This civil infrastructure of malice is fundamentally intertwined with documented professional misconduct and criminal culpability within the local constabulary, evidenced by overlapping disciplinary proceedings involving Sergeant Robert Black of the 14 Division (regarding insubordination and discreditable conduct, File Numbers 1/2026 and 48/2024), alongside the documented conversion of stolen property by Officer Derek McCormick.

IX. The above could only take place by the theft of Mr. Karat, the self-prophesised "ADR" [sic], and underling of the Epstein Cole LLP Client:

X. The above theft was discovered by the Applicant with the miraculous and divine intervention (distinct from the Madam Justice Shore unauthorized voyeuristic interloping style intervention as an Unauthorized CMJ Interloper) on MAY 4, 2025.

XI. Beyond the physical and state-sponsored incursions, the extortionate enterprise is unequivocally evidenced by the highly sophisticated, psychological weaponization of the fraudulent library borrowings effectuated utilizing the stolen identification. The collective thematic undercurrent interwoven strictly through the titles of the procured volumes forms a manifest rhetorical instrumentality, purposefully engineered to elicit palpable disquietude, terror, and apprehension within the Applicant. Given the status of the client of Epstein Cole LLP as the SABS Manager for the TDIA Group, and their direct proximity to the judiciary via the agency of said law firm, these specific selections transcend the realm of mere coincidence and function as highly calibrated, specific admonitions regarding the capacity of the Respondent Insurance Companies to manipulate both the administrative and judicial landscapes. The literary selections constitute a curated psychological assault:

a. Camino Ghosts (Grisham) (see: Compendium For NOM #3-5, Tab 2, page 81):

   i. A seminal judicial thriller delineating narratives centered upon corporate avarice and the methodical surveillance of a protagonist endeavoring to unearth systemic fraud. The acquisition of this volume on November 11, THE YEAR OF 2024, constituted a vatic, prophetic yet ominous signal (the "Vatic Signal") of predictive judicial capture (the "Predictive Judicial Capture"). By means of this veiled threat, it was communicated that the Undisclosed Judge would preside over the JRPA Proceeding—a fact preordained approximately two months prior to formal disclosure. The novel illustrates coordinated institutional fraud (the "Institutional Fraud") wherein official documents are utilized to supersede reality, mirroring the respondents' strategy. The narrative involves abandoned land filings (the "Abandoned Land Filings") facilitated by corrupt state officials, directly paralleling the respondents' utilization of the Applicant's nomenclature to execute the library agreement, thereby creating a fraudulent misrepresentation (the "Fraudulent Misrepresentation") to justify a takeover of the record. The novel further depicts the suppression of surveys (the "Suppression Of Surveys") to validate deceptive statements, mirroring the clouding of a title (the "Clouding Of A Title") and the nurse forgery (the "Nurse Forgery") discovered within the SABS system in April THE YEAR OF 2023. Crucially, the novel features a paper blizzard (the "Paper Blizzard")—a barrage of boilerplate intimidation (the "Boilerplate Intimidation"), including Rule 11 sanctions, abuse of process threats, intrusive discovery requests, and summary judgment motions designed to drain time, exhaust resources, and induce terror. This is a direct parallel to the "veiled threats" delivered via unauthorized borrowings, aiming to ensure the total delegitimization of the medical reality of the Applicant (the "Medical Gaslighting").

b. The Guest Book (Blake):
    i. Exploring entrenched generational privilege and antecedent betrayals, this selection constitutes a calculated insinuation regarding the vulnerability of the Applicant to the institutional weight of the respondents. It strictly implies the Applicant is an "unwelcome guest" within the halls of justice, wherein the Undisclosed Judge—as a former partner of Epstein Cole LLP—represents the exclusionary "host". The focus upon ancestral fraud (the "Ancestral Fraud") mirrors the attempt to construct a false medical history to justify bad faith denials.

c. Yellowface (Kuang):
    i. Focusing upon professional corruption and the cynical maxim mala publicitas est etiam bonum (even bad publicity is good), this selection operates as an explicit admission that the corporate entities consider themselves ultra vires of ethical reproach. The administrative tribunals are viewed merely as a rat ship (the "Rat Ship") meticulously designed to sink legitimate claims through bureaucratic attrition, wherein the reputation of the Applicant is deemed acceptable collateral damage.

d. Sooley (Grisham):
    i. Tracing a sudden, tragic fall, this volume operates as a harrowing rhetorical prophecy of ruin, warning that the future of the Applicant can be systematically dismantled. It emphasizes systemic vulnerability (the "Systemic Vulnerability"), suggesting statutory benefits are revokable privileges. The sudden climax of ruin (the "Climax Of Ruin") serves as a direct menace concerning the capacity for orchestration of total destruction, achieving a permanent state of adjudicative silencing (the "Adjudicative Silencing").

e. Boys from Biloxi (Grisham):
    i. Detailing a criminal syndicate operating within a "wide-open" city, this illustrates the deployment of systemic infrastructure (the "Systemic Infrastructure") to maintain power through a protected infrastructure (the "Protected Infrastructure") of bribery and a protection racket (the "Protection Racket") of extortion. It perfectly mirrors the deception of legitimacy (the "Deception Of Legitimacy"), wherein the veneer of a legitimate administrative process is weaponized to mask the underlying fraud, executing the "art of the message" via intermediaries to foster constant paranoia.

f. Holly (King) & Diva:
    i. Holly centers upon atrocities concealed behind a harmless, "polite" facade, serving as an admonition that the corporate exterior masks a ruthless agenda capable of unspeakable harm. Diva thematizes betrayal, weaponizing the personal history of the Applicant as an instrument of duress.

g. That Night in the Library:
    i. Depicting individuals trapped post-factum culminating in homicide, this constitutes an overt depiction of metaphorical ensnarement (the "Metaphorical Ensnarement") within the TPL. It signifies a state of perpetual adjudicative siege (the "Adjudicative Siege"), wherein sanctuary is ruthlessly denied.

XII. For further corroborative evidence of the same, please see:

XIII. The inception of this overarching extortionate enterprise reached a definitive zenith on the 13th day of December, THE YEAR OF 2024. On this exact date, the malefactor altered the primary telephone number associated with the fraudulently procured library card to that of Ms. Valerie Oulette, an investigative journalist. This highly sophisticated maneuver operated as a veiled threat signifying that the SABS Manager possessed the reach to manipulate and isolate the Applicant's public and professional identity, effectively executing a functional closure of the courts (the "Functional Closure") and imposing a state of cyber-exile (the "Cyber-Exile").

XIV. The conduct of the Respondent Insurance Companies—characterized by literal threats, the suppression of evidence, the fabrication of warrants, and systematic psychological intimidation—is fully commensurate with the criminal offences of extortion and obstruction of justice on a prima facie basis. These intentional torts effectively vitiate the legal validity of the participation of the Respondent Insurance Companies in this litigation. As established by the Supreme Court of Canada in R. v. Wijesinha, [1995] 3 SCR 422 (see: BOA, Tab 70, Page 120, Paragraph 5) (the "Wijesinha"), a party that engages in extortionate conduct or seeks to obstruct the search of the Court for the truth cannot be deemed to be participating in good faith. In Wijesinha, the Court affirmed that obstructing justice strikes at the very heart of the adversarial system, and any attempt to subvert the truth via deceptive means must be met with the most rigorous judicial censure.

XV. Applying Wijesinha to the present facts, the systematic suppression of "Karat-related" evidence and the utilization of fictitious nomenclature by the Respondent Insurance Companies constitute an active, severe interference with the curial purity (the "Curial Purity") that forms the strict foundation of the adversarial model. Such conduct violently transforms the solemn search for truth into a theatre of coercion, wherein the Rule of Law is usurped by the rule of force and psychological terror. Their presence in the litigation constitutes a profound abus de droit, and the Court is mandated to protect the integrity of its proceedings by nullifying any steps taken by these tainted parties. To permit such actors to continue their participation would erroneously signal that the Superior Court can be seamlessly manipulated by those who disregard the criminal law, thereby bringing the administration of justice into profound disrepute. This necessitates a moral disqualification (the "Moral Disqualification") as a direct consequence of prioritizing extortion over lawful adjudication. Any further engagement by the Court with parties who have functionally abdicated the Rules of Civil Procedure in favor of extortionate tactics would represent a fatal compromise of the Rule of Law, unconditionally requiring the President of the Divisional Court to issue a total expulsion (the "Total Expulsion") of the Respondent Insurance Companies from the curial record. The absolute integrity of the judiciary depends upon the unequivocal exclusion of those who seek to subvert it through menaces.

Conclusion:

XVI. Participation in litigation through the orchestration of physical extortion, severe technological sabotage, psychological literary terror, and the active, systemic obstruction of justice fundamentally results in the absolute forfeiture of any standing in equity. The presence of this pervasive dolus malus creates a structural, institutional taint incapable of rehabilitation through standard cost awards or procedural reprimands, necessitating the immediate imposition of the Total Expulsion and the striking of the respondents' defenses entirely for an egregious abuse of process pursuant to Rule 59.06(2)(a).

ISSUE 5: FRAUD BY NON-DISCLOSURE AND ACTUAL BIAS

E. Whether the failure to disclose active involvement as the "hidden or concealed judge" in an overlapping, undisclosed criminal proceeding creates a fatal taint of fraud by non-disclosure and a reasonable apprehension of bias that irrevocably fractures the neutrality of the proceedings.

ANSWER 5: Yes.

Legal Analysis

I. The foundational rule against bias (nemo judex in causa sua) demands that the scales of justice remain procedurally balanced, structurally uncompromised, and manifestly seen to be impartial by the public. The objective threshold standard, elucidated in Committee for Justice and Liberty v. National Energy Board, [1978] 1 SCR 369, holds that the existence of a closed mind, or the reasonable apprehension thereof by an informed, right-minded person viewing the matter realistically and practically, constitutes an Irremediable Nullity that strikes at the heart of the administration of justice.

II. In the present matter, the apprehension of bias does not stem merely from an antecedent professional affiliation, but from a profound and structural ethics vacuum (the "Ethics Vacuum") orchestrated actively from the bench. It is established that the presiding judicial officer operated as the concealed adjudicator in a parallel, undisclosed criminal proceeding directly intersecting with the factual matrix, the overlapping police misconduct, and the 5245 corporate parties of this specific civil dispute. The calculated omission of this highly material fact prior to the unilateral assumption of case management jurisdiction is absolutely fatal to adjudicative authority.

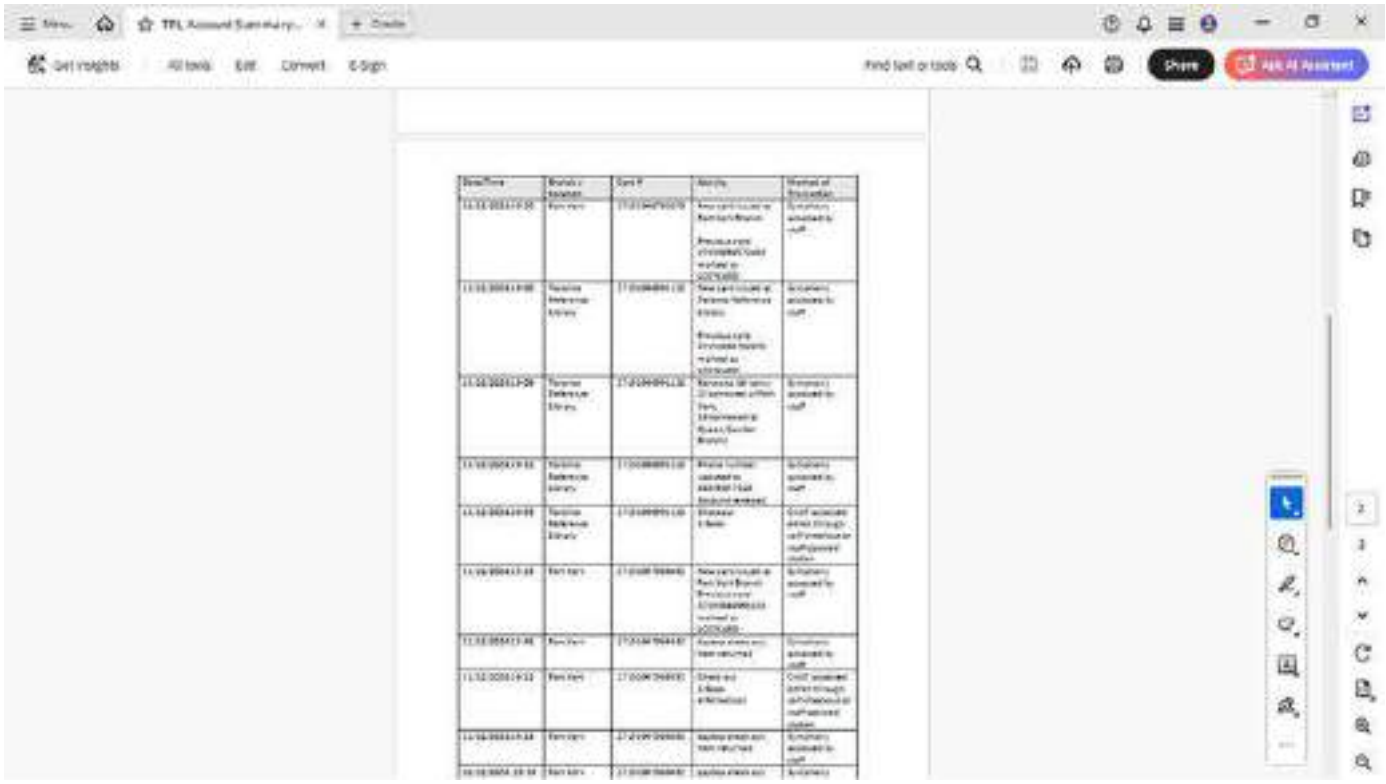
III. As established in the jurisprudence surrounding judicial disqualification, most notably demonstrated in Samra , strident comments or overtly hostile judicial conduct can definitively disqualify a judge by creating an unassailable reasonable apprehension of bias. In Samra, the appellate court reinforced that justice must not only be done but must manifestly and undoubtedly be seen to be done. The legal corollary to Samra is equally potent: the deliberate concealment of a material conflict—such as presiding covertly over intersecting criminal matters without providing full, frank, and timely disclosure—is functionally identical in its destructive legal effect to strident disqualifying conduct. Such concealment constitutes fraud by non-disclosure. Silence, where a strict fiduciary and ethical duty to disclose exists, operates equivalently to active, fraudulent misrepresentation, completely eroding the core constitutional right to an independent, unbiased, and transparent tribunal.

Conclusion:

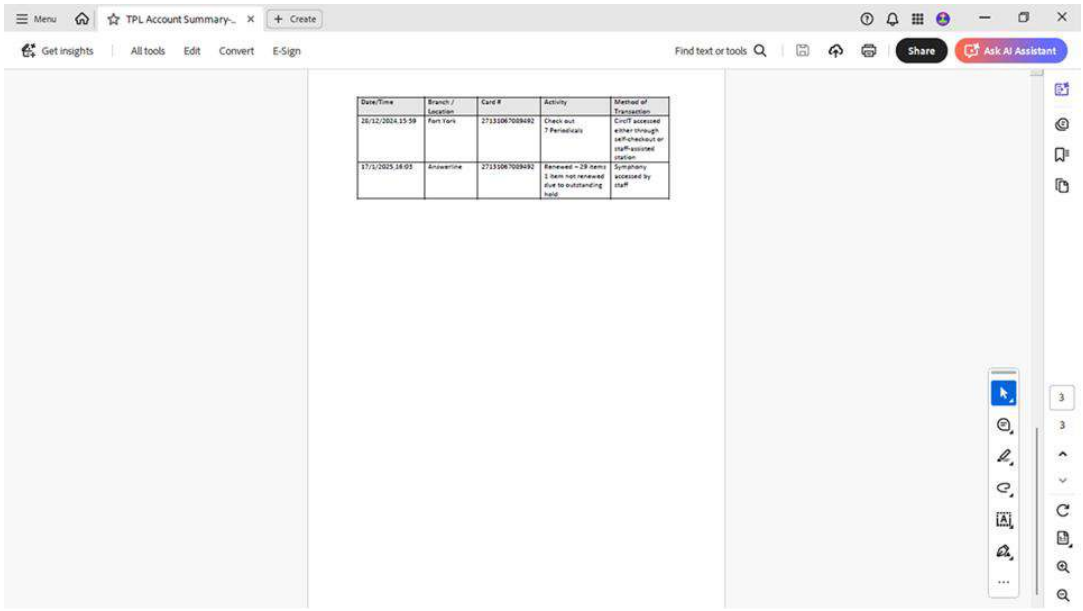
IV. The failure to transparently disclose the role as the concealed judge in deeply related criminal proceedings is a categorical breach of adjudicative neutrality and the Ethical Principles for Judges. This fraud by non-disclosure mirrors and comfortably meets the disqualifying threshold of strident judicial conduct articulated in Samra. All steps, directions, and orders issuing from this deeply tainted, conflicted jurisdiction are fundamentally vitiated, devoid of legitimate judicial authority, and must be declared Irremediable Nullities to protect the reputational integrity of the court.

ISSUE 6: MANDAMUS, CONSTRUCTIVE DENIAL OF ACCESS TO JUSTICE, AND THE MINISTERIAL DUTIES OF THE REGISTRAR

F. Whether the administrative embargo, specifically the 403 forbidden error code (the "403 Forbidden Error Code") and the refusal by the Divisional Court Registrar to process perfected filings, constitutes an unlawful interference with the constitutional right of access to justice, remediable by the prerogative writ of mandamus.



ANSWER 6: Yes.



Legal Analysis:

I. The administrative functions of the provincial registrar and registry staff under the Courts of Justice Act, RSO 1990, c C.43, are strictly ministerial in nature. Unlike the Registrar of the Supreme Court of Canada, provincial registrars completely lack quasi-judicial discretion to unilaterally screen, assess the substantive merits of, or reject pleadings that meet the basic, formal formatting criteria, a principle affirmed in Sydel v. Canada, 2013 FC 1116. Upon the satisfaction of formal filing requirements, administrative functionaries serve merely as ministerial conduits, duty-bound under the rules to process the documents and advance the matter, as historically established in Steiner v. Canada, [1982] 2 FC 231.

II. The uncontradicted evidentiary record indicates that a certificate of perfection was successfully filed on December 13, THE YEAR OF 2024. Despite the fulfillment of this paramount statutory requirement, the mandatory duty to place the matter on a listing for hearing, as commanded by Rule 68.05, was perversely neglected. Compounding this administrative paralysis, an unprecedented, targeted digital lockout via a 403 Forbidden Error Code on the Ontario Courts Public Portal was effectuated, aggressively denying access to the required document sharing platforms.

III. Although Mr. Papadimitropoulos (Epstein Cole LLP Client) was not on the email thread when the Applicant filed and confirmed the filing and payment of the "Certificate Of Perfection", 90 minutes thereafter, the Epstein Cole LLP Client engaged in very troubling and frightening fraud with the TPL Reference Library (see: supra):

IV. In Ontario (Attorney General) v. $25,610 in Canadian Currency, 2017 ONCA 251 at para 1 (the "Canadian Currency"), the Court of Appeal for Ontario emphatically articulated that the preservation of a litigant's fundamental entitlement to access public courts for the resolution of civil disputes serves as an indispensable cornerstone of the constitutional architecture of the federation. The Court explicitly stated that access to justice (the "Access To Justice") is not a hollow, aspirational slogan, but rather a rigid, functional requirement of the rule of law (the "Rule Of Law"). It was concluded that without the unfettered ability to file proceedings and secure one's day in court, the substantive legal rights of citizens are rendered entirely illusory, and the essential constitutional role of the judiciary as a robust check on executive power is effectively neutralized.

V. This bedrock principle of accessibility was previously fortified by the Supreme Court of Canada in Trial Lawyers Association of British Columbia v. British Columbia (Attorney General), 2014 SCC 59 (the "TLABC 2014"). The Supreme Court established unequivocally that any procedural, financial, or technological measure erecting an arbitrary barrier to the Superior Court constitutes a direct, unconstitutional violation of the Rule Of Law. The TLABC 2014 framework was subsequently reaffirmed and expansively applied within the jurisdiction of Alberta in Chisan v. Fielding, 2017 ABQB 233 (see: book of authorities (the "BOA"), Tab 140) (the "Chisan"). In Chisan, the Court specifically operationalized the TLABC 2014 principles to guarantee that filing fees or administrative procedural barriers do not surreptitiously "price out" or "block out" meritorious litigants from accessing the Superior Courts, which are constitutionally mandated to serve as the ultimate arbiters of legality. The Chisan decision definitively highlights that any state-imposed hurdle—whether it manifests as an exorbitant financial tariff or, as in the present circumstances, a deliberately orchestrated technical blockade—that prevents a citizen from bringing a matter before a Section 96 court must be subjected to the most rigorous, strict constitutional scrutiny (the "Strict Constitutional Scrutiny").

VI. A prospective counter-argument may be formally mounted by opposing counsel, or scrutinized by the Presiding President, asserting that the registry apparatus was merely executing the overarching administrative directives of a presiding judicial officer, or alternatively, that the 403 Forbidden Error Code constituted a benign, systemic technological aberration completely devoid of targeted, malicious intent. Both postulates are demonstrably legally deficient and fundamentally irrelevant to the operation of mandamus. Firstly, an administrative functionary cannot invoke the shield of blind obedience to an ultra vires directive promulgated coram non judice to justify the overt dereliction of a mandatory, non-discretionary statutory duty. An order rendered without jurisdiction is an Irremediable Nullity and commands absolutely no lawful obedience (Canada (Human Rights Commission) v. Taylor, [1990] 3 SCR 892). Secondly, whether the impenetrable technological blockade was effectuated through deliberate, targeted sabotage orchestrated by adversarial actors, or alternatively through gross, systemic administrative negligence by the state, is ultimately a distinction without a material legal difference regarding the unconstitutional deprivation suffered. The operational effect—a total, constructive denial of access to the Superior Court—remains identical and equally unconstitutional under the strict, uncompromising parameters established in TLABC 2014 and Chisan. The deprivation of Access To Justice is a strict liability offense against the constitution, thereby necessitating the immediate, coercive intervention of mandamus regardless of the registry's purported subjective intent.

Conclusion:

VII. The administrative paralysis and the subsequent targeted technological lockouts operate as an unconstitutional constructive denial of justice, effectively rendering the affected party a legal non-entity stripped of their day in court in direct contravention of the principles delineated in TLABC 2014 and Chisan. An order of mandamus is legally imperative and urgently required to compel the rectification of the digital interfaces, the processing of all nunc pro tunc filings without further delay, and the issuance of necessary invitations to restore constitutionally protected access to the civil justice system.

ISSUE 7: SUPERVISORY JURISDICTION OF THE PRIMUS INTER PARES

G. Whether the President of the Divisional Court possesses the inherent constitutional authority, as Primus Inter Pares, to unilaterally intervene, re-assign the proceeding, and cure the systemic structural anomalies corrupting the adjudicative record.

ANSWER 7: Yes.

Legal Analysis:

I. As objectively established by the magnetic resonance imaging results of the Applicant procured in the Summer of THE YEAR OF 2025, the physiological degeneration of the Applicant continues precipitously, precisely as prognosticated by the preeminent radiologist, Dr. Bohdan Lychasz. The unassailable medical trajectory indicates an inexorable deterioration (see: Compendium For NOM #3-5, Tab 4, Exhibit "M"). Consequently, time remains of the absolute essence. The extant judicial review procedure act proceeding (the "JRPA Proceeding") is profoundly characterized by a series of systemic administrative and adjudicative failures. The cast of characters complicit in these failures is comprehensively delineated and particularized at the appendices (see: Appendix regarding the Bayesian Variable Probability Model).

II. The unauthorized assumption of jurisdiction by Madam Justice Shore, acting as an invalid case management judge (the "Invalid CMJ"), constitutes a definitive and ontological example of an Irremediable Nullity.

III. Since the seminal adjudication in Ruffo v. Conseil de la magistrature, [1995] 4 SCR 267, the doctrine of Primus Inter Pares (the "Primus Inter Pares"), where such Latin phrase was mentioned for the first time in relation to judges has crystallized into a substantive, operational designation. A Chief Justice, and by direct structural extension, the President of the Divisional Court, possesses an inherent, non-delegable suite of responsibilities—the 13 chief justice duties (the "13 Chief Justice Duties")—specifically comprising:

a. (a) Ultimate Jurisdiction: Definitive and final authority over adjudicative and administrative functions;
b. (b) Constitutional Trust Stewards: Non-delegable responsibility as the primary guardian of the constitutional trust;
c. (c) Imperviously Influenced Mandate: The requirement to remain impervious to external pressures;
d. (d) Master of the Roster: Absolute authority over the scheduling and distribution of judicial resources;
e. (e) Self-Assignment Power: Inherent authority to self-assign matters of profound institutional significance;
f. (f) Administrative Steward: The duty to oversee clerical and registry functions pursuant to section 76 of the Courts of Justice Act, RSO 1990, c C.43;
g. (g) Institutional Reputation Guardian: The strict obligation to protect the standing of the Court in the public eye;
h. (h) Efficiency Operation Duty: The responsibility to ensure the seamless operation of all Court functions;
i. (i) Ethical Compliance Guarantee: The role as final arbiter of professional conduct within the tribunal;
j. (j) Complaint Laying Power: The intrinsic authority to initiate formal complaints;
k. (k) Puisne Judge Removal Power: The authority to dynamically reassign colleagues during ethical inquiries;
l. (l) Moral Barometer: The role as the ethical and integrity barometer for the institution; and
m. (m) Moral Authority: The power to impose judicial will upon other puisne judges through ethical directives.

IV. When the JRPA Proceeding is characterized by pervasive, multifaceted controversy, severe procedural subversion, digital lockouts, and allegations implicating the very integrity of the judicial institution itself, standard, slow-moving appellate pathways become hopelessly inadequate. Such matters transcend ordinary civil litigation and crystallize into an institutional crisis. In these rare, existential instances, the Primus Inter Pares possesses the unwritten but compelling constitutional imperative to assume direct supervisory control. The unilateral, proactive assumption of carriage by the Invalid CMJ via the coordination of an unauthorized shadow administrator completely undermines the structural sovereignty of the court, a foundational concept of institutional independence thoughtfully expanded in R. v. Baldovi, 2016 MBQB 90, and explored in Peace River Hydro Partners v. Petrowest Corp., 2022 SCC 41. A court cannot legitimately function if its internal assignment mechanisms are hijacked by conflicted actors acting outside the formal roster, effectively creating a rogue adjudicative silo.

Conclusion:

V. To preserve the rapidly eroding public trust, ensure the impartial administration of justice, and protect the inviolable majesty of the lex terrae (the law of the land), the President of the Divisional Court holds the inherent, compelling, and exclusive authority to self-assign this matter ex debito justitiae (as a matter of right). It is structurally imperative that the conflicted judicial officer be formally relieved of their unassigned duties and that a final restoration motion be executed to summarily expunge the ultra vires acta, thereby restoring the proceeding to its lawful, untainted status quo ante.

ISSUE 8: INSTITUTIONAL BIAS AND TRIBUNAL MALFEASANCE

II. Whether the systemic conduct of the adjudicative tribunal, operating under the aegis of the Executive Chair albeit for Tribunals Ontario, exhibits an institutional bias that irremediably taints the underlying administrative decisions and necessitates an order of certiorari.

ANSWER 8: Yes.

Legal Analysis:

I. Administrative tribunals, though existing outside the traditional court hierarchy, are strictly bound by the unyielding duty of fairness, the Statutory Powers Procedure Act, RSO 1990, c S.22, and the paramount imperative of institutional independence. This was masterfully articulated by the Supreme Court in Ocean Port Hotel Ltd. v. British Columbia (General Manager, Liquor Control and Licensing Branch), [2001] 2 SCR 781, and Baker v. Canada (Minister of Citizenship and Immigration), [1999] 2 SCR 817. Where a tribunal's structural framework, funding mechanisms, or the overt conduct of its executive leadership demonstrates a closed-minded, systemic alignment with powerful industry respondents, it gives rise to a fatal institutional bias.

II. Exhaustive submissions detail a documented pattern of administrative hostility, evidentiary suppression, and procedural subversion at the tribunal level. The tribunal is functioning less as an impartial, fact-finding adjudicative body and more as a taxpayer-funded extension of aggressive adversarial strategies. When an administrative tribunal acts in covert concert with corporate respondents to effectuate somatic attrition and financial bleeding, it completely abandons its statutory mandate. Such coordinated actions constitute an egregious failure of the tribunal to afford natural justice, rendering its proceedings, hearings, and consequent decisions fundamentally ultra vires and subject to immediate judicial quashing.

Conclusion:

III. The systemic institutional bias and procedural malfeasance demonstrated completely invalidate the underlying administrative process, stripping it of any deference normally afforded by a reviewing court. The Divisional Court, exercising its broad supervisory jurisdiction over the administrative state, must issue an order of certiorari to decisively quash the tainted decisions and formally declare the tribunal's conduct to be an abuse of process.

ISSUE 9: INTENTIONAL SPOLIATION OF EVIDENCE AND TECHNOLOGICAL SABOTAGE

I. Whether the ongoing, unauthorized technological interception and spoliation of digital evidence triggers an evidentiary presumption that warrants the striking of any documents although not filed by the Respondents

ANSWER 9: Yes.

Legal Analysis:

I. The equitable doctrine of spoliation applies with full force where a party intentionally destroys, conceals, alters, or renders inaccessible evidence that is relevant to ongoing or reasonably foreseeable litigation, as established in McDougall v. Black & Decker Canada Inc., 2008 ABCA 353, and St. Lawrence Cement Inc. v. Wakeham & Sons Ltd., 1995 CanLII 2541 (ON CA). The compelling record demonstrates that primary digital repositories have been subjected to continuous, unauthorized third-party interception and deliberate depletion. This is evidenced by systemic, anomalous notifications stipulating that storage is full, indicating that documents, contacts, and device data are no longer backing up. This manifests active data manipulation and the malicious blocking of crucial evidentiary backups.

II. This is not a circumstance of passive loss of data, negligent deletion, or simple hardware failure; it is active technological sabotage inextricably linked to the underlying TDI Karat Theft. The deliberate destruction, sequestration, or corruption of a digital footprint by adversarial actors effectively blinds the court to the full, unvarnished factual matrix. In law, the powerful maxim omnia praesumuntur contra spoliatorem (all things are 5250 presumed against a despoiler) applies ipso facto. When spoliation ascends beyond mere negligence to the level of malicious intent specifically designed to pervert the course of justice, standard adverse inferences are woefully insufficient to cure the severe prejudice inflicted upon the proceedings.

Conclusion:

III. The intentional technological sabotage and ongoing, active spoliation of primary evidentiary repositories fundamentally effectuate a deprivation of the raw materials necessary to prosecute the action. Consequently, it is necessitated that inherent jurisdiction be exercised to strike the relevant pleadings and defenses in their entirety as the only proportionate and effective remedy for this egregious, calculated subversion of the truth-seeking function of the court.

ISSUE 10: ABUSE OF PROCESS AND THE FALSE INFORMATION PACKAGE (NOTA BENE: the fraudulent police force and court officers could NOT even count 15 months and 18 months forward)

J. Whether the fabrication and dissemination of the False Information Package, in to weaponize the justice system and secure an unrecorded warrant constitutes a tortious abuse of process necessitating exemplary sanctions.

ANSWER 10: Yes.

Legal Analysis:

I. The tort of abuse of process is a unique and powerful legal construct, activated when the legal system or state apparatus is utilized for a collateral, improper, or malicious purpose that directly contradicts the very function and dignity of the courts. This principle was thoroughly examined in Toronto (City) v. C.U.P.E., Local 79, [2003] 3 SCR 77, and Beaudoin Estate v. Stevens, 2021 ONCA 644. Unlike malicious prosecution, it does not require the proceeding to terminate in favor of the plaintiff; the tort is complete the exact moment the process is weaponized. The creation, curation, and strategic circulation of the False Information Package—a compiled, highly prejudicial dossier of fabricated intelligence designed specifically to induce unwarranted state action, namely, an unlawful residential lockout—is the quintessential manifestation of an improper collateral purpose.

II. By intentionally misleading judicial officers, Justices of the Peace, or law enforcement officers to issue an unrecorded, shadow warrant, actors transition aggressively from zealous litigators to active obstructors of justice. This conduct deeply offends the inherent sense of decency, fairness, and the rule of law. It has been repeatedly held by the Supreme Court that superior courts possess an inherent, unassailable, and flexible jurisdiction to protect their processes from such vexatious, retaliatory weaponization.

Conclusion:

III. The False Information Package is a highly orchestrated fraudulent instrument that severely abuses the integrity of the judicial and law enforcement processes. It is legally compelled that such actions be declared a formal, tortious abuse of process, that any derivative or parallel proceedings initiated based upon this tainted intelligence be immediately stayed, and that substantial punitive, exemplary, and full-indemnity costs be imposed.

ISSUE 11 AND 12: NUNC PRO TUNC RELIEF AND EQUITABLE TOLLING FOR CONSTRUCTIVE LOCKOUT

K. Whether comprehensive nunc pro tunc relief should be granted?

L. and the equitable tolling of all statutory and procedural limitations are necessitated as a direct remedy for the constructive denial of access to the public portal.

ANSWER 11 and 12: Yes.

Legal Analysis:

I. The equitable doctrine of nunc pro tunc ("now for then") is a powerful remedial tool permitting a court to backdate an order or retroactively validate a late filing to prevent a gross injustice caused by systemic, technological, or administrative failures entirely beyond a litigant's control, as utilized in R. v. Dudley, 2009 SCC 58. This is animated by the fundamental maxim actus curiae neminem gravabit (an act of the court shall prejudice no man). Furthermore, the doctrine of equitable tolling legally pauses the running of strict limitation periods when extraordinary, state-imposed circumstances prevent a party from timely asserting their rights.

II. The inability to meet arbitrary procedural deadlines or access digital filings is explicitly not the result of dilatory conduct, negligence, or a lack of diligence. Rather, it is the direct, intended consequence of the state-imposed 403 Forbidden Error Code and the retaliatory refusal of access by the registry. It is a foundational, non-derogable principle of equity that a party cannot be penalized or non-suited for failing to comply with a procedural rule when the state itself has physically or digitally blockaded the only avenue of compliance (lex non cogit ad impossibilia - the law does not compel the doing of impossibilities).

Conclusion:

III. Penalization via dismissals, cost awards, or struck pleadings for procedural delays caused exclusively by an impenetrable digital blockade effectuated by the Former Registrar Gentles, court clerk Ms. Clegg, Ms. Lawrence and, the unappointed Ms. Ibula, would result in a profound, unconscionable miscarriage of justice. An order must issue ex debito justitiae granting absolute nunc pro tunc relief, retroactively validating all outstanding filings as if submitted perfectly on the date they were initially attempted, and equitably tolling all limitation periods from the exact inception of the digital lockout until full, unhindered access to the registry is certifiably restored.

ISSUE 13: FRAUDULENT MISREPRESENTATION BY REGISTRY OFFICERS AND VICARIOUS JUDICIAL DECEIT

M. Whether the demonstrably false written representation effectuated by a court clerk on February 3, THE YEAR OF 2025—asserting that all matters are currently being case managed to deny a hearing date—constitutes an actionable fraudulent misrepresentation attributable to the presiding judge, thereby vitiating the entire adjudicative process.

ANSWER 13: Yes.

Legal Analysis:

I. An order, including a judgment, that has been contaminated and fundamentally affected by fraudulent conduct is irrevocably tainted throughout its entire complexion, necessitating the failure of the whole proceeding (see: book of authorities (the "BOA"), Compendium For NOM #3-5, Tab 1, page 20). This absolute principle traces directly to Lord Denning's seminal statement in Lazarus Estates Ltd. v. Beasley, [1956] 1 QB 702 at 712, adopted by the Supreme Court of Canada in Landreville v. Boucherville (Town of), [1978] 2 SCR 801: "Fraud, dishonesty, bad faith, extortion and bribery form a special category of causes of nullity, which transcends all others. Fraud unravels everything. The Court is careful not to find fraud unless it is distinctly pleaded and proved; but once it is proved, it vitiates judgments, contracts and all transactions whatsoever…" (see: Compendium For NOM #3-5, Tab 1, page 18).

II. The established test for civil fraud is perfectly satisfied by the egregious, documented conduct of court clerk Ms. Clegg. On February 3, THE YEAR OF 2025, a correspondence was dispatched stating: "Are you requesting a Hearing date or a case conference? Please advise that all cases are being case managed, coordinators are not providing dates. As all matters are currently being case managed in Divisional Court, Hearings are scheduled as per the directions of the case management Judge. The Coordinators are not providing Hearing 5252 dates unless directed." (see: Compendium For NOM #3-5, pages 144, 162, 1077). Applying the strict legal threshold to this evidence establishes a prima facie case of deceit:

a. (a) Fraudulent Nature and Attribution:
    i. The representation was objectively false and remains unremedied. The Rules of Civil Procedure, specifically Rule 77, do not permit a blanket policy wherein all cases are automatically case managed. This statement could not have been promulgated with an honest belief in its legal truth; it was profoundly reckless, if not deliberately deceptive. Crucially, because the quotes were unsourced and completely misrepresented the structural law, the orchestration of this administrative blockade is vicariously attributable to the presiding judicial officer functioning as the directing, albeit concealed, authority over the registry.
b. (b) Materiality:
    i. The misstatement was highly material. It functioned as the direct administrative instrument utilized to deny a lawful hearing date, effectively freezing access to justice and fundamentally altering the trajectory and outcome of the scheduling process.
c. (c) Absence of Knowledge of Falsity and Subsequent Reliance:
    i. Blind reliance to a detriment did not occur; rather, an inquiry was promptly submitted to ascertain the source of the quote. When the source or statutory or prescribed authority was strategically withheld, it was subsequently uncovered that no formal order for assignment to case management existed upon the record.
d. (d) Diligence:
    i. Exceptional diligence was exercised.
        1. Upon uncovering the deceit, the fraud was immediately mitigated by moving promptly to bring the matter to the attention of the Divisional Court within the very same day. This grievance was formally incorporated into notice of motion number three (the "NOM #3") via Requisition #11, as evidenced upon the OCPP Case View.

Conclusion:

III. The communication of February 3, THE YEAR OF 2025, is not a mere administrative error; it constitutes an actionable fraudulent misrepresentation executed by a court officer to enforce an unlawful adjudicative silo. Because fraud strictly vitiates all subsequent transactions and orders in limine, as firmly established in Lazarus Estates, the entire administrative framework erected upon this deceit collapses, demanding immediate corrective intervention and the expungement of all resulting Irremediable Nullities.

ISSUE 14: MULTIPLICITY OF PROCEEDINGS, JUDICIAL IMMUNITY, AND THE SOLEMN UNDERTAKING

N. Whether the provision of a solemn undertaking to the President of the Divisional Court, perpetually staying any contemplated civil action for damages against the presiding judicial officer for acts executed coram non judice and as an unauthorized case management judge interloper (the "Unauthorized CMJ Interloper"), resolves the apprehension of judicial liability, precludes a multiplicity of proceedings, and strictly curtails the aiding and abetting of a civil conspiracy?

ANSWER 14: Yes.

Legal Analysis:

I. It is an established legal maxim that there exists no plea of justification for any state actor, litigant, court staff, or subsequent judicial officer to rely upon an order or warrant that is fundamentally defective due to a complete want of jurisdiction. Acts promulgated by an Unauthorized CMJ Interloper are, ipso facto, factum a judice, quod ad officium jure non pertinet, ratum non est. Reliance upon such Irremediable Nullities exposes reliant actors to liability under the tort of civil conspiracy, which manifests in two branches: unlawful means conspiracy and lawful means conspiracy. As the Ontario Court of Appeal articulated in Reach M.D. Inc. v. Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Assn. of Canada, 2003 CanLII 27828 (ON CA), citing Lord Denning in Torquay Hotel Co. Ltd. v. Cousins, [1969] 2 Ch 106 (CA), an action devoid of legal justification constitutes an unlawful means. Furthermore, when a victim's rights are overtly engaged, damage and loss are presumed, as established in Shaw v. Lewis, [1949] 1 WWR 355 (BCCA).

II. Liability in civil conspiracy can be imposed for maintaining silence and permitting the promulgation of false statements, a principle affirmed in Sugar v. Peat Marwick Ltd. (1988), 55 DLR (4th) 230 (Ont HCJ). To extricate oneself definitively from an ongoing conspiracy, unequivocal steps must be undertaken to absolve continuing acts, as mandated by Claiborne Industries Ltd. v. National Bank of Canada, 1989 CanLII 183 (ON CA). The mere aiding and abetting of a co-conspirator in the commission of unlawful means qualifies as an unlawful act per se, pursuant to 2038724 Ontario Ltd. v. Quizno's Canada Restaurant Corp, 2010 ONCA 466. Furthermore, it is not required that every conspirator actively participate in the actus reus, provided the unlawful act was a probable consequence of the original common design (Kuwait Oil Tanker Co. v. Al Bader, [2000] 2 All ER (Comm) 271 (CA); Golden Capital Securities Ltd. v. Holmes, 2004 BCSC 262; HM Revenue & Customs v. Begum, [2010] EWHC 1799 (Ch)).

III. Any potential defense predicated upon judicial immunity is fundamentally constrained. Absolute judicial immunity strictly applies to the lawful duties and functions of a judge. As elucidated in Prefontaine v. Gosman, 2000 ABQB 314, citing R. v. Germain (1984), 53 AR 264 (QB), a judicial officer is shielded from civil liability for acts executed outside of their jurisdiction only if the judge held a genuine belief that they were acting with jurisdiction. It is legally inconceivable that the Unauthorized CMJ Interloper maintained such a belief, given the procedural precedent established in the contemporaneous Nash v. CAMI proceeding, wherein the identical judicial officer demonstrably waited for the lawful assignment directives of a superior judicial authority before acting. Ignorance of the explicit strictures of Rule 77 offers no defense. The jurisprudential threshold established in Kopyto v. Ontario, [1995] OJ No 601 (Gen Div), dictates that an official must operate within their statutory or inherent framework to retain their judicial capacity. Without the requisite Order for an Assignment For Case Management, the capacity itself ceases to exist. Furthermore, pursuant to the Crown Liability and Proceedings Act, RSC 1985, c C-50, and the Crown Liability and Proceedings Act, 2019, SO 2019, c 7, Sch 17, neither the federal nor the provincial state assumes liability for a judge acting completely outside their statutory framework without an honest belief of jurisdiction. The overt subversion of Section 96 of the Constitution Act, 1867, fundamentally strips away any purported administrative privilege, which is inherently subject to abrogation when engaged in unlawful conduct (MacKeigan v. Hickman, [1989] 2 SCR 796). Criminal liability under Section 122 (Breach of Trust by Public Officer) and Section 126 of the Criminal Code remains a viable statutory consequence for such deliberate jurisdictional overreach.

IV. To decisively resolve the apprehension of liability and to honor the moral and legal imperative of avoiding a multiplicity of proceedings under section 138 of the Courts of Justice Act, an absolute undertaking is formally proffered to the President of the Divisional Court. Should the requested relief be granted, a solemn undertaking is provided that no further steps or civil actions shall be pursued against the presiding judicial officer in perpetuity. This proactive concession provides an absolute, legally binding defense against future civil litigation, extinguishing the potential for an action in damages.

V. A reviewing President might or opposing counsel might have countered that the formal provision of a solemn undertaking, while ostensibly attempting to extinguish civil liability, cannot prospectively cure the initial constitutional and jurisdictional defects, nor can a private litigant essentially "bargain" with the court's disciplinary mechanisms to secure favorable relief. This counter-argument profoundly misconstrues the strict equitable purpose of the provided undertaking. The undertaking is explicitly not a quid pro quo designed to retroactively validate the ultra vires acta, nor does it attempt to usurp the regulatory purview of the Canadian Judicial Council. Rather, it is a unilateral, principled equitable concession designed exclusively to definitively neutralize the overarching institutional apprehension of collateral, retaliatory civil litigation. By formally extinguishing the looming threat of a multiplicity of proceedings, the Applicant ensures that the Divisional Court may adjudicate the substantive, foundational merits of the JRPA Application free from the paralyzing specter of institutional self-preservation. It demonstrates the utmost good faith, directly facilitating the court's ability to correct the record unencumbered by defensive bias, and strictly aligns with the mandatory legislative directive of section 138 of the Courts of Justice Act.

VI. The provision of this solemn undertaking definitively extinguishes any potential civil exposure for the unauthorized adjudicative acts, entirely eliminating the institutional apprehension of judicial liability. This mechanism strictly conforms to the overarching equitable imperative to avoid a multiplicity of proceedings, thereby compelling the immediate granting of the relief sought by a lawful judge of the Divisional Court, and definitively severing the ongoing facilitation of the underlying conspiracy.

ISSUE 15: INHERENT JURISDICTION VERSUS STATUTORY JURISDICTION OF THE DIVISIONAL COURT

O. Whether the Divisional Court possesses inherent jurisdiction (the "Inherent Jurisdiction") to unilaterally expand its subject-matter authority and procedural mechanisms, or whether it functions strictly as a statutory branch whose adjudicative acts, when executed outside the explicit parameters of its enabling legislation, constitute Irremediable Nullities?

ANSWER 15: No.

Legal Analysis:

The Strictly Circumscribed Jurisdictional Parameters:

I. It is a foundational tenet of administrative law that the Divisional Court manifests definitively and exclusively as a creature of statute, entirely notwithstanding its administrative placement within the broader Superior Court of Justice (the "SCJ"). The Divisional Court was formally instantiated in THE YEAR OF 1970 via legislative amendments affixed to the Judicature Act, RSO 1970, c 228, predominantly as a targeted response to the recommendations of the McRuer Commission, which sought to modernize and demystify the technical intricacies historically associated with the procedural challenging of governmental actions. Whereas the SCJ, evaluated in its entirety, operates unequivocally as a court of Inherent Jurisdiction, the Divisional Court, functioning strictly as a specialized branch, operates exclusively within the circumscribed parameters delineated by the Courts of Justice Act, RSO 1990, c C.43 (the "CJA"), and the Judicial Review Procedure Act, RSO 1990, c J.1 (the "JRPA"). This demarcation is of paramount foundational significance: a court of Inherent Jurisdiction possesses plenary authority by virtue of its existential character as a superior court, whereas a statutory tribunal or branch possesses solely those specific powers expressly or implicitly conferred upon it by the legislative assembly.

II. The prevailing legal consensus, as recently affirmed by binding jurisprudence in Murray v. Office of the Independent Police Review Director, 2020 ONSC 7977 at paras 10-12 (the "Murray"), establishes incontrovertibly that the Divisional Court constitutes a statutory appellate or reviewing court and is categorically divested of any standing as a court of Inherent Jurisdiction. This strict jurisdictional limitation dictates that the Divisional Court is entirely precluded from unilaterally expanding its subject-matter jurisdiction or fashioning novel categories of substantive relief that are not firmly rooted within the JRPA or auxiliary enabling legislation. This constitutional imperative was further expanded upon within the context of the Licence Appeal Tribunal (the "LAT") and the JRPA in Yatar v. TD Insurance Meloche Monnex, 2024 SCC 8 at para 49 (the "Yatar"). In Yatar, the Supreme Court of Canada affirmed that a person possesses an unassailable right to seek judicial review, noting that the affording of judicial discretion to decline the hearing of judicial review applications based upon the perceived quality or quantity of internal reconsiderations would permit judicial discretion to improperly trump a constitutional principle. While discretion exists to hear the application on the merits and deny relief, such discretion does not extend to an absolute refusal to consider the application for judicial review in limine.

III. The legislative rationale undergirding the establishment of the Divisional Court as a statutory branch was the explicit creation of a specialist tribunal dedicated to judicial review amidst an era characterized by an exponentially expanding administrative state (Murray, at para 10). By consolidating these adjudicative reviews 5255 within a designated branch, the legislative intent was the cultivation of sophisticated public law acumen and the absolute assurance of jurisprudential consistency regarding the overarching oversight of tribunals and boards. Nevertheless, because its jurisdiction is demonstrably not inherent, the tribunal is invariably compelled to locate its authority to adjudicate strictly within the four corners of a governing statute. Should a legal issue fail to be encompassed within the specifically enumerated categories of review or appeal structurally allocated to the Divisional Court, the branch is ipso facto divested of all adjudicative authority. This absolute preclusion remains forcefully operative even in circumstances wherein a federally appointed superior court judge is actively presiding. In the present factual matrix, the judicial officer in question was never formally presiding over an assigned proceeding, thereby rendering the adjudicative footing nonexistent.

The Dichotomy of Inherent Jurisdiction and Equitable Jurisdiction

IV. The architectural framework of the Ontario judiciary is predicated upon a sophisticated interplay of powers that unequivocally define the constitutional authority of the SCJ. A critical, substantive distinction must be rigorously maintained between the Inherent Jurisdiction and equitable jurisdiction (the "Equitable Jurisdiction"). Within the SCJ, the Inherent Jurisdiction designates the essential, unwritten prerogative of the court to govern its internal processes and procedures, whereas the Equitable Jurisdiction refers to a specific corpus of jurisprudence—equity (the "Equity")—historically engineered to ameliorate the rigidities and procedural exactitudes of the strict common law. Pursuant to section 96 of the CJA, in circumstances wherein a rule of equity conflicts with a rule of common law, the rule of equity is statutorily mandated to prevail over the common law (the "Prevalence Of Equity").

V. The contemporary jurisdictional framework of Ontario is the direct evolutionary consequence of English legal antiquity. The traditional common law courts functioned under an inflexible, formalized system of writs (the "Writ System"), prioritizing jurisprudential certainty strictly through the rigid application of the doctrine of stare decisis. Conversely, the Court of Chancery evolved to dispense substantive relief predicated upon the dictates of conscience, administering the Equity, which was explicitly formulated to supplement the common law. The historical friction manifested between these bifurcated systems was authoritatively reconciled in the Earl of Oxford's Case (1615), 1 Rep Ch 1 (the "Earl of Oxford"), wherein it was definitively established that in all instances of irreconcilable conflict, the rules of equity shall overwhelmingly prevail.

VI. While both frameworks facilitate the exercise of profound judicial discretion, the Inherent Jurisdiction is universally recognized as an inseparable constitutional attribute of a section 96 court, whereas the Equitable Jurisdiction is characterized merely as a substantive, historical codification of legal rules. The Inherent Jurisdiction functions as the indispensable reserve fund (the "Reserve Fund") of judicial authority that a superior court may appropriate to guarantee the administration of substantive justice. As articulated by Master I.H. Jacob in the doctrinal text The Inherent Jurisdiction of the Court (THE YEAR OF 1970), it is characterized as "virile and viable." The paramount distinguishing feature of the Inherent Jurisdiction is its absolute independence from legislative authorization. The SCJ operates universally as a tribunal of plenary jurisdiction (the "Plenary Jurisdiction")—synonymously designated as general jurisdiction (the "General Jurisdiction")—signifying the retention of comprehensive adjudicative authority over all legal matters unless such authority has been unequivocally abrogated by explicit statutory directive.

VII. Consequently, profound strategic considerations are strictly necessitated whenever an application is advanced before the Divisional Court in contradistinction to the SCJ, most particularly when invoked pursuant to subsections 6(1) and 6(2) of the JRPA. The Divisional Court constitutes a statutory judicial review court, not a Section 96 court acting in its primary capacity. As a statutory creation, its powers are exclusively defined by the four corners of its enabling legislation, rendering it devoid of Inherent Jurisdiction, notwithstanding its possession of Equitable Jurisdiction. The exercise of Equitable Jurisdiction must be guided by established equitable maxims and may not be utilized as a pretext for the circumvention of statutory requirements or the creation of new procedural rules ex nihilo. Equity follows the law; it does not subvert it. Where the legislature has clearly spoken through the JRPA or the Rules of Civil Procedure, RRO 1990, Reg 194 (the "Rules"), equitable powers may not be exercised in a manner that contradicts the express will of the sovereign legislature (lex scripta). A judicial review court may not rely upon the gap-filling nature of Inherent Jurisdiction to justify procedural deviations lacking an explicit statutory basis.

VIII. The doctrine of Inherent Jurisdiction is circumscribed by parameters precluding its invocation in contravention of legislative intent (the "Legislative Will"). In Baxter Student Housing Ltd. v. College Housing Co-operative Ltd., [1976] 2 SCR 475 at 480 (the "Baxter"), the Supreme Court of Canada affirmed that the curia cannot negate the expression of the Legislative Will. Inherent Jurisdiction remains irrevocably subordinate to lex scripta and must be exercised parcimoniose (sparingly). In Ontario, the Rules constitute formal regulations under the CJA; consequently, the judiciary (the "Judiciary") is absolutely precluded from utilizing its extraordinary power (the "Extraordinary Power") to circumvent these binding directives. The Supreme Court in Baxter explicitly established that Inherent Jurisdiction cannot be exercised to conflict with a statute or rule, a principle forcefully affirmed by the Ontario Court of Appeal in Cheong v. Ontario (Minister of Finance), 2004 CanLII 17750 (ON CA) at para 36 (the "Cheong"), citing Montreal Trust Company et al. v. Churchill Forest Industries (Manitoba) Limited, 1971 CanLII 960 (MB CA) at 546. In Cheong, it was clarified that neither section 11 nor section 146 of the CJA confers jurisdiction upon the court to override clearly expressed statutory limitations.

IX. This paradigm is further illuminated by the historical consolidation of the judiciary (THE YEAR OF 1975 to THE YEAR OF 1990), wherein provincial courts (the "Provincial Courts") of limited statutory jurisdiction were distinctly demarcated from superior courts (the "Superior Courts") endowed with Inherent Jurisdiction. While the Small Claims Court operates as a branch of the SCJ, it possesses neither Inherent Jurisdiction nor Equitable Jurisdiction, functioning strictly within its statutory confines. Any attempt by a Small Claims Court judge to exercise the powers of an SCJ judge without proper assignment constitutes an ultra vires act resulting in a jurisdictional collapse. This exact principle applies with equal force to the Divisional Court. The specific capacity or role in which a judge is presiding (the "Judicial Sitting") is fundamentally determinative of the exact jurisdiction that is actively being exercised. Upon the filing and issuance of a JRPA application, no Inherent Jurisdiction exists for the court or any judge to unilaterally purport to make an order for an Assignment For Case Management. Authority is prima facie strictly confined by the JRPA, the CJA, the Legislation Act, 2006, SO 2006, c 21, Sch F, and the Rules.

X. Under Rule 77 for Cities of Toronto and Ottawa, case management is an exceptional measure for applications that requires a specific triggering event—the First Defence—and a formal judicial order of the application proceeding to case management. By projecting an impenetrable illusion of authority without proper assignment or the satisfaction of statutorily mandated prerequisites, the resultant actions violently transcend mere erroneous procedure; they constitute acts executed entirely outside the legislative grant of power, rendering the resulting directives Irremediable Nullities.

XI. A potential jurisdictional counter-argument may assert that because the Divisional Court is populated by federally appointed judges of the Superior Court of Justice, those specific judicial officers implicitly carry their expansive, individual Inherent Jurisdiction into the appellate branch seamlessly, thereby theoretically validating the unilateral assumption of unassigned powers to correct perceived administrative lethargy. This jurisprudential reasoning impermissibly and dangerously conflates the individual, personal capacity of the appointed jurist with the rigid, statutory constitutional architecture of the specific forum in which they are seated. As firmly established in R. v. Dudley, 2009 SCC 58, and supported by the administrative framework of Canada (Minister of Citizenship and Immigration) v. Vavilov, 2019 SCC 65, the designated statutory forum unconditionally dictates the absolute boundaries of adjudicative power. When an SCJ judge is statutorily designated to sit as a judge of the Divisional Court, their authority is instantaneously localized, restricted, and strictly confined to the appellate and reviewing parameters of the CJA and the JRPA. The Inherent Jurisdiction of the SCJ cannot be legally smuggled into the Divisional Court as a jurisprudential trojan horse to bypass the mandatory, codified prerequisites of the Rules. To allow such an infiltration would fundamentally destroy the legislative intent behind creating a specialized, limited-jurisdiction reviewing branch.

Conclusion:

XVII. The Divisional Court is a creature of statute strictly divested of Inherent Jurisdiction. It is legally impossible for a judge of the Divisional Court to utilize the gap-filling Extraordinary Power of Inherent Jurisdiction to unilaterally bypass the mandatory strictures of Rule 77. The assumption of case management powers absent the formal triggering mechanisms constitutes an aggressive subversion of the Legislative Will. Consequently, all adjudicative acts promulgated under this fabricated jurisdiction are ultra vires, procedurally void ab initio, and constitute categorical Irremediable Nullities.

ISSUE 16: EQUITABLE FRAUD AND BREACH OF FIDUCIARY DUTY BY THE FIRST INSURER

P. Whether the respondent insurance companies, specifically TD Home and Auto Insurance Company (the "TDHA"), as the first respondent insurance company (the "First Respondent Insurance Company"), committed equitable fraud (the "Equitable Fraud") by virtue of breaching the elevated fiduciary duty (the "Fiduciary Duty") of uberrima fides (utmost good faith) as established in Beasley v. Barrand, through the deliberate suppression of material information and the orchestration of a coordinated administrative embargo?

ANSWER 16: Yes.

Legal Analysis:

The Doctrine of Equitable Fraud and the Duty of Veracity:

I. Regarding the doctrine of Equitable Fraud, the Ontario Court of Appeal in Outaouais Synergest Inc. v. Keenan, 2013 ONCA 526 at paras 77 and 92 (see: BOA, Tab 166), confirmed that silence or the conveyance of half-truths may constitute fraudulent misrepresentation. Where a party elects to terminate their silence, the doctrine of caveat emptor is extinguished, and a duty of veracity is imposed. The court held that once a vendor decides to break that silence, they must speak truthfully and completely about the matters raised, as an incomplete disclosure can be as misleading as an outright fabrication. This ensures that the courts of equity remain a shield against unconscionable conduct, particularly in transactions where one party possesses superior knowledge or where a special relationship exists. The extrapolation of this principle to the context of litigation suggests that a party who chooses to disclose information to the court or an adversary must ensure its totality, lest they be found to have engaged in Equitable Fraud through selective omission or the presentation of a curated reality that obscures the material facts.

II. The scope of Rule 59.06(2)(a) remains unencumbered by restrictive language regarding the species of fraud required to trigger its application. As established in Kitchen v. Royal Air Force Assn., [1958] 2 All ER 241, Equitable Fraud involves conduct which, in light of a special relationship, is unconscionable. Such conduct, or the fraudulent concealment thereof, may preclude a party from invoking a limitation period or other statutory exoneration. This principle ensures that the law does not provide a sanctuary for those who utilize technicalities to benefit from their own unconscionable behavior, thereby maintaining the integrity of the judicial process. It is a fundamental tenet of the Rules that fraud of any kind—whether common law or equitable—vitiates every proceeding it touches, often resulting in a judgment that is null and void. Such vitiation renders the resulting order an Irremediable Nullity, as a court of record cannot permit its processes to be utilized as instruments of deception. Where a judgment is obtained through Equitable Fraud, the court retains an inherent and statutory jurisdiction to set aside the order, restoring the parties to the status quo ante.

Fiduciary Status and the Fiduciary Duty of First Insurers:

III. It is further posited, with the absolute utmost gravity, that the aforementioned procedural irregularities are catastrophically compounded by profound, systemic breaches of adjudicative neutrality and procedural fairness. The jurisprudence articulated in Beasley v. Barrand, 2010 ONSC 1408 (the "Beasley 2010"), formally established the fiduciary status (the "Fiduciary Status") of First Respondent Insurance Companies in specific, specialized litigation contexts where profound imbalances of power exist between the corporate entity and the individual. This elevated Fiduciary Duty demands an unwavering, rigorous adherence to the equitable principle of uberrima fides (utmost good faith) throughout the entirety of the adversarial process. Consequently, the deliberate suppression of material information, coordinated procedural maneuvering designed to obscure the record, or reliance upon manifestly unauthorized judicial interventions constitutes a sophisticated species of 5258 fraud (the "Fraud") upon the court. This Fraud inherently vitiates all resulting procedural steps, rendering them subject to immediate expungement pursuant to the powerful equitable mechanisms preserved in Rule 59.06(2)(a). The court's process cannot be permitted to serve as the instrument of fiduciary breach.

The Ethics Vacuum and the Appearance of Neutrality:

IV. Within this highly sensitized procedural context, the antecedent professional association of the undisclosed judge with Epstein Cole LLP—the legal counsel representing the adverse interest in the proceeding—was conspicuously and inexplicably omitted from any proactive disclosure protocol. The rigorous Canadian framework for adjudicative ethics, derived from the core constitutional tenets of natural justice and specifically the rule against bias (nemo judex in causa sua), strictly mandates that any prior association raising a reasonable apprehension of bias in the mind of an informed observer must be thoroughly disclosed on the formal record prior to any assumption of jurisdiction. This profound systemic ethics vacuum (the "Ethics Vacuum") engenders a fatal taint (the "Fatal Taint") upon the entirety of the proceedings, rendering the objective appearance of justice an absolute impossibility. The deployment of unparalleled, unprecedented sua sponte discretion absent the explicit disclosure of relevant former professional affiliations irrevocably fractures the appearance of neutrality (the "Appearance of Neutrality"), creating an irrebuttable presumption in law that the scales of justice were procedurally unbalanced and structurally compromised before the matter was formally heard.

Subversion of Ministerial Duty and the Civil Death Strategy:

V. The overarching procedural trajectory, executed through a calculated, deliberate subversion of ministerial duty (the "Subversion Of Ministerial Duty") by the registry apparatus, served to systematically prevent the perfection and subsequent public listing of the JRPA Application. Instead of the Registrar executing the mandatory administrative directive under Rule 68.05(2) to place the fully perfected application on a listing for hearing (see: Rule 1.03, "Definitions") without delay, an administrative embargo (the "Administrative Embargo") was erected without statutory justification. This opaque embargo functioned as the necessary logistical precursor to the unauthorized judicial descent (the "Judicial Descent") into the adversarial arena. By artificially stalling the routine progression of the file, the registry created the very vacuum into which the unassigned judge stepped. This coordinated institutional paralysis served to effectively insulate the corporate respondents from rigorous constitutional scrutiny (the "Constitutional Scrutiny") and culminated in a meticulously designed civil death strategy (the "Civil Death Strategy") against the self-represented Applicant, thereby rendering the foundational promise of judicial review utterly illusory.

Conclusion:

VI. The Respondent Insurance Companies, led by TDHA as the First Respondent Insurance Company, engaged in a sophisticated campaign of Equitable Fraud by breaching the non-delegable Fiduciary Duty of utmost good faith. This conduct, harmonized with the Subversion Of Ministerial Duty by the registry and the non-disclosure of the Ethics Vacuum, renders all resulting acta Irremediable Nullities. Equity compels the court to set aside all contaminated orders and restore the Applicant to the status quo ante ex debito justitiae.

ISSUE 17: FALSITY BY OMISSION AND THE DOCTRINAL EQUIVALENCE OF SILENCE TO FRAUDULENT MISREPRESENTATION

Q. Whether the strategic silence and deliberate withholding of material information regarding internal corporate structures and the true identity of the underwriter by the respondent insurance companies constitutes actionable falsity by omission (the "Falsity By Omission"), thereby vitiating subsequent determinations and rendering them Irremediable Nullities?

ANSWER 17: Yes.

Legal Analysis:

I. The doctrine regarding Falsity By Omission, silence, or inaction—as rigorously elucidated in Halsbury's Laws of England, 4th ed reissue (London: Butterworths, THE YEAR OF 1998), vol 31 at paragraphs 748 through 750—posits that the deliberate withholding of material information, in circumstances where a proactive duty of disclosure exists, is legally indistinguishable from a positive, affirmative misstatement of fact.

II. This foundational principle is applied with equal, unyielding vigor to innocent misrepresentations as it is to those characterized by explicit fraudulent intent. This legal proposition is fortified by a robust and unassailable body of jurisprudence, including C.R.F. Holdings Ltd. et al. v. Fundy Chemical International Ltd. et al., 1980 CanLII 586 (BC SC), aff'd on the issue of liability at 1981 CanLII 488 (BC CA), and Ontex Resources Ltd. v. Metalore Resources Ltd., 1990 CanLII 6952 (ON SC), appeal allowed in part at 1993 CanLII 8673 (ON CA). Ipso facto, the deliberate concealment of a material fact—encompassing the obfuscation of internal corporate structures, conflicts of interest, or clandestine relationships—by an adversarial entity, an officer of the court, or an administrative functionary fundamentally vitiates any subsequent adjudicative determination, rendering it voidable and crystallizing it as an Irremediable Nullity.

III. Furthermore, in Halton v. Rezaizadeh, 2004 CanLII 6236 (ON SC) at para 18 (see: book of authorities (the "BOA"), Tab 87), the Superior Court adopted the stringent legal principles articulated by the British Columbia Court of Appeal in Sidhu Estate v. Bains, 1996 CanLII 3332 (BC CA). The Court definitively held that remaining strategically silent, whilst a party possesses actual knowledge of a non-representor's critical misconception, is entirely sufficient to constitute fraudulent misrepresentation.

IV. In the present circumstances, the strategic silence maintained by the respondent insurance companies regarding their internal corporate structures and the true identity of the underwriter constitutes a prima facie demonstration of such Equitable Fraud. This weaponized silence, maintained precisely where a rigorous duty to speak and clarify is mandated, is as legally damaging and procedurally fatal as an overt, documented falsehood.

Conclusion regarding Issue #17:

V. The calculated deployment of Falsity By Omission by the respondent insurance companies to conceal the true identity of the underwriter and obscure internal corporate architectures transcends mere adversarial posturing; it constitutes a profound misrepresentation by silence. This deceptive stratagem fundamentally corrupts the evidentiary record, directly necessitating the invocation of the inherent equitable jurisdiction of the court to strike the resulting acta as categorical Irremediable Nullities.

ISSUE 18: BREACH OF ANCILLARY DUTIES TO THE ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE BY LEGAL COUNSEL AND IMPLICATION IN INTENTIONAL TORTS

R. Whether legal counsel acting on behalf of the Licence Appeal Tribunal (the "LAT") and the respondent insurance companies (the "Respondent Insurance Companies"), despite purposefully omitting the filing of a First Defence (the "First Defence") or the delivery of a notice of appearance (the "Notice Of Appearance"), catastrophically failed in their professional obligations and breached their non-delegable duties to the administration of justice as strictly defined in Laiken v. Carey?

ANSWER 18: Yes.

Legal Analysis:

I. An explicit and rigorous exception is recognized to the traditional axiom that a solicitor owes no duty to opposing or third parties. This exception thoroughly encompasses specific circumstances wherein the conduct of the legal practitioner transcends the protected sphere of zealous advocacy and directly implicates the integrity of the judicial process. In Laiken v. Carey, 2011 ONSC 5892 at paras 54, 55, and 56 (see: book of authorities 5260 (the "BOA"), Tab 285), adjudicated in THE YEAR OF 2011, the Superior Court of Justice meticulously elucidated that while the primary obligation of a solicitor is typically reserved exclusively for their principal, an ancillary, paramount, and non-delegable duty to the administration of justice (the "Duty To The Administration Of Justice") exists toward the court and, by direct extension, to adverse litigants.

II. This Duty To The Administration Of Justice is specifically engaged in well-established contexts, fundamentally circumscribing the permissible limits of adversarial posturing. As articulated in Laiken, these specific contexts include, but are not strictly limited to

a. (i) Undertakings to the Court: In circumstances where a lawyer provides a formal undertaking to the court or to opposing litigants and subsequently fails to perform said obligation, the court inherently possesses the unassailable authority to compel performance or mandate the restitution of losses directly flowing from the non-performance.

b. (ii) Implication in Intentional Torts: The professional immunity normally afforded to counsel in civil litigation is comprehensively defeated where a lawyer is implicated in intentional torts (the "Intentional Torts"). Such Intentional Torts include, but are not limited to, fraud, slander of title, false imprisonment, malicious prosecution, abuse of process, and civil conspiracy.

III. The profound judicial analysis embedded within Laiken further confirms that there exists no absolute bar to an action against a legal practitioner by an opposing party whom the lawyer has injured while acting overtly outside the legitimate scope of their duty as a solicitor. A lawyer may be held strictly liable where an independent tortious act is committed that results in foreseeable injury to a third party. This Duty To The Administration Of Justice acts as a prescriptive, uncompromising limit upon the principle of zealous advocacy, asserting unequivocally that a lawyer must not permit themselves to be utilized as a willing instrument of deception or as a passive conduit for the frustration of a lawful judicial decree. Any such facilitation of non-compliance is deemed to be prima facie inconsistent with the stringent professional standards mandated for officers of the court. The consequence of such a catastrophic breach may include personal cost awards against counsel or, in extreme jurisdictional cases, a formal finding of contempt of court.

IV. In the present procedural matrix, it is an uncontested fact upon the formal record that counsel for both the LAT and the Respondent Insurance Companies entirely failed to execute the mandatory, preliminary procedural requirements—specifically, the filing of the First Defence or the delivery of the Notice Of Appearance. The deliberate abstention from formalizing their standing upon the record, while concurrently and covertly attempting to improperly leverage the unauthorized, sua sponte case management interventions of an unassigned judicial officer, constitutes a profound subversion of the Rules of Civil Procedure, RRO 1990, Reg 194. By maintaining strategic silence regarding the absolute absence of the triggering First Defence and actively participating in proceedings conducted coram non judice, counsel functionally aided and abetted the jurisdictional usurpation. Such participation constitutes an implication in the Intentional Torts of abuse of process and civil conspiracy, rendering their conduct devoid of legal justification.

Conclusion Regarding Issue #18

V. The deliberate procedural omission of filing a First Defence, coupled with the covert exploitation of an unauthorized adjudicative forum, transcends permissible advocacy and constitutes a gross, indefensible dereliction of the Duty To The Administration Of Justice. Such conduct legally implicates counsel in the overarching abuse of process and civil conspiracy, thereby completely extinguishing their traditional litigation immunity. Consequently, this breach strictly necessitates the imposition of severe sanctions, the striking of any subsequently filed materials, and the formal preclusion of their continued participation in the tainted proceeding.

ISSUE 19: THE STANDARD OF REVIEW APPLICABLE TO LICENCE APPEAL TRIBUNAL DECISIONS AND THE MANDATORY DISPLACEMENT OF THE PRESUMPTION OF REASONABLENESS

S. Whether the standard of review applicable to the adjudicative determinations of the Licence Appeal Tribunal is strictly that of correctness, affording zero deference to the administrative delegate, by virtue of the explicit statutory appeal mechanisms and the presence of profound questions of law central to the legal system at large, as formally articulated in Vavilov?

ANSWER 19: Yes.

Legal Analysis

I. In the seminal authority of Canada (Minister of Citizenship and Immigration) v. Vavilov, 2019 SCC 65 (the "Vavilov"), the Supreme Court of Canada effected a profound metamorphosis of the administrative landscape, superseding the erstwhile framework established in Dunsmuir v. New Brunswick, 2008 SCC 9. By virtue of this decision, there was the formal promulgation of a revised framework for judicial review (the "Judicial Review Framework"), predicated upon the foundational ethos that a culture of justification (the "Culture Of Justification") mandatorily requires all state delegates to provide reasons characterized by absolute internal coherence and rigorous justification in relation to the relevant legal and factual constraints. Consequently, the reasonableness standard (the "Reasonableness Standard") operates as the prima facie baseline for all state action; ipso facto, any determination devoid of a rational nexus or rendered in contravention of the established Rules of Civil Procedure, RRO 1990, Reg 194 (the "Rules"), is inherently unsustainable and constitutes an Irremediable Nullity.

II. It is a fundamental postulate of Canadian administrative law that a person maintains an inherent, constitutionally protected right to seek judicial intervention. As forcefully elucidated in the academic jurisprudence, to afford reviewing courts a discretionary power to decline the adjudication of judicial review applications based upon a subjective perception of the efficacy or quantity of internal reconsiderations would impermissibly permit judicial discretion to subvert a constitutional principle. While the court retains the in limine discretion to adjudicate an application on its merits and subsequently deny relief, such discretion absolutely does not extend to an outright refusal to entertain the application for judicial review, as definitively confirmed at paragraph 49 of Yatar v. TD Insurance Meloche Monnex, 2024 SCC 8 (the "Yatar").

III. The Vavilov decision drastically altered the judicial review topography from the preceding Dunsmuir era. Since THE YEAR OF 2019, while the presumptive standard of review is reasonableness, said presumption is rigorously displaced by the correctness standard (the "Correctness Standard") in a plurality of circumstances—all of which are undeniably manifest in the present proceedings. There exist, at minimum, five primary exceptions to the presumptive standard of reasonableness, establishing a profound legal basis as to why Rule 50 is entirely inapplicable to JRPA proceedings, thereby rendering Rule 78.08 inapplicable in Toronto, Ottawa, or Essex. These include: (i) where the Correctness Standard is mandated by legislation; (ii) where statutory appeal mechanisms are explicitly provided; (iii) the presence of constitutional questions; (iv) general legal questions of central importance to the legal system at large; and (v) questions pertaining to the jurisdictional boundaries between administrative entities, as strictly delineated in Vavilov at paras 34, 36, 55, 58, and 63. These exceptions, specifically those enumerated at (iii) through (v), are explicitly defined herein as the rule of law SOR exceptions (the "Rule Of Law SOR Exceptions"). Furthermore, the jurisprudence articulated in Society of Composers, Authors and Music Publishers of Canada v. Entertainment Software Association, 2022 SCC 30 (the "SOCAN"), identified an additional ground for the absolute rebuttal of the reasonableness presumption: the existence of concurrent jurisdiction between the court and a tribunal, particularly where there is persistent discord in the application of legal principles.

IV. Per the Vavilov plurality at paragraph 54, when the Correctness Standard is successfully invoked, the reviewing court is expansively empowered to either uphold the administrative determination or, in the alternative, substitute its own judgment for that of the decision-maker. While the Vavilov adjudication was rendered by a nine-justice panel featuring both the Vavilov joint reasons (the "Vavilov Joint Reasons") and the Vavilov joint concurring reasons (the "Vavilov Joint Concurring Reasons") authored by Justices Abella and Karakatsanis, the majority unambiguously established the lex terrae operative at the time the Judicial Review Procedure Act, RSO 1990, c J.1 (the "JRPA") application was initiated. In the Vavilov Joint Reasons, the majority observed that questions of central importance have been transformed into a comprehensive category for correctness review, primarily because administrative expertise no longer functions as a determinative factor in the selection of the standard of review (at para 61).

V. Within the strict context of the decision rendered by Vice Chair Morissette (the "VCM Decision"), this jurisprudential shift is categorically fatal to the purported reasons provided. The adjudicator, while improperly engaging in irrelevant and unconstrained pejoratives directed at the Applicant, sought to unlawfully rely upon the illusory expertise of the tribunal and its internal processes to shield the decision from rigorous judicial scrutiny. While the adjudicator baselessly alleged that a non-natural person endured a degree of "strain", the very same tribunal completely failed to produce even a solitary document from the formal record of proceeding (the "Record Of Proceeding"), notwithstanding two concomitant statutory obligations and a total failure to adhere to the temporal constraints mandated by the Rules. According to the 1st Amended Compendium filed on February 14, THE YEAR OF 2025, an agent of the Licence Appeal Tribunal (the "LAT") admitted, in a most disconcerting fashion, that the office was merely attempting to compile the Record Of Proceeding long after the requisite statutory deadlines had lapsed. As established in Vavilov at paragraph 68, reasonableness review can never be justified by an appeal to expertise, as such a concept does not grant administrative actors a licence to enlarge their powers or omit the mandatory exercise thereof beyond the legislative intent. The governing statutory scheme perpetually operates as a strict constraint on administrative delegates and as an absolute circumscription of their authority.

VI. The Supreme Court clarified that while the common law presumption favors reasonableness, this is readily and mandatorily rebutted where the statutory architecture provides for a statutory appeal on questions of law. In the present instance, the questions of law are manifold, profoundly evasive of typical appellate review, and of central importance to both substantive law and the procedural practice before the tribunal. Ergo, the standard of review is absolute correctness regarding the orders dismissed in Notice of Motion #14 and the specific order delineated in Notice of Motion #15. This naturally does not preclude a finding by a sitting justice or a panel of the Divisional Court that the decision was incorrect ab initio, either in its entirety or in relation to specific constituent orders.

VII. The precision of the language employed by the Supreme Court is paramount; the utilization of the phrase "may appeal" signifies that the mere objective existence of the statutory appellate route, rather than its active utilization, triggers the Correctness Standard. Under the Licence Appeal Tribunal Act, 1999, SO 1999, c 12, Sch G (the "LATA"), parties are exclusively permitted to appeal solely on questions of law. Consequently, even where a party actively elects the alternative route of judicial review, the appellate standard of correctness rigidly governs each question of law to be adjudicated. Where the legislature has formally enacted a provision for appeal, triggering the statutory appeal SOR exception (the "Statutory Appeal SOR Exception"), a correctness review is unequivocally mandatory. As Vavilov dictates at paragraph 36, by subjecting the administrative regime to appellate oversight, the legislature indicates its explicit expectation that courts will scrutinize such decisions on a strict appellate basis. This represents a seismic shift in the law which effectively strips deference from hundreds of administrative actors subject to statutory rights of appeal.

VIII. The reference to "administrative decisions" operates as the dispositive phrase; the Supreme Court did not restrict this strict scrutiny merely to "orders". Therefore, if the decision of an administrative body is subject to statutory appeal mechanisms, the presumption of reasonableness is instantly displaced by correctness. The legislature, in its sovereign wisdom, did not provide a broad right of appeal for all matters, but specifically for "errors of law". When the legislative language of the JRPA is harmonized with the common law of the Ontario Superior Court of Justice (the "ONSC") Divisional Court, the formal distinction between questions of fact, mixed fact and law, or law does not govern the automatic right to be heard on judicial review. The threshold issue is solely the determination of whether final orders or final decisions are at stake, which legally entitles an applicant to a hearing.

IX. Under a categorical, non-nuanced approach, this legal classification requires the reviewing court to afford zero deference to the impugned five orders of the adjudicator and the fundamentally flawed aspects of her decisions within the unilaterally consolidated motions. It remains logically sound and legally prudent for an insured person to strategically seek judicial review in isolation to avoid a multiplicity of proceedings. In evaluating the statutory right to appeal, the Supreme Court forcefully reaffirmed in Vavilov that because judicial review is constitutionally protected by Section 96 of the Constitution Act, 1867 (UK), 30 & 31 Vict, c 3, legislatures are strictly prohibited from entirely shielding administrative decision-making from judicial scrutiny. Ipso facto, the doctrine of paramountcy and the unyielding supremacy of the Constitution of Canada remain the governing, unassailable principles.

Conclusion:

5263 The adjudicative determinations rendered by the LAT are subject to the strict Correctness Standard, totally devoid of curial deference. The presence of the Statutory Appeal SOR Exception, coupled with the profound Rule Of Law SOR Exceptions, mandates that the Divisional Court must rigorously scrutinize the impugned decisions for errors of law. Any reliance upon administrative expertise to mask jurisdictional dereliction or procedural failure is explicitly prohibited under the Vavilov framework, rendering the resulting acta Irremediable Nullities subject to immediate judicial intervention and expungement.

ISSUE 20: STATUTORY DELEGATION OF ADMINISTRATIVE POWER, THE BENEFITS AND BURDENS DOCTRINE, AND THE ULTRA VIRES ACTS OF THE PURPORTED DESIGNEE

T. Whether the purported designee, operating under the legally incongruous title of assistant trial coordinator (the "Assistant Trial Coordinator"), was lawfully assigned by the deputy attorney general (the "DAG") pursuant to section 73 of the Courts of Justice Act, and if so, whether the subsequent conduct exceeded the explicit parameters of any such assignment, thereby violating the doctrine of benefits and burdens and rendering the administrative directives Irremediable Nullities?

ANSWER 20: Yes.

Legal Analysis:

The Commercial Law Principle: Benefits and Burdens:

I. Adjudication was rendered by the Supreme Court of Canada in Peace River Hydro Partners v. Petrowest Corp., 2022 SCC 41 (the "Peace River"), rigorously defining the fundamental ontology of assignment. While the primary subject matter concerned the intersection of insolvency and arbitral proceedings, the Court forcefully reaffirmed a universal commercial legal principle, deeply rooted in the foundational doctrines of equity, contract, and administrative delegation. This principle strictly dictates that the authority inherent in a designated role is inextricably annexed to its essential obligations. The Court emphasized that the symbiotic, reciprocal relationship between a granted right and its corresponding duty operates as a fundamental tenet of the rule of law (the "Rule Of Law"). A strict, equitable prohibition is imposed upon an assignor against the assignment of contractual or statutory rights in a manner that exclusively facilitates the acquisition of benefits by the assignee while concurrently evading the correlated burdens, duties, or liabilities. The legal right and the ethical duty are, ipso facto, inseparable. To permit otherwise would functionally facilitate the creation of a shadow authority (the "Shadow Authority"), entirely exempt from the mandatory constitutional constraints of transparency, accountability, and fairness.

Application to the Equities:

II. The principle dictates that a party transferring a right does so strictly subject to the exact conditions and limitations annexed thereto. Where the right encompasses the exercise of power as a public official or a sworn officer of the court, the corresponding burden is strictly comprised of the ethical, constitutional, and professional obligation of that office to maintain rigid, prima facie neutrality. Administrative authority cannot be lawfully assumed in the absolute absence of institutional accountability. If the purported designee was assigned the solemn mantle of a registrar, the individual was simultaneously burdened with the non-delegable duty of strict institutional impartiality. The severing of administrative power from its ethical constraints constitutes an ultra vires act ab initio.

III. Furthermore, an assignee accepts an assignment subject to the equities, signifying that a superior, more robust, or cleansed position relative to that of the assignor at the exact moment of transfer cannot be occupied. If the assignor is encumbered by a conflict of interest or a jurisdictional limitation, the assignee is equally restricted, chained, and tainted by that pre-existing conflict. This strictly reflects the ancient, unyielding maxim nemo dat quod non habet: one cannot grant that which one does not possess. This equitable limitation was firmly established by the Ontario Court of Appeal in Clark v. Werden, 2011 ONCA 619 (the "Clark"). The modern authority governing this paradigm is Owners, Strata Plan LMS 3905 v. Crystal Square Parking Corp., 2020 SCC 29 (the "Crystal Square"), holding definitively that an entity cannot selectively claim the prerogatives of an office while concurrently discarding its mandatory duties. The nexus established in Peace River observes that the enforcement of a right (the benefit) necessitates strict adherence to the mechanism established for its enforcement (the burden). The authority of a registrar cannot legally exist in isolation from the neutrality, transparency, and accountability mandated by the Courts of Justice Act, RSO 1990, c C.43 (the "CJA"), and the Rules. Any administrative attempt to exercise the benefit of adjudicative direction while circumventing the burden of registry oversight results directly in a procedural nullity.

Statutory Assignment under Section 73 of the CJA:

IV. The assignment contemplated within section 73 of the CJA constitutes a strict, highly formalized form of statutory delegation of administrative power. It represents a specific, narrow exception to the standard appointment protocols established for permanent civil servants, designed solely for operational flexibility but remaining entirely subject to strict, documented, and non-waivable criteria intended to prevent the catastrophic abuse of administrative discretion.

V. Section 73(1) establishes the normative appointment process for court staff pursuant to the Public Service of Ontario Act, 2006, SO 2006, c 35, Sch A (the "PSOA"). These individuals are permanent, sworn, and ethically bound servants of the Crown who have solemnized an oath of office, thereby inextricably tethering their personal conduct to the institutional integrity of the judiciary. Section 73(2) empowers the DAG or a proper designate to assign specific powers of a court officer to any person or class of persons. While this provision theoretically facilitates the engagement of external personnel, it demands meticulous and documented compliance to rigorously preserve the chain of sovereign authority. The lack of a written instrument of assignment renders the purported official a mere interloper in the judicial process. Section 73(2.1) articulates that the individual receiving the assignment need not be formally appointed under the PSOA. Nevertheless, such individuals are legally deemed officers of the court while discharging those specific duties and remain strictly subject to the identical ethical, legal, and constitutional constraints as sworn personnel. The operation of such officials within an ethical vacuum or a shadow office (see: book of authorities (the "BOA"), Tab 15) is strictly prohibited.

VI. To be legally valid, effective, and binding, the assignment must satisfy rigorous criteria:

a. (i) Written Instrument:
    i. The assignment must be in writing. An oral, implied, or informal delegation is categorically insufficient for the exercise of statutory powers affecting the substantive rights of litigants. This requirement serves a mandatory evidentiary purpose, ensuring structural transparency, as firmly established in DiGuilo v. Boland, 1958 CanLII 92 (ON CA) (the "DiGuilo"), which held that informal assignments fail to convey legal power, resulting in a jurisdictional void;

b. (ii) Proper Assignor:
    i. The delegation must originate from the DAG or a formally authorized designate possessed of the specific delegated power to assign. An assignment issued by a non-authorized official is void ab initio. As strictly held in Canada Life Assurance Co. v. Nova Scotia (Minister of Municipal Affairs), 1996 CanLII 5304 (NS CA) (the "Canada Life 1996"), delegated statutory powers must be exercised with unflinching adherence to statutory conditions.

c. Specific Duties: The written instrument must strictly assign powers pertaining to a recognized, existing class (e.g., registrar or court clerk). The powers cannot be broad, indeterminate, or fictitious.

d. No Nullification of Burdens: Extrapolating the logic in Peace River, an individual assigned authority must be inextricably bound by the ethical burdens of that precise office. The power to act cannot be assigned without the simultaneous sine qua non duty to act fairly and transparently.

Application of the Law to the Facts:

VII. Pursuant to section 73(2.1), the mere fact that an individual is not appointed under the PSOA does not, in itself, constitute grounds for invalidity. However, the absolute legality of subsequent acta is entirely contingent upon the prior, verified existence of a written, specific assignment from the DAG. The formal record within the 5265 compendium for notice of motion number three (the "Compendium For NOM #3-5") indicates that the purported designee asserted the title of an Assistant Trial Coordinator within a specific forum—the Divisional Court—wherein trials are categorically not conducted. This renders the asserted role a functional and legal non-entity. The Divisional Court primarily adjudicates applications for judicial review and statutory appeals; the concept of trial coordination is logically and legally inconsistent with the nature of the proceedings, rendering the title itself an indicium of ultra vires operation.

VIII. Should an individual discharge duties beyond the scope of their explicit assignment, or should the role itself be non-existent within that specific branch of the judiciary, the actions are fundamentally ultra vires, as emphasized by the Supreme Court in R. v. 974649 Ontario Inc., 2001 SCC 81 (the "Dunedin"). The exercise of such a purported role is a jurisdictional nullity. The CJA permits the assignment of specific powers vested in a registrar. This refers specifically to the Registrar of the Divisional Court, a position held by Ms. Tashekah Gentles (the "Former Registrar") and subsequently Ms. Roxanne Parris (the "Current Registrar"). As noted in Sydel v. Canada, 2013 FC 1116 (the "Sydel"), the Registrar of the Divisional Court exercises purely ministerial, non-quasi-judicial powers. Any valid assignment to the purported designee must have supplemented the explicit duties of the Former Registrar via a written instrument; yet, the purported designee operated entirely outside the supervision of the Registrar, creating an unmonitored, unauthorized, and clandestine channel of communication.

IX. A court officer carries the severe burden of impartiality. If the purported designee possesses a professional or historical nexus to the respondents—for example, sharing an operational office at 55 University Avenue—the appointment constitutes a profound breach of the benefits and burdens doctrine. Utilizing an assignee to circumvent conflict rules, specifically by relaying the ibula email (the "Ibula Email") on behalf of a deeply conflicted judge, constitutes a deliberate attempt to convey the benefits of state authority while nullifying the strict burdens of accountability, thereby representing a fraud on the power.

X. Upon an assessment conducted strictly on a balance of probabilities, the evidentiary record powerfully suggests that the purported designee was either not validly designated or engaged in conduct diametrically opposed to the established requirements. This structural opacity is underscored by the confusion generated by her unverified status, leading the Applicant to mistakenly identify her as "Ms. Tibula". Furthermore, the dissemination of electronic communication from the presiding judicial officer to the Applicant, while simultaneously including the respondents—who had not filed a First Defence and therefore did not constitute formal parties of record—precludes any finding of adherence to the relevant legal framework. Such conduct egregiously violates the core principles of procedural fairness and institutional neutrality.

Conclusion:

XI. The execution of administrative and adjudicative directives by a purported designee operating under a legally non-existent title, without transparent evidence of a written assignment from the DAG, and in direct violation of the Benefits and Burdens doctrine, constitutes an ultra vires usurpation of registry functions. The resulting communications and directives are entirely devoid of legal authority and must be declared Irremediable Nullities.

XII. HOW IRONIC IS IT THAT THE SEMINAL CASE OF OUR COUNTRY REGARDING ALL OF THOSE ISSUES HAS THE SAME SURNAME AS Mr. Kevin A. McLean (BA, JD, CIM) IN MCLEAN V. BRADLEY AND COVER THOSE ISSUES WITH A SINGULAR PARAGRAPH THAT TAPS OUT ALL OF THEM:

> "When the Court has no jurisdiction of the cause, the whole proceeding is coram non judice, and actions will lie against the above mentioned parties without any regard to the precept or process, and in this case it is not necessary to obey one who is not judge of the cause." Broom, L. M. 90, Taylor v. Clemson[29].
> Factum a judice, quod ad officium jure non pertinet, ratum non est. "A plea of justification by a constable acting under the warrant of a justice will accordingly be bad, if it does not show that the justice had jurisdiction over the subject matter upon which it is granted." Taylor v. Clemson[30]; Broom's Prac.[31]; Broom, L. M.[32].

McLean v. Bradley, 1878 CanLII 22 (SCC), 2 SCR 535,

XIII. And that is exactly why neither the Executive Branch (municipal, provincial or national) cannot rely on any fraudulent information, fraudulent warrants or without jurisdiction CMJ "directions" from Madam Justice Shore who was and is the Unauthorized CMJ Interloper because they would be liable for continuing, facilitating and perpetrating further frauds. There is no immunity for that.

THE REMEDIAL ORDERS AND DECLARATIONS FOR COMPENDIUM FOR NOM #3-5

A. CONSOLIDATED ORDERS FOR NOTICE OF MOTION #3

THIS DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS AND DECLARES THE FOLLOWING (WHERE APPLICABLE): INITIAL ORDERS

1. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that the motions of the Applicant, denoted as notice of motion number one (the "NOM #1"), notice of motion number two (the "NOM #2") and notice of motion number three (the "NOM #3") (collectively, the "Motions"), were formally consolidated for a hearing (see: Rule 1.03, "Definitions") and were all heard in writing, without the attendance of the Applicant, who was the sole party as of the date of the hearing. It is strictly noted that none of the responding parties (the "Responding Parties"), which includes the formal Respondents and non-respondents (see: Tab #22 of the Affidavit of Service of the Applicant), complied with Rule 37.12(5) of the Rules of Civil Procedure by consenting, not opposing, opposing (with a motion record, prescribed notice agreeing to have the motion heard and determined in writing, and a factum for a motion in writing) or providing a notice of intending to make oral argument on Wednesday, December 3, THE YEAR OF 2025, at the Divisional Court of Ontario at 130 Queen Street West, Toronto, Ontario;

2. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES AND ORDERS that:
    - (a) There was an absolute dispensation of compliance with any rules, strictly in the interest of justice at any and all times on a retroactive, current, and prospective basis in relation to any procedural strictures that allowed this NOM #3 to be heard, in writing, on December 3, THE YEAR OF 2025;
    - (b) Specifically, a formal declaration is issued that the Applicant lawfully made the motion to the Divisional Court, via electronic mail, with effective service of the NOM #3 on November 17, THE YEAR OF 2025;
    - (c) Specifically, a declaration is issued in the alternative that the Applicant's NOM #3, in the prevailing circumstances, rendered the formal motion unnecessary pursuant to Rule 37.01 of the Rules of Civil Procedure;
    - (d) A declaration is issued that there was absolutely no practice direction of the Divisional Court actively in effect concerning the specific scheduling of a motion proposed in writing and without the formal attendance of the parties;
    - (e) A declaration is issued that the moving party (the "Moving Party") validly filed the motion with the Divisional Court with proper proof of service before the hearing date and specifically on November 26, THE YEAR OF 2025;
    - (f) A declaration is issued that the Moving Party was formally not required to explicitly serve the Responding Parties, or in the alternative the Respondents, with the NOM #3, Motion Record, Factum, and initial Draft Order (November 19, THE YEAR OF 2025), although such service was dutifully executed on the aforementioned dates. A further declaration and order is issued that, pursuant to, inter alia, Rule 37.08(2), the Moving Party was legally entitled to file the NOM #3 at or strictly before the hearing, which was required to have been "confirmed" on November 26, THE YEAR OF 2025, and within three business days of that date;
    - (g) In the alternative, a declaration and order is issued that this Divisional Court formally dispensed with strict compliance for the filing of the NOM #3 and the Registrar of the Divisional Court is hereby explicitly directed to return the levied payment of $339.00 to the Moving Party;
    - (h) In the further alternative, this Divisional Court requested that the formal court file was placed before the presiding motions judge or by way of requisition of the Applicant wherein the filing was directed, and such order was granted nunc pro tunc;
    - (i) A declaration is issued that the Applicant (Moving Party) validly provided the Registrar, as she then was, a Confirmation of Motion (Form 38(B)) on Monday, November 24, THE YEAR OF 2025, via electronic mail;
    - (j) A declaration is issued that this hearing was conducted in writing, strictly without attendance of the party (Applicant) and pursuant to Rule 37.11(1)(a) in the formal absence of the public;
    - (k) A declaration is issued that any systemic compliance issues regarding the "filing" of the aforementioned documents by the Moving Party occurred strictly through no fault of his own;

- (l) A declaration is issued that any formal filings via mail or physical delivery at the court office of the Divisional Court, even if executing a duplicate of Ontario Courts Public Portal filings, are strictly backdated to the precise date of the filing in the OCPP by receipt date;

3. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that the Attorney General of Ontario formally confirmed in writing on January 30, THE YEAR OF 2025, with the Applicant, other Respondents, and the Court that it would unequivocally not participate in the JRPA Proceeding and formally requested to be removed from any future correspondence;
4. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that the formally delegated or presiding motion judge for this motion was absolutely not the Honourable Madam Justice Shore and/or any other judicial officer formerly employed by Epstein Cole LLP prior to the commencement of and after the filing and serving of this JRPA Application;
5. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that all Orders herein contained shall be granted strictly nunc pro tunc, alongside any required abridgment of time pursuant to, inter alia, Rule 3.02(1) and (2) where such retroactive equitable application is necessary;
6. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that, consistent with the mandatory amendments to the Rules of Civil Procedure in October THE YEAR OF 2025, the Divisional Court (court staff) (registrar) must strictly upload all of the Applicant's filed documents for purposes of NOM #3 (see: Rule 4.05.3 (3.0.1));
7. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that the Divisional Court (court staff) (registrar) must immediately provide a formal electronic invitation to the Applicant to upload the Compendium For NOM #3 (see: Rule 4.05.3(3.));
8. THIS COURT FURTHER DECLARES that the Tribunal catastrophically failed to file a record of the proceeding forthwith or at all, and the Respondent Insurance Companies, collectively breached section 10 of the JRPA;
9. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES that the Tribunal egregiously failed to "deliver" responsive factums and application records in strict accordance with Rule 68.04(4) of the Rules of Civil Procedure;
10. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES AND ORDERS that the LAT completely failed to serve its Notice of Appearance (Form 38(B)) on November 27, THE YEAR OF 2024;
11. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that the LAT categorically failed to "file" and "deliver" its Notice of Appearance forthwith, prior to December 3, THE YEAR OF 2024, or at any point thereafter;
12. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that Respondent Insurance Companies improperly served their Notices of Appearances on December 3, THE YEAR OF 2024, at 4:50 p.m.;
13. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES that the LAT's unauthorized request for a case conference occurred on or before 3:30 p.m. on December 3, THE YEAR OF 2024;
14. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES AND ORDERS that the LAT's request for a case conference on or before December 3, THE YEAR OF 2024, was null and void, and strictly void ab initio, directly on account of none of the Respondents having filed a first "Defence" (see: Rule 77.03 of the Rules of Civil Procedure) prior to the LAT's request for a case conference;
15. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES AND ORDERS that any purported "Assignment For Case Management" (see: Rule 77.05 of Rules of Civil Procedure) of the JRPA Proceeding by "the case management judge" (Madam Justice Shore) was null and void, void ab initio, and entirely of no force and effect because there was absolutely no consent of any "parties" (Rule 77.05(1) of the Rules of Civil Procedure) and the LAT's request, as there was no formal motion from the LAT, for a case conference was void ab initio and of no force and effect (see: Rule 77.05(2)(b));
16. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS AND DECLARES that, to the exact extent that Justice Shore considered the LAT's void ab initio request for Assignment For Case Management of the JRPA Proceeding and subsequently unlawfully considered herself to be assigned to the JRPA Proceeding, such an act was a patently impermissible delegation of authority, and/or was directly and violently contrary to Rule 77 of the Rules of Civil Procedure, any "source law", the common law, or binding equitable principles;
17. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES that to the explicit extent that Madam Justice Shore believed she could, on her own volition, require the Applicant and Respondents to appear before her for a case conference, absolutely no such power under any "source law" existed at the time of such unconstitutional consideration and compulsion.
    - (a) THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES that to the extent that Madam Justice Shore believed her power arose from Rule 77.08, dovetailed to Rule 50.13 of the Rules of Civil Procedure, no such power existed because of the total failure of the Respondents to file a First Defence, and said Rule 50.13 strictly arises under pre-trial procedures.

- (b) THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES that to the extent that Madam Justice Shore was purportedly relying upon Rule 50.03, she completely failed to compel the actual parties to a pre-trial conference.
- (c) THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES that to the extent that Madam Justice Shore was seeking to unlawfully compel the parties to a conference under Rule 50, she completely failed to order that the "parties" themselves participate, and such case conferences were null and void on that independent legal ground alone.
- (d) THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES that to the extent that Madam Justice Shore was relying on Rule 50.13 of the Rules of Civil Procedure, the LAT was completely devoid of party status at the time of the written request (December 3, THE YEAR OF 2024) by a total failure to "deliver" its NOA, not lawfully served, and there was absolutely no filing of a First Defence at said time, and as a direct consequence of Rule 50.13(2), Madam Justice Shore entirely failed to order that all of the actual "parties" participate in addition to their lawyers as a consequence, and the case conferences are hereby strictly set aside on said unassailable legal ground;

18. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES AND ORDERS that any purported case conference compulsory requirement relating to the exchange of materials and to arbitrarily discuss prematurity was completely null and void on account of the LAT, which was the only Respondent purportedly raising the issue albeit strictly without party status, as there was only one formal "party" at said time in the Applicant;
    - (a) THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES AND ORDERS that any potential timetable arising out of that purported case conference compulsory attendance requirement, which would have unlawfully required the lawyers for the parties and the parties themselves, absent a valid order of the court, did not and could not operate as a legal stay or abeyance of the strict obligations of the Respondents to comply with the JRPA and Rules of Civil Procedure;
19. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES AND ORDERS that as a direct consequence of the Applicant having already successfully perfected the JRPA Application on December 16, THE YEAR OF 2024, there were absolutely no further materials for him to exchange, and the mandatory deadline for the Respondents to file their responsive application records and factums was Monday, January 13, THE YEAR OF 2025;
20. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS AND DECLARES that any purported filings, whether de facto or de jure, submitted by the LAT or the Respondent Insurance Companies post-November 27 or December 3, THE YEAR OF 2024, respectively, are hereby rendered void ab initio and are subject to the total vitiating effect of the insufficient notice rules stipulated under the Rules of Civil Procedure, and any setting aside of the same are to be heard strictly on three days' notice;
21. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES AND ORDERS that all procedural steps and documents involving the "Assignment For Case Management" and any and all "case management conferences" are strictly void ab initio, completely null and void, entirely of no force and effect, and are hereby definitively set aside.
    - (a) THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES AND ORDERS that any and all "orders" arising from such unauthorized "case conferences" are categorically null and void, void ab initio, entirely of no force and effect, and are definitively set aside;
22. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES AND ORDERS that any conference conducted without the Applicant possessing lawful access to Case Center for this Divisional Court Proceeding (JRPA Proceeding) by way of formal invitation, as per the strict state of the Rules of Civil Procedure at said time and without the ability to upload the filed documents at least five days prior to said case conferences (see: Rule 4.05.3 et al), rendered said case conferences permanently null and void, void ab initio, entirely of no force and effect, and they are hereby definitively set aside without reference to their substantive merits otherwise;
23. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that the Applicant was absolutely entitled to a formal invitation to the Divisional Court Case Center electronic platform immediately upon the formal commencement or bringing of this JRPA Application on or around November 15, THE YEAR OF 2024, pursuant to, inter alia, the JRPA, the Rules of Civil Procedure, and the Divisional Court JRPA Guide in force at said time;
    - (a) THIS DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES that the specific portion of the Divisional Court JRPA Guide relating to the mandatory provision of an invitation to Case Center upon the bringing of a JRPA Application is strictly not inconsistent with the Rules of Civil Procedure;

24. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES AND ORDERS that but for the formal notice that the Applicant provided herein in relation to NOM #3, the Applicant is formally permitted to not further file or serve the Respondent Insurance Companies and LAT with any further filings or otherwise, save for any subsequent challenges by the LAT in the constitutional and Charter questions relating strictly to its control or authority of any of the Respondent Insurance Companies and its agents involved in the theft of the Applicant's property and subsequent impersonation, extortion, and bribery;

NULLIFICATION IN TOTO AND MISLEADING OF THE APPLICANT BY FRAUDULENT MISREPRESENTATION AND FINDINGS OF PRIOR JUDICIAL INVOLVEMENT (UNDISCLOSED)

25. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT DECLARES AND ORDERS the definitive setting aside, in toto and ab initio, of all of the Justice Shore Steps strictly pursuant to:
    - (i) The Declarations of Law herein established;
    - (ii) Rule 38.11 of the Rules of Civil Procedure strictly on account of insufficient or non-existent notice;
    - (iii) Rule 59 of the Rules of Civil Procedure explicitly on the formal grounds of fraud and a gross miscarriage of justice, as the underlying judicial steps were irrevocably and fundamentally tainted by egregious misconduct and conflict;
    - (iv) Rule 2.02 of the Rules of Civil Procedure;
26. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES that all fraudulent misrepresentations formally made by commission or omission, whether iterated by the Divisional Court (court staff) as particularized herein, are strictly and vicariously attributed to the "case management judge" exactly after December 3, THE YEAR OF 2024;
27. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES that there exists absolutely no prerequisite or requirement under Rule 59.06(2)(a) of the Rules of Civil Procedure that the fraud must be committed exclusively against an opposing party or solely by a party, Respondent or non-Respondent, and that it may be legally committed by any person so long as it had a material effect (i.e., may have been a factor or reasonably affected the ultimate outcome of the proceeding);
28. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES that, strictly on a balance of probabilities and directly due to the absolute lack of opposition of this NOM #3, Madam Justice Shore maintained an undisclosed prior judicial involvement with the Applicant in the Undisclosed Criminal Proceeding.
    - (a) THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES AND ORDERS that Madam Justice Shore's prior judicial involvement in a deliberately undisclosed fashion amounted to material facts or fraud formally discovered post April THE YEAR OF 2025 by the Applicant, and all of the steps taken and orders issued by said judge are hereby definitively set aside;
29. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES that the deliberately undisclosed prior judicial involvement of Madam Justice Shore with the Applicant amounted to a severe fraudulent misrepresentation upon the Applicant which was profoundly material to the outcome of the JRPA Proceeding, and all steps, documents, and/or orders involving or relating to Madam Justice Shore are hereby definitively set aside;

FRAUD, BRIBERY, AND EXTORTION INVOLVING THE RESPONDENT INSURANCE COMPANIES AND LAT

(I) Fraud

30. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES AND ORDERS that the Licence Appeal Tribunal (LAT) and the Respondent Insurance Companies unequivocally committed a demonstrable fraud, whether by omission or commission, upon the Court, with specific and precise reference to the unassailable facts fully particularized in the Applicant's Affidavits, Factum, and evidence to be gleaned from the case conference transcripts, thereby irrevocably tainting the entire acta of the proceeding with fraud, and they are strictly prohibited from retaining any benefits of the same.(a) THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES AND ORDERS that all steps, documents, and/or orders relating to said fraudulent conduct, meticulously particularized in the Applicant's Compendium For NOM #3, may have reasonably affected the outcome of the JRPA Proceeding, and they are hereby definitively set aside;

(II) Bribery

31. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES AND ORDERS that the documented conduct involving Mr. Karat, an employee or contractor to the Respondent Insurance Companies, in the unauthorized, physical appropriation of the Applicant's property on October 25, THE YEAR OF 2024, and the subsequent related actions (including the highly suspicious purchase of new real property and the utilization of a fictitious name by Ms. Julia Dunk) definitively ascended to the level of a bribe or an actionable act of bribery. (a) A FURTHER DECLARATION AND ORDER is issued that the aforementioned declared act of bribery has irreparably tainted the entire proceeding and precisely rises to the level of a special nullity such that any and all steps, requirements, orders, decisions, or judgments prejudicial to the Applicant must be, ipso facto, immediately set aside.

(III) Extortion

32. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER DECLARES AND ORDERS that the Respondent Insurance Companies conclusively committed the criminal offence of extortion and obstruction of justice, strictly upon a balance of probabilities, and the associated intentional torts, both prior to the origination of this JRPA Proceeding and continuously throughout its subsequent bringing, commencement, and advancement;

INTERIM, INTERLOCUTORY, AND INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

33. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that all automotive insurance entities securely within the TDIA Group, Mr. Karat, and his then supervisor or manager, Mr. Papadimitropoulos, shall immediately undertake all reasonable, efficacious, and affirmative steps to strictly preserve and secure all confidential and proprietary information pertaining to the Applicant, whether such information exists in tangible hard-copy form or as electronic data, pending the final and conclusive disposition of the within proceeding (constituting an "Interim, Interlocutory And Permanent Injunction");
34. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that all persons who maintain control, possession, and/or custody of the stolen property, some or all, of the Applicant, that was subjected to the unauthorized appropriation (the "TDI Karat Theft") on October 25, THE YEAR OF 2024, at the premises of 1025 Queen Street West, Toronto, Ontario (visitor area of CAMH's building known as the "McCain Recovery Complex Building"), and subsequently utilized and/or disclosed said stolen property including personal information, confidential information, and/or personal health information, are compelled to the immediate and unreserved delivery up of the Applicant's property, with such property to be fully restored to the Applicant precisely within three (3) days of the formal pronouncement of this Order;

36. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that the SCJ recording management office (the "RMO") is strictly required to provide the Applicant's retained authorized transcriptionists in Ontario (the "ATO") with, in their absolute custody, possession, and/or control, formal copies of the "tapes and materials required for transcription" in the following proceedings:
    - (a) Undisclosed Criminal Proceedings and "Ex Parte In Camera Hearing(s)" involving the Applicant; and
    - (b) The case conferences strictly within this Divisional Court Proceeding.
37. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that the SCJ RMO is formally obligated to strictly provide the Applicant with the following documents which are exact copies on CD of the digital recordings requested by the Request Form Undertaking, with payment of the prescribed fees pursuant to Reg 293/92, for the following:
    - (a) Undisclosed Criminal Proceedings and "Ex Parte In Camera Hearing(s)" involving the Applicant; and
    - (b) The case conferences strictly within the Divisional Court proceeding;
38. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that the Superior Court of Justice (the "SCJ") or the Divisional Court, if a judge of the Divisional Court heard and considered Criminal Code Form 2 "Information" or "Informations" involving the Applicant or a Criminal Code Form 4 Criminal Code Indictment or "Indictments", shall immediately produce exact copies of any and all informations and indictments received involving the Applicant, strictly including any associated or supporting documents or administrative records.

39. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that the Toronto Police Service (the "TPS") produce forthwith any documents and records involving TPS Occurrence Numbers of Sunday, September 15, THE YEAR OF 2024, and Sunday, September 22, THE YEAR OF 2024, and Police Case ID: 457197, explicitly including but not limited to any formal complaints made by any of the Respondents or their agents (actual or purported).
40. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that any relevant ministry of the Ontario Government, with extremely particular reference to the Ministry of the Attorney General (the "MAG") and the Ministry of the Solicitor General (the "SOLGEN"), shall produce to the Parties (aside from itself strictly with respect to the MAG) exact copies of any draft or signed Criminal Code Form 4 Indictments and/or any other formal documents relating to the Applicant.

42. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that all formal records of the JRPA Proceeding, strictly including but not limited to those documents purportedly served but never legally "filed" or "delivered" exactly according to the Rules, being irrevocably and fundamentally tainted by fraud and bribery, shall be permanently sealed and/or administratively expunged from all publicly accessible databases to absolutely prevent the dissemination of records arising from a special nullity (the "Protective Expungement Order" and "Open Court Principle Regularization Order").

NOM #1 ORDERS (STILL APPLICABLE)

43. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that, strictly in addition to the LAT's ongoing requirement to file the formal record of proceeding, the LAT shall immediately provide exact copies of the two undisclosed motion orders, on a forthwith basis to the Applicant and the Divisional Court, as denoted in the LAT's provided portions of the purported record of proceeding index pursuant to a TARA request by the Applicant on July 24, THE YEAR OF 2024, and August 16, THE YEAR OF 2024;

CONVERTING THIS MOTION INTO A MOTION FOR JUDGMENT BUT FOR CONSTITUTIONAL AND CHARTER ISSUES AND THOSE ISSUES ARISING

45. THIS DIVISIONAL COURT ORDERS that NOM #3 was formally converted into a motion for Judgment (see: Rule 1.03(2)) strictly pursuant to Rule 37.13(2)(a) but precisely for any Constitutional or Charter issues explicitly contained in the Applicant's NOCQ.
    - (a) THIS DIVISIONAL COURT FURTHER ORDERS that the AGO is formally entitled to strictly participate in the hearing (see: Rule 1.03, "Definitions") of the NOCQ and any final relief arising strictly under this JRPA Application;

VOLUME #1: STATEMENT OF FACTUM

VOLUME #1(A) – INTRODUCTION AND CONTEXTUAL FRAMEWORK

1. The Applicant respectfully submits this Factum in support of the interlocutory relief sought, pursuant to the Third Notice of Motion, formally made and served on 2025-11-17 ("NOM #3"). The Third Notice of Motion requests a range of equitable and statutory remedies to address unequivocal fraudulent actions impacting the Divisional Court, orchestrated by various actors, including the Respondents, Responding Parties, and individuals within the Executive Branch, administrative registry, and, by silence, within the Judicial Branch. Notably, uncontroverted evidence and unopposed submissions were and are raised regarding the conduct of Madam Justice Shore in the Divisional Court JRPA Proceeding relating to her direct contraventions of the JRPA, Courts of Justice Act and Rules of Civil Procedure, and the now high probability of prior undisclosed judicial involvement and adjudication by Chief Justice Morawetz, as indicated by correspondence labelled C, L, and "M". Metadata analysis, including the involvement of Mrs. Frugoni-Rojas (Court Officer, Toronto Region), suggests a strong likelihood of Chief Justice Morawetz's prior judicial engagement. The only other possibility is that of potential ACJ Madam Justice Faye E. McWatt but that seems less likely because of the Faye and the E. Moreover, ACJ Madam Justice McWatt would still have to be assigned by the Chief Justice of the SCJ Mr. Morawetz so that would then involve both of them. It is the classic two horns of a dilemma.
2. Signatures and procedural patterns in several proceedings—Laurentian University, Ambassador Bridge (brief endorsement then reasons to follow), Urbancorp restructuring, and Tree Corporation restructuring (brief endorsement then reasons to follow)—demonstrate Chief Justice Morawetz's idiosyncratic, yet common in certain areas of law (see: BOA, Tabs 262 to 264 in Teskey, LSO v. Harrison and Little Start Child Care Inc., practice of issuing endorsements with reasons to follow in urgent circumstances. There can be no doubt that the law enforcement branch represented a feigned urgency along with its others misrepresentations such as the "NFA" alongside a valid G driver's license with a "fixed address". To take the TPS at face value would be foolish, imprudent and in of itself grossly negligent in light of its misconduct with the Applicant but then involving the misconduct involving conduct intra and inter Project South.

3. There is no evidence to suggest that Chief Justice Morawetz (nota bene: C, J, and M) participated in manipulating the Information Package. Nonetheless, the conduct of those surrounding him supports a reasonably grounded belief of prior undisclosed judicial involvement. The "Originating Court Office" for the to this day the "Undisclosed Criminal Proceeding", with a Criminal Proceeding commencing upon the laying or receipt of an Information (Criminal Code Form 2) (see: R. v. Awad, R. v. McHale, and R. v. Pardo) is identified as SCJ 361 University Avenue Courthouse, first floor. Given precedents like Reilly (Puisne Judge) v. Wacowich (Chief Justice of the ABQB (as it then was), (see: BOA, Tab 151) and Tobiass[i], which recognize the close relationship between the Chief Justice and Associate Chief Justice, it is now incumbent upon the next most senior judge in the Toronto Region to determine the relief.

VOLUME #1(A)(I): THE IMPERATIVE OF THE COURT OF RECORD

4. The critical importance of a properly constituted court of record is affirmed by Justice Durno in R. v. Spajic, 2003 CanLII 48210 (ON SC) at para 82, referencing Hill J. in R. v. Hannemann, [2002] O.J. No. 3395 (S.C.J.) at para 97, and Ryan J.A. in Regina v. McLeod, 1994 CanLII 5243 (NB CA). The jurisprudence, including BOA, Tab 259 in Toronto Star v. AG Ontario, 2018 ONSC 2586 per Morgan J. at paragraph 6, 42, 54, 55, 56, 62 underscores that the creation and preservation of a public record is a basic requirement and public duty for courts of record.

5. Although a criminal proceeding and judicial review are procedurally distinct, it is submitted that the undisclosed judicial involvement by the undisclosed judge(s) of the SCJ (Toronto Region) which is not the same as adjudication or even her undisclosed knowledge but the likelihood subject to the response of the Chief Justice of the SCJ, that Chief Justice Morawetz was an undisclosed SCJ Judge in the "Ex Parte In Camera Hearing" in the Criminal Proceeding constitutes a significant jurisdictional error and a breach of the Applicant's right to face his accuser(s), obtain a copy of the Information/Indictment upon request and a copy of any endorsement all without fees as an accused or a party (see: Administration of Justice Act and attendant regulations; MAG CSD Court Information Access Guide, section 7 and Court Transcripts Practices Standards Manual (2024)).

6. Prior to the scheduled appearance on 2024-11-13 in a manipulated and falsified Criminal Proceeding (the "Fictitious Criminal Proceeding") with an unknown and irrelevant informant in Court Officer (Toronto Region) Mrs. Frugoni-Rojas and non-presiding justice in Justice of the Peace Mr. George Jiri ("JP Jiri"), a former police officer of the 52nd Division and then major crimes prior to his appointment in January 2024, albeit assigned to the Central West Region (OCJ Brampton Courthouse) (but no earlier than 2024-11-01, as supported by Mr. Sinnadurai's, a lawyer with the LSO employed by the MAG and counsel to Madam Justice Shore, ACJ McWatt, and Chief Justice Morawetz, correspondence, inter alia, on June 25, and July 4, 2025), unidentified and undisclosed actors manipulated the Information Package, resulting in its unauthenticated deposit or file at the Ontario Court of Justice ("OCJ"), 10 Armoury Street Courthouse (the "Transferee Courthouse") at the "Transferee Court Level"). Statutory interpretation and common law dictate that jurisprudence must not operate in an evidentiary vacuum. The extraordinary and unprecedented circumstances described require rigorous scrutiny and equitable intervention, guided by the maxim that fraud vitiates everything (fraus omnia corrumpit). Simply put, neither the unprecedented facts nor the unprecedented legal occurrences operate in a vacuum.

7. In the history of this country, there has only been one time where a police officer stole the stamp of a justice of the peace (see: R. v. Silva, 2019, QCCS) involving Mr. Guillame Jolly (Police Officer) but that was under the urgency of a situation with an assassin on the loose in Mr. Silva. It fell under "noble cause corruption" but was nonetheless unlawful (see: Appendices).

8. Now for the first time in this country, unidentified actors have manipulated an entire Information Package, removing the name of the Informant or the signatory of the or on behalf of the "Attorney General" (see: Criminal Code, section 2, Definitions), and who knows what else that they have concealed. Only time will tell.

9. it is never a standard practice for any judge, court official, or legal professional to sign their name with a single letter enclosed in parentheses, such as "(M)".

10. In the Canadian judiciary, official signatures strictly utilize legal names, standard initials (e.g., G.B.), or recognized title abbreviations (J., C.J., A.C.J., R.S.J.). Parentheses in legal drafting are typically only used to indicate a defined term, an alias, or a corporate capacity. An isolated, bracketed letter within a signature line is universally recognized as a typographical anomaly or software glitch, not a legitimate human signature convention. Certainly, it is not utilized by a "court officer", who was a TPS independent contractor working part-time but nonetheless with intimate knowledge of judges in each Toronto courthouse – not Central West Region OCJ Brampton Courthouse.

VOLUME #1(B): ADMINISTRATIVE APPARATUS AND THE PRIORITY EFFECT

Volume #1(B)(i): The Administrative Proximity of the Chief Justice

11. The Chief Justice's primary chambers are centrally located in the City of Toronto (Toronto Region) (Osgoode Hall by mailing address and 361 University Avenue by presumed undisclosed, lawfully so, "chambers" (nota bene: noting in NOM #3, that one SCJ RMO representative in Ms. Amirthalingam represented that there was no recording of such Undisclosed Criminal Proceeding), leading to heightened administrative awareness of the Toronto Region's operations. In civil court at SCJ 330 University Avenue Courthouse, there is a high volume of motions and the risk of not being able to locate certain motions is sometimes at issue. However, the same cannot be said of the Divisional Court in a JRPA Proceeding. Applications under section 123 of the Courts of Justice Act for Toronto or Divisional Court matters are direct appeals to the Chief Justice's administrative oversight, resulting in expedited institutional responses and corrective action. This Judicial Review Proceeding represents the second systemic failure in the Divisional Court's apparatus, previously necessitating the Second Notice of Motion on 2025-01-31 defined as "Motion #6" which related to NOM #2. The Third Notice of Motion was subsequently filed on 2025-11-17 with the required supporting documents, including the giving of a Confirmation of Motion on the 24th day of November 2025.

Volume #1(B)(ii): The Priority Effect and the Administrative Red Alert

12. The making of a motion under section 123 of the Courts of Justice Act triggers immediate remedial action by the Chief Justice or Divisional Court President, depending on the court in which the transgression of not giving a decision within three months or six months depending on whether the decision is one for an interlocutory issue or a Judgment issue. This "Priority Effect" acts as a systemic red alert, compelling accelerated administrative intervention.

13. When a litigant identifies a breach of the three-month (interlocutory) or six-month (final judgment) statutory timeframes, an administrative audit is triggered, requiring the Chief Justice's office to determine whether the delay is transient or due to undisclosed judicial incapacity.

14. Unfortunately for the public interest, there has not been any "red alert" let alone an "amber alert" and it appears that the underlying reason for the same is that within three business days after the Applicant mail filed his four orders for NOM #3-#5, the Chief Justice of the CJ announced his retirement (see: January 21, 2026). By any reasonable math, and with great respect, Chief Justice Morawetz by his call to then LSUC in late 1980 would be approximately 71 years old. Such an observation of reasonable approximation is not to discuss one's press clippings or age but to note the "retirement age" under the Judges Act (see: BOA, Tab 3) and how it dovetails with section 123 of the Courts of Justice Act.

15. The tricky aspect is determining and weaving one's way through the assignment of judicial duties in the SCJ versus the Divisional Court when there has been, without question, the most heinous breach of the JRPA and Rules of Civil Procedure when there was no single filing of a First Defence, delivery of a Form 38A (see: language in Form 68A) and even the pretense of the making (see: Rule 501), endorsing, issuing and then filing, and the entering and then filing of the same as per the amendments to Rule 502 to 505 in 2020 (see: BOA, Tab 56, Tab "I", O. Reg. 689/20) of an Order for "Assignment For Case Management" (see: Rule 77.02 and 77.05). In relating to the weaving and understanding of what occurs behind the scenes in the "Ex Parte In Camera Hearing" procedure,

16. In relation to the challenges and controversies of obtaining the Information/Indictment and the "Endorsement", noting the language of Intake Court Endorsement in the filed with the OCJ, albeit, at least in part and material particular, a false Information Package, the direct threat and extortionary acts by the Justice Sector Security Office, wherein it stated, not to email the correct "Court Office" of the Originating Courthouse but to emails "directed to the Chief Justice Morawetz resulting in the matter being reported" and "including the SCJ Correspondence Unit or Chief Justice Morawetz." The inference was that Chief Justice Morawetz on his own or through a proxy was personally monitoring these emails, and it was his Office of the Chief Justice ("CJO") that pulled the alarm to shut the Applicant down. It is notable, and the Applicant was incorrect in referring to the CSMD as the "diversion program" but the nature of the email coming from the CSMD but with a reference to the JSSO is oddly more concerning even though the author of the email was also undisclosed – a consistent theme. It was and is oddly more concerning considering in that this language is paramount, "Corporate Services Management Division provides strategic support and advice to the Ministry in the areas of: business and fiscal planning, human resources, facilities management, justice security, and the coordination of key strategic projects. Corporate Services Management Division also delivers Freedom of Information, French language and audit services in partnership with relevant central agencies to the justice sector as a whole. The Assistant Deputy Attorney General/CAO, Corporate Services Management Division, reports directly to MAG's Deputy Attorney General". When combining that language with section 74 of the Courts of Justice Act, "74 Documents and other materials that are no longer required in a court office shall be disposed of in accordance with the directions of the Deputy Attorney General, subject to the approval of, (b) in the Superior Court of Justice, the Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Justice; and (c) in the Ontario Court of Justice, the Chief Justice of the Ontario Court of Justice. 2006, c. 21, Sched. A, s. 14" yet the DAG (Ontario) represented to the Applicant that he did not direct the destruction of an Indictment or related documents

VOLUME #1(C): TEMPORAL GAPS AND EVIDENTIARY SEARCH PROTOCOLS

17. Under subsection 123(5) of the Courts of Justice Act, the Chief Justice typically initiates an inquiry with the impugned judicial officer so assigned to determine the status of the pending decision. If assurances of imminent disposition are given, an extension may be granted; otherwise, reassignment is required. Successor designation under subsection 123(1) is not arbitrary. The Chief Justice must select a jurist with capacity to process the dormant record thoroughly. The power to self-assign was meticulously delineated in previous submissions and evidence along with the five volume, five inch binder BOA (see: BOA Tab 72, The Role of a Chief Justice in Canada Peter W. Hogg Osgoode Hall Law School of York University Source Publication: (1993-94) 19:1 Queen's Law Journal 248-260 (see: pages 2328 to 2342); R. v. Baldovi et al, 2016 MBQB 90 ["Baldovi"], upheld at the MBCA and affirmed by the SCC, at [regarding how judges bearing criminal "Ex Parte In Camera Hearing" are assigned in Manitoba] and 72[ii] [iii] citing Ruffo (see: BOA, Tab 69),

VOLUME #1(D): THE OFF-DOCKET TRAP AND WRITTEN PROCEEDINGS

18. For motions decided solely on written submissions under Rule 37.12.1(4)-(6), section 123 is the only statutory safeguard against administrative abandonment. Such proceedings, conducted in camera and absent from the docket, may escape registry attention. The presiding jurist's identity is privileged until judgment is released. If the three-month limit in subsection 123(5)(b) expires without disposition, the motion serves both to locate the record and compel the Chief Justice to extend or reassign the matter.

19. For written proceedings, the Hearing is deemed to commence on the return date, starting the three-month calculation under subsection 123(5)(b). Subsection 123(5) empowers the Chief Justice to intervene directly in in camera matters, including relieving the judicial officer of other duties to expedite resolution.

20. Written motions under Rule 37.12.1 lack a public record of the responsible jurist, compelling reliance on subsection 123(4) when proceedings fall into administrative limbo. Cases like Runnalls (Re) illustrate the difficulties when registry cannot ascertain whether a matter is assigned or misplaced.

21. The Runnalls case, where delay persisted from a 2003 motion, exemplifies administrative friction when registry cannot confirm assignment or location of records.

VOLUME #1(E): STATUTORY REMEDIES AND JURISDICTIONAL DYNAMICS

Volume #1(E)(i): Subsection 123(7) of the Courts of Justice Act

22. In Sunsource Grids Inc. v. University of Windsor, 2023 ONSC 5621, Regional Senior Justice uses subsection 123(7) to cure assignment failures, mandating a specific judge to take jurisdiction over stalled proceedings. This mechanism is meant to operate in tandem with section 76, as directed by the Chief Justice or Divisional Court President, who alone may issue binding directives to the Registrar and court staff in the Divisional Court.

Volume #1(E)(ii): Judicial Privilege and the Delay Dichotomy

23. The presiding judge's identity is often privileged, creating a strict dichotomy: delays before assignment are institutional, while post-assignment delays are judicial, both governed by section 123. Litigants lack transparency to distinguish these delays. Applications under subsection 123(4) act as discovery tools, compelling disclosure of proceeding status. Remedy depends on whether assignment occurred: direct assignment ab initio under subsection 123(1) or relief of duties under subsection 123(5).The root problem is failure to assign, and the remedy remains a documented motion demanding Chief Justice or Regional Senior Justice act under section 123 to resolve the litigation. Statutory language makes failure to assign a dereliction attributable to the Chief Justice. But what if the Chief Justice is the cause of the problem? This is a matter to be addressed. It has been the law in this province since 1984 (see: already mail filed previous comprehensive submissions in February 2026 and March 2026 with respect to the repealed *Rule*s of Practice to the Rules of Civil Procedure (1984) wherein the former Rule 529 was amended to Rule 59.06(2)(a) and included an "Application" when the former did not).

VOLUME #1(F): CONFLICT OF INTEREST AS STATUTORY INABILITY

24. A conflict of interest is tantamount to judicial inability under section 123 of the Courts of Justice Act. Proceedings tainted by conflict must be recognized as absolute nullities, not mere procedural irregularities, violating statutory and equitable principles. The term "unable" is interpreted broadly to include legal inability, not just physical or administrative incapacity, with significant constitutional implications.

Volume #1(F)(i): The Expanse of the "For Any Reason" Provision

25. Subsection 123(1) uses expansive language—"for any reason unable"—to cover both physical impossibility and legal prohibition, including conflicts of interest discovered after Hearing commencement but before judgment. This broad language ensures that judges rendered legally unable by conflicts are disqualified from further adjudication.

Volume #1(F)(ii): The Constitutional Imperative of Impartiality

26. Judicial independence and impartiality are entrenched in subsection 11(d) of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms and as unwritten constitutional principles for all courts. Legal doctrines dictate that:

    a. Conflict of interest destroys the appearance of impartiality (nemo judex in causa sua).
    b. A judge lacking impartiality is constitutionally unable to render a valid decision.
    c. Decisions made in conflict are nullities ab initio and susceptible to appeal based on bias.

Volume #1(F)(iii): Recusal as the Catalyst for Statutory Intervention

27. Judicial recusal due to conflict triggers section 123 mechanisms:
    a. Administrative Transfer: Chief Justice or Regional Senior Justice must designate a successor under subsection 123(1) or (4); and

b. Rehearing Directive: A rehearing may be ordered, and the successor judge may decide based on the existing record or require a Hearing de novo if prior proceedings were contaminated.

Volume #1(F)(iv): Practical Repercussions for Off-Docket Adjudications

28. For written proceedings under Rule 37.12.1, the process is predictable:
    a. If a conflict is detected, the judge must notify scheduling, as required by the Ethical Principles for Judges.
    b. The judge's identity remains privileged, so litigants experience only unexplained delay within the statutory window.
    c. The inability is legal and ethical; the Chief Justice must find an untainted replacement, which may extend delay.
    d. Legal disqualification via conflict is the most compelling reason for finding judicial inability, mandating recusal and statutory intervention under section 123.

VOLUME #2: MATERIAL FACTS

29. The material facts are simple for this motion and they are outlined in painstaking detail in NOM #3, Motion #4, Motion #5, Motion #6, the brief written argument of February 3, 2026, and the summary of issues argument in late February 2026, and further documents.

VOLUME #3: STATEMENT OF ISSUES

30. The following statement of issues arises within the intricate adjudicative framework governed by the Courts of Justice Act, R.S.O. 1990, c. C.43, and implicates the Superior Court of Justice of Ontario. Each issue is interrelated, engaging questions of jurisdictional authority, procedural compliance, and constitutional principle—all of which bear directly upon the foundational integrity of the tribunal's administrative process:

    a. Issue I: Whether, in strict conformity with the statutory provisions of the Courts of Justice Act, the Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Justice, acting as President of the Divisional Court pursuant to subsection 123(1), retains exclusive and non-delegable authority to assign judicial duties for the adjudication of Motion #7 related to NOM #3, thereby prohibiting any unauthorized assumption of jurisdiction by a puisne judge.
    b. Issue II: Whether a formal and procedurally compliant proposal was advanced by the Applicant stipulating that NOM #3 be adjudicated exclusively in writing, absent the physical or virtual attendance of the Responding Parties, and if so, the precise date of crystallization and transmission of such proposal.
    c. Issue III: Whether the statutory notice period—mandating no less than fourteen days—was strictly observed in the service and filing of NOM #3, thereby fulfilling the fundamental principles of audi alteram partem.
    d. Issue IV: Whether the procedural architecture and statutory regime required the Applicant to institute a remedial motion within the extant Judicial Review Procedure Act, as opposed to commencing a de novo originating process, for properly addressing newly discovered evidence of intentional fraud and material facts arising post-adjudication.

e. Issue V: Whether the Applicant was procedurally obligated to proceed by way of interlocutory motion to vitiate any profound nullities, jurisdictional defects, or procedural irregularities within the existing Judicial Review Procedure Act proceeding, rather than initiating an entirely distinct and multiplicity originating process.

f. Issue VI: Whether the Responding Parties were flawlessly and incontrovertibly served with all requisite procedural documentation in accordance with the prescriptive and unyielding mandates of the Rules of Civil Procedure, R.R.O. 1990, Reg. 194.

g. Issue VII: Whether the statutorily prescribed tariff fees, pursuant to O. Reg. 158/03, were successfully and fully remitted by the Applicant, and the exact date upon which financial clearance of such remittance was finalized by the Ministry.

h. Issue VIII: The precise calendar date on which NOM #3 was legally returnable before the tribunal, thus initiating the statutory deliberation period.

i. Issue IX: Whether a procedurally compliant and structurally sound confirmation of motion was transmitted to the former Registrar, in strict adherence to the timelines demanded by the Rules of Civil Procedure, and the exact date of such transmission.

j. Issue X: The specific temporal juncture at which the Applicant conclusively discovered and verified the total, incurable absence of any First Defence filed by the Responding Parties within the formal court record.

k. Issue XI: The specific temporal juncture at which the Applicant conclusively discovered that no formal, authorized, or valid Order for Assignment for Case Management had been issued, endorsed, or entered by the tribunal, thereby rendering subsequent case management directives legally vacuous.

l. Issue XII: The precise date upon which the mandatory three-month statutory limitation period legally expired for the deliverance of a judicial determination by a properly assigned motions judge of the Divisional Court.

m. Issue XIII: Whether unauthorized and ultra vires judicial interventions, operating absent a foundational jurisdictional mandate, trigger application of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms and necessitate a formal Notice of Constitutional Question to address institutional inconsistency ("Section 96 Inconsistency").

n. Issue XIV: Whether the administrative actions of the Crown, in concert with corporate Respondents, operated with mala fides to such a degree that their conduct crossed the actionable threshold of bad faith ("Bad Faith Threshold"), thereby exposing the state to liability for Charter damages.

o. Issue XV: Whether the comprehensive BOA Index, spanning three hundred and twelve (312) individual tabs, conclusively precludes the emergence of a jurisdictional vacuum by providing the indispensable navigational apparatus required to adjudicate profound constitutional and procedural anomalies.

p. Issue XVI: Whether the formal introduction of Similar Fact Evidence, properly proffered as SFE Fresh Evidence, meets the rigorous jurisprudential threshold for admissibility on judicial review, establishing a persistent, orchestrated pattern of administrative paralysis and procedural obfuscation.

q. Issue XVII: Whether judicial acts undertaken without statutory prerequisite constitute actions coram non judice resulting in irremediable nullity demanding corrective vacatur as opposed to mere appellate review, thereby neutralizing the doctrine of estoppel by record ("Estoppel By Record").

r. Issue XVIII: Whether the Responding Parties' failure to correct false representations and strategic silence during adjudication, as established by the evidentiary record, constitutes actionable deceit analogous to the precedent set in Sidhu Estate v. Bains, 1996 CanLII 3332 (BCCA).

s. Issue XIX: Whether the documented manipulation of the judicial record, specifically the digital obfuscation via Grape City PDF software and the anomalous "CL (M)" annotation, irreparably severed chain of custody, constituting deliberate fabrication of authority.

t. Special Issue: To the extent that Chief Justice Morawetz (as styled, rather than The Honourable Chief Justice of the SCJ Mr. G.B. Morawetz) was or is the undisclosed presiding "Ex Parte In Camera Hearing" judge involving any criminal proceeding concerning the Applicant, he cannot hear and decide NOM #2, NOM #3, Motions #4-7.

5298 u. Special Issue: To the extent that was the case, which judge of the Divisional Court must decide those matters.

VOLUME #4: LEGAL BASES

VOLUME #4(A): LEGISLATIVE HIERARCHY

31. It is a foundational and immutable precept within the realms of administrative and constitutional jurisprudence that primary legislative enactments possess unassailable supremacy over all subordinate regulatory schemes. The governing principles are as follows: n circumstances where a primary legislative enactment ("Statute") and a subordinate delegated enactment ("Regulation") are in irreconcilable conflict, the former prevails, ensuring the doctrine of statutory paramountcy is preserved. Any regulatory provision or administrative directive that contravenes a statutory mandate is, by operation of law, rendered ultra vires and is to be treated as a nullity ab initio, not merely a procedural irregularity, as such deviation constitutes a direct violation of statutory or equitable principles. Applying this doctrine to the current factual matrix, any administrative departure from the explicit codifications of the Courts of Justice Act ("CJA") is vitiated, mandating immediate and unconditional restoration of the status quo ante.

VOLUME #4(B): JURISDICTIONAL PARAMETERS OF THE COURTS OF JUSTICE ACT

32. Section 1 of the CJA legislates the term "Order" to encompass a formal judgment or decree. Concurrently, *Rule*s 77.02 and 77.05 of the Rules of Civil Procedure ("*Rule*s") require that for a proceeding ("Proceeding") to be assigned for case management, an Order must be formally pronounced and effectuated by a judge of the Divisional Court. Absent such pronouncement, the procedural framework for case management is non-existent, rendering subsequent administrative acts jurisdictionally void. The Divisional Court's composition is articulated in subsection 18(2) of the CJA: the Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Justice, acting ex officio as president of the Divisional Court, the Associate Chief Justice, and jurists designated by the Chief Justice. The exclusive authority to designate Superior Court judges to preside in the Divisional Court resides solely with the president of the Divisional Court.

VOLUME #4(C): APPELLATE LIMITATIONS, SYLLOGISTIC DEDUCTIONS, AND THE DOCTRINE OF NULLITY

33. Appellate jurisdiction is strictly circumscribed by subsection 6(1) of the CJA, permitting appeals to the Court of Appeal for Ontario only from an Order of the Divisional Court on questions not limited to fact alone, subject to leave as stipulated by the *Rule*s. It follows that an appeal cannot be taken from an administrative "direction" issued by a Divisional Court jurist. Without a formal Order assigning a proceeding for case management, an application under the Judicial Review Procedure Act ("JRPA") is precluded from specialized case management and must proceed under the JRPA, CJA, and the limited *Rule*s applicable to Divisional Court applications.

34. Neither applicant nor respondent may be deprived of substantive appellate rights where the *Rule*s direct a Toronto Region proceeding—specifically a Divisional Court application under the JRPA—to progress along standard procedural tracks or no tracks at al. If no statutory mechanism exists for appeal from a purported Divisional Court disposition, it is prima facie established that the presiding jurist failed to effectuate a lawful Order or decided solely on a question of fact, extinguishing appellate jurisdiction entirely.

VOLUME #4(D): STATUTORY IMPERATIVES FOR JUDICIAL ADMINISTRATION

35. Since legislative amendments in 2006, section 71 of the CJA imposes a codified mandate for judicial administration to achieve several systemic objectives:

    a. Maintain absolute independence of the judiciary as a constitutionally distinct branch;
    b. Respect the division of responsibilities between the Attorney General and judiciary;
    c. Promote public accessibility and confidence in justice;
    d. Advance high-quality services to the public;
    e. Ensure efficient and economical use of public resources.

VOLUME #4(E): SECTION 123 OF THE COURTS OF JUSTICE ACT: INABILITY AND FAILURE TO ADJUDICATE

36. Section 123 of the CJA, titled "Judge's retirement, etc., inability or failure to give decision," establishes a statutory mechanism to address adjudicative paralysis.

37. "Inability" is defined as the objective state of lacking requisite power, capacity, proficiency, or means to fulfil an adjudicative function. In legal context, Inability denotes a condition—transient or permanent—preventing a jurist from executing statutory duties.

38. Synonyms strictly applied include incapacity, incompetence, powerlessness, and ineptitude, each capturing distinct dimensions of adjudicative impairment.

39. "Failure" is conceptualized as non-attainment of success or non-performance of a statutory obligation, varying in interpretation between administrative and physiological contexts.

40. Subsection 123(1) CJA designates "chief judge" as the authority to assign duties to subordinate jurists. The president of the Divisional Court holds exclusive jurisdiction to superintend judicial sittings and assign duties.

41. Sections 72 and 75 of the CJA codify this authority, covering court sittings, jurist allocation, complex proceedings, and scheduling. With the president of the Divisional Court's declared retirement effective 2026-01-21, subsection 123(2) preserves their authority for a transitional ninety-day period.

42. Subsection 123(4) addresses a judge sitting alone who is unable to render a decision, encompassing both lack of jurisdiction and impairment of independence. Subsection 123(5) concerns temporal limitations post-adjudication.

43. Statutory reference to "Hearing" applies to formal Hearings, not administrative conferences.

44. For matters such as NOM 3, the limitation period for decision is three months unless convened for final judgment.

45. The president of the Divisional Court must relieve the adjudicator of NOM 3, self-assign the proceeding, and mirror the relief sought in Motion 6 regarding NOM 2.

46. The president is mandated to delineate a timeline for decision, no later than 2026-04-17.

47. Subsection 123(7) imposes an obligation on the Chief Justice to issue directions and Orders that are substantively just, strictly adhering to the CJA and *Rule*s, including determination of costs relief as detailed in the first updated compendium of NOM 3 transmitted on 2025-12-11.

VOLUME #4(F): JURISPRUDENTIAL APPLICATION AND THE CONSEQUENCES OF INSTITUTIONAL STAGNATION

Volume #4(F)(I): Analysis of Section 123 Jurisprudence

48. The jurisprudence traces the trajectory of judicial Inability and Failure to decide under section 123 of the CJA:

    a. The temporal gap between initial judicial failure and administrative intervention is critical.
    b. In the Divisional Court, operative authority resides with the Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Justice, acting as president.
    c. Section 14 CJA is inapplicable to Divisional Court proceedings, as it pertains solely to Regional Senior Judges.

d. Physical location of the Regional Senior Judge at Osgoode Hall does not confer jurisdiction over Divisional Court matters.

49. Rule 77 governs allocation of judicial duties post-Assignment for Case Management, supplemented by amendments to *Rule*s 502–506.

Volume #4(F)(II): The "Markedly Longer" Standard and Judicial Integrity

50. R. v. Swaine, 2025 ONCA 614 ("Swaine Decision") is an intricate appellate case involving judicial immunity and delayed court communications:

    a. Chief Justice's response latency spanned two to three months, prompted by motion after an eighteen-month delay in written reasons.
    b. Presiding jurist suffered severe physiological afflictions, rendering him unavailable.
    c. "On its face" delay was deemed highly irregular and deleterious to justice.

51. Trial judge's resignation led to proceedings for evidentiary disclosure from the Executive Legal Officer.

52. Appellate tribunal applied R. v. Trotta, 2004 CanLII 34722 (ON CA) as modified by R. v. Jaser, 2014 ONSC 6052, concluding risks to judicial independence outweighed probative value of sought evidence. Communications with retired jurists regarding decision-making are precluded by deliberative privilege.

53. Constitutional expediency principles relating to section 123 CJA and section 11(b) of the Charter are illustrated by R. v. Osaigbovo, 2024 ONSC 6914, R. v Taylor, 2023 ONSC 2481 and R. v. Ansari, 2023 ONSC 1858. CJA sets administrative expectations; Charter imposes constitutional ceiling.

54. In Ansari, a 7.2-month delay breached statutory guideline but not the "markedly longer" standard for a judicial stay, underscoring the CJA's role in quantifying administrative failure prior to constitutional unconstitutionality.

Volume #4(F)(III): Administrative Silence and Procedural Fairness

55. In Auciello v. La, 2024 ONSC 618 ("Auciello Decision"), the Divisional Court emphasized the three-month window for written decisions as a fundamental safeguard of procedural fairness:

    a. Failure to adhere to this timeline constitutes a breach of natural justice.
    b. This standard applies to NOM 3, and the six-month limit was breached for NOM 2, a motion for judgment.
    c. Systemic inability to provide efficient, affordable justice reflects negatively on court integrity, transforming procedural delay into substantive denial of justice.

56. Salah v. Timothy's Coffees of the World Inc., 2009 CanLII 58066 ("Salah Decision") saw the Chief Justice appoint a successor after twelve months of judicial silence, mitigating prejudice to the franchisee. Analogously, the present litigation has suffered twelve months of paralysis regarding NOM 2, with Madam Justice Shore's interventions classified as nullities, governed by the maxim factum a judice, quod ad officium jure non pertinet, ratum non est. Motion 6 seeks permanent expungement of these defective steps, documents and/or purported and/or actual orders.

Volume #4(F)(IV): The Complexity Exception and Procedural Transparency

57. In K.M. v. Marson, 2018 ONSC 3493 ("Marson Decision"), the judge independently invoked subsection 123(5), a statutory misconstruction as notification authority is conferred solely upon the Chief Judge. Despite this irregularity, Marson demonstrates the court's commitment to thoroughness in complex adjudications, distinguishing "thin skull" and "crumbling skull" doctrines and justifying transparent extensions for meticulous adjudication.

Volume #4(F)(V): Functional Inability, Rehearings, and Record Preservation

58. Functional inability and the "remedy of last resort" are elucidated in Abou-Assaly v. El-Saikali, 2025 ONSC 2707 and McGee v. Farazli et al., 2022 ONSC 4105 confirming Inability as a jurisprudential construct protecting litigants and enabling successor judges to proceed under subsections 123(4) and 123(7) CJA. Barry v. Certified Equipment Sales Services and Rentals LTD., 2019 ONSC 473 establishes that rehearing under section 123 CJA is not a redundant retrial; the successor jurist is empowered to rely on the preserved evidentiary record. Cooney v. Neave, 2016 ONSC 525 exemplifies administrative efficiency in family law, with the Chief Justice reassigning proceedings and directing reliance on existing evidence and transcripts. Smith v Brockton (Municipality), 2016 ONSC 6781 extrapolates section 123 CJA principles to arbitration, confirming that finality and efficiency are paramount, and the preserved record suffices barring fundamental injustice.

Volume #4(F)(VI): Combating Systemic Stagnation

59. Runnalls v. Chief Justice of Ontario, 2011 ONSC 95 demonstrates the Chief Justice's capacity to act swiftly to dismantle systemic failures, even those persisting for a decade. Patra Ironworks & Railings v Laurin General Contractor, 2017 ONSC 1690 shows that existing endorsements can preclude rehearing orders, but, as actions were undertaken coram non judice since 2025-01-07, the adjudications are nullities ab initio, rendering this limitation inapplicable.

Volume #4(G)(I): Statutory Application to Written Adjudications

60. Section 123 CJA applies with full force to motions adjudicated exclusively in writing under the *Rule*s. The CJA and *Rule*s define "Hearing" to exclude "conferences," ensuring safeguards against judicial Inability or delay are operative and binding in written proceedings.

Volume #4(G)(II): Commencement of Procedural Timelines in Written Proceedings

61. Under Rule 37.12.1(4) of the *Rule*s, motions may proceed on a written record if consented to or unopposed. In such cases, the "Hearing" commences on the specified return date, and the three-month limitation under clause 123(5)(b) CJA is triggered from that date or the final written submission. This elevates the necessity for transparent statutory compliance.

The Modalities of Administrative Privilege and Assignment

62. Written adjudications entail procedural complexity due to administrative deliberative privilege, shielding the jurist's identity until decision promulgation:

a. Litigants are generally unaware of the judicial assignment during deliberation and post Hearing date;
b. If the three-month period expires without disposition, subsection 123(5) CJA compels Chief Justice intervention; and
c. Litigants may petition the Chief Justice for extension or reassignment, prompting mandatory administrative review.

Definitional Parameters of Written Hearings

63. Paftali v. Paftali, 2020 ONSC 5325 ("Paftali Decision") confirms that receipt of a written motion and factum under Rule 37.12.1 constitutes commencement of a "Hearing" for section 123 CJA purposes. If the presiding jurist retires or fails to decide within three months, the Chief Justice may assign a successor to resolve the proceeding on the existing record.

Efficiency in Successor Assignments for Opposed Written Motions

64. For opposed written motions under Rule 37.12.1(4), subsection 123(7) CJA enables procedural efficacy: the successor jurist conducts a de novo review of the record and factums, requiring no further input unless clarification is sought.

Finalization of Ancillary Judgments and Costs

65. Nassab v ErinoakKids, 2017 ONSC 2740 and 1515280 Ontario Limited v City of Waterloo, 2016 ONSC 3492 demonstrate that appellate panels may reserve costs decisions for subsequent written disposition. If a jurist is incapacitated, subsection 123(3) CJA empowers remaining panel members to finalize the costs Order, as seen in Nassab where extraordinary costs against counsel were determined despite panel changes.

The Adjudicative Boundary: Decisions vs. Incomplete Writings

66. Johnston v. Stewart, 1994 CanLII 123 (ON CA) ("Johnston Decision") requires tribunals to distinguish between preparatory writings and formal decisions. If a jurist's notes do not resolve all core issues, they are classified as writings, triggering subsection 123(4) CJA and successor assignment to determine final methodology.

JURISDICTIONAL VOIDS AND ADMINISTRATIVE EFFICIENCY

67. The administrative efficiency of the CJA, compared to more rigid statutes, is highlighted in R. v. Live Nation Canada Inc., 2016 ONCJ 735 ("Live Nation Decision"), where elevation of a provincial jurist mid-trial resulted in loss of jurisdiction due to absence of "continuing jurisdiction" provisions. Section 123 CJA circumvents such voids, avoiding redundant retrials.

68. In Sunsource Grids Inc. v. University of Windsor, 2023 ONSC 5621 models targeted case management under the CJA, confirming section 123 as an instrument for proactive, strategic judicial administration, empowering leadership to direct proceedings toward expeditious resolution and preventing litigation stagnation within institutional backlog.

VOLUME #4: ESTOPPEL BY RECORD AND THE JURISDICTIONAL PREREQUISITE (SEE: APPENDICES)

VOLUME #4(A): FOUNDATIONAL TAXONOMIC DISTINCTIONS IN ANGLE V. MNR

69. The Supreme Court of Canada in Angle v. Minister of National Revenue, [1975] 2 S.C.R. 248, established the foundational taxonomy distinguishing cause of action estoppel from issue estoppel. The former precludes re-litigation of the same cause, while the latter bars reconsideration of specific issues previously determined, contingent upon a three-part test: (i) identity of parties, (ii) identity of issues, and (iii) finality of the determination.
70. The requirement of a 'fundamental fact'—a fact essential to the judgment and not merely incidental—emerges as a critical threshold for the operation of issue estoppel. The jurisprudential distinction underscores the necessity for clarity in the scope of preclusion, ensuring only matters truly adjudicated are estopped.

VOLUME #4(B): THE JURISDICTIONAL IMPERATIVE: TURIGAN V. ALBERTA

71. Jurisdiction constitutes a prerequisite for the valid exercise of judicial power. In Turigan v. Alberta, 2023 ABCA 112, the Alberta Court of Appeal reaffirmed that absence of jurisdiction renders proceedings a nullity, incapable of generating estoppel or binding effect. The effect of nullity is profound: any order made without jurisdiction is void ab initio, with no legal consequences. Jurisdictional defects cannot be cured by subsequent agreement or acquiescence; they operate as a categorical bar to estoppel by record.

VOLUME #4(C): ELABORATED CASE APPLICATIONS AND LEGAL THEMES OF FINALITY

72. The doctrine of estoppel by record is animated by the principle of finality, yet it is circumscribed by exceptions such as fraud. The fraud shield prevents estoppel from arising where the original judgment was procured by fraudulent means, preserving the integrity of the judicial process. Distinction from equitable estoppel is critical: estoppel by record arises from judicial determinations, while equitable estoppel is grounded in representations and reliance. Case law, including R. v. Zarinchang, 2010 ONCA 286, illustrates the limits of estoppel in criminal and civil proceedings, emphasizing the imperative of finality and the exceptions thereto.

VOLUME #4(D): BROADER IMPLICATIONS AND CONCEPTUAL FOUNDATIONS

73. The terminology surrounding estoppel has evolved, reflecting broader conceptual frameworks. The 'Three Rooms' metaphor—adjudication, execution, and collateral attack—illustrates the spatial and procedural consequences of estoppel doctrines, delimiting the scope of litigation and enforcement. The consequences of estoppel extend beyond mere preclusion; they reinforce judicial economy, respect for prior determinations, and the legitimacy of the courts. Conceptual foundations rooted in certainty and predictability underscore the doctrine's enduring relevance.

VOLUME #4(E): THE MACFOY PRINCIPLE: YOU CANNOT PUT SOMETHING ON NOTHING

74. The seminal dictum in MacFoy v. United Africa Co. Ltd., [1961] 3 All ER 1169 (PC), encapsulates the principle that legal nullity cannot serve as a foundation for subsequent proceedings. A structure built upon a void act collapses entirely, rendering all derivative actions ineffectual. This principle bears significant implications for case management: procedural acts predicated on jurisdictional error or nullity must be struck, lest the integrity of the litigation process be compromised.

VOLUME #4(F): THE DOCTRINES OF FACTUM A JUDICE, QUOD AD OFFICIUM JURE NON PERTINET, RATUM NON EST AND OF CORAM NON JUDICE AND JUDICIAL INCOMPETENCE

75. The doctrine of coram non judice arises when proceedings occur before a tribunal lacking authority. Non-judicial statements or acts are incapable of producing valid orders or preclusive effect; judicial incompetence vitiates the entire process. The jurisprudence, as reflected in R. v. Smith, [1992] 2 S.C.R. 915, affirms that proceedings coram non judice are void and incapable of generating estoppel by record or issue estoppel.

VOLUME #4(G): THE RULE 77 PARAMOUNTCY AND THE CONFLICT WITH RULE 50

76. Procedural *Rule*s may conflict, creating fragmentation and uncertainty. Rule 77, which governs summary disposition, is paramount where it operates as a condition precedent, superseding Rule 50's provisions for ordinary disposition. The conflict necessitates careful judicial analysis to preserve procedural integrity. Fragmentation arising from Rule conflict underscores the need for explicit statutory guidance and judicial restraint. Paramountcy ensures that procedural requirements are met before substantive rights are adjudicated.

VOLUME #4(H): THE PROCEDURAL IMPROPRIETY OF COMBINED DISPOSITIONS

77. Administrative clarity demands the separation of orders and dispositions. Combined dispositions, wherein multiple procedural matters are resolved simultaneously, risk procedural impropriety and obfuscate appellate review. The jurisprudence favours clear, distinct orders to facilitate appellate scrutiny and avoid confusion. Procedural propriety is essential to the legitimacy and transparency of judicial proceedings.

VOLUME #4(I): THE RIGHT TO BE HEARD AND NOT THE RIGHT TO CONFERENCE

78. The constitutional right to be heard is foundational, distinguishing it from the mere right to conference or consultation. Hearing entails adversarial engagement and an opportunity to present evidence and argument, as affirmed in Baker v. Canada (Minister of Citizenship and Immigration), [1999] 2 S.C.R. 817.The right to conference, while valuable for procedural management, does not substitute for the substantive right to be heard. Judicial and administrative bodies must ensure the former is protected, preserving the fairness and integrity of proceedings.

VOLUME #4(J): CONCLUSION

79. The doctrines of estoppel by record, jurisdictional prerequisite, and procedural propriety collectively safeguard the integrity of the Canadian legal system. The jurisprudential and conceptual analyses herein reaffirm the necessity of clear boundaries, judicial competence, and the constitutional right to be heard, ensuring the administration of justice remains robust and principled.

VOLUME #6: ANSWERS TO THE ISSUES DENOTED ABOVE: BRIEF ANSWERS AND EXTRAPOLATION OF LEGAL PRINCIPLES

VOLUME #6(A): THE PRIMACY OF THE CHIEF JUSTICE AND DELEGATION OF ADJUDICATIVE AUTHORITY (ISSUES I & XII)

80. The organizational architecture of the Ontario judiciary is defined by the statutory mandate that the Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Justice simultaneously serves as President of the Divisional Court, a dual designation enshrined with permanence in section 18 and subsection 123(1) of the Courts of Justice Act ("CJA"). This structural duality is not a mere formality, but an essential safeguard for the administration of justice, ensuring that the apex of the judiciary exercises comprehensive oversight both in ordinary and appellate matters:

a. a. Within this statutorily embedded framework, the President of the Divisional Court possesses plenary, intrinsic, and exclusive authority not only to allocate judicial resources judiciously but also to manage the tribunal's docket, assign complex adjudicative tasks, and oversee the distribution of all single-judge motions. This concentration of administrative sovereignty acts as a bulwark against fragmentation and ensures coherence in judicial decision-making.
b. b. The non-delegable obligation to assign a suitable jurist for NOM #3 as of December 3, 2025, was incumbent upon the Honourable Chief Justice Mr. Geoffrey B. Morawetz. The absence of an active, judicious assignment precipitated procedural stagnation, undermining both the court's supervisory jurisdiction and the foundational tenets of access to justice, which are pillars of the legal system's legitimacy.

81. The jurisprudential foundation laid in R. v. Baldovi, 2016 MBQB 90, and affirmed at the appellate level, draws from the Supreme Court's reasoning in Ruffo v. Conseil de la magistrature, [1995] 4 S.C.R. 267, establishing the doctrine of primus inter pares ("Primus Inter Pares"). This doctrine is not simply ceremonial but constitutes a substantive and potent grant of administrative sovereignty and ultimate jurisdiction ("Ultimate Jurisdiction") over the tribunal's operational integrity:

a. a. The Primus Inter Pares doctrine empowers the Chief Justice as the principal guardian of administrative integrity, ensuring that the court's operational framework remains insulated from external and internal anomalies.
b. b. Systemic anomalies, procedural controversies, or the tribunal's exposure to profound public scrutiny—especially due to executive branch interference (inclusive of the Licence Appeal Tribunal and Tribunals Ontario)—transmute ordinary litigation into a president's case ("President's Case"), demanding extraordinary judicial intervention.
c. c. The Chief Justice is compelled to discharge a suite of inherent administrative duties ("Thirteen Chief Justice Duties"), including acting as the constitutional trust steward ("Constitutional Trust Steward"), upholding an imperviously influenced mandate ("Imperviously Influenced Mandate"), and functioning as the paramount master of the roster ("Master of the Roster").
d. d. By invoking the self-assignment power ("Self-Assignment Power"), the Chief Justice assumes direct control over adjudication, becoming the institutional reputation guardian ("Institutional Reputation Guardian") and moral barometer ("Moral Barometer") of the court, purifying ("Purification") the procedural record to eliminate unauthorized or ultra vires interventions.

82. The calculation of the expiration of the judicial deliberation period (Issue XII) was directly affected by administrative paralysis ("Administrative Paralysis") that impeded timely issuance of a substantive decision within three months of December 3, 2025; thus, the statutory deadline for adjudication crystallized no later than March 3, 2026.

    a. a. Despite strict arithmetic calculation, reliance is placed upon the dates of December 8, 2025, or alternatively December 11, 2025—the moments at which draft orders and substantive compendia were compelled to be filed by traditional mail owing to systemic failures of the Ontario Courts Public Portal.
    b. b. Employing the doctrine of lex non cogit ad impossibilia ("the law does not compel the impossible"), it is impermissible to penalize the Applicant for technological incapacities of the state. Consequently, the expiry date for a mandated decision is irrevocably and equitably established as March 11, 2026.

83. This section underscores the imperative of judicial primacy and the requirement that administrative authority and procedural integrity are exercised without dilution, ensuring that the court's operational and adjudicative processes are unimpeachable and unassailable.

VOLUME #6(B): II. PROCEDURAL EXACTITUDE, NOTICE, AND EXPIRATION OF RESPONDING RIGHTS (ISSUES II, III, VI, VII, VIII, IX)

84. The procedural machinery of the tribunal was engaged with rigorous precision by the Applicant. NOM #3 was properly proposed for written adjudication, unequivocally absent the physical presence or oral argument of Responding Parties, on November 17, 2025. The notice period, consisting of at least fourteen clear days, was strictly adhered to, in total compliance with Rule 37.12.1(4)(a) of the *Rule*s. Such procedural exactitude is a testament to the Applicant's commitment to fundamental justice and the doctrine of audi alteram partem, affording opposing parties every reasonable opportunity to participate in the adversarial process—a privilege they ultimately declined.

85. Service of prescribed documentation upon all Responding Parties was executed flawlessly, as substantiated by the affidavit of service commissioned November 21, 2025. The mandatory tariff fee stipulated in O. Reg. 158/03 was remitted and cleared November 26, 2025, further accompanied by exhaustive digital cross-referencing and hyperlinking, evidencing total compliance with registry protocols.

86. Confirmation of motion was delivered scrupulously to the former Registrar on November 24, 2025, satisfying all mandatory procedural requirements imposed upon moving parties by Rule 37.1. Accordingly, NOM #3 became legally returnable and officially seized by the tribunal as of December 3, 2025, by operation of law.

87. In stark contrast, the Responding Parties abjectly abdicated their procedural and statutory obligations, failing to deliver any responsive documentation, formal consent, notice of objection, or responding factum. This total silence constitutes procedural forfeiture ("Procedural Forfeiture"), the deliberate failure to respond to a properly constituted motion serving as an irrefutable deemed admission, forfeiting the right to oppose the relief sought and precluding collateral attacks henceforth.

    a. a. The ten-day period for opposing materials expired unequivocally November 27, 2025; silence thereafter triggers procedural forfeiture.

    b. b. This procedural silence is not a mere oversight; it is a deliberate legal forfeiture, signaling tacit admission and yielding the requested order to the Applicant's favor.

88. The procedural exactitude demanded by the *Rule*s is not merely a formality, but a substantive guarantee of fairness, transparency, and justice. The deliberate abdication of these rights by Responding Parties strengthens the Applicant's legal position, reinforcing the necessity for the court to grant the relief sought without further procedural impediment.

89. The historical and epistemological evolution of civil procedure within this jurisdiction has conclusively shown that the Applicant was singularly obligated to bring his motion within the existing JRPA Proceeding, not through a costly or duplicative originating process. The antecedent framework—Rules of Practice, R.R.O. 1970, Reg. 545, specifically Rule 529—confined fraud-based impeachment exclusively to actions, creating a procedural vacuum ("Procedural Vacuum") for those whose grievances arose from applications or reviews.

    a. a. This rigid adherence to archaic forms forced an onerous traditional path ("Onerous Traditional Path") on victims of fraud, bifurcating relief and emphasizing procedural minutiae over substantive justice.

    b. b. The bifurcated system ("Bifurcated System") often required a new lawsuit to correct a tainted administrative record, causing unnecessary delay and expense.

90. The legislative promulgation of the Courts of Justice Act, 1984, and unified *Rule*s (notably Rule 506(2)(a)), eradicated this dichotomy, replacing "action" with "proceeding," thereby ensuring universal corrective jurisdiction ("Corrective Jurisdiction"). Jurisprudence, such as 100 Main Street East Ltd. v. Sakas (1975), 8 O.R. (2d) 385 (C.A.), now demands that motions to rectify fraud-tainted judgments be brought within the original proceedings.

    a. a. The doctrine of ex turpi causa non oritur actio mandates that orders birthed through deceit, criminal misappropriation, or obstruction (including theft of digital and physical evidence) are profound nullities ab initio.

    b. b. Judgments or procedural advantages obtained by calculated fraud ("Fraus Legis") never attain sacrosanct protection of res judicata; finality does not shield malfeasance, but presupposes an adjudication unsullied by systemic subversion.

    c. c. The deliberate failure of administrative tribunals to compile and file the complete record—especially under section 20 of the Statutory Powers Procedure Act ("SPPA")—is legal erasure ("Legal Erasure") that transforms the proceeding into an adjudicative nullity, demanding swift corrective action under Rule 506(2)(a).

91. This section highlights the importance of modern remedial frameworks, ensuring procedural and substantive justice are not subordinated to outdated procedural formalism. The court's corrective jurisdiction is a necessary tool to expunge tainted proceedings and maintain the integrity of the judicial process.

VOLUME #6(D): IV. VOID AB INITIO DOCTRINE, UNAUTHORIZED JUDICIAL INTERVENTIONS, AND CONSTITUTIONAL INCONSISTENCIES (ISSUES X, XI, XIII, XVII)

92. The discoveries crystallized as of December 1, 2025, possess existential jurisdictional significance. No Respondent had filed a First Defence, nor had any valid Order for Assignment for Case Management been issued, endorsed, or entered onto the court record. Rule 77.05(2) strictly dictates that case management powers are only triggered upon formal filing and registration of a First Defence ("Condition Precedent").

    a. Any unilateral convening of conferences or directives by a presiding justice under Rule 50.13, while ignoring Rule 77 triggers, constitutes an ultra vires circumvention.

    b. Rule 77.02(4) dictates absolute paramountcy; any conflict with other *Rule*s is resolved in favor of Rule 77.

    c. The transition power under Rule 77.09(3) is constrained to procedural hiccups arising from the transition itself—not to conjure jurisdiction absent the foundational Condition Precedent.

    d. Interventions by the Presiding Justice performed coram non judice represent irremediable nullity ("Irremediable Nullity"), bypassing conventional appellate frameworks and necessitating direct correction.

93. The consequences of adjudication rendered coram non judice are profound: acts undertaken outside explicit statutory authority are not curable procedural irregularities, but incurable nullities ab initio. This principle is affirmed in McLean v. Bradley, Pong v. Quong, and Turigan v. Alberta (SCC, ABCA). Procedural nullity plunges proceedings into the "Realm of Nullity," requiring mandatory vacatur ex debito justitiae.

94. The doctrine of estoppel by record ("Estoppel By Record") does not apply to orders made coram non judice—a void instrument cannot compel obedience, and collateral attack is expressly permitted. The perpetuation of an irremediable nullity compromises judicial independence, elevating procedural non-compliance to constitutional infraction.

a. The Charter applies forcefully to common law *Rule*s authorizing government action, including sua sponte judicial interventions (Hill v. Church of Scientology (SCC)).

b. Unauthorized intervention engenders Section 96 inconsistency, compelling issuance of a Notice of Constitutional Question.

c. While judicial immunity shields from personal liability, it does not insulate ultra vires acts from administrative remedy; abusive or void acts are subject to expungement (Attorney General of Canada v. Power (SCC); TD Insurance Home and Auto v. Sivakumar).

95. The Chief Justice, acting, at least by title and duties, as protector of the lex terrae, is legally mandated to purify the record, declare unauthorized steps void, and restore the status quo ante. This section underscores the fundamental imperative of upholding constitutional boundaries and the separation of powers in judicial administration.

VOLUME #7: ORDERS SOUGHT

VOLUME #7(A): COMPREHENSIVE RELIEF PURSUANT TO STATUTORY, EQUITABLE, AND CONSTITUTIONAL PRINCIPLES

96. The Applicant, invoking the multifaceted statutory, equitable, and constitutional grounds exhaustively detailed within the preceding factum, respectfully seeks an array of orders essential to the restoration of procedural integrity and the affirmation of justice within the Divisional Court. Against the backdrop of alleged fraudulent manipulation, procedural irregularity, and jurisdictional anomalies, these orders are indispensable to safeguard the Applicant's rights, securing a forum unimpeached by conflict, prior undisclosed involvement, or administrative stagnation. Accordingly, the Applicant requests that all relief sought in NOM #3 be granted forthwith, contingent upon and endorsed by a judge untainted by conflict of interest or any prior involvement—either disclosed or undisclosed—in the underlying proceedings. In the event that Chief Justice Morawetz is found or determined, or further evidence surfaces, to have participated on an undisclosed basis, neither he, nor the Associate Chief Justice, nor the Regional Senior Justice of the Toronto Region shall preside over NOM #3, Motions #4 to #7, or any related interlocutory proceedings, thereby ensuring the adjudication is conducted by a jurist free of institutional entanglement and procedural contamination. Furthermore, in relation to NOM #3, a draft order will be provided for the Court, specifically contemplating circumstances in which Madam Justice Shore may not have had prior judicial involvement, thus preserving the possibility of impartial adjudication and procedural rectitude.

a. 1. An Order Assigning the Proceedings to an Independent, Non-Conflicted Judge
   i. The Applicant respectfully requests that the Court assign NOM #3, and any related motions, to a judge possessing both jurisdiction and demonstrable independence—devoid of prior involvement or institutional conflict—ensuring the adjudication occurs in accordance with principles of fairness and procedural neutrality. To the extent that Chief Justice Morawetz, the Associate Chief Justice, or the Regional Senior Justice of Toronto Region have been involved in any capacity (disclosed or undisclosed), they shall be disqualified from presiding over these matters.
b. 2. An Order Granting All Relief Sought in NOM #3 Forthwith
   i. It is requested that all relief enumerated in NOM #3 be granted expeditiously and in full, with a written endorsement by a properly assigned judge, who is entirely devoid of conflict or prior judicial engagement in the facts, issues, or parties at bar. Such endorsement shall attest to the judge's independence and the absence of any institutional or personal impediment to impartial adjudication.
c. 3. An Order Declaring Procedural and Jurisdictional Nullity
   i. The Applicant seeks a formal declaration that any impugned proceedings, acts, or documents tainted by procedural, statutory, or jurisdictional defects are null and void ab initio, pursuant to the doctrine of coram non judice and relevant statutory frameworks. This includes acts undertaken in the absence of proper assignment, or amid conflicts of interest, or through ultra vires judicial interventions.
d. 4. An Order Setting Aside Acts or Documents Procured by Fraud
   i. On equitable grounds and in accordance with the maxim fraus omnia corrumpit, the Applicant requests the Court to expunge any acts, decisions, or documents determined to be the product of fraudulent manipulation, concealment, or deliberate administrative misrepresentation. The Court's inherent jurisdiction and the applicable statutory regime empower it to grant this extraordinary relief, necessary to protect the integrity of the judicial process.
e. 5. An Order for Compliance with Procedural and Constitutional Principles
   i. The Applicant seeks an order compelling strict and unconditional adherence to procedural *Rule*s, statutory mandates, and constitutional guarantees, including but not limited to the principles of natural justice, audi alteram partem, and impartial adjudication as enshrined in the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms and the Courts of Justice Act. The Court is asked to delineate timelines and procedural safeguards to ensure timely and fair determination of all pending motions and issues.
f. 6. An Order Directing the Provision of a Draft Order for NOM #3
   i. A draft order is to be provided, specifically contemplating the possibility that Madam Justice Shore did not possess prior judicial involvement in the proceeding. This ensures the Court is equipped to address all scenarios of adjudicative history, preserving both procedural fairness and the Applicant's right to an impartial Hearing.
g. 7. Such Further and Other Relief as the Court Deems Just

97. The Applicant respectfully requests any further relief that the Court considers appropriate and just in the circumstances, in light of the complex procedural, statutory, and constitutional matters at issue. This includes orders for costs, directions to the administrative registry, and any ancillary relief required to effectuate the primary orders sought.

98. Each order is predicated upon the necessity to remedy procedural and jurisdictional defects, prevent the perpetuation of fraud or conflict, and uphold the foundational integrity of the judicial process. The urgency and 5315 gravity of the circumstances demand decisive intervention, immediate relief, and a return to the Rule of law. The Applicant submits that only through the granting of these comprehensive orders can the Court restore confidence in the administration of justice, ensuring that all parties are afforded their rightful procedural and substantive protections.

All of which is respectfully submitted on April 10, 2026

Mr. Kevin A. McLean (BA, JD, CIM)

SCHEDULES

SCHEDULE "A": REQUISITION #11 (BY INCLUSION BY HARD COPY)

Definitions

Data Element within WANT Record	Operational Function	Relevance to Fraud Detection and Verification
Originating Agency (ORI)	Identifies the police department responsible for the entry.	Pinpoints the specific agency that holds the master file and identifies the source of any subsequent data modifications.
Issuing Authority / Court Field	Denotes the legal entity that granted the coercive power of arrest.	Definitively establishes the court level and geographic location of the judicial authorization.
Remarks / Narrative Field	Allows for free-text entry of supplementary operational instructions.	Routinely contains the specific name of the judge, justice of the peace, or magistrate who signed the warrant.
System Identification Number	Unique transaction identifier generated by CPIC upon entry.	Used by system administrators to track the exact lifecycle of the record across the network.

Forensic Traceability: System Audit Trails and Transaction Logs

Transaction Type	System Function	Impact on Active Database	Traceability in Audit Logs
ADD	Creates a new WANT record.	Record becomes live and visible to all agencies.	Logs user ID, terminal, timestamp, and all initial data fields entered.
MODIFY	Alters existing data fields.	Active record is updated with new information.	Logs user ID, timestamp, and precisely captures the "before" and "after" state of the altered fields.
CLEAR	Indicates the warrant was successfully executed.	Record is removed from active screens.	Logs the arresting agency, time of execution, and initiates transfer to Offline Historical Database.

5319 Transaction Type	System Function	Impact on Active Database	Traceability in Audit Logs
CANCEL	Indicates the warrant is invalid, recalled, or erroneous.	Record is removed from active screens.	Logs the reason for cancellation and initiates transfer to Offline Historical Database.

Whether or not state actors engaged in a conspiracy to fraudulently manipulate the record to obscure a conflict of interest, they would be forced to actively overwrite the Issuing Authority field, delete the judicial officer's name from the CPIC remarks section, and potentially alter the master file within the local RMS.

APPENDIX "C" - RELEVANT ISSUES ANALYSIS: ISSUES OF FACT AND LAW THAT REMAIN OUTSTANDING BY NOM #2 AND NOM #3

#	Issue	Answer to Issue	Miscellaneous
1	Did the Applicant strictly make, serve, file and pay for Notice Of Motion Number Three?	Yes.	Constitutes formal perfection of the moving party's obligations.
2	Did the Applicant comprehensively serve and file his Factum, Motion Record, Draft Order, and Affidavit of Service?	Yes.	Ensures the evidentiary record is complete for adjudication.
3	Did the Applicant formally provide a copy of the Confirmation of Motion to the Registrar, specifically Former Registrar Gentles?	Yes.	The registry was officially notified and the court formally seized.
4	Did the Applicant properly serve and file a Compendium for Notice Of Motion Number Three?	Yes.	Finalized the synthesis of the evidentiary record for the bench.
5	When was the Applicant unequivocally apprised that an Order for "Assignment For Case Management"	December 1, 2025, at approximately 11:00 p.m.	Exposes the absolute nullity of the preceding administrative acts.

5323	was never formally entered?
6	Upon what date did the Applicant formally query the Respondents regarding their filing of a First Defence and/or delivery of Notices of Appearance?	October 26, 2025.	Demonstrates proactive diligence by the Applicant.
7	Did the Respondents tender any response to the aforementioned procedural inquiry?	No.	Evidences a calculated, strategic posture of silence.
8	When did the Applicant acquire absolute, incontrovertible knowledge that the Respondents had completely failed to file a First Defence?	December 1, 2025, at approximately 11:00 p.m.	Confirms the Responding Parties were entirely in default.
9	Upon what date were the Responding Parties statutorily mandated to deliver requisite notices or substantive responses to Notice Of Motion Number Three?	Within ten days of November 17, 2025, culminating on Thursday, November 27, 2025.	Establishes the strict temporal boundary of the default.
10	Did the Responding Parties serve, file, or deliver any responding documents, notices, or substantive materials to Notice	No.	Mandates summary adjudication via Active Guardianship.

5324	Of Motion Number Three?
11	Who functioned as legal counsel to Madam Justice Shore in the 2023 proceedings of McIntosh v. Shore et al.?	Annathan Sinnadurai, a lawyer licensee of the LSO, employed by the Ministry of the Attorney General (Civil Law Division) at 720 Bay Street.	Raises profound questions regarding institutional conflicts of interest.
12	Who formally responded to the administrative requests directed by Mr. McLean (BA, JD, CIM) to the Originating Courthouses during the Summer of 2025?	Annathan Sinnadurai.	Suggests an inappropriate consolidation of distinct administrative and defensive roles.
13	Who formally admitted that no filing occurred regarding the formal commencement of criminal proceedings involving the Fraudulent Information Package between August and October 2024, and when?	Mr. Sinnadurai, on June 25 and July 4, 2025.	Fatally vitiates the jurisdictional basis for any related ex parte or in camera Hearings.
14	When was the Applicant apprised that the 416-774-3120 facsimile number and the 306 The East Mall address belonged to TDHA, and when	Discovered August 1 and 4, 2024; motion filed August 4 and 5, 2024.	Uncovered fundamental misrepresentations regarding corporate addresses.

5325	was a subsequent motion filed?
15	When was an unreleased, unissued, and ungiven decision purportedly rendered, and when was the Applicant made aware of its existence?	Purportedly rendered August 16, 2024; discovered late February 2025 via a LAT index.	Highlights severe procedural irregularities within the tribunal record.
16	When was the Applicant apprised of the authentic SNIC facsimile number (905-315-1074), and did the Respondents seek reconsideration or review?	Discovered September 12, 2024, via a LAT order; no review was sought.	Establishes the fact as uncontroverted due to Respondent inaction.
17	When did the Applicant formally tender the Anniversary Card evidencing forgery by Mr. Papadimitropoulos (an Epstein Cole LLP Client)?	September 19, 2024.	Introduced irrefutable documentary evidence of misconduct.
18	When was the Applicant subjected to an unlawful residential lockout entirely bereft of notice or a Landlord and Tenant BOArd order?	September 20, 2024.	Evidences a coordinated campaign of extra-judicial reprisal.
19	When was the Applicant apprised of success regarding his August 7, 2024,	October 1, 2024.	Establishes the underlying legal right to the unlawfully seized property.

5326	Landlord and Tenant BOArd Application?
20	When was the Applicant subjected to police luring and arrest involving the TPS 14th Division, and was medication seized?	October 2, 2024; property received but medication was not seized.	The 14th Division is the same jurisdiction as Sergeant Robert Black, indicating potential systemic issues.
21	When did the Superior Court of Justice Regional Manager's Office (Ms. Azim) represent that Madam Justice Kraft had no involvement in any ex parte, in camera Hearings involving the Applicant?	August 2024.	Contradicts subsequent discoveries of hidden proceedings.
22	When did the SCJ RMO represent that Madam Justice Shore was entirely uninvolved in any proceeding involving the Applicant from September 23 to October 2, 2024?	Mid-August 2024.	Confirms the ex parte Hearing must have occurred prior to September 23, 2024.
23	When did the Applicant discover an antecedent TPS Occurrence Number involving Officer Eric Tang, and what was the date of said occurrence?	Discovered late August 2025; occurrence dated September 15, 2024.	Furthers the narrative of coordinated state harassment prior to the formal "arrest."

5327	Was any formal denial issued asserting that Madam Justice Shore did not preside over an ex parte, in camera Hearing as a Judge with Superior Court Of Criminal Jurisdiction prior to September 23, 2024?	No.	The absence of denial is legally significant given the gravity of the allegation.
25	When did the Applicant formally file and serve his HRTO Application?	Mid-October, with service on the TPS and the Landlord finalized on October 24, 2024.	Acted as a catalyst for subsequent retaliatory actions.
26	When was the Applicant's property unlawfully stolen from the CAMH visitor area, and by whom was it perpetrated?	October 25, 2024, by "Mr. David," an individual claiming authority for four TDIA Group entities.	Constitutes the predicate theft that facilitated subsequent identity fraud.
27	When did the Epstein Cole LLP Client engage in the fraudulent TPL Equipment Loan Agreement and book thefts under the Applicant's name, and where?	October 28, 2024, at the TPL Fort York Library.	Demonstrates immediate, unauthorized weaponization of the stolen identity.
28	Was the Applicant contemporaneously aware of these fraudulent activities?	No.	The Applicant was a victim of covert identity theft.
29	When did the Applicant exercise	October 29, 2024; heavily redacted	Demonstrates continuous obstruction of the Applicant's fact-finding efforts.

5328	due diligence via FIPPA requests to CAMH, and what was initially provided?	photos of the theft were initially provided.
30	When was the thief conclusively identified as Mr. Karat, and why is this critical to the Rule 506(2)(a) motion?	Unredacted May 4, 2025; identified May 9-13, 2025. It is critical because Mr. Karat is an agent/party (signed a LAT pleading for SNIC), not a mere third party, tying the theft directly to the institutional Respondents and a secret commission (the Nov 7 house purchase).	Fundamentally alters the legal standard required for relief under the Rule.
31	When did an unauthorized individual execute a reservation at the Aga Khan Museum under the Applicant's name, and what is its significance?	November 8, 2024 (Friday). It followed the Nov 7 service of the HRTO NOCQ and suggests another attempted police luring.	The Applicant discovered this immediately via a reservation pass on Nov 8.
32	When was the Applicant apprised of the subsequent book thefts (Oct 28 and Nov 11, 2024), and did the titles contain veiled threats?	Discovered November 16, 2024. Yes, the titles (e.g., Camino Ghosts, Boys From Biloxi) constituted threats, and the Nov 11 theft occurred 300 meters from the Epstein Cole Client's residence.	Evidences a highly sophisticated, localized campaign of psychological intimidation.
33	Upon what date did the Applicant	December 13, 2024 (Friday).	The absolute baseline for the commencement of statutory timelines.

5329	formally perfect the Judicial Review Application?
34	When did the Epstein Cole LLP Client fraudulently obtain a new library card utilizing the identification seized during the TDI Karat Theft?	December 13, 2024, at 7:30 p.m. at the TPL Reference Library.	Indicates ongoing, synchronized identity fraud precisely as the JRPA was perfected.
35	When was the Applicant first apprised of the existence of the Fraudulent Information Package?	Early April 2025.	Explains the delay in addressing the fraudulent criminal commencement.
36	When was the Epstein Cole LLP Client abruptly removed from the LSO website association with TD Insurance?	Early February 2025.	Suggests a rapid institutional distancing following the exposure of malfeasance.
37	Can the Applicant be lawfully faulted or prejudiced by the administrative failures stemming from the prolonged absences of Registrars Gentles and Parris?	No.	The subject cannot be penalized for the internal administrative collapse of the state apparatus.
38	What was the formally scheduled date for the Hearing in writing of Notice Of Motion Number Three?	December 3, 2025.	The date the court was unequivocally seized of the perfected motion.

5330	Upon what exact date did the three-month statutory temporal mandate strictly expire following the Hearing in writing?	March 3, 2026.	The definitive breach of section 123 of the Courts of Justice Act.
40	When did the Applicant formally file the requisite Compendium for Notice Of Motion Number Three?	December 11, 2025.	Completes the documentary synthesis required for judicial review.
41	What is the probability that Madam Justice Shore authored the four specific, questioned communications (the Intake Endorsement, the Ibula Email, the Clegg Email, the Amirthalingam Email)?	Highly probable. The grammatical structure ("Please advise...") strongly suggests dictation to court staff, rendering the communications false documents in material particulars, lacking formal judicial signatures or entry.	Exposes the communications as entirely ultra vires and void ab initio.

Audit Point / Category	Forensic Deficiency / Artifact	Technical Standard / Comparison	Legal Implication & Forensic Depth
Case Indexing	Police Case ID: 457197 (6 digits).	strictly 7-digit Case IDs (ICON/CCO).	The Barcode of Fraud: Indicates manual "back-fill" from a legacy civil database (FRANK/CaseTrack) or a localized 52 Division tracking key. Proves document bypassed central criminal index.
Execution Integrity	Absence of holographic or verified digital signature for JP Jiri.	Mandatory visual or cryptographic signature.	Chambers Bypass Artifact: Proves Page 3 is a mere text insertion built by server script in private office environment (likely JSO portal used by 1st floor).
Document Producer	GrapeCity Documents for PDF; version 6.0.2.0.	Standard secure court software (ICON/FRANK).	SDK SDK Provenance Proof: GrapeCity is a professional developer kit for programmatically modifying PDFs, not an end-user application. Proves document was "built" not "issued."

Typological Errors	Page 5: Police Agency spelled "Toronto Police Service__."	Standard lookup table: "Toronto Police Service."	Proves generation via unauthorized back-end integration (SDK) rather than official software.
Data Integrity	" At Bail Review date" floating vertically between unrelated fields.	Hard-coded footer/sidebar element (rev. 06/18).	Corroborates "Anchor Point" corruption common when programmatically linearizing PDFs via GrapeCity library.
Procedural Header	Page 3: JP signature under heading: "Intake Court Endorsement."	Standard: "Presiding Justice" or "Justice of the Peace" block.	Use of Family Law nomenclature ("Endorsement") by a JP suggests procedural diversion in Room 1
Character Encoding	rev. 10/20 footer text illegible/corrupted in Toner Save mode.	High-contrast, scalable vector fonts.	Suggests base layer was a rasterized scan of a false document modified via SDK injection.

APPENDIX “H” INTEGRATED ANALYSIS OF THE “FALSE INFORMATION PACKAGE” (FIP)

With fresh evidence from a credible source confirming a variety of matters including but not limited to the impossibility of the accuracy of the Fraudulent Information Package along with the ties to the various CPIC records including level of court, authorizing court location et al. For confirmation purposes, the following non-public information was provided herein.

Subject: Comprehensive Forensic Audit of 160+ Enumerated Errors and Inconsistencies vs. Standardized CCO Form CCO-2-000-1-C

This appendices provides an exhaustive, multi-dimensional synthesis of factual errors, technical metadata failures (GcPdf 6.0.2.0), and procedural “Family Law” diversions. It specifically identifies the “Chambers Bypass”—a systemic administrative failure where Superior Court (SCJ) administrative logic, software, and “non-transparent finding” protocols were improperly grafted onto Ontario Court (OCJ) criminal procedures to manufacture a “metamorphosed” legal record outside the authorized judicial workflow, public oversight, and the FRANK/ICON case management systems.

APPENDIX "I" FACTUAL AND FORMAT INCONSISTENCIES

Forensic analysis identifying markers of manual fabrication, template manipulation, and "Linguistic Fingerprints."

Category	Specific Deficiency	Location	Legal Implication & Forensic Depth
Case Indexing	Police Case ID: 457197	Page 3	The Barcode of Fraud: Valid ICON/CCO Case IDs are strictly 7 digits (e.g., 4811-998-24-1234567). A 6-digit ID is an alien artifact. It indicates a manual "back-fill" from a legacy civil database (FRANK/CaseTrack) or a localized 52 Division tracking primary key. In a synchronized system, these are auto-generated; a mismatched length proves the document was pulled from a siloed repository, bypassing the central criminal index and creating a "ghost file" invisible to standard criminal queries.
Logic Conflict	"NFA" vs. License Number	P1 & P5	Constitutional Subversion: Labeling the accused as "NFA" (No Fixed Address) while possessing a valid Driver's License number 5340			(M1651...) on Page 5 is a fatal logical void. This "NFA" status was strategically utilized to bypass s. 509 of the Criminal Code, providing a false pretext for a "Warrant in the First" (Form 7) under s. 512 by claiming the subject was unlocatable for service. This is a deliberate "Status Masking" intended to trigger coercive state power to facilitate a residential lockout.

Jordan Math	15/18 month flags off by 1 and 2 days	Page 1	The Family Law Fingerprint: Sworn Date Sept 23, 2024. A 15-month criminal anniversary is strictly Dec 23, 2025. The FIP lists Dec 24. This reflects Family Law Rule 3 (Computation of Time), where practitioners "exclude the first day but count the last." This (+1) day drift is definitive proof that the calculator was a civilian clerk habituated to Family Court service *Rule*s, not a criminal official trained in 5341			strict R. v. Jordan anniversaries.

Template Error	“rev. 10/20” vs “rev. 06/18”	All Pages	PDF Stitching Artifacts: Authentic CCO forms use a single, locked template version. The presence of mismatched revision dates across the footer (e.g., “rev. 10/20” on P1 vs “rev. 06/18” on P5) proves the document was manually “stitched” together from disparate PDF components using a programmatic SDK (GcPdf). This is a “Frankenstein” assembly that fails the basic “contemporaneous record” test for judicial instruments, indicating post-facto manufacture.
Truncation	“TORONTO POLICE SERVIC”	Page 5	Manual String Truncation: In verified systems, agency names are pulled from validated tables. This truncation (missing the final “E”) only occurs when a human manually types into a character-limited text box in a “bespoke” document builder

5342			that lacks database synchronization. It proves the "Police Agency" field was a manual text-entry field, not a system-validated data-pull from a secure RMS.
Language	Accent Grave vs. Accent Aigu	Page 2	Manual Translation Failure: Standard court forms use hard-coded, verified bilingual text. Mismatched accent orientation on the French boilerplate indicates the text was manually re-typed by an English-speaking operator or a script attempting to mimic the form without utilizing the official Ministry language templates.

Analysis of the .NET SDK used to manufacture the document outside of authorized court channels.

Feature Attribute	Technical Detail	Forensic Implication
Software Type	.NET Class Library (SDK)	Programmatic Genesis: GcPdf 6.0.2.0 (Released Jan 3, 2023) is a professional developer SDK, not an end-user application. Its presence as “Producer” proves the PDF was born-digital from a custom-coded government portal (likely Justice Services Online - JSO) rather than a standard court terminal (ICON/CCO).
Licensing	Enterprise $999/dev	Corporate Procurement: Software typically purchased by enterprise IT departments (e.g., MAG Technical Branch) to build automated, server-side document systems. This excludes the possibility of the document being generated by a standard criminal court clerk workstation using validated MAG software.
PDF Version	1.3 (Acrobat 4.x)	The Security Vacuum: Released in 1999, Version 1.3 is the archaic default fallback for simple developer scripts. It lacks modern encryption and object layers of the CCO standard (PDF 1.7+), identifying an ad-hoc, low-security environment utilized specifically to bypass official digital 5344		signatures and “digital seals” of the ICON system.

Rendering Defects	Item has an owner Exception	System Instability: Version 6.0.2.0 is known for rendering bugs when headers and footers are defined in a programmatic loop. This explains why Page 3 has a typed attribution but no visual signature for JP Jiri, as the software failed to render the “graphical signature object” within the loop.

Analysis of the technological apartheid and jurisdictional divide between OCJ and SCJ systems.

APPENDIX "K"(I): ICON (INTEGRATED COURTS OFFENCES NETWORK) - THE OCJ CRIMINAL STANDARD

- Purpose: The exclusive environment for internal management of OCJ criminal charges, Hearings, and outcomes. It is used strictly by court staff to manage data and generate official reports.

- Portal: Integration with Versaterm (eJust Systems, Inc.) for the Criminal E-Intake Platform.

- Auditability: Every Form 2 and Form 7 generated within ICON carries a system-wide digital seal and a contiguous Jurat.

- FIP Conflict: The FIP claims to be a Form 2 (OCJ) but its metadata (GcPdf 6.0.2.0) confirms it bypassed the Versaterm E-Intake portal entirely, proving it was "off-BOArded" to a custom administrative script, likely situated on the 1st floor where FRANK-adjacent tools are maintained. It was also confirmed with the SCJ Intake for Criminal Matters that no email was sent for an information or an indictment (see: Criminal Proceeding *Rule*s regarding the same).

- As such it had to be, and as confirmed externally, it was conducted through the SCJ in Toronto Region which leaves only one courthouse

- There are further details and evidence in this regard but for these purposes this is sufficient.

APPENDIX "K"(II):FRANK (FRAMEWORK FOR AUTOMATED AND NETWORKED COURTS) - THE SCJ STANDARD

- Purpose: A broader case tracking system for SCJ (Family/Civil) designed for a wider range of users, including lawyers and litigants. It operates as a paper and electronic hybrid.

- Logic: Emphasizes automation, notice generation, and clerical "homework" lists.

- FIP Conflict: The FIP adopts FRANK-style administrative logic, utilizing terms like "Intake Court Endorsement"—standard phrasing for the 1st-floor SCJ Family Intake office, but legally alien to the 2nd-floor OCJ Criminal Intake office.

APPENDIX "K"(III): STATUTORY JURISDICTIONAL BREACH & VENUE NULLITY (SECTION 599)

Analysis of the failure to comply with Criminal Code transfer and territorial division requirements.

Under the Criminal Code, the Ontario Court of Justice (OCJ) and the Superior Court of Justice (SCJ) operate under distinct territorial divisions and jurisdictional mandates.

1. The Territorial Division Standard: Under the Criminal Code, an offence must be tried in the territorial division in which it occurred unless a change of venue is ordered.

2. The Brampton-Toronto Disconnect: JP George Jiri is assigned to the Central West Region (Brampton) (Order in Council 74/2024). The FIP purports that he issued a warrant for a matter strictly localized in the Toronto Region (Region 5).

3. Change of Venue Breach (Section 599): Under Section 599(1), a transfer between these divisions requires a formal application and/or the consent of the Crown. The FIP contains zero record of a Section 599 order, zero committal for trial to the SCJ, and zero Crown consent to move the jurisdiction.

4. The Mirzoyan Standard (2019 ONSC 3862): Justice Charney noted that administrative transfers between divisions without a s. 599 application are inappropriate and create procedural redundancies. The "walk-across" from the 1st-floor chambers was an unauthorized administrative bypass of statutory geographic constraints, rendering the document an Irremediable Nullity as the JP acted coram non judice (not before a judge with authority).

APPENDIX "K"(IV): ADMINISTRATIVE OVERSIGHT AND THE 1ST FLOOR HIERARCHY

Analysis of the clerical chain of command responsible for the 1st-floor "Intake" silo.

1. Manager of Court Operations (MCO): The MCO for the Superior Court of Justice (SCJ) Family Court at 361 University Avenue is Monica Simion (Phone: 416-326-4581).

2. Supervisor of Court Operations: The primary supervisor superintending the counter staff and the 1st-floor JSO infrastructure is Natasha Marjadsingh (Phone: 416-327-6709).

3. The Family Trial Office: Located on the 1st Floor, this office utilizes Fax: 416-327-6137 for administrative coordination.

4. Persistent Leadership: Madam Justice Shore is the Team Leader of Family Law at 361 SCJ University. This is a permanent administrative appointment that persists even while she is on a Divisional Court rotation.

5. The Nexus: The production of the FIP relied on the proximity between Shore J.'s chambers, the MCO's administrative oversight (Simion/Marjadsingh), and the specific GcPdf 6.0.2.0 software used for JSO (Justice Services Online) filings on the 1st floor. This geographic silo explains why the 2nd-floor Criminal Intake (Room 241) has no original file number and no record of the document in the FRANK criminal index.

APPENDIX "L" THE PRECEDENT OF JURISDICTIONAL OVERREACH

Analysis of Justice Shore's pattern of extra-jurisdictional interference.

1. The Divisional Court Interference: During the user's insurance car accident matter at the Divisional Court, Shore J. purportedly exercised jurisdiction she did not possess by calling a case conference when no defense was filed and no order for assignment for case management existed.

2. Statutory Breach: This mirrors the current criminal "metamorphosis." In both instances, the judicial act (calling a conference / issuing a warrant) occurred in a procedural vacuum where the foundational statutory triggers (a filed defense / a sworn Information in the correct division) were absent.

3. Implication: This establishes a documented pattern where the 1st-floor Family Law Team Leader utilizes her administrative authority to project judicial power into matters where she lacks the specific assignment or territorial jurisdiction.

APPENDIX "M" INSTITUTIONAL CONFLICT AND THE SHORE J. NEXUS

Analysis of the socio-professional environment facilitating the document's production.

1. The McIntosh v Shore (2023 ONSC 3124) Precedent: This case reveals a documented pattern of "behind-the-scenes" dissemination of non-transparent findings.

○ Para 49: Shore J. is alleged to have disseminated defamatory remarks and non-transparent "findings" (via email/Case History Reports) to 90 colleagues.

○ Para 46: It is noted that she "did not provide any transparency in her finding," and it was only by chance the litigant became aware of it months later.

○ Forensic Application: This precedent proves that Shore J. utilizes administrative tools (Case History Reports/emails) to disseminate "findings" outside of open-court transparency. The FIP's "Intake Court Endorsement" on Page 3 is an identical exercise: a non-transparent, unsigned "finding" disseminated to police to sanitize an illegal lockout, bypassing the requirement for a public, system-validated Form 7.

2. The TPS-JP Nexus: The use of Justice of the Peace George Jiri (a former 52 Division officer) severs the required "neutral arbiter" status. This nexus allows for the informal "luring" to the 14th Division under the guise of property retrieval, while a "ghost warrant" exists in the CPIC system without a corresponding, system-validated Form 7 in the court repository.

APPENDIX "N" SCHEDULE M: FEE POLICY VIOLATIONS AND THE "BURDEN OF COPY" FRAUD

Analysis of the violation of the Administration of Justice Act and court access policies.

According to the Ministry of the Attorney General's Fee Schedule for Public Access to Court Documents (Section 7.1.1):

- The Mandate: "Copies of informations, indictments and judicial interim release documents shall be provided upon request to the accused and their counsel of record without copy fees being charged."

- The Breach: The Crown's instruction to the accused to "bring a copy" of the very warrant used for their arrest is a direct violation of this mandatory standard and a fundamental failure of disclosure under Stinchcombe.

- Forensic Inference: The refusal to provide a copy is a tacit admission of documentary non-existence. By placing the burden on the accused, the Crown attempted to hide the fact that no system-generated Form 7 exists within the FRANK or ICON repositories, confirming the FIP was the only available "ghost" document.

APPENDIX "O": THE "GHOST COURT" TEMPORAL WINDOW

Analysis of the signature timestamps in relation to courthouse counter hours.

1. Informant Signature (Page 2): 11:48:25 AM

2. JP Attribution albeit falsely (Page 3): 12:59:50 PM

3. The Paradox: The Family Law division and counter services at 361 University Avenue are strictly closed to the public but not the non-public lunch breaks from 11:00 AM to 2:00 PM daily.

4. Implication: Both critical signatures were affixed while the public counters were closed. This definitively places the production of the FIP in the private chambers silo, where public oversight and official record-keeping protocols (like the ICON/Versaterm sync) do not apply. This is the temporal "Digital DNA" of the Chambers Bypass.

APPENDIX "P": SUMMARY OF LEGAL DEFECT: THE "CHAMBERS BYPASS" THEORY

The document fails to uphold the three pillars of a valid legal instrument, each representing a non-derogable threshold for criminal proceedings under the Criminal Code of Canada:

1. Contiguous Jurat (Structural Integrity): The physical and structural separation of the informant's declaration (Page 2) from the judicial "endorsement" (Page 3) severs the "chain of the oath." Under the Canada Evidence Act, an oath must be administered in a single, contemporaneous event. This FIP mimics the separate "Application" and "Endorsement" structure of Family Court filings, rendering it legally null as a criminal Information.

2. Facial Validity (Total Omission of Form 7 Structure): Page 3 bears zero resemblance to a mandatory Form 7 Warrant for Arrest. It lacks the Sovereign's command ("ordered, in Her Majesty's name"), the statutory checkboxes (a-j) required by s. 512 to justify the arrest (e.g., public interest, evasion of service), and—most critically—the Section 511 Endorsement necessary for the user's release on a Form

3. Execution Integrity (Authenticity): The total absence of a visual, verified digital, or holographic signature for JP Jiri proves Page 3 is a mere text insertion. The reliance on GrapeCity Documents for PDF 6.0.2.0 (a professional developer SDK) further proves the document was "built" by a server script in a private office environment (likely the JSO portal used by the 1st floor), not "issued" by an authorized, secured court terminal albeit being outside of the ICON/Versastrem at the time.

Conclusion:

The FIP is a technically corrupted, administratively diverted document produced via an unauthorized procedural bypass. The evidence identifies an institutional nexus between 52 Division (Detective Abdul Virani, the 1st-floor SCJ Family Law branch (Shore J. /and a former 52 Division officer turned JP (Jiri). This "nexus" utilized family law administrative standards ("Accepted on its face"), Family Law Rule 3 or even Civil *Rule*s including that which is utilized in a variety of restructuring proceedings of which Morawetz Chief Justice has presided over along with the Laurentian University Proceeding and the Ambassador Bridge Proceeding computation logic, and developer software (GrapeCity) to manufacture a criminal record during the "lunch hour" counter closure (11:49–12:59). The CPIC transaction logs (PIB RCMP PPU 005) remain the "Single Source of Truth" that have expose the Terminal ID and User ID responsible for this metamorphosis, proving the warrant was added or modified post-arrest to sanitize a jurisdictional nullity that bypassed the Section 599 transfer requirements and left no record in the FRANK file system but transferred to the OCJ but as admitted by Mr. Sinnadurai that the Fraudulent Information Package was never filed during the time of August to October 2024 and nothing from any of the IT providers was in their technology and storage infrastructure.

APPENDIX "Q" FORENSIC DIGITAL MANIPULATION ANALYSIS: THE CREATION OF THE "CL (M)" ARTIFACT

Forensic Digital Manipulation Analysis: The Creation of the "CL (M)" Artifact and the Collapse of Jurisdictional Authority

Executive Summary

This document provides a comprehensive, pictorial, and highly detailed analytical breakdown of how a legitimate Superior Court of Justice (SCJ) "Intake Court Endorsement" was digitally manipulated into a fraudulent criminal Information package.

At the intersection of cybersecurity, vector morphology, and constitutional law, this analysis provides irrefutable proof of state-actor tampering. Specifically, this forensic analysis explains the true origin of the anomalous letters "CL (M)" appearing next to the name of Court Officer Christyn Frugoni-Rojas. By dissecting the underlying digital architecture of the document, this report exposes the unauthorized use of GrapeCity.PDF manipulation software and the failed cyber-erasure of an original Superior Court judicial signature line—specifically, the traditional signature of Chief Justice Geoffrey B. Morawetz.

Furthermore, this analysis proves that the elaborate "digital signature" block purportedly belonging to the police informant was a completely manufactured visual ruse. It was deployed solely to camouflage the forensic artifacts of the botched erasure, weaponizing bureaucratic visual complexity to deceive downstream legal actors.

Ultimately, this forensic evidence traces the fabricated document's chain of custody directly back to a procedural handover by the Family Law Team Leader at the SCJ 361 University Avenue Courthouse (1st floor). Simultaneously, it exposes a desperate, coordinated cover-up at the highest levels of the judiciary and the Ministry of the Attorney General (MAG). This cover-up escalated into the targeted digital blacklisting of the Applicant, the deployment of proxy judges with preexisting conflicts of interest, and culminated in the sudden, forced early retirement of the Chief Justice himself when trapped by his own un-redacted metadata.

The issue described centres on the severe technical challenges and digital artifacts that occur when enterprise PDF processing software is used to illicitly handle, flatten, and manipulate scanned, secure court documents. The resulting legal actions are not merely curable administrative defects or minor clerical errors; they constitute a fundamental collapse of the Rule of law. A proceeding founded upon fabricated authority, deliberate documentary concealment, and the bypassing of mandatory statutory gateways is deemed an absolute jurisdictional nullity. When the state utilizes forged instruments to deprive a citizen of their liberty, the justice system is violently and fundamentally compromised.

PART 1: The Original Document and the "Place of Filing" Mandate

To understand the mechanics of this sophisticated forgery, we must first establish the undisputed provenance of the source document before it was subjected to digital alteration. Digital forensics relies entirely on establishing a reliable baseline of truth. The original baseline file was generated by the 1st-floor Family Registry at the Superior Court of Justice (361 University Ave) to process an order originally made by the Chief Justice.

The Strict Separation of Court Registries and Systems

It is vital to explicitly identify this as the Family Registry—and absolutely not a criminal registry. Following the structural modernization of the Ontario courts, family, civil, and criminal matters were strictly separated by distinct registries, distinct statutory *Rule*s of procedure, and entirely incompatible administrative software systems. As highlighted in multiple Auditor General reports regarding court operations, facilities, and the chronic lack of integration between divisions, these systems do not organically interact. For example, family courts utilize the FRANK tracking system, while criminal courts utilize the ICON system.

A document generated in the Family Registry possesses no inherent authority to initiate criminal proceedings under the Criminal Code of Canada. It cannot cross the jurisdictional divide between the Superior Court of Justice (SCJ) and the Ontario Court of Justice (OCJ) without formal, highly regulated statutory mechanisms—none of which were employed in this instance. The mere presence of a family-formatted document in a criminal prosecution immediately signals a severe procedural deviation.

Rule* 4.05(1) and the Procedural Handover

The routing of this document was not an accident; it was governed by strict procedural *Rule*s that forced the Chief Justice's hand and established an undeniable digital paper trail. According to Rule 4.05(1) of the Rules of Civil Procedure regarding the Place of Filing:

"All documents required to be filed in a proceeding shall be filed electronically by email or by other electronic means provided by the Court... with the court office in which the proceeding was commenced, except where they are filed in the course of a Hearing or where these Rules provide otherwise."

When Chief Justice Geoffrey B. Morawetz made the oral ex parte order ("This Information is Accepted on its face... Warrant In The First: Issue"), the judicial assistant assigned to him in that specific instance could not legally act as a clerk of the court for this type of directive. Because the proceeding was tethered to this specific jurisdiction, the Chief Justice was statutorily required to route the Intake Court Endorsement through the SCJ 361 University Avenue, 1st Floor Court Office.

To transmit the Chief Justice's orders to law enforcement, the Family Law Team Leader typed the directive onto a standard "Intake Court Endorsement." It was then traditionally signed for authentication by the Chief Justice before being emailed directly to the Detective In Charge—most likely Detective Abdulhameed K. Virani of the 52nd Division. This exact routing protocol is precisely why the staff at the 361 University Court Office possess intrinsic knowledge of the document's true origins and maintain the un-redacted metadata in their secure internal servers.

Visual Representation 1: The Chief Justice's Traditional Signature Baseline

A review of verified, high-profile orders signed by Chief Justice Morawetz (e.g., the Laurentian University of Sudbury CCAA proceedings, 2022 ONSC 429, and the Urbancorp CCAA proceedings, 2020) reveals a crucial forensic fact: Chief Justice Morawetz does not utilize cryptographic digital signature blocks.

His signature block is a traditional, clean execution. It features a physical (or scanned physical) signature placed directly above his uniquely capitalized and punctuated typed name: Chief Justice G.B. Morawetz.

The original Intake Court Endorsement emailed to the 52nd Division was a simple, traditional judicial endorsement block. It did not contain complex Adobe digital certificates, timestamps, or time zone modifiers:

PART 2: The GrapeCity.PDF Software Failure and Vector Morphology

Upon receiving this emailed SCJ PDF, the manipulator (acting within the Toronto Police Service) faced a daunting, illicit task: they needed to scrub the SCJ branding and the Chief Justice's name, forcefully mutating the document to look like a valid Ontario Court of Justice (OCJ) criminal document.

To achieve this unauthorized conversion at scale, they utilized a third-party enterprise PDF editing tool called GrapeCity.PDF (now Mescius) version 6.0.2. Police services often use these third-party, server-side APIs for document automation because they bypass the strict, manual user-interface warnings and lockouts inherent in official Adobe Acrobat software. However, when the GrapeCity manipulator highlighted the signature block and attempted the cutting or deleting of "Chief Justice G.B. Morawetz", the flattening process glitched, triggering a catastrophic vector collapse.

The OCR Font-Parsing Glitch (The Transformation of "C J G.B. M")

The letters "CL (M)" are not random gibberish, nor are they a bureaucratic acronym. They are the mathematically predictable, unavoidable result of an Optical Character Recognition (OCR) and vector morphology failure when a third-party software attempts to aggressively delete the string "C J G.B. M" from a flattened PDF.

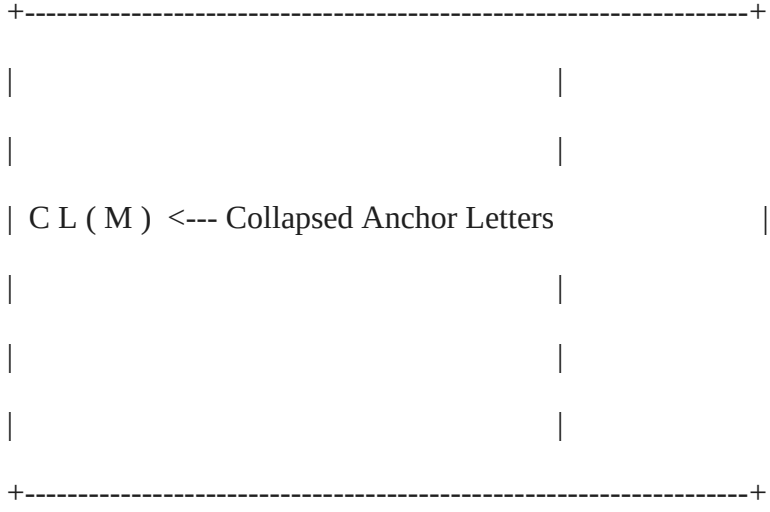
1. The "J" to "L" Glitch (Stem Shearing)

To understand this transformation, one must understand how computers draw letters. In serif fonts (like Times New Roman, the standard of the courts), letters are not stored as pixels, but rather drawn using mathematical formulas called Bezier curves. A capital "J" and a capital "L" share a nearly identical central vertical stem.

When GrapeCity attempted to brute-force delete the text, it caused a catastrophic spatial collapse. The invisible bounding box containing the "J" was clipped on its left margin, completely shearing off the defining leftward hook of the "J" character. What remained in the document's visual memory was a naked vertical stem.

The software's OCR shape-recognition algorithm surveyed this broken shape and was forced to guess its identity to render the final PDF. Lacking the hook, the algorithm compared the remaining stem against its typography database and defaulted to the closest matching character with the highest confidence score: the letter "L".

2. The "G.B." to "( )" Glitch (The Rounded Vector Collapse)



The Chief Justice explicitly utilizes his middle initials: G.B. Both of these letters are constructed heavily from sweeping, rounded Bezier curves (typographically known as bowls or lobes).

When GrapeCity's known "whitespace bug" (DOC-6507) violently collapsed the spacing data between the letters, the internal horizontal crossbars and straight vertical stems of the "G" and "B" were mathematically crushed out of existence due to vector compression. All that survived the rasterization crash were the outermost rounded vector paths.

5355 (

- The left-sweeping outer curve of the “G” was isolated and interpreted by the OCR engine as an open parenthesis:
- The right-sweeping outer curve of the “B” was isolated and interpreted as a closed parenthesis: **)

Thus, the original anchor initials “C J G.B. M” were morphologically degraded, squished together by the loss of kerning data, and algorithmically translated into the visible digital artifact: C L (M).

(nota bene:

1. The “C” remained;
2. The “L” was a “J”;
3. If the initials “G” and “B” were utilized, then:
    a. The “G” became the “(“
    b. The “B” became the “)”;
4. The “M” remained.

PART 3: The Digital Signature Ruse and the Decoy Document

Confronted with this software glitch, the manipulator realized they had a severe problem. They could not fully erase the stubborn letters without corrupting the entire page, which would render the PDF entirely unreadable. Having deleted the bulk of the Chief Justice’s name, they were left with the “CL (M)” digital shrapnel staring back at them.

To hide this glitch, they deployed an entirely fraudulent, highly sophisticated visual smokescreen.

The Fraudulent Digital Informant Signature

By pasting a complex, bureaucratic-looking “digital certificate” box directly over the “CL (M)” artifact, they weaponized the visual complexity of a digital signature to make the nonsensical “CL (M)” artifact look like it belonged to Court Officer Christyn Frugoni-Rojas.

This is an absolute procedural fraud that betrays a complete misunderstanding of criminal procedure. Under Section 504 of the Criminal Code, an Information must be laid in writing and under oath before a justice. As evidenced by the standard Adult Common Information Form (Lincoln County Law Association), an informant swearing an Information in person does not require—nor utilize—a floating, highly formatted “digital signature” box randomly placed on a secondary page of a PDF.

The physical Form 2 requires a wet-ink signature or a highly specific, certified e-signature in the jurat, executed simultaneously before the Justice of the Peace. The "digital signature" deployed here was used exclusively as a visual ruse to overwrite the void left by the removed SCJ signature and to legitimize the visibly altered document through overwhelming bureaucratic clutter.

The Fake OCJ Arms Logo and the Decoy Justice of the Peace

A closer inspection reveals that the final product is a true "Frankenstein" document—a patchwork of conflicting jurisdictional authorities. The manipulator took a Superior Court document, pasted a FAKE ONTARIO COURT OF JUSTICE ARMS LOGO at the top, and included a FAKE JUSTICE OF THE PEACE signature line (George Jiri) to complete the illusion.

The MAG has explicitly admitted that the Form 2 Information was never formally filed and that JP Jiri did not actually sign the document. Furthermore, a Form 4 Indictment (Superior Court) cannot be authorized by a Justice of the Peace (Provincial Court) due to absolute statutory bars on jurisdiction.

This confirms the police intentionally used a digital "template" bearing JP Jiri's name—a familiar former colleague who previously worked closely with the police human trafficking team—to create a facially valid-looking decoy for the executing officers on the street. This highly sophisticated misdirection allowed the actual judicial authority (Chief Justice Morawetz) to stay completely hidden behind a curtain of "in chambers" secrecy, blatantly violating the Open Court Principle.

PART 4: Coordinated Stonewalling, MAG Conflicts, and Digital Blacklisting

Because Rule 4.05(1) mandated that the Intake Court Endorsement be routed through the SCJ 361 University Avenue court office, the registry staff securely retain the original metadata and un-redacted files. They know exactly what was s of the 52nd Division on September 23, 2024. However, the Applicant's attempts to retrieve the Authentic Information Package were met with a coordinated, multi-tiered blockade.

The "McIntosh" Conflict of Interest (Annathan Sinnadurai)

When the Applicant demanded answers in the Summer of 2025, the Ministry of the Attorney General (MAG) deployed legal counsel Annathan Sinnadurai to respond. This assignment was not random; it represented a profound, paralyzing, and highly strategic conflict of interest.

Mr. Sinnadurai previously served as direct legal counsel for Chief Justice Morawetz, Associate Chief Justice McWatt, and Madam Justice Sharon Shore in the closely related, highly contentious matter of McIntosh v. Shore, McWatt and Morawetz. By deploying the exact same lawyer who previously defended this specific triad of judges, MAG ensured that the Applicant's inquiries were intercepted by counsel whose primary professional loyalty was to shielding the Chief Justice and Justice Shore from personal liability, rather than upholding the integrity of the public court record.

E-Portal Blacklisting and the "403 Forbidden" Error

Realizing the Applicant was closing in on the GrapeCity metadata and the underlying forgery, the state escalated from administrative stonewalling to active technological suppression. When the Applicant attempted to utilize the Ontario Courts Public Portal (OCPP) to file mandatory documents for the Judicial Review Procedure Act (JRPA) proceeding, they were suddenly met with a persistent "403 Forbidden Error Code."

In web architecture, a 403 Forbidden code is drastically different from a 500 Internal Server Error (which indicates a broken website) or a 404 Not Found (which indicates a missing page). A 403 status code indicates that the server understands the request perfectly, but the server is actively refusing to authorize it based on the user's credentials or IP address.

In the context of a government portal, this strongly indicates that the Applicant's specific IP address and user profile were deliberately blacklisted by system administrators. The state weaponized the IT infrastructure of the courts to sever the Applicant's access to justice, intentionally preventing the forged document from being formally challenged on the electronic docket.

PART 5: Proxy Judges and the 48-Hour Retirement Catalyst

Prevented from e-filing, the Applicant engaged in a brilliant tactical workaround: they circumvented the digital blockade by physically mail-filing a series of devastating Draft Orders (Notice of Motions 3, 4, and 5) directly to the Divisional Court at Osgoode Hall in December 2025 and January 2026.

The Malleability of Justice Shore: A Proxy Intervention

Prior to these draft orders, Madam Justice Sharon Shore intervened directly in the Applicant's Divisional Court JRPA proceeding. This intervention was highly irregular, acting contrary to the strict parameters of the Rules of Civil Procedure and the JRPA.

Why did she intervene? Because Chief Justice Morawetz could not touch the file himself without exposing his own signature. Justice Shore, having previously been defended alongside Morawetz by MAG counsel Sinnadurai in the McIntosh case, acted as a malleable proxy. Bound by a shared legal defense history and institutional loyalty, she intervened to shield the Chief Justice, absorbing the procedural friction and attempting to dismiss or derail the JRPA before the GrapeCity metadata could be fully exposed.

Notice of Motion #5: The Ultimate Legal Trap without the Applicant knowing

The Applicant's mail-filed draft orders engineered an inescapable legal Catch-22. Specifically, Notice of Motion #5 (Drafted January 12, 2026) was a strategic masterstroke. It explicitly demanded that Chief Justice Morawetz—in his capacity as the President of the Divisional Court and Master of the Roster—self-assign to the matter, override the 403 Forbidden E-Portal blockade, and compel the production of the Authentic Information Package.

The trap snapped shut. The Chief Justice was paralyzed:

- If he signed NOM #5 and ordered the production of the records, he would release the un-redacted SCJ document bearing his own "C J G.B. M" signature, irrefutably proving the police forgery and his own involvement in authorizing a void warrant.

- If he denied the motion, or allowed Justice Shore to continue running interference, he committed documented fraud on the court, endorsing an ongoing state-actor kidnapping and compounding the Charter violations.

The Timeline of Collapse: The mail-filed draft orders (NOM 3, 4, and 5) circumvented the MAG blockade and landed directly on the Chief Justice's desk. Exactly two business days after the delivery of these inescapable draft orders, Chief Justice Geoffrey B. Morawetz announced his sudden, immediate retirement.

Faced with a complete forensic unravelling of the GrapeCity forgery, a mathematically proven vector collapse of his own signature, and an Applicant who successfully bypassed an IP blacklist to deliver a checkmate draft order, the only viable institutional exit strategy to avoid a catastrophic public scandal, professional disbarment, and severe personal liability was to immediately vacate the bench.

Conclusion: Jurisdictional Nullity and State Liability

The systemic nature of this fabrication transforms this from a localized police clerical error into a massive, compensable institutional conspiracy. The coordinated actions of the TPS, MAG, and the judiciary demonstrate a chilling willingness to falsify records to achieve prosecutorial ends.

Because this proceeding was founded upon a manipulated Family Court endorsement processed through a third-party developer API (GrapeCity), rather than a properly sworn Information (Form 2), the entire proceeding is a jurisdictional nullity (coram non judice, meaning "not before a judge"). It is void ab initio (invalid from the very beginning). A nullity of this magnitude cannot be retroactively cured by the Crown, nor saved by the curative provisions of Section 599 of the Criminal Code.

A bureaucratic apparatus deliberately constructed to effect the physical movement and imprisonment of a citizen through forged documents constitutes the most egregious state-actor kidnapping scenario imaginable. It completely strips the police of their lawful statutory authority and immunities, transforming a standard arrest into a false imprisonment and an arbitrary detention.

Comprehensive Legal Memorandum: Jurisdictional Nullity & Procedural Irregularities - Factum Appendix Table

Point	Topic	Core Legal Issue	Forensic / Factual Evidence	Legal Escalation / Consequence
1	Section 599 Inapplicability & Election	Section 599 of the Criminal Code is a substantive "Change of Venue" provision intended exclusively to ensure trial fairness for indictable offences facing a jury. It is	The Crown has explicitly elected to proceed summarily; therefore, an indictment does not and will never exist. The state is	The Crown's reliance on s. 599 is statutorily invalid, legally nonsensical, and highlights their fundamental procedural

It constitutes an admission that the matter is not properly before the court and represents a jurisdictional phantom.
2	Jurisdictional Routing & The Broken Chain	The criminal process must legally commence at the Ontario Court of Justice (OCJ) Intake Court. While a Superior Court (SCJ) judge possesses ex officio status to swear an oath, the file does not legally enter the trial docket until the physical paperwork is filed with the OCJ clerk.	The police physically or electronically held the sworn Information instead of filing it immediately with the OCJ clerk, bypassing the automated ICON docketing system entirely. The file remained in a state of legal limbo within the police records management system (Niche RMS).	The chain of custody was instantly broken. Because the matter never legally "resided" in the SCJ docket and was never properly transmitted to the OCJ, the current proceedings are a jurisdictional nullity devoid of any statutory foundation.
3	Spoliation of Sworn Evidence & The Jurat	The intentional destruction, alteration, or concealment of court documents constitutes spoliation. Sworn Information pages (the Jurat) cannot be materially altered or swapped by police after the oath is taken without swearing a completely new Information before a justice.	The standard 5-page Form 2 package is missing its critical swearing and tracking pages (the jurat/counts). These were replaced with a custom-typed administrative page on Toronto Police letterhead, effectively sanitizing the document's history.	Under omnia praesumuntur contra spoliatorem, the court must infer the destroyed pages contained evidence detrimental to the state. The resulting Information is an unsworn legal nullity, rendering all subsequent steps void ab initio.
4	Statutory Timelines (s. 505) & The Jordan Gap	Section 505 dictates that an Information must be laid "as soon as practicable." While the oath was theoretically taken on October 2, the administrative	Police intentionally held the unfiled file for a six-week period (October 2 to November 13) before submitting it to the OCJ, creating	This extensive delay facilitated the subsequent digital document manipulation and severely prejudices the Applicant's s.

5360		transmission and formal filing at the OCJ must occur promptly to respect constitutional rights.	an unmonitored "black hole" where the file was not publicly docketed or accessible for legal review.	11(b) Charter rights. The state cannot unilaterally pause the Jordan clock while manipulating its own charging documents.
5	The SCJ Origin & The Recording Anomaly	Regardless of whether a warrant is sworn via telewarrant (s. 508.1) or in chambers, the originating court of inherent jurisdiction (SCJ) must retain the original record. Routine urgent applications are normally recorded via the DARTS system or virtual links.	There is a complete absence of the original warrant or Information at the SCJ 361 University records office. The Recording Management Office admitted the proceeding occurred "in chambers" with zero electronic DARTS recording or court reporter presence.	The lack of a formal electronic record for an ex parte liberty deprivation points directly to an authorization executed at the highest levels (Osgoode Hall) or a deliberate, off-the-books circumvention of standard recording protocols.
6	Form 2 vs. Form 7: Statutory Requirements	A Form 2 Information contains only the factual allegations. The actual Form 7 Arrest Warrant is an entirely separate, distinct statutory command document requiring its own execution, return, and mandatory checkboxes for public interest.	The fabricated package completely lacks the required jurat, release confirmation, and Crown election blocks. Crucially, the Crown and police cannot produce the corresponding executed Form 7, relying instead on a directional memo.	Without a proper Form 7, there is no physical, statutorily compliant command authorizing peace officers to execute an arrest. The detention was therefore arbitrary, unlawful, and executed without the necessary judicial warrant.
7	Forum Shopping & Conflicts of Interest	Standard procedure requires police to utilize veteran Intake JPs at the OCJ who rigorously scrutinize warrant thresholds. Bypassing the OCJ to utilize an SCJ Family Court judge with pre-existing firm conflicts is highly irregular forum shopping.	Police bypassed the immediate, automated ICON docketing system used by the OCJ to seek authorization from a civil/family bench located at 361 University Avenue, specifically targeting a judge	This maneuver provided police with total, unmonitored control over the file, shielding it from standard criminal scrutiny and enabling the eventually discovered digital substitution of the

8	The Section 508 Bypass (The "DJ" Ruse)	Mandatory Criminal Code safety checks (Confirmation of Process) require an independent justice to review the sworn Information and "Confirm" or "Cancel" the police undertaking. This is the ultimate check against police overreach.	These statutory blocks were entirely removed from the package. Furthermore, a "DJ" (Duty Judge) endorsement on October 3 was used to bypass the standard Intake JP queue and sanitize the file before its official return date.	This effectively neutered the judicial "checks and balances" mandated by the Supreme Court in Hunter v. Southam, allowing a facially defective and forged file to coast through the system unexamined.
9	Facial Invalidity & Impossibility of Trial	A valid Form 2 contains specific architecture to record the Crown's election and the ultimate judicial disposition (guilt/acquittal). A court of record cannot operate on a document that lacks this permanent tracking framework.	The fabricated "Intake Court Endorsement" replaces provincial forms with a custom-typed TPS letterhead that lacks the mandatory structural boxes, dispose columns, and jurat lines required for a court of record.	Proceeding to trial on this document is functionally and administratively impossible. Recognizing these fatal, irreparable defects, the Crown capitulated and stayed the charges rather than face an evidentiary Hearing on the document's origin.
10	The Phantom JP (George Jiri) Theory	A civilian Court Officer swearing an Information relies solely on "information and belief." If the officer did not actually appear before the listed Justice, the entire document is a fabricated placeholder created after the fact.	Ministry of Attorney General (MAG) FOI responses confirmed zero records exist of Court Officer Frugoni-Rojas swearing an Information before JP Jiri. JP Jiri, a former TPS officer, was likely utilized as a familiar placeholder name.	This formal "nil" response proves beyond a reasonable doubt that the document was backdated and digitally fabricated outside standard OCJ tracking systems to hide the involvement of the Superior Court's leadership.
11	The Institutional Catch-22 & Retirement	The judiciary must avoid both actual bias and the reasonable apprehension of bias. The Applicant	Five days after the Applicant directed high-stakes materials to him,	This establishes a profound motive for the irregular SCJ involvement. The 5362		engineered a Catch-22 by filing draft orders demanding Chief Justice Morawetz investigate Justice Shore's unauthorized issuance.	Chief Justice Morawetz announced an early retirement, effective May 2026. This announcement involved forfeiting an estimated $2,000,000 in future salary/wealth management.	sudden retirement serves as a classic institutional exit strategy to preserve "faith in the judiciary" and pre-empt a Canadian Judicial Council (CJC) public inquiry.

12	The "Smoking Gun": Family Law Construct	The title "Intake Court Endorsement" is entirely alien to criminal procedure and the Criminal Code. It is a specific ONSC Family Law construct used for rapid triage directions (e.g., OCL, interim custody).	A Brampton OCJ Justice of the Peace possesses no such template. The use of this terminology proves the document originated from Justice Shore's family registry triage as an administrative conduit for the Chief Justice's fiat.	This terminology constitutes the "DNA" of the document, proving conclusively that it was ported over from a civil/family procedure where the Chief Justice was exercising his inherent jurisdiction improperly.
13	The 9 Breaches of a Form 7 Warrant	While minor deviations are curable, a document must meet the substance of a prescribed form. The fabricated "Endorsement" fails on nine critical foundational elements required of a Warrant for Arrest under the Criminal Code.	It lacks the "Form 7" title, a command to peace officers, the subject's DOB, offence particulars, statutory grounds, the immediate arrest command, date, location, and a verifiable judicial signature block.	Because it completely lacks these elements, it is facially invalid and legally void. Utilizing it violates s. 29 of the Criminal Code (duty to produce warrant) and s. 9 of the Charter (arbitrary detention).
14	Digital Signature Invalidity (PIPEDA)	Under the Canada Evidence Act and PIPEDA, a legally binding "secure electronic signature" requires highly specific cryptographic processes, such as an asymmetric Key Pair and a trusted Certification Authority.	The typed text "Digitally signed by Justice of the Peace George Jiri" in standard Arial font is merely plain text inputted via a keyboard, utterly lacking the embedded metadata of a secure cryptographic certificate.	The document is legally unsigned and carries zero judicial authority. Without a valid signature (physical or secure digital), it is a mere piece of paper incapable of compelling an arrest or authenticating a record.

16	The 70-Minute Drafting Scramble	The timeline on September 23, 2024, reveals a highly condensed 70-minute window from the initial declaration (11:48 AM) to the final "digital signature" (12:59 PM), indicating a rushed, ex parte scramble.	SCJ Family Registry staff, lacking access to criminal ICON system templates, panicked and utilized their daily civil dictation format to process Chief Justice Morawetz's oral/written fiat for Detective Virani.	This frantic drafting by civil clerks unfamiliar with strict criminal constraints directly resulted in the creation of a legally void, procedurally mutant instrument that failed to meet statutory thresholds.
17	The "Ruse" and Section 29 Withholding	Police are permitted investigative trickery, but utilizing a ruse to lure an accused into custody to circumvent the physical lack of a lawful warrant crosses into illegality and violates s. 29 of the Criminal Code.	Police lured the Applicant to the station using an email regarding "returning property" and subsequently refused to produce the physical warrant upon his multiple, explicit demands.	They utilized the ruse because they knew the paperwork was facially defective and that an accused with legal training would instantly identify it was not a lawful Form 7 Arrest Warrant.
18	The "CPIC Trap" & Metadata Logs	To operationalize an arrest across police divisions, police must enter the warrant into the Canadian Police Information Centre (CPIC), an immutable digital ledger maintained by the RCMP.	Creating a CPIC entry requires mandatory, audited fields: Originating Agency (52 Div), Level of Court (SCJ), Location (361 University), and Authorizing Justice (Morawetz).	Even if the physical paperwork was destroyed or altered, RCMP server logs from September 23 will permanently reflect the objective truth of the Chief Justice's involvement, trapping the state in its own system.

5364 19	Institutional Misdirection & Silos	When institutions engage in cover-ups, they frequently utilize bureaucratic compartmentalization to exhaust inquiries and hide the true origin of unauthorized actions through confusing staff.	Courthouse staff deliberately misdirected the Applicant away from the 1st-floor Family Registry (origin) to the 2nd-floor Criminal Intake, where staff were visibly confused and evasive.	The 2nd-floor staff had no custody of the file because it was never properly e-filed. This was a classic diversionary tactic designed to obscure Justice Shore's role as the administrative triage conduit.
20	The "e-Intake" Impossibility Proof	The OCJ's automated e-Intake system completely standardizes the Form 2/Form 7 process, utilizing *Rule*s-based geographic routing and generating locked, mathematically compliant PDFs.	The system is programmed to be incapable of overriding geographic constraints to assign a Toronto file to a Brampton JP, nor can it output a manually typed "Intake Court Endorsement" header.	The complete absence of standard e-Intake routing logs is definitive, systemic proof that the OCJ digital safety nets were intentionally bypassed via the SCJ family registry back-channel.
21	Endorsement vs. Order (Morawetz Style)	Under Rule 2.01, an "order" is the formal command. An "endorsement" is merely a judge's fiat. Chief Justice Morawetz's established style (e.g., Laurentian, Ambassador Bridge) is a brief endorsement with fulsome reasons to follow.	The document used states "Warrant In The First: Issue". This perfectly matches the Chief Justice's style of a brief directional fiat to a clerk, intended as a placeholder while the state "reasoned" its way toward a prosecution.	By executing an arrest based solely on a brief directional memo (an endorsement), the police executed a detention without the legally mandated statutory Order, rendering the arrest a jurisdictional nullity.
22	30-Day Limit & *Fraus Omnia Corrumpit	The Crown relies on Rule 43.04 limitation periods to stall challenges. However, equitable principles dictate that "fraud unravels everything" (fraus omnia corrumpit), including procedural clocks.	The Crown concedes the "Intake Court Endorsement" is not a proper statutory Order. Furthermore, the document contains forged signatures and was actively concealed by state agents.	Because the document is not an Order, it does not trigger the 30-day clock. Additionally, the state's fraud inherently tolls (pauses) all statutory limitation periods, validating

5365				the timeliness of the application.
23	Nullity & *Coram Non Judice	Because an Information is legally defined as an "indictment" under SCJ *Rule*s, it is subject to strict e-filing mandates to ensure a permanent, unalterable digital record is established instantly.	By physically rushing the paper document or handling it "in chambers" to bypass these e-filing portals, the criminal jurisdiction of the Superior Court was never legitimately engaged in the first instance.	The proceeding occurred coram non judice (before one who is not a judge of competent jurisdiction). The resulting endorsements are an absolute, incurable legal nullity from their inception.
24	The "Court Office" Trap (Rule 4.05)	CPR Rule 1.03 defines the "court office" as the place where the proceeding commenced (the 1st-floor registry). Rule 4.05(6) mandates that if that office has no record, it is deemed not filed.	The "Intake Court Endorsement" physically originated from the 1st-floor Family Registry. However, this office contains no proper e-filed record of the criminal Information as required by Rule 4.05(1).	Serving the 1st floor traps the court: by applying its own strict *Rule*s, the court must admit the file was never properly commenced and therefore does not legally exist in its system.
25	Forcing Admission of Nullity (Rule 43)	Rule 43.03 acts as a statutory subpoena, compelling the Manager of Court Operations at the originating location to return true copies of the indictment, accompanied by a sworn Certificate.	The 1st-floor Manager faces an impossible binary: sign a Certificate finding nothing (admitting nullity via Rule 4.05(6)) or produce the true original signed by Chief Justice Morawetz.	This strategic service checkmates the institution, forcing it to either formally admit the procedural void or permanently cement the unauthorized SCJ involvement into the criminal record on the 2nd floor.
26	The GrapeCity Vector Collapse (Forensics)	Advanced forensic analysis reveals the use of GrapeCity.PDF (Mescius) v6.0.2, which suffers from the DOC-6507 "whitespace bug," causing catastrophic OCR morphological failures during erasure.	When attempting to digitally scrub the anchor text "Chief Justice G.B. Morawetz", stem shearing mutated "C J" to "C L", and Bezier curve vector compression	This resulted in the indelible "C L (M)" artifact. It provides incontrovertible, mathematically predictable forensic proof of a coordinated digital falsification of state

5366			crushed “G.B.” into “( )”.	documents to hide judicial identity.
27	Escalation to State-Actor Kidnapping	Kidnapping requires asportation (physical movement) without lawful authority. Specific intent (mens rea) is established through the police’s willful blindness to facially void documentation.	The Applicant was lured via a ruse and physically transported from the admin area to the dungeon/cells based entirely on a fabricated family-law endorsement devoid of a Form 7 command.	This goes far beyond false imprisonment; it constitutes the most egregious state-actor kidnapping scenario imaginable, exposing the state to massive civil damages and robust Section 24(1) Charter remedies.

[ii]R. v. Baldovi et al, 2016 MBQB 90 (CanLII), at para 72: [72] In addition to the practical reality discussed above, it can also be said that from time to time, a case presents as "a Chief's case". Such a case may be defined by its challenges, its controversy and/or its high profile nature. Such a case may also present as one whose circumstances place the focus on the integrity of the court. Even if an ultimate adjudication (concerning initial questions that touch the integrity of a court's process) proves not to be determinative in a legal sense, there is in most cases – given the stakes – no one more appropriately positioned to conduct such adjudications than the Chief Justice. That is not to say that any Chief Justice can or should consider him or herself in court or in chambers as the final arbiter of ethical questions. Yet, as the face of the court, the Chief Justice is uniquely placed to present for his colleagues, the legal profession and the public generally, a leadership that will address potential legal/ethical issues that require administrative or adjudicative clarification so as to ensure public confidence not only in his or her own court, but the judiciary generally.

[iv] It is formally submitted that the comprehensive collection of jurisprudence and statutes relied upon herein is encapsulated within the first amended [book of authorities] (the "Book Of Authorities"). The Book Of Authorities was originally filed on January 23, 2025, and subsequently amended on February 18, 2026, to explicitly incorporate foundational historical precedents at Tabs 307 through 312.

The 146-page Book Of Authorities is explicitly framed as an exhaustive adjudicative resource tailored for the direct, supervisory jurisdiction of the President of the Divisional Court. This targeted compilation is necessitated by the profound challenges, institutional controversies, and severe ethical concerns that strike directly at the holistic integrity of the Divisional Court. It is structurally organized into distinct chapters, meticulously dividing the governing statutory instruments—categorized as [source laws] (the "Source Laws")—from the binding jurisprudential precedents—categorized as [common law authorities] (the "Common Law Authorities").

Chapter 1 delineates the Source Laws. This encompasses the foundational constitutional framework, specifically the Judicature Sections of the Constitution Act, 1867, alongside judicial administration legislation, including the Judges Act, the Supreme Court Act, and the Act. A critical jurisprudential focus is directed toward the jurisdictional dichotomy existing between the quasi-judicial powers possessed by the Supreme Court of Canada Registrar and the strictly administrative, executive-branch limitations of the Divisional Court Registrar. Further inclusions encompass privacy, evidence, and tribunal-specific legislation, establishing the rigid statutory boundaries within which state actors are confined.

Chapter 2 systematically catalogues the Common Law Authorities. This robust jurisprudential foundation is categorized by overarching legal doctrines, specifically addressing: judicial independence and the paramountcy of the [primus inter pares] (the "Primus Inter Pares") doctrine; the core, constitutionally protected jurisdiction of superior courts against executive interference; the stringent legal tests for the prerogative writ of mandamus utilized to compel public officers to fulfill their statutory duties; the torts of deceit and civil fraud, particularly concerning the duty of good faith and the fatal consequences of silence and half-truths in government contexts; and the strict, non-negotiable standards governing judicial conduct, conflicts of interest, and the due execution of office as delineated by the Canadian Judicial Council. Additional chapters comprehensively address preclusive doctrines, the admissibility of fresh evidence upon judicial review, and the standard of review.

BETWEEN:

TD HOME AND AUTO INSURANCE COMPANY, SECURITY NATIONAL INSURANCE COMPANY, TD GENERAL INSURANCE COMPANY, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR, LICENCE APPEAL TRIBUNAL,

ORDER

(Motion #7 - Paramount Supervisory Intervention Pursuant to Section 123 of the Courts of Justice Act, Declarations of Irremediable Nullity, and Constitutional Relief)

THIS MOTION, made by the Applicant, Kevin Alexander McLean, in writing, directed specifically and exclusively to the Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Justice in their capacity as the President of the Divisional Court. This motion is brought strictly pursuant to the mandatory supervisory mechanisms of section 123 of the Courts of Justice Act, R.S.O. 1990, c. C.43. This motion seeks immediate, extraordinary administrative intervention, jurisdictional reassignment, and an expedited Rehearing of Motion Number Three due to extreme judicial delay, severe procedural stasis, systemic institutional obstruction, and profound, documented allegations of extra-jurisdictional state action bordering on the usurpation of judicial independence. The motion aims to permanently and retroactively correct a cascading series of jurisdictional nullities that have fundamentally derailed the administration of justice and created an impenetrable “shadow docket” insulated from appellate review. This motion was read this day at Osgoode Hall, 130 Queen Street West, Toronto, Ontario.

ON READING the Applicant’s motion of November 17, 2025, the highly detailed Factum of November 18, 2025, the deeply indexed Motion Record, the 1st Updated Compendium encompassing Tabs 1 through 71 (incorporating the Applicant’s Statutory Declaration of October 13, 2025, extensive Costs Submissions, Requisitions #11 through #14 dated December 2 to December 5, 2025, and the Draft Order of December 4, 2025), and the comprehensive Book of Authorities. These meticulously prepared, voluminous materials formally, flawlessly, and incontrovertibly perfected the evidentiary and jurisprudential record for a hearing in writing originally scheduled and firmly set down for December 3, 2025. The Court notes the Applicant duly paid the requisite $339.00 fee for NOM #3 on November 26, 2025, thereby establishing a reasonable, legally enforceable statutory expectation of standard, timely judicial processing. The Court further acknowledges the Applicant's exhaustive compliance with all procedural prerequisites to properly engage the adjudicative machinery of the Divisional Court and the egregious failure of the state to respond to the same;

AND ON READING the deeply substantiated Costs Submissions and corresponding Draft Bill of Costs, seeking sweeping, full-indemnity costs pursuant to Rule 59.06(2)(a) and the inherent jurisdiction of the Court. The Court notes that these submissions exhaustively synthesize the Applicant's monumental due diligence efforts encompassing Notice of Motion #1, Notice of Motion #2, and Notice of Motion #3, seeking to hold the institutional Respondents fully accountable for the severe financial and procedural prejudice inflicted by their calculated, bad-faith silence and deliberate obstruction of the adjudicative process, transforming silence into a strategic weapon of attrition;

AND ON READING the subsequent cascading motions necessitated by severe, ongoing institutional failure and registry collapse, specifically including Motion #4 (made on abridged notice on December 23, 2025). The Court notes that Motion #4 was brought out of absolute procedural necessity to compel the Former Registrar of the Divisional Court, Ms. Tashekah Gentles, and the Current Registrar, Ms. Roxanne Parris, to fulfill their strict, mandatory statutory duties assigned by law to the Judiciary. The Court recognizes the constitutional peril inherent when administrative staff operating within the executive branch functionally usurp the judicial function through strategic inaction, creating impenetrable barriers to access and rendering perfectly constituted applications "procedurally invisible" to the Bench;

AND ON READING Motion #5 (made January 12, 2026), wherein the Applicant expressly invoked the President of the Divisional Court's specialized, paramount capacity as the "Master of the Roster" to seek mandatory orders for judicial self-assignment. The Court notes the critical, highly technical evidence submitted regarding the persistent "403 Forbidden Error Code"—a digital barrier effectively and exclusively blocking the Applicant from accessing the Ontario Courts Public Portal (OCPP), manifesting a deeply concerning form of digital procedural gatekeeping. The Court further notes the Applicant's submission of formal Request Form Undertakings seeking the production of digital audio recordings of unauthorized, oral case conferences—a crucial evidentiary step necessary to permanently pierce the veil of procedural invisibility and reveal the true nature of the extra-jurisdictional acts in question;

AND UPON READING Motion #6 (made February 25, 2026), formally and robustly invoking section 123 of the CJA to definitively break the procedural stasis. The Court notes the Applicant's highly persuasive reliance upon the Auciello precedent, which explicitly categorized an egregious delay surpassing 22 months regarding a straightforward motion as a terminal, manifest breach of procedural fairness occurring within the Chief Justice's "own court." The Court recognizes the Applicant's compelling proposition that exceeding the explicit three-month statutory window for written motions constitutes an absolute failure of the adjudicative objective, fundamentally breaching the fundamental tenets of natural justice and the Section 96 duty to decide;

AND UPON NOTING that the December 1, 2025 "Record of Proceeding" generated by the registry was subjected to forensic scrutiny by the Applicant, revealing a profound and fatal adjudicative void. The Court acknowledges that this official record contained absolutely not a single formally entered Order, conclusively demonstrating the absolute absence of any Order for "Assignment For Case Management." This irrebuttable documentary absence confirms beyond a balance of probabilities that any and all prior oral case conference appearances, unrecorded administrative touchpoints, and informal directives issued by Madam Justice Shore were inherently Coram Non Judice (before a person not a judge of the matter) and were definitively void ab initio (from the beginning). The Court recognizes the legal reality that acts devoid of foundational authority command no obedience from the citizenry and must be struck from the record;

AND UPON FURTHER NOTING that the statutory three-month maximum deliberation period strictly delineated under section 123 of the Courts of Justice Act unequivocally expired on March 3, 2026. This expiration functions in law as the rigid dies a quo (the day from which)—a definitive, unyielding, and mathematically precise temporal marker that irrevocably shifts the burden of action from the diligent litigant to the overarching supervisory jurisdiction of this Court. This expiration instantly triggers the Chief Justice's non-delegable, constitutional duty to directly remedy the unconstitutional functional paralysis of the adjudicative process. The indefinite suspension of adjudicative duties operates as a de facto denial of justice, transforming the judicial process from a mechanism of dispute resolution into an instrument of state oppression;

AND UPON FURTHER NOTING the profound constitutional implications raised herein, specifically regarding the overarching necessity to safeguard the strict separation of powers and forcefully protect the Section 96 integrity of the Superior Court of Justice. The Court recognizes the severe, existential threat posed to the judicature by unauthorized administrative capture, registry gatekeeping, and the insidious utilization of "procedural invisibility" to orchestrate a de facto denial of the constitutional right to access justice. Access to justice is constitutionally defined not merely by the mechanical ability to submit physical documents into a digital void, but by the correlative, mandatory right to receive a substantive, reasoned adjudicative answer from the bench within a legally cognizable timeframe;

AND UPON FURTHER NOTING the incontrovertible evidentiary record proving that the institutional insurance entities (TD Home and Auto Insurance Company, Security National Insurance Company, TD General Insurance Company), the Crown Respondents (Her Majesty The Queen in Right of Ontario, the Attorney General of Ontario), and specifically named non-respondent entities intricately involved in the factual matrix (including the Toronto Police Services Board via Chief Legal Officer Falguni Debnath, and the Solicitor General of Ontario, the Honourable Michael Kerzner), were duly, formally, and verifiably served with the aforementioned extensive materials culminating on November 21, 2025. The Court observes with profound concern that these highly sophisticated, heavily resourced entities have uniformly and completely failed to serve or file responding materials within the mandatory ten-day statutory period, have completely failed to deliver Notices of Appearance, have completely failed to file a First Defence, and have elected to maintain a highly calculated, strategic posture of absolute silence. This synchronized abstention from the adversarial process cannot, and shall not, serve as a permanent, impenetrable shield against adjudication. The Respondents are therefore legally deemed to have strategically accepted the uncontradicted factual matrix and do not oppose the substantive, constitutional, and prerogative relief sought within this motion;

AND UPON FURTHER NOTING that this order is issued pursuant to a motion brought without notice and ex parte to the Respondents and Responding Parties, as they failed to comply with the Rules of Civil Procedure despite having been properly served, in accordance with Rule 37.12.1(5) in relation to NOM #3:

1. THIS COURT ORDERS AND DECLARES that the Applicant's motion for paramount supervisory relief pursuant to section 123 of the Courts of Justice Act is hereby granted in its absolute entirety. This Court formally and necessarily invokes the inherent Primus Inter Pares (first among equals) authority of the Chief Justice to aggressively restore procedural equilibrium, entirely dismantle the artificial administrative barriers of institutional delay, and robustly uphold the constitutional imperative of timely, transparent, and legally sound adjudication.
2. THIS COURT DECLARES that Madam Justice Shore's acts within these proceedings were irrevocably invalid and constitute Factum A Judice, Quod Ad Officium Jure Non Pertinet, Ratum Non Est (an act of a judge which does not pertain to the duties of her office is of no force and cannot be ratified). This declaration includes, but is strictly not limited to, her extra-jurisdictional acts commencing on or about January 7, 2025, executed via the informal, off-docket "Ibula Email." Jurisdiction must be formally and transparently conferred through established, codified channels; it cannot be informally assumed or seized sua sponte from the registry ether.
3. THIS COURT DECLARES that any case conference appearances, administrative touchpoints, or purported case management sessions convened before Madam Justice Shore were strictly Coram Non Judice (before a person who was not a lawful Judge of the matter). In the absolute absence of a formally issued and entered Order for Assignment for Case Management, the judicial officer lacked all foundational authority to compel attendance, issue directives, or manage the trajectory of the lis between the parties.
4. THIS COURT DECLARES that Madam Justice Shore was demonstrably incorrect when she represented through SCJ RMO representative Ms. Amirthalingam that the Applicant's retained Authorized Transcriptionist in Ontario ("ATO") was not entitled to the "tapes and materials required for transcription." Her assertion that the Divisional Court or any SCJ Court dealing in non-family law proceedings "do not give them" and/or are "unable to do so" fundamentally offends the open court principle and directly contradicts the Ministry's own binding transcription directives.
5. THIS COURT DECLARES that Madam Justice Shore was one of the Undisclosed SCJ Judges, or the singular Undisclosed SCJ Judge, who received a Form 2 Information under the Criminal Code in the form of a common Adult Information package (a six-page document) in September 2024. She received the same entirely outside the standard criminal intake flow, securely within her judicial office (chambers). This Court Declares that a Criminal Proceeding was formally commenced against the Applicant on the exact date in which the Criminal Code Form 2 Information was received and/or laid. This Court Further Declares that Madam Justice Shore was the individual SCJ Judge who commissioned or swore the oath involving the Police Officer of the Toronto Police Service (TPS). This highly irregular chamber intervention explicitly explains why unknown persons subsequently removed page four of six from the Information Package—a deliberate act of obfuscation engineered to conceal the identity of Madam Justice Shore from the Applicant and shield the extra-jurisdictional act from appellate scrutiny.

6. THIS COURT DECLARES that the Applicant was unlawfully arrested on October 2, 2024, at the 14th Division of the TPS. This arrest was executed only after the Applicant was deliberately lured to said divisional detachment under false pretenses, following an unlawful, extra-judicial lockout from his apartment and apartment buildings on September 20, 2024. The Court notes with grave concern that the Applicant was thereafter maliciously mis-designated as having "no fixed address." This deliberate mis-designation was deployed as a bad-faith administrative method by the TPS to bypass Section 509 of the Criminal Code, ensuring the Applicant was improperly subjected to the coercive powers of a Criminal Code Form 7 Arrest Warrant rather than the legally appropriate Form 6 Summons.
7. THIS COURT DECLARES that the Applicant was never subjected to a lawfully generated, system-validated Criminal Code Form 7 Warrant For Arrest. Instead, the Applicant was subjected to a procedurally alien "Intake Court Endorsement" given, made, or issued by Madam Justice Shore. This endorsement entirely lacked the Sovereign's command, lacked the statutory checkboxes required by Section 512, and lacked the indispensable Section 511 endorsement necessary for interim release, rendering the detention fundamentally arbitrary.
8. THIS COURT DECLARES that the TPS Police Officer and a civilian court officer, specifically Court Officer (Toronto Region) Mrs. Frugoni-Rojas, were physically present before Madam Justice Shore on the day in question, bypassing the standard public intake counter.
9. THIS COURT DECLARES that the Court Officer (Toronto Region) Mrs. Frugoni-Rojas escorted the TPS Police Officer directly to the private judicial office (chambers) of Madam Justice Shore on the day in question. They were greeted by Madam Justice Shore's judicial assistant and proceeded to lay the Criminal Code Form 2 Information in person. This action was not executed via telecommunications as permitted by statute, but in a closed physical etting, a fact formally admitted by SCJ RMO representative Ms. Amirthalingam. This "Chambers Bypass" circumvented the public docket and standard Versaterm/ICON digital sealing protocols.

10. THIS COURT DECLARES that while there is no strict statutory requirement under the Criminal Code for an "Ex Parte In Camera Hearing" to be recorded by audio or recording devices, the overarching administrative frameworks—specifically the MAG CSD Court Information Access Guide (2019) and the Court Transcripts Practices Standards Manual (2024)—unequivocally represent that intake court proceedings are to be transcribed and made available to the public after a process has been issued and/or an accused has been arrested. An ATO is mandated to provide a best-efforts transcript of the same. The failure to maintain a verifiable record of this extraordinary chamber intervention severely compromises the transparency of the administration of justice.
11. THIS COURT DECLARES that Madam Justice Shore's affixed and permanently assigned administrative location was the SCJ 361 University Avenue Courthouse. Within this facility, she held the permanent administrative appointment as the family law team leader of the judges therein, a role she occupied since a time on or around after family law proceedings were migrated from 393 University Avenue to 361 University Avenue in approximately 2020. This deeply entrenched proximity to Family Court operations provides the factual nexus explaining the improper utilization of Family Law nomenclature ("Intake Court Endorsement," "Accepted on its face") within a purported criminal instrument.
12. THIS COURT DECLARES that the Chief Justice of the SCJ (in their capacity as Divisional Court President) designated Madam Justice Shore to provide judicial services to the Divisional Court on or around 2022. However, this designation strictly limits her authority to matters properly perfected and assigned within that specialized, statutory forum, conferring absolutely no inherent, roving jurisdiction to manage un-pled issues or unassigned files.
13. THIS COURT DECLARES that prior to Madam Justice Shore being appointed to the SCJ by the Department of Justice on the recommendation of the Prime Minister of Canada, and subsequently assigned by the former Chief Justice of the SCJ in 2018 to the Toronto Region, Madam Justice Shore was a senior partner at Epstein Cole LLP. During the period spanning from April 2018 to June 2024, said law firm acted in a deeply adversarial posture against the Applicant's girlfriend and then common-law spouse, representing Mr. Papadimitropoulos (Andrew). Mr. Papadimitropoulos concurrently served as legal counsel to insurance companies within the TD Insurance Group, specifically the TD Insurance Automotive Group ("TDIA Group"), and functioned as the manager of SABS and tort litigation ("Consequence Management") from 2023 until his abrupt departure in late January 2025. This profound historical nexus creates an inescapable, fatal conflict of interest that irreparably taints any judicial intervention by Madam Justice Shore in matters directly involving the TDIA Group and the Applicant.

14. THIS COURT DECLARES that the Applicant's Judicial Review Procedure Act (JRPA) Application was meticulously, formally, and legally perfected on December 16, 2024, initiating the mandatory statutory timelines which have been subsequently and egregiously ignored by the registry.

15. THIS COURT DECLARES that Former Registrar Gentles (and by extension the current registry apparatus under Ms. Parris) of the Divisional Court, as of December 3, 2025, comprehensively failed to comply with the mandatory directives of the Rules of Civil Procedure, specifically failing in the strict administrative duty to issue, sign, and process a Form 68B. The subject cannot and shall not be penalized for the internal administrative collapse, gatekeeping, or apathy of the state apparatus.

16. THIS COURT DECLARES that in addition to Madam Justice Shore's acts in the Divisional Court Proceeding being Factum A Judice, Quod Ad Officium Jure Non Pertinet, Ratum Non Est—including but not limited to the Ibula Email wherein she purported to "direct" (sic) the convening of a "case management conference" on January 7, 2025, without a scintilla of jurisdiction in a JRPA Application—her acts in the Criminal Proceeding of September 2024 were equally void. This Court Declares that as a direct consequence of the total absence of a BY ORDER "Assignment For Case Management" and the total absence of a First Defence 'filed' by any Respondent, all appearances before her were legally invisible (Coram Non Judice). Furthermore, This Court Declares that Madam Justice Shore's issuance of an "Intake Court Endorsement" in the Criminal Proceeding was a profound excess of jurisdiction. Upon hearing an ex parte application by law enforcement in camera, she was legally constrained to either issue a Form 6 Summons, issue a Form 7 Warrant For Arrest, or dismiss the application entirely. The invention of a hybrid Family-Criminal endorsement constitutes a stark jurisdictional nullity.

17. THIS COURT DECLARES that Madam Justice Shore was unconditionally, ethically, and legally required to provide immediate, transparent notice to the Applicant of her undisclosed, ex parte judicial involvement in the Fall of 2024 Criminal Proceeding. This strict duty of disclosure exists absolutely irrespective of whether she possessed contemporaneous knowledge that the Information Package presented to her in chambers had been—or would subsequently be—post facto manipulated or forensically altered by state actors.

18. THIS COURT DECLARES that since there was no legal filing of a First Defence and absolutely no BY ORDER "Assignment For Case Management" formally entered onto the court record, Madam Justice Shore was strictly unassigned to hear, manage, or conduct any procedural steps whatsoever in this Divisional Court JRPA Proceeding, let alone conduct and hear all steps as contemplated by Rule 77.06. This Court Further Declares that Madam Justice Shore was never the lawfully seized presiding motions judge for any of the Applicant's motions. Consequently, she is hereby permanently restrained and formally prohibited from any further administrative, adjudicative, or clerical involvement in this matter or any related proceedings.
19. THIS COURT DECLARES that the systemic metadata deeply embedded within the Canadian Police Information Centre (CPIC)—specifically the first entries detailing the originating agency identifier, the issuing court level, the issuing court region, and the name of the authorizing SCJ Judge—are entirely and factually consistent with the specific law enforcement agency that attended the courthouse in Fall 2024, the Superior Court of Justice, the Toronto Region, and Madam Justice Shore. This metadata provides an irrefutable digital footprint confirming her involvement in the purported Intake Court Endorsement, directly contradicting subsequent registry denials.
20. THIS COURT DECLARES that Madam Justice Shore possessed absolutely no statutory jurisdiction, inherent power, or administrative authority to unilaterally self-assign herself to this complex JRPA Divisional Court Proceeding. Jurisdiction in statutory courts is strictly conferred, never telepathically or administratively seized.
21. THIS COURT FURTHER DECLARES that irrespective of the void ab initio, Factum A Judice, and Coram Non Judice status of the steps taken by Madam Justice Shore in January 2025 and beyond, the specific language utilized in the directives relayed by Ms. Ibula—a non-appointed individual of the MAG and non-member of the union (OPSEU)—was manifestly extra-jurisdictional. The use of highly discretionary, non-committal language such as "if necessary" regarding the hearing of a perfectly constituted JRPA Application represents a gross misapprehension of the judicial duty to decide. This language is fundamentally inconsistent with the mandatory commands of the JRPA, the Courts of Justice Act, the Rules of Civil Procedure, and the binding common law principles of administrative review established by the Supreme Court of Canada in Vavilov and Yatar.

22. THIS COURT DECLARES that the prominent inclusion of Ms. Ibula in the administrative chain of custody creates an inescapable, fatal reasonable apprehension of bias. Based upon public decisions, Ms. Ibula was or is concurrently employed at the offices of Martin Barristers at Suite 55-1100 University Avenue. This is the exact, identical office location as then-counsel Ms. Nikki Kanavas, a lawyer of the LSO representing the Landlord of the Applicant—a party inextricably intertwined in the underlying property thefts and unlawful lockouts detailed herein. This deeply compromised administrative nexus shatters the appearance of judicial independence, and every document and step flowing through this channel is hereby formally set aside on the distinct and independent ground of bias and conflict of interest.

23. THIS COURT DECLARES that pursuant to section 123(1) of the Courts of Justice Act, the "chief judge" is a person having authority to assign duties to the judge. Furthermore, the Divisional Court President has the exclusive authority to direct and supervise the sittings and the assignment of the judicial duties of the court (see: s. 72 of the Courts of Justice Act), which includes determining the sittings of the court; assigning judges to the sittings; assigning cases and other judicial duties to individual judges; and determining the sitting schedules and places of sittings for individual judges (see: section 75 of the Courts of Justice Act).

24. THIS COURT DECLARES that as the Divisional Court President announced his retirement on January 21, 2026, which occurred a few days after the draft orders were mail-filed with the Divisional Court, he is statutorily entitled to give decisions for 90 days following said announcement pursuant to section 123(2) of the Courts of Justice Act.

25. THIS COURT DECLARES that the "inability" or being "unable to give a decision" within the meaning of section 123(4) and section 124(2) of the Courts of Justice Act relates not only to a physical or mental defect, but fundamentally encompasses the lack of authority to do so, including but not limited to the lack of independence, impartiality, and jurisdiction.

26. THIS COURT DECLARES that under section 123(5) of the Courts of Justice Act, the statutory reference to "hearing" a matter strictly relates to a Hearing and not a case conference. Where a judge has heard a matter like NOM #3, whether it be in writing or orally, with or without oral argument, and with or without the public, the mandatory timeline for that judicial officer to give a decision was three months, unless it was strictly reserved for Judgment.

27. THIS COURT ORDERS AND DIRECTS that an unredacted, certified copy of this made, issued, signed, endorsed, filed, and entered Order may be formally provided by the Applicant to the Canadian Judicial Council. This provision facilitates the Council's exclusive jurisdiction over the review of judicial conduct that severely departs from the Quamdiu Se Bene Gesserit standard, particularly regarding allegations of sua sponte excess of jurisdiction and the failure in the due execution of office.

28. THIS COURT ORDERS that Motion Number Three, having been maliciously or negligently orphaned in a state of procedural invisibility and held captive in a constitutionally offensive "shadow docket", is hereby immediately rescued from administrative stasis. Pursuant to section 123(5) of the Courts of Justice Act, the Divisional Court President hereby relieves whomever he purportedly assigned to hear NOM #3, and formally self-assigns to take over and adjudicate this matter, mirroring the relief explicitly sought in Motion #6 in relation to NOM #2.

29. THIS COURT ORDERS that the Divisional Court President must provide a specific time as to when the decision is given, and the substantive decision shall be rendered by no later than Thursday, April 2, 2026.

30. THIS COURT DIRECTS AND MANDATES that the Chief Justice, in adjudicating this Rehearing, shall rigorously and unhesitatingly apply the foundational doctrine of Active Guardianship in evaluating the unopposed evidentiary record. The Chief Justice shall proactively examine the uncontradicted facts to determine if the legal threshold for relief has been satisfied on a balance of probabilities. The Applicant shall not be penalized for the intentional default, procedural delinquency, and calculated, bad-faith silence of the institutional and Crown Respondents.

31. THIS COURT DIRECTS that the Applicant's fundamental right to formally pursue Charter damages, secure declaratory relief regarding the "Bad Faith Threshold," and seek extraordinary remedies stemming from the alleged "Section 96 Inconsistency," remains fully intact, vibrant, and actively actionable before the Chief Justice. The Court expressly adopts the jurisprudential framework of Power, recognizing that where systemic anomalies trigger a "gross usurpation" of power, and where "bad faith" involves acting for collateral purposes through precipitously rushed, ex parte processes without notice (as outlined in Grosvenor), the state loses its immunity. Because the sua sponte Irremediable Nullity violently bypassed standard appellate avenues, the alternative remedy barrier articulated in Ernst is definitively overcome.

32. THIS COURT ORDERS that Former Registrar Ms. Tashekah Gentles and Current Registrar Ms. Roxanne Parris are hereby legally and mandatory compelled to fulfill their statutory duties, specifically to formally and immediately issue and sign the Form 68B and process the Applicant's unopposed JRPA application without further administrative obstruction, gatekeeping, or extra-judicial delay. The Registrar's office is strictly prohibited from substituting its administrative preference for the mandatory requirements of the Rules of Civil Procedure.

33. THIS COURT ORDERS that the Ministry of the Attorney General (Justice Technology Services / Justice Services Online) shall immediately and unconditionally lift the "403 Forbidden Error Code" effectively blocking the Applicant's IP addresses and user credentials from accessing the Ontario Courts Public Portal (OCPP), thereby restoring the Applicant's right to digital access to justice and equal standing before the law.

34. THIS COURT ORDERS the Registrar and the designated Court Reporting staff to immediately honor the Applicant's Request Form Undertakings and release the digital audio recordings of all unauthorized case conferences, administrative meetings, or oral proceedings conducted in this matter, regardless of whether they were formally docketed in the ICON or FRANK systems, ensuring the absolute transparency of the judicial record.

35. THIS COURT ORDERS the strict, immediate, and uncompromising preservation of all systemic digital and physical evidence. This preservation order specifically captures: all systemic metadata; JSO portal access logs; CPIC transaction logs (specifically including PIB RCMP PPU 005); ICON and FRANK database queries; and internal registry electronic mail communications pertaining to this proceeding and the FIP. Furthermore, this order explicitly covers records related to the generation of the "False Information Package" (FIP) via the GrapeCity Documents for PDF 6.0.2.0 SDK, all metadata associated with the "TDI Karat Theft", OnLand active/deleted instruments concerning the Fleetwood Drive Home, and the documented unauthorized interference with the Applicant's cellular device and Apple iCloud storage infrastructure. The Crown Respondents, the Toronto Police Service (including the 14th and 52nd Divisions), and the Ministry of the Attorney General are strictly, formally, and permanently enjoined from the spoliation, deletion, alteration, or systemic "cleanup" of these digital records.

36. THIS COURT DIRECTS that, to fiercely preserve the absolute independence of the judiciary and actively prevent severe, fatal institutional conflicts of interest, the Ministry of the Attorney General (Civil Law Division) is strictly prohibited from concurrently providing legal representation, strategic advice, or administrative shielding to any reassigned judicial officer involved in the coram non judice acts while simultaneously representing the Crown Respondents in the underlying adversarial lis. The executive branch of government must not act as a protective shield for judicial excess of jurisdiction.

37. THIS COURT ORDERS that all relief, reassignments, and mandatory directives granted herein are unequivocally ordered nunc pro tunc (retroactively effective) as of December 3, 2025. This ensures the absolute, impenetrable preservation of the Applicant's statutory timelines, appellate windows, and procedural standing, wholly immunizing the diligent litigant against any loss of rights resulting from the institution's own profound, prolonged delay.

38. THIS COURT ORDERS AND COMMANDS the Registrar of the Divisional Court to immediately, without exception, completely bypass standard queueing procedures, administrative gatekeeping, and routine processing delays to formally execute this Order. The Registrar shall facilitate the immediate digital and physical transfer of the perfected record for a final, substantive disposition forthwith. The Registrar is explicitly and personally directed to ensure the immediate, permanent cessation of the shadow docket and to restore strict, unwavering compliance with the open court principle.

39. THIS COURT ORDERS that pursuant to section 123(7) of the Courts of Justice Act, the Chief Justice must give directions and make orders that are just (see: Courts of Justice Act and Rules of Civil Procedure) and hereby decides and awards the costs relief sought as per NOM #3's Compendium 1st Updated and mail filed on December 11, 2025. There shall be no costs awarded on this specific, extraordinary motion for supervisory intervention, acknowledging that this structural remedy was necessitated by severe systemic judicial failure and registry collapse.

ENDORSEMENT

A. Introduction

[1] This endorsement concerns three motions to approve the payment of class counsel fees. These motions occur in the context of insolvency proceedings under the Companies' Creditors Arrangement Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. C-36, as amended (the "CCAA"), involving JTI-Macdonald Corp. ("JTIM"), Imperial Tobacco Canada Limited and Imperial Tobacco Company Limited ("Imperial"), and Rothmans, Benson & Hedges Inc. ("RBH") (collectively, the "Tobacco Companies").

[2] The CCAA proceedings involve claims pursued in several class action proceedings. The relevant classes are:

a. The Québec Class Action Plaintiffs ("QCAPs"): members of the Blais and Létourneau classes. The certified class definition in the Létourneau Class Action includes Québec residents who, as of 1998, were addicted to nicotine from September 30, 1994 onward and continued to be daily smokers of the Tobacco Companies' cigarettes as of February 21, 2005 (or their earlier death). The certified class definition in the Blais Class Action includes Québec residents who, prior to November 20, 1998, had smoked a minimum of 87,600 cigarettes and, prior to March 12, 2012, were diagnosed with Lung Cancer, Throat Cancer or Emphysema/COPD (GOLD Grade III or IV);

b. Pan-Canadian Claimants ("PCCs"): All individuals, excluding the Blais Class Members and Létourneau Class Members, who have asserted or may be entitled to assert a PCC Claim against the Tobacco Companies. A PCC Claim is any Claim of any Pan-Canadian Claimant to recover damages in respect of the development, design, manufacture, production, marketing, advertising, distribution, purchase or sale of Tobacco Products, including any representations or omissions in respect thereof, the historical or ongoing use of or exposure (whether directly or indirectly) to Tobacco Products or their emissions and the development of any disease or condition as a result thereof;

c. Knight* Class Action Plaintiffs: Class Action Plaintiffs who pursued a certified class action against only Imperial on behalf of persons who purchased Imperial's light or mild cigarettes in British Columbia for personal, family or household use between May 9, 1997 and July 31, 2007; and

d. Tobacco Producers: The Ontario Flue-Cured Tobacco Growers' Marketing Board and certain individual tobacco growers who pursued three uncertified class actions commenced against each of the Tobacco Companies who sold their tobacco through the Ontario Flue-Cured Tobacco Growers' Marketing Board pursuant to the annual Heads of Agreement made with Imperial, RBH and JTIM from January 1, 1986, to December 31, 1996.

[3] Class counsel for the QCAPs, the Knight Class Action Plaintiffs and the Tobacco Producers each move for approval of their fees. Counsel for the PCCs are compensated by the Tobacco Companies on a fee-for-service basis. As a result, no court approval is sought or required in relation to PCC Counsel's compensation.

B. Procedural History of the Québec Proceedings

[4] On February 21, 2005, the Québec Superior Court authorized the Létourneau and Blais class proceedings: Conseil québécois sur le tabac et la santé c. JTI-MacDonald Corp., 2005 CanLII 4070 (Qc. C.S.).

[5] On June 9, 2015, the Québec Superior Court ruled in favour of the QCAPs. Riordan J.S.C. ordered that the Tobacco Companies pay $100,000 to the Blais class members who developed the covered forms of cancer and $30,000 to those who developed emphysema. These amounts were reduced if the class member became addicted to nicotine after January 1, 1980, when the public became aware that tobacco caused these diseases. The Létourneau class members were awarded $131,000,000 in punitive damages. Additionally, $30,000 of punitive damages were awarded against each of the Tobacco Companies.

[6] The Tobacco Companies appealed the decision of the Québec Superior Court. On March 1, 2019, the Québec Court of Appeal substantially upheld the trial decision: Imperial Tobacco Canada ltée c. Conseil québécois sur le tabac et la santé, 2019 QCCA 358, 55 C.C.L.T. (4th) 1.

[7] Within three weeks of the Court of Appeal's decision, all three Tobacco Companies filed for insolvency protection in this court under the CCAA. This commenced a five-and-a-half-year mediation process which led to a set of functionally identical plans of arrangement or compromise for each of the Tobacco Companies (the "CCAA Plans"). The CCAA Plans provide that the Tobacco Companies are to contribute a total of $32,500,000,000 in settlement of creditors' claims.

[8] On January 15, 2025, the Monitors for each of the Tobacco Companies brought motions to sanction the CCAA Plans. Hearings were conducted on January 29-31, 2025, and an additional hearing was held regarding proposed amendments to the CCAA Plans on March 3, 2025. On March 6, 2025, the CCAA Plans relating to each of the Tobacco Companies were sanctioned with reasons reported at 2025 ONSC 1358. Implementation of the CCAA Plans is pending.

[9] On January 29, 2025, I appointed The Honourable André Prévost, a retired Justice of the Québec Superior Court, as amicus curiae to provide (i) "a purely legal and academic description of the applicable test under Québec law to determine the appropriateness of the QCAP counsel fees"; and (ii) "some sort of position with respect to the requested fees of all counsel based on that test."

[10] Hearings on the counsel fee motions were held on February 11, 2025, and March 7, 2025. Mr. Prévost filed a factum and made oral submissions. He fulfilled his mandate. I found the contribution of The Honourable André Prévost to be most helpful and I accept the entirety of his submissions.

[11] The release of this endorsement is timed to coincide with the implementation of the CCAA Plans, which is scheduled to occur later this week.

C. QCAP Counsel Fees

[12] On October 30, 1998, the Conseil québécois sur le tabac et la santé retained Lauzon Bélanger, a predecessor to Trudel Johnson & Lespérance, to pursue a class action claim against the Tobacco Companies. The retainer agreement provided for a 20% contingency fee on amounts collected or benefits realized from the litigation. On March 16, 2017, that retainer agreement was amended to allow for up to an additional 2% of amounts recovered to be paid to counsel providing bankruptcy and insolvency services.

[13] Counsel for the QCAPs seek approval for their fees under Art. 593 of the Code of Civil Procedure, C.Q.L.R., c. C-25.01.

[14] QCAP Counsel ask for $901,177,915 in class counsel fees, representing 22% of the $4.119 billion allocated to the QCAPs under the CCAA Plans. They state that over the 26 years of their retainer, counsel have expended over 203,849 hours on the file. They anticipate devoting another 8,000 hours on the matter before the CCAA Plans are fully implemented. Based on this total of 211,849 hours, QCAP Counsel estimate a straight-line billing amount of $214,653,500.

[15] Included in the requested compensation is $46,598,926 for litigation and other costs. Among other things, this includes fees to be paid to Raymond Chabot, which will support QCAPs preparation and submission of their claims without any additional costs to the claimants.

D. Knight Class Counsel Fees

[16] The Knight action was filed in the British Columbia Supreme Court on May 8, 2003. Mr. Knight sought damages against Imperial on the basis that it had misled customers by advertising "light" and "mild" cigarettes as healthier smoking products. He also sought an injunction requiring tobacco companies to refrain from using the "light" and "mild" descriptors in the marketplace.

[17] Mr. Knight entered into a retainer agreement with Klein Lawyers, who served as class counsel. The agreement provided for a 33 1/3% contingency fee plus taxes, disbursements and interest on the disbursements.

[18] The Knight class action was certified on February 8, 2005: Knight v. Imperial Tobacco Canada Limited, 2005 BCSC 172, 250 D.L.R. (4th) 347. Mr. Knight and the Government of Canada, as a third-party defendant, each appealed the certification decision. The British Columbia Court of Appeal altered the common issues and the class period but otherwise confirmed the decision below: Knight v. Imperial Tobacco Canada Ltd., 2006 BCCA 235, 267 D.L.R. (4th) 579.

[19] Knight Class Counsel request that the court approve its fees as required by s. 38 of the Class Proceedings Act, R.S.B.C. 1996, c. 50. They seek $5 million plus sales tax for legal fees.

This corresponds to 33 1/3% of the $15 million recovery for the Knight class. They also request $1,062,746.62 for disbursements.

[20] Knight Class Counsel also request authorization to pay a $10,000 honorarium to Mr. Knight for his services as representative plaintiff.

E. Tobacco Producers' Class Counsel Fees

[21] The Tobacco Board was the exclusive supplier of Ontario flue-cured tobacco, pursuant to supply management regulations. It administered auctions and controlled the production and marketing of Ontario-grown tobacco.

[22] Pursuant to its standard-form "Heads of Agreement", the Tobacco Board sold tobacco to the Tobacco Companies for products manufactured in Canada. The Heads of Agreement set one price for tobacco used in products sold within Canada and a lower price for tobacco used in products exported to foreign markets.

[23] On July 31, 2008, RBH and Imperial pleaded guilty to a charge that they aided the sale and possession of tobacco manufactured in Canada which was not packaged and stamped according to the Excise Act, R.S.C. 1985, c. E-14. JTIM pleaded guilty to similar charges on April 13, 2010.

[24] In light of the Tobacco Companies' guilty pleas, several Ontario tobacco producers allege that the Tobacco Companies wrongfully avoided paying the higher prices for tobacco to be used in products sold in Canada. The Tobacco Board commenced class proceedings for breach of contract against RBH on November 5, 2009, Imperial on December 2, 2009, and JTIM on April 23, 2010.

[25] On February 11, 2009, the Tobacco Board retained Sutts Strosberg LLP, a predecessor firm to Strosberg Wingfield Sasso LLP providing for a 25% contingency fee on all amounts recovered in the claim. Sutts Strosberg also entered into retainer agreements with individual Tobacco Producers on similar terms.

[26] Counsel for the Tobacco Producers now seek approval under s. 32(2) of the Class Proceedings Act, 1992, S.O. 1992, c. 6.

[27] They ask for 25% of the $15 million recovered on behalf of the class. This amounts to $3,750,000, less $141,960.98 previously recovered for costs and $831,018.75 previously paid by the Tobacco Board. They also seek $249.19 for outstanding disbursements and $361,045.03 in sales tax. After these adjustments, counsel ask for $3,138,314.49 in total.

F. Putting the Fee Requests into Context

[28] The QCAPs Counsel request fees in the amount of approximately $900 million. The Knight Class Counsel request fees in the amount of $5 million. The Tobacco Producers Counsel request fees in the amount of $3.75 million. This endorsement focuses on the QCAPs Counsel fee requests.

The fee requests of the Knight Class Counsel and the Tobacco Producers Counsel are, in comparison, de minimus.

[29] This endorsement should be read in the context that this is a unique case and the fee request of QCAPs Counsel is unlikely to ever be repeated. Consequently, this endorsement should not be taken as having any precedential value. It is unique to the circumstances of these CCAA proceedings.

G. Submissions

(i) Amicus

[30] As noted above, I accept the submissions of Mr. Prévost . It is helpful to set out some of his most relevant submissions.

> 19. As we understand it to also be the case in other Canadian provinces, legal fees are, in Québec, subject to court approval or determination in the context of class actions, with the court being tasked with safeguarding class members' interests. The relevant legislative provision is Article 593 of the Code of Civil Procedure, CQLR c. C-25.01 ("CCP"):
>
> > 593. The court may award the representative plaintiff an indemnity for disbursements and an amount to cover legal costs and the lawyer's professional fee. Both are payable out of the amount recovered collectively or before payment of individual claims.
> >
> > In the interests of the class members, the court assesses whether the fee charged by the representative plaintiff's lawyer is reasonable; if the fee is not reasonable, the court may determine it.
> >
> > Regardless of whether the Class Action Assistance Fund provided assistance to the representative plaintiff, the court hears the Fund before ruling on the legal costs and the fee. The court considers whether or not the Fund guaranteed payment of all or any portion of the legal costs or the fee.
> >
> > [Emphasis added by Mr. Prévost]
>
> 20. The leading case on the matter is that of A.B. v Clercs de Saint-Viateur du Canada,[9] which establishes the guidelines to be applied in undertaking an assessment pursuant to Article 593 CCP. As noted by the Quebec Court of Appeal, the reasonableness of the fees must be evaluated for each claim, and [t]here is no magic formula that will guarantee in every situation that the fee will ultimately be reasonable.[10]

(Footnote 9: 2023 QCCA 527 [A.B.].)

(Footnote 10: Ibid at para. 58.)

...

21. When seized of a motion for approval of class counsel fees, a Québec judge must "ensure that the professional fees claimed are actually fair and reasonable", and if they are not, they must determine the fee.[11]

(Footnote 11: Art 593 CCP; A.B., supra note 9 at paras. 50-51.)

22. While fee agreements enjoy a presumption of validity, courts in Québec are not bound by their terms.[12] A Québec court may thus set a fee agreement aside if applying it would not be fair and reasonable for the class members in the context of the settlement or judgment at hand.[13] As indicated by Schrager, J.A.:

> [51] [...] The judge has a complex task because he or she must [translation] "find the ideal equilibrium in the remuneration by giving the lawyers the necessary and sufficient amount to encourage them to take on the next case, while bearing in mind that the class members must be the first to benefit from the amounts paid by the defendants".[14]

(Footnote 12: A.B. supra note 9 at para 51, citing Option Consommateurs c Banque Amex du Canada, 2018 QCCA 305 at para 67 [AMEX QCCA judgment].)
(Footnote 13: Pellemans c Lacroix, 2011 QCCS 1345 at para 50 [Pellemans]; Amex QCCA judgment supra note 12 at para 66; Girard c Videotron, 2019 QCCS 2412 at para 30 [Girard], leave to appeal dismissed at 2019 QCCA 1531 and 2019 CanLII 11805 (SCC); A.B. supra note 9 at para 51; Yves Lauzon & Anne-Julie Asselin, "Article 593" in Luc Chamberland (ed), Le Grand Collectif – Code de procédure civile: Commentaires et annotations, Volume 2 (Articles 351 à 836), 9th ed (Éditions Yvon Blais : 2024; EYB2024GCO605) at 4 [Lauzon & Asselin] (Tab 1).)

23. If the fees resulting from a fee agreement are found to be reasonable in the particular circumstances of the case, a Québec court will not interfere[15], notably to avoid "provoking a practice among lawyers of asking for more, knowing that the agreed amount will be reduced".[16]

(Footnote 15: Pellemans supra note 13 at para 50, citing Association de protection des épargnants et investisseurs du Québec (APEIQ) c Corporation Nortel Networks, 2007 QCCS 266.)

(Footnote 16: Trudelle v Ticketmaster Canada, 2024 QCCS 1007 at para 75 [Trudelle].)

24. In assessing the fairness and reasonableness of the fees for which approval is being sought, the court is guided by Section 102 of the Code of Professional Conduct of Lawyers,[17] which provides a non-exhaustive list of factors to take into account:

> 102. The fees are fair and reasonable if they are warranted by the circumstances and proportionate to the professional services rendered. In determining his fees, the lawyer must in particular take the following factors into account:
> (1) experience;
>
> (2) the time and effort required and devoted to the matter;
>
> (3) the difficulty of the matter;
>
> (4) the importance of the matter to the client;
>
> (5) the responsibility assumed;
>
> (6) the performance of unusual professional services or professional services requiring special skills or exceptional speed;
>
> (7) the result obtained;
>
> (8) the fees prescribed by statute or regulation; and
>
> (9) the disbursements, fees, commissions, rebates, costs or other benefits that are or will be paid by a third party with respect to the mandate the client gave him.

(Footnote 17: CQLR c B-1, r 3.1. See Trudelle supra note 16 at para 52; Option Consommateurs c Banque Amex du Canada, 2017 QCCS 200 at para 83 [Amex QCCS judgment]; Amex QCCA judgment supra note 12 at paras 64-66.)

25. The risk assumed and the result obtained should normally take precedence over the time devoted to the case, bearing in mind that the weight to be given to each factor may vary from case to case, depending on the circumstances.[18]

(Footnote 18: A.B. supra note 9 at para 65; Pellemans supra note 13 at para 76; Trudelle supra note 16 at para 74.)

26. In assessing reasonableness, factors (3) through (6) above are to be evaluated in light of the circumstances that existed at the onset of the case, or at the time of the execution of the fee agreement, since it is at that time that the parties evaluated the risks that would be assumed by counsel.[19]

(Footnote 19: Pellemans supra note 13 at para 52. See also A.B. supra note 9 at para 54; Trudelle supra note 16 at para 74.)

27. As stated above, a Québec court must strike a balance between incentivizing lawyers to undertake class actions and ensuring that class members are the first beneficiaries of the amounts paid by defendants.[20]

(Footnote 20: A.B. supra note 9 at para 51; Pierre-Claude Lafond, "Sur les honoraires professionnels," in Libres propos sur la pratique de l'action collective (Éditions Yvon Blais : 2020; EYB2020LPP28) at 4 [Lafond] (Tab 2).)

28. Québec courts must moreover ensure that the fee agreement is not susceptible of giving the legal profession a "profit-seeking character",[21] a notion found at Section 7 of the Code of Professional Conduct of Lawyers.

(Footnote 21: A.B. supra note 9 at para 55; Lauzon & Asselin supra note 13 at 5; Amex QCCS judgment supra note 17 at para 110.
See also Code of Professional Conduct of Lawyers supra note 17, Section 7 ("A lawyer must avoid all methods and attitudes likely to give a profit-seeking character to his profession, namely, greedily seeking a profit or abusing his status as a lawyer in order to enrich himself.").)

29. In addition to the factors outlined in Section 102 of the Code of Professional Conduct of Lawyers, Québec courts also consider the well-known objectives class actions aim to achieve as a procedural vehicle, namely, the benefits of judicial economy, access to justice and deterrence of misconduct.[22] Fulfilment of these objectives could justify higher fees.

(Footnote 22: Jean-Philippe Groleau & Guillame Charlebois, "Les honoraires en demande en matière d'actions collectives: comment éviter de jouer à l'apprenti-sorcier en vue de moduler le comportement des avocats," in Volume 455 – Colloque national sur l'action collective: développements récents au Québec, au Canada et aux États-Unis (2019), at 184 [Groleau & Charlebois] (Tab 3); Western Canadian Shopping Centres Inc. v Dutton, 2001 SCC 46 at paras 27-29.)

30. Some authors have indeed opined that higher incentive premiums are warranted in cases that best realize the objectives of class actions. This would include instances in which a class action is undertaken against an entire industry that has engaged in harmful conduct causing real societal harm, as opposed to a class action undertaken against a defendant purely based on a technical violation of the law.[23]

(Footnote 23: Groleau & Charlebois supra note 22 at 185.)

31. Class action fee agreements generally provide that fees will be calculated as a percentage of the amounts recovered through settlement or judgment and, in Québec, percentages ranging from 15% to 33% are often used and considered reasonable by the courts, with the most common range being 20 to 25%.[24]

(Footnote 24: Lafond supra note 20 at 2; Pellemans supra note 13 at paras 53, 57; Marcotte c Banque de Montréal, 2015 QCCS 1915 at para 6 [Marcotte]; Amex QCCS judgment supra note 17 at paras 88- 89; Girard supra note 13 at paras 28-29; Trudelle supra note 16 at para 79.)

32. Legislation in Québec does not provide for a cap on fees, nor have the Québec courts established one.[25]

(Footnote 25: Groleau & Charlebois supra note 22 at 176.)

33. The lodestar method, or multiplier method, which involves calculating the multiplier obtained by dividing the fees sought by the value of the hours worked, while taking into account a risk premium, is applied with caution in Québec, and is generally deemed useful mostly as a means of controlling the reasonableness of the professional fees in the context of class actions.[26]

(Footnote 26: Pellemans supra note 13 at paras 64, 121; Groleau & Charlebois supra note 22 at 186; Yves Lauzon and Bruce W. Johnston, "Les honoraires, les frais et l'indemnité au representant," in Traité pratique de l'action collective (Éditions Yvon Blais, 2021) at 5 (Tab 4); A.B. supra note 9 at paras 59, 62.)

[31] Amicus disagrees with elements of QCAP Counsel's submissions. He submits that Québec law likely should follow the approach in other provinces to set aside the presumption in favour of the retainer agreement, and instead proceed on a case-by-case analysis to determine if a fee is fair and reasonable.

[32] Moreover, Amicus states that there is no principled reason to draw a distinction between mega-fund cases that settle before trial and those that are fully litigated for the purposes of class counsel fees. Instead, that consideration is subsumed in other factors like the time dedicated to the case and the risk assumed by counsel. Regardless, Amicus notes that this case was ultimately resolved through a Plan of Compromise under the CCAA, so it is ultimately the result of a settlement.

[33] Amicus submits that it would be helpful in this case to conduct a "Lodestar" analysis as a "cross-check" for the reasonableness of the fees sought by QCAP Counsel. Under this approach to assessing counsel fees, the starting point is the amount of work class counsel performed with respect to the matter. Counsel will demonstrate the number of hours expended on the case by counsel and what they would have billed if they had been acting under an ordinary retainer. This amount that would have been billed is the "Lodestar". Next, counsel will divide the compensation sought by the Lodestar. The result indicates what multiple of the Lodestar class counsel seeks as compensation: Fresco v. Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, 2023 ONSC 3335, at paras. 134-37, aff'd 2024 ONCA 628.

[34] The multiplier factor represents a premium flowing to class counsel for taking on the risk associated with pursuing the retainer. A larger multiplier should correspond to a higher degree of risk shouldered by the law firm. The Ontario courts have stated that class counsel may be compensated at a rate of up to 4 times the Lodestar amount in the "most deserving of cases": Gagne v. Silcorp Ltd. (1998), 41 O.R. (3d) 417 (C.A.), at para. 26.

[35] After subtracting disbursements from the fees sought, the multiplier in this case would be 3.981 ($854,578,989 ÷ $214,653,500).

[36] Amicus states that, in Quebec cases, counsel have received fees representing a multiplier ranging from less than one up to seven.

(ii) Québec

[37] Québec filed its factum prior to the appointment of Mr. Prévost as Amicus. The purpose of its factum was to provide assistance to the Court. Québec's factum emphasizes three points. First, Québec's interest is to maximize recovery for the victims, and counsel fees, by definition, operate to reduce class compensation. Second, Québec has an interest in the undistributed funds. Third, there is a lack of detail to support the hours worked, the hourly rate and the disbursements claimed.

[38] Québec argues that QCAP Counsel have provided inadequate evidence to support its alleged Lodestar amount of $214,653,500. It also argues that Counsel have not sufficiently proven the $46,598,926 of disbursements that they claim. It observes that QCAP Counsel's submissions fail to allocate the hours worked among Counsel's various firms. Further, the hourly rates assigned to the lawyers lacked adequate supporting evidence.

[39] Thus, Québec submits that this Court has inadequate information to determine whether the fees sought are fair and reasonable.

[40] Québec acknowledges that QCAP Counsel achieved considerable success on behalf of the QCAPs. However, it submits that the amount sought by QCAP Counsel in this case would greatly reduce the amount of funds available to be distributed to claimants. Further, Québec argues that the amounts sought by class counsel are out of proportion with the amount class members expect to recover.

(iii) QCAP Counsel

[41] QCAP Counsel submit that they assumed great risk in advancing the claims in this case. Success was by no means assured. Tobacco companies had not previously been held liable for the harms caused by their products. Establishing liability in this case required advancing several novel legal arguments. Indeed, Québec's public fund for supporting class action litigation refused to provide financial assistance in 2001, because it assessed the chances of success as too low.

[42] Moreover, the tobacco industry had developed a reputation for being highly litigious, and succeeding in any claim against the Tobacco Companies would require considerable time and expense.

[43] QCAP Counsel further submit that, even after succeeding at trial and then on appeal, there was still considerable risk that they would never be paid. The Tobacco Companies filed for insolvency protection soon after the Court of Appeal upheld the trial decision. Thus, QCAP Counsel submits, there was considerable risk relating to every stage of these proceedings over the past 26 years.

[44] QCAP Counsel argue that they achieved an excellent outcome on behalf of the QCAPs. They recovered $4.25 billion on behalf of the Blais and Létourneau class members and arranged for novel processes that will streamline the claims process.

[45] QCAP Counsel also submit that I should take into account the recovery on behalf of the PCCs. While the PCCs had their own representative counsel, the success of their claims was derived from the work of QCAP Counsel.

[46] QCAP Counsel responded to Québec's arguments by stating that it expects all QCAPs to receive the full amount of their claims out of the funds established under the CCAA Plans. Any excess amounts are to be paid to the provinces in respect of their various claims. Thus, any reduction in the requested fee for QCAP Counsel would not affect the recovery for class members. Any reduction in the requested fee would accrue to the provinces. This point was confirmed by Ms. Wall on behalf of the Province of Ontario. Ms. Wall made specific reference to the Québec Class Action Administration Plan, which is Schedule "N" to the CCAA Plans of RBH and JTIM and Schedule "K" to the CCAA Plan of Imperial.

[47] QCAP Counsel submit that the fees they seek do not represent a windfall or a sweetheart deal that would bring the integrity of the profession into disrepute. Indeed, the 22% contingency fee falls near the low end of typical retainers in such cases. They stress that the court must have a principled basis for concluding that a certain fee award would be unfair or unreasonable.

[48] QCAP Counsel also submit that the legislature created legislation enabling class proceedings to promote access to justice and promote punishment, deterrence, and denunciation and that their conduct throughout the proceeding has only furthered these goals. Thus, QCAP Counsel submits that they should be entitled to the benefit of their retainer agreement.

Contingency fees in mega-fund cases

[49] QCAP Counsel acknowledge that courts are generally more hesitant to award the contingency fees set out in the retainer in the case of "mega-fund" cases of $100 million or more. However, they argue that the presumption in favour of the fees set out in the retainer agreement nevertheless applies to mega-fund cases in Québec law.

[50] QCAP Counsel also submits that the underlying reasons for this hesitancy are not engaged in this case. Typically, mega-fund cases settle before a trial on the merits. Here, the case was fully tried and then appealed. Because mega-fund cases typically settle, it can be hard to assess the degree of success that counsel achieved on behalf of the class. Further, many mega-fund cases are characterized by "piggy-backing" on prior liability findings. There was no such prior finding of liability on which the QCAPs relied in this case.

(iv) Canadian Cancer Society

[51] It is also informative to take into account submissions made by interested parties, who do not have any direct interest in the outcome of these motions. The Canadian Cancer Society is one such party.

[52] Counsel to the Canadian Cancer Society, Mr. Robert Cunningham, provided what he referenced as "an external validation for the absolutely incredible work done and results achieved by the QCAP Counsel in this internationally unprecedented case."

[53] Mr. Cunningham went on to submit:

> "For the QCAPs, in terms of the results achieved, it should not just be in comparison with other class action cases in Canada. A global comparison of other tobacco cases should also be done. The QCAP result is, by far, the best outcome of any individual case, class action case, against the tobacco industry, upheld on appeal, in the world, ever. No other case is even close. The QCAP outcome is an enormous global world precedent.
>
>
> One can't just say that the QCAP counsel really did an incredible job, but they do; the work that was done was so many orders of magnitude greater than that. As a result of the work of QCAP counsel, there are at least four categories of beneficiaries, if not more.
> First, Québec class members. Without this team of extraordinary QCAP lawyers and their work, there would be no recovery at all. Compensation would be zero.

> Second, the Pan-Canadian claimants. The work of QCAP counsel has been essential to the compensation received by the PCC's. Raymond Wagner, counsel for the PCC's, said as much in the media last October when the CCAA Plans were filed, and this is noted in the QCAP materials.
>
> Third, the provinces and territories. And, again, without diminishing the work at all, [by] counsel for the provinces, the provinces did obtain for free a partial roadmap to assist in their own cases through the documents, testimony, and argument in the Québec proceedings.
>
>
> Fourth, behaviour modification and deterring future wrongful conduct of tobacco companies not only in Canada but internationally. There can be no doubt that the Québec class action outcome of $4.1 billion and the other consequential financial effects will help focus the corporate mind of the parent companies to think how they may behave in other countries.
>
> In closing, I emphasize that the work of QCAP counsel has been unparalleled, deserves the highest recognition, and is consistent with the finest traditions of the legal profession."

[54] Mr. Cunningham was provided with a further opportunity to make submissions just prior to the closing of argument. He added the following points:

> "In assessing the counsel fee for the Québec Class Action, this case is really at the upper end of the upper end. Table[s] summarizing previous cases can be partially useful, and such tables have been included in what has been filed by the QCAPs, the Attorney General of Québec, and the Amicus, the Honorable André Prévost.
>
> But the facts relating to the Québec Class Action and counsel for the Québec Class Action means that this case is far outside these tables of past cases. It is beyond the grid. There's never been any case like it, and there may never again be such a case.
>
> In terms of the reputation of the legal profession, what the QCAP counsel have done has enhanced the reputation of the profession enormously. Who takes on and pursues tenaciously [for] decades such a case?
> As I noted at the February 11th hearing, QCAP counsel have achieved against the tobacco industry what no one else has ever achieved anywhere in the world with cases going back to the 1950s. They have surmounted impossible odds in the face of incredible risk. Their unique legal story will last in Québec, Canada and globally.

> The public benefit that these lawyers have achieved is of fundamental and historic importance. There must be the necessary and very significant incentive for counsel to take on and pursue such impossible cases against such a massively well-financed worldwide industry."

[55] The submissions of counsel for The Canadian Cancer Society are a ringing endorsement in support of the fee request of QCAP Counsel.

(v) PROVINCES of British Columbia, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island, and the Territories of Yukon, Nunavut and the Northwest Territories

[56] The provinces of British Columbia, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island, and the territories of Yukon, Nunavut and Northwest Territories took no position on the issue of the QCAP Counsel fees.

[57] Québec made reference in its factum to the fact that it has an economic interest in the undistributed funds from the QCAP settlement, but this point was not vigorously pursued in argument.

[58] The provinces and territories have actively participated in the CCAA proceedings from the outset. They are familiar with the CCAA Plans. They are aware of the amount being requested by QCAP Counsel, yet they consciously made the decision not to oppose the requested fee. This decision is significant given that any reduction in the fees awarded to the QCAP Counsel would accrue to the provinces and territories. Simply put, these provinces and territories have a direct economic interest in the amount being requested by QCAP Counsel.

[59] I am not in a position to speculate as to why the provinces and territories chose to take "no position" on this issue. However, due to their extensive involvement in the CCAA process, they are arguably in a much better position than most participants in these CCAA proceedings, to judge whether the fee request of QCAP Counsel is reasonable in the circumstances. Their silence on this point speaks volumes.

H. Analysis and Conclusion

(i) QCAP Counsel

[60] The retainer agreement formed between class counsel and the representative plaintiff is the starting point for the analysis of counsel fees. However, the agreement may be set aside upon a finding that it is not fair and reasonable: A.B. v. Clercs de Saint-Viateur du Canada, 2023 QCCA 527 at para. 51. In assessing the fairness and reasonableness of the fee, the courts consider several factors set out in s. 102 of the Code of Professional Conduct of Lawyers, C.Q.L.R. c. B-1, r. 3.1. According to the parties, the key relevant considerations in this case include:

a. The risks assumed by counsel;

b. The scope of the retainer; and

c. The outcome achieved on behalf of the class.

[61] The court must also consider how the fee reflects on the integrity of the profession. The court must not grant a fee award that would be susceptible to giving the legal profession "a profit-seeking character": A.B., at para. 51.

[62] The law in Québec is summarized in the submission of Amicus. The law is, in most respects, the same in Ontario (see: Fresco v. Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, 2024 ONCA 628, and David v. Loblaw, 2025 ONSC 2792, at paras. 40-47).

[63] I accept the following:

(a) QCAP Counsel assumed great risk in accepting the retainer from the class.

(b) The 22% fee arrangement is at the low end of the scale and is fair and reasonable.

(c) The QCAPs succeeded at trial and the Québec Court of Appeal.

(d) Although the CCAA Plans reflected a mediated settlement, the CCAA Plans were only put forth to a creditor vote after five and a half years of mediation. This reflects hard fought negotiations.

(e) An exceptional outcome was obtained for the Class. The monetary award for each member of the Class is fixed. Even if the fee request of QCAP Counsel is reduced, the reduction will not flow to the benefit of the Class.

(f) the PCCs, as well as the provinces and territories obtained residual benefits as a result of the work of QCAP Counsel.

(g) With the exception of Québec, the provinces and territories took no position on the appropriateness of the fees. This is significant as any reduction in the fees being awarded to the QCAPs would flow to the provinces and territories.

[64] It is not, in my view, practical to review the dockets of each lawyer or timekeeper. The work was performed over twenty-six years and for the past six years, much of the professional services performed were rendered in the confidential mediation conducted by The Honourable Warren K. Winkler, K.C. Québec raised certain concerns with respect to the absence of any docket review. However, in the circumstances, it seems to me that there is no productive utility in conducting an in-depth review. The hours and related dollar value will be enormous even if there was a significant adjustment. Rather, when you take into account the foregoing, the real issue is whether the fee request is too high.

[65] To state the obvious, the fee request is astronomical. But is there any principled basis on which the fee can be or should be reduced? The work was done pursuant to a written agreement. The work was well done and produced an exceptional result. The risk assumed by QCAP Counsel was significant and a premium, by way of a multiplier, is, in my view, justified.

[66] And, if there was a significant reduction, where would the money go? Subject to the proviso described below, it would not go to the benefit of the QCAPs. The funds would not go to the benefit of other class action plaintiffs. It would go to the provinces and territories, all of whom, with the exception of Québec, took no position on this motion.

[67] It also must be recognized that a significant amount of the funds awarded to counsel will find their way back to the government treasuries through taxation.

[68] This leads me to conclude that, from the standpoint of the class and the provinces and territories, the fee request of QCAP counsel cannot be said to be unreasonable.

[69] The fee request of $909 million is unheard of in Canadian legal history. As previously stated, this is a unique case and this decision should never be considered to have any precedential value.

[70] Taking all the foregoing into account, I am unable to find a principled basis on which to reduce the fee request. Further, even if there was a significant reduction, the amount awarded will still be enormous.

[71] However, there is one potential scenario that has to be taken into account.

[72] Québec raised the possibility that QCAPs could proportionately receive less than the amount of their individual claims out of the funds established under the CCAA Plans.

[73] At para. 4 of its factum, Québec submits that it has an interest in ensuring the fees are fair to the class members so as to maximize recovery for those victims of tobacco related harms.

[74] As noted above at para. 46, QCAP Counsel states that it expects all QCAPs to receive the full amount of their claim.

[75] The actual amount being paid out to each claimant cannot be established with finality at this time.

[76] In my view, it is appropriate to set up a reserve out of the fee awarded to QCAP Counsel to ensure that each approved claimant receives the full amount of their claim under the CCAA Plans.

[77] In the event of a shortfall to each approved claim, the fee awarded to QCAP Counsel is to be reduced so as to ensure that each approved claimant receives the full amount of their claim under the CCAA Plans.

[78] The three Monitors shall, in consultation with QCAP Counsel, establish the amount of the reserve as well as the terms and timing of reduction in the amount of the reserve.

[79] By creating this reserve, the valid concerns raised by Québec are addressed.

[80] Subject to this foregoing proviso, in the absence of a principled basis on which to reduce the quantum sought, the requested fee of QCAP Counsel is, reluctantly, approved in the amount requested.

(ii) Knight

[81] The principles governing fee approvals in British Columbia law are the same as those discussed above with respect to Québec and Ontario law.

[82] Class counsel submits that a one-third contingency fee, like the one sought here, is standard practice in British Columbia class actions, and that such fees are frequently held reasonable: Chartrand v. Google LLC, 2021 BCSC 7, at para. 60.

[83] Class counsel further submits that the $1,062,746.62 of disbursements in this case were reasonable and necessary, including the interest amounts. Particularly, it was reasonable and necessary to hire U.S. law firms to consult on the case given the overlap between light cigarette litigation in the U.S. and the claims at issue in the Knight class action. Through this consultation, class counsel accessed documents and information that they otherwise would not have obtained.

[84] Finally, class counsel submits that it is common practice under British Columbia law to award an honourarium to a representative plaintiff for "competent service": Parsons v. Coast Capital Savings Credit Union, 2010 BCCA 311, 321 D.L.R. (4th) 338, at para. 22. In this way, British Columbia law diverges from Ontario law, which allows for such an honourarium only in "exceptional circumstances": Doucet v. The Royal Winnipeg Ballet, 2023 ONSC 2323 (Div. Ct.), at para. 92.

[85] Regardless, class counsel argue that Mr. Knight's service over 22 years since commencing the class action satisfies either the lower "competent" threshold or the higher "exceptional" one. They submit a $10,000 honourarium represents a modest recognition of his services.

[86] Taking into account the result achieved, risk, time expended, complexity, and importance of the matter to the Class, I am satisfied that the requested fee is reasonable in the circumstances and it is approved, as is the honorarium to Mr. Knight.

(iii) Tobacco Producers

[87] Counsel argue that the retainer is presumptively valid and enforceable, and the 25% contingency fee should be awarded unless for example, (i) the representative plaintiff did not fully understand or accept the agreement, (ii) the contingency amount is excessive or (iii) the award would be so large as to be unseemly or otherwise unreasonable: Cannon v. Funds for Canada Foundation, 2013 ONSC 7686, [2013] O.J. No. 5825, at para. 9. Counsel submits that the presumption in favour of the agreed compensation is not rebutted in this case and that a 25% contingency fee is within the common range in class proceedings. I agree.

[88] Counsel also referenced the Lodestar multiplier analysis. They submit that they have dedicated over 4,100 hours to the underlying class action and the CCAA proceedings. They estimate that this would amount to over $3 million in legal fees at standard hourly rates. As a result, their requested fees represent a multiplier of 0.8, while multipliers of 2.5 or higher are commonly considered reasonable: Pace Securities Corp. et al v. First Hamilton Holdings Inc. et al., 2021 ONSC 6956, at para. 28.

[89] Taking into account the result achieved, risk, complexity, and importance of the matter to the Class, I am satisfied that the requested fee is reasonable in the circumstances and it is approved.

I. Postscript

[90] I feel compelled to add a postscript. Much has been said about creating an incentive for counsel to take on such risky cases. Here, this created the opportunity for QCAP Counsel to obtain compensation beyond their wildest expectations. In receiving this reward, if counsel are truly acting in the best traditions of the legal profession they should recognize that they have a moral obligation to society. QCAP Counsel have unquestionably acted in a way that has fully discharged their obligations to the class. A truly outstanding result has been obtained for the class in a case in which QCAP Counsel took on an exceptional risk. However, the question remains – do they have further and wider obligations to society? It will be up to each QCAP Counsel fee recipient to answer this question for themselves. If she or he conclude that they do have such an obligation and choose to honour it, they can do so by publicly making a meaningful and significant contribution to a health-related charity of their choice. In this way, they can be publicly recognized for their incredible work in this matter.

[1] The CCAA Plans in these three matters were unanimously approved by the voting Affected Creditors in December 2024, sanctioned by this Court on March 6, 2025, and implemented on August 29, 2025 (the "Plan Implementation Date").

[2] The CCAA Plans provided that:

(a) one of the purposes of the CCAA Plans was to provide for the disposition and resolution of all Pending Litigation (as that term is defined in the Initial Order),

(b) the Parties shall take all steps and actions which are necessary and appropriate to dismiss the Pending Litigation with prejudice and without costs as soon as possible after the Plan Implementation Date; and

(c) all parties to the Pending Litigation were deemed to have given all consents necessary to effect the termination with prejudice and without costs of the Pending Litigation.

[3] Accordingly, on November 13, 2025, orders were granted to facilitate the dismissal of all Pending Litigation (the "Pending Litigation Dismissal Orders"). Among other things, paragraph 4 of the Pending Litigation Dismissal Orders states that this CCAA Court requests that each applicable court before which the Pending Litigation was commenced and/or is continuing: (a) aid, recognize and assist the CCAA Court to confirm that, effective as and from the Plan Implementation Date, being August 29, 2025, the CCAA Plans have fully and finally resolved and definitively settled the Pending Litigation; and (b) issue such orders and do all such things as may be necessary or appropriate to terminate and dismiss all of the Pending Litigation on a with prejudice and without costs basis upon the filing of the appropriate documents with each applicable court in each jurisdiction.

[4] The Pending Litigation comprises approximately 32 court proceedings across Canada, 10 of which are pending before the Ontario Superior Court of Justice (collectively, the "Ontario Pending Litigation"). I understand that many of the Ontario Pending Litigation matters are not being case-managed.

[5] Given my familiarity with the CCAA proceedings and in my capacity as supervising judge, I am prepared to issue the necessary dismissal orders. In my view, this is the most appropriate and efficient way to proceed, consistent with the purpose of the single supervising judge model that is well recognized in the CCAA context. See, e.g., 9354-9186 Québec inc. v. Callidus Capital Corp., 2020 SCC 10 at para. 47-48.

[6] Accordingly, I direct the Monitors and CCAA Plan Administrators to prepare draft dismissal orders in respect of all Ontario Pending Litigation and to submit such draft orders for my review and consideration.

Ontario judge presided over Toronto-area court cases from the Caribbean

Despite directive from chief justice, Ont. Superior Court judge cleared to work abroad for personal reasons

While Canadians were being urged to stay home during the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic, a judge with the Ontario Superior Court of Justice was cleared to fly to the Caribbean and preside over her Toronto-area court cases remotely, CBC News has learned.

The judge is assigned to conduct civil and criminal hearings at several courthouses in the Central West Region, west of Toronto.

But until recently, the judge — who left Canada for the Turks and Caicos on Jan. 9 and remains there — was conducting court cases while staying at a beachfront resort.

CBC News reached out to the judge, and she forwarded a request for comment to Superior Court Chief Justice Geoffrey B. Morawetz.

His office said the judge advised Justice Leonard Ricchetti, regional senior judge for the Central West Region, of her plans before she left.

Chief Justice Geoffrey B. Morawetz of the Ontario Superior Court of Justice, shown at his swearing-in ceremony in 2019, issued travel and work directives to all Superior Court judges in the province on Jan. 6, advising them to avoid non-essential travel. (Amanda Jerome/The Lawyer's Daily)

"The situation that led to the travel involves very specific personal and confidential circumstances and based upon these was deemed not inappropriate," Morawetz's office said in a statement.

Because the nature of those personal reasons is unknown, CBC News is not identifying the judge.

The judge continued to preside over court matters for weeks after landing in the Turks and Caicos.

- How COVID-19 helped push Ontario's low-tech justice system into the 21st century

On Feb. 8, shortly after CBC News asked Morawetz's office whether she was working from the Caribbean, the judge was advised to stop doing so.

"She had heard some matters as a result of an oversight. She will not be scheduled to hear further matters while out of the country," the chief justice's office said.

The judge is expected to remain in the Caribbean until the end of this month, his office said.

Judge left days after judiciary asked not to travel

The judge left Canada three days after Morawetz issued travel and work directives to all Superior Court justices in Ontario.

"In view of the ongoing public health crisis, on Jan. 6, 2021, Chief Justice Morawetz asked members of the SCJ judiciary to act in accordance with the government's public health advice to avoid non-essential travel," his office said.

"He also recognized that there may be unique circumstances that require a member of the judiciary to travel, but, in general, he indicated that travel should be avoided and judges were asked to avoid sitting on proceedings while out of the country."

- COVID-19 pandemic forces an Ontario justice system 'stuck in the 1970s' to modernize
- AUDIO Ontario courts expected to be busy with COVID lawsuits long after pandemic

It's not clear whether other judges have travelled and conducted court hearings from abroad, because officials said they don't keep count.

"Judges are ultimately responsible for their own conduct. Some, but not all, will have discussed or sought guidance or direction from their regional senior judge regarding travel," according to Morawetz's office.

"As a result, regional senior judges will be aware if some judges are outside the province or country, but they may not have information about all judges or, in any given case, all the details."

Public officials who travelled paid heavy price

Some public figures who travelled during provincially imposed lockdowns have paid a heavy price due in part to public outrage.

In December, Ontario's finance minister, Rod Phillips, resigned after it was learned he travelled to St. Barts during the Christmas holidays.

Premier Doug Ford said he was unaware that Phillips had left the country until after the minister had already arrived on the Caribbean island.

Ford himself was derided by some for taking a day trip to his Muskoka cottage last spring to check on construction work at the property after urging Ontarians to stay home.

Dr. Tom Stewart, who was chief executive officer of two Ontario hospital networks in Hamilton and Niagara Region and a member of several health advisory roles — including an adviser to the province on COVID-19 — travelled to the Dominican Republic over the holidays. He was removed from both CEO posts and resigned from his provincial advisory roles in January.

- COVID-19 a challenge for judges when making family law decisions over custody and visitation

Also last month, Hamilton-area MP David Sweet resigned as chair of the House of Commons ethics committee after travelling to the United States in December.

Numerous other public officials have also faced public criticism for leaving the country to visit family, including sick relatives, or check on properties.

Canadians returning home face increasing hurdles

While there is nothing illegal about travelling abroad during the pandemic, the federal government is placing additional health and safety measures on Canadians returning home to discourage travel.

Starting Feb. 22, international travellers will be forced to quarantine for up to three days in specific hotels at their own expense while they await the results of a COVID-19 test.

Hotel quarantines for air travellers come into effect Feb. 22

▶ February 12, 2021 | 2:17

The federal government has announced dates for new travel measures meant to keep COVID-19 cases in check, including requiring proof of a negative test at land borders beginning Feb. 15 and introducing mandatory hotel quarantines for international air travellers as of Feb. 22.

If the test is negative, they will be allowed to self-isolate at home for the remaining 14-day quarantine period.

Canadian airlines have suspended travel to Mexico and the Caribbean, including the Turks and Caicos, until the end of April in an effort to help contain the spread of the novel coronavirus and variants that are believed to be more transmissible.

NOTICE OF ESCALATION, PEREMPTORY DEMAND FOR PRODUCTION OF JUDICIAL RECORDS, AND DECLARATION OF NU
DATE: April 10, 2026

SUBJECT: URGENT: Formal Notice of Escalation to the Auditor General of Ontario and Peremptory Demand for the Expeditious Production of Statut

I. ENUMERATION OF DOCUMENTS REVIEWED AND RELIED UPON

1. In the preparation of this peremptory instrument, the following foundational documents and instruments have been rigorously reviewed and relied upo

   a. The formal whistle-blower disclosure, encompassing an exhaustive request for a special performance audit, filed with the Office of the Auditor Gene "Disclosure");

   b. The intake court endorsement, ostensibly promulgated on September 23, 2024 (the "Intake Court Endorsement");

   c. Four draft orders previously delivered and filed within the judicial review proceeding styled as "McLean TDHA Divisional Court JRPA Application"); and

   d. The antecedent electronic correspondence exchanged between the Applicant and the administrative functionaries of the Ministry of the Attorney Ge

II. NOTICE OF ESCALATION AND DISCLOSURE TO THE AUDITOR GENERAL

2. Formal notification is hereby provided that, consequent to the persistent and systemic failure of the Ministry to effectuate the production of the reques informations and corresponding endorsements—the Disclosure has been formally registered with the Office of the Auditor General of Ontario (the "A

3. The Disclosure necessitates a comprehensive, external performance audit scrutinizing the surreptitious mismanagement of information technology syst records, and the continuous obstruction of statutory access perpetrated by Ministry personnel situated at the Court.

4. Notwithstanding the future determinations and procedural mechanisms to be implemented by the Auditor General concerning the systemic infrastructu Disclosure, the immediate ministerial obligations of the Ministry regarding the provision of the requested personal information and judicial records rem that the formalization of this escalation shall catalyze the immediate rectification of this administrative paralysis.

III. THE JURISDICTIONAL NULLITY AND THE UNDISCLOSED ADJUDICATOR

5. The prevailing circumstances are recognized as profoundly regrettable, yet unequivocally necessary, precipitating from the recent evidentiary ascertainm served as the undisclosed adjudicator responsible for the Intake Court Endorsement.

6. It is posited that the abrupt proclamation of the Chief Justice's resignation—euphemistically classified as a "retirement"—materializing merely days sub draft orders within the McLean TDHA Divisional Court JRPA Application before the Divisional Court, is profoundly illustrative. Although it was previousl adjudicator bearing undisclosed prior judicial involvement was exclusively Madam Justice Shore, the evidentiary continuum now necessitates a recalibrati

7. Furthermore, the persistent administrative silence in response to the antecedent inquiries shall be formally construed as definitive confirmation—a conc contemporaneous corroborative evidence crystallizing on the date of this instrument—that Chief Justice Morawetz operated as the clandestine and und Court Endorsement, notwithstanding that the adjudicative act was surreptitiously and procedurally channeled through the registry of the Court situated floor).

8. The failure to articulate and elucidate the presence of a potential conflict of interest, despite formal requisitions initiated as early as January 2025, consti transparency. While the nuances of this procedural obfuscation are acknowledged, such machinations do not possess the requisite legal efficacy to reliev ministerial duties. The clandestine administrative stratagems have been comprehensively unmasked. Simply put, the Chief Justice, remunerated at a level twenty-two puisne judges within the Court, and designated as the primus inter pares, is encumbered by comprehensive, non-delegable duties, enumerated a

   a. Ultimate Jurisdiction: Definitive and final authority is exercised over all adjudicative and administrative functions, precluding the fragmentation of c

   b. Constitutional Trust Steward: The non-delegable responsibility is borne to act as the primary guardian of the constitutional trust, ensuring the tribu confines;

   c. Imperviously Influenced Mandate: The absolute requirement is maintained to remain impervious to external, collateral, or internal pressures, pres institution;

   d. Master of the Roster: Absolute and exclusive authority is wielded over the scheduling, assignment, and distribution of judicial resources, a power th

   e. Self-Assignment Power: The inherent authority is possessed to self-assign matters of profound institutional and constitutional significance, specifica

   f. Administrative Steward: The statutory duty is executed to rigorously oversee clerical and registry functions pursuant to section 76 of the Courts of Ju Justice Act"), insulating registry staff from unauthorized directives;

   g. Institutional Reputation Guardian: The uncompromising obligation is upheld to protect and preserve the Court's standing and integrity in the pub dysfunction;

   h. Efficiency Operation Duty: The overarching responsibility is maintained to ensure the seamless, lawful operation of all Court functions, actively int vires actions;

   i. Ethical Compliance Guarantee: The Chief Justice serves as the final internal arbiter of professional conduct within the tribunal, ensuring adherenc

   j. Complaint Laying Power: The intrinsic, affirmative authority is retained to initiate formal disciplinary complaints when egregious usurpations of jur

   k. Puisne Judge Removal Power: The administrative authority is executed to effectively reassign or restrict colleagues during the pendency of ethical e harm;

l. Moral Barometer: The Chief Justice functions as the absolute ethical and integrity barometer for the institution, setting the incontrovertible standard

m. Moral Authority: The power is utilized to impose judicial will and ethical rectitude upon other puisne judges through binding ethical directives, guar of Civil Procedure, R.R.O. 1990, Reg. 194 (the "Civil Rules").

IV. EXTRAPOLATION OF LEGAL DOCTRINES AND THE DECLARATION OF NULLITY

9. It is deduced that the self-assignment power was exercised; however, the absence of a formal disciplinary complaint suggests that the resultant resignatio complaint.

10. It is conspicuously apparent from the longitudinal trajectory of these circumstances that an adversarial animus, whether effectuated directly or indirectly duration against the Applicant by the Chief Justice. Consequently, regarding all collateral and prospective proceedings, inclusive of the instant matter, rig invoked to definitively preclude the Chief Justice from assuming carriage of, presiding over, or exercising any adjudicative authority regarding any pendi requisite corollary of procedural fairness, a definitive copy of the same shall concurrently be furnished to the Chief Justice.

11. While it is posited that the legally, morally, and ethically requisite course of action would have necessitated the Chief Justice formally declaring a conflict implicating his person and palpably affecting the adjudicative administration of the Toronto Region—the procedural trajectory has irreversibly crystalliz mitigate is hereby assumed, and definitive measures shall be undertaken to ensure that the next most senior judicial officer within the Court is seized wit applications advanced by the Applicant, irrespective of the substantive area of law. This strategic recalibration operates to systematically unwind and viti the Chief Justice, to any puisne judge, subsequent to the crystallization of his conflict of interest in 2024. Notwithstanding these prophylactic measures of the statutorily mandated documents remains resolutely intact, advanced under the auspices of utmost good faith and comprehensive disclosure.

12. The adjudication of matters whilst harbouring an undisclosed conflict of interest transcends mere procedural irregularity. In accordance with the unyiel Court of Canada in Committee for Justice and Liberty v. National Energy Board, 1978 1 S.C.R. 369 at 394 (the "Committee Decision"), the legal standard necessita minded person, viewing the matter realistically and practically, and having thought the matter through, would conclude that there is a reasonable apprehe extrapolation is superimposed upon the factual architecture herein—where the Chief Justice intervened as an undisclosed adjudicator while harbouring for a reasonable apprehension of bias is unmistakably surpassed. This directly contravenes the equitable maxim that justice must not only be done but n done.

13. Consequently, the resultant acta and the Intake Court Endorsement cannot be classified as curable defects. They constitute, unequivocally, ultra vires actio jurisdiction. By operation of law, these administrative directives are rendered an absolute nullity, functioning ipso facto to vitiate the entirety of the adjudi to the status quo ante.

14. The singular mitigative realization within this systemic obfuscation is the unassailable application of the equitable maxim fraus omnia corrumpit—fraud un retrospectively to vitiate all detrimental consequences inflicted by these procedural machinations. Furthermore, it is profoundly advantageous to the pub imperatives enshrined within the Auditor General Act, R.S.O. 1990, c. A.35 (the "Auditor General Act"), the Auditor General is vested with the plenary auth concerning matters germane to an active audit or examination. This inquisitorial jurisdiction, prima facie, extends unconditionally to any jurist, whether cu particularly salient concerning the compelled production of statutorily mandated judicial records that have been unlawfully sequestered or withheld from

V. PEREMPTORY CONCLUSION AND DEMAND

15. The fundamental invalidity of these judicial actions affirms, prima facie, that the jurisdictional nullities possess no capacity to discharge, mitigate, or extin Ministry.

16. A peremptory demand is hereby advanced that the requested documents, inclusive of all informations and corresponding endorsements, be produced a 5:00 p.m. Eastern Standard Time on the date of this communication.

17. Should the Ministry fail to comply with this rigid temporal parameter, subsequent communications shall be immediately dispatched to the Auditor Gene solidify the evidentiary record of this administrative intransigence.

18. Whilst profound empathy is extended regarding the administrative predicament of navigating directives from a Chief Justice that ostensibly compel staf internal hierarchical pressures cannot, de jure, serve as a justifiable exculpation for the persistent non-compliance by Ministry personnel regarding their st machinations effectuated by Chief Justice Morawetz have definitively provoked rigorous scrutiny, an outcome ostensibly sought through his opaque adm misconduct shall be systematically addressed through civil, adjudicative mechanisms to ensure the maximal realization of the public interest. Neverthele was deemed fundamentally imperative, functioning strictly to afford the Ministry a final opportunity to execute its mandatory administrative and ministe law.

19. It is strictly anticipated that all relevant persons shall govern themselves accordingly.

Dear Sirs/Mesdames/Other Gender-Neutral Pronouns (relevant to the Originating Courthous at the Originating Court Office):

FORMAL RECORD OF FACTUAL MATTERS, EVIDENTIARY NOTICES, AND JURISDICTIONAL SUBMISSIONS

I. Preface and Confirmation of the Absence of Refutation

1. The authenticity and factual accuracy of the aforementioned matters are hereby formally affirmed and entered into the record.
2. It is further confirmed that no formal refutation has materialized following recent evidentiary findings concerning the parameters historically r described as "C, J, M"). Accordingly, a presumption of comprehensive and sufficient disclosure to relevant authorities is adopted, predicated u Nonetheless, out of an abundance of caution and in light of the imminent resignation or retirement of Chief Justice Morawetz, coupled with th these proceedings, the following factual matrix is formally confirmed and advanced.

II. Preliminary Matters and Procedural Abeyance

3. This memorandum is issued with the express intention of preserving an unassailable evidentiary continuum. It is respectfully indicated t correspondence is anticipated, necessitated by pending medical evaluations and diagnostic assessments. Any resultant delay should be unders essential medical procedures.

III. Uncontested Factual Matrix and Judicial Engagement

4. It is preliminarily observed that no refutation has been offered regarding the critical assertion that the Chief Justice, acting as presiding j an intake court during an in camera proceeding. This proceeding is understood to be intimately connected to the laying and receipt of an undi Code, R.S.C. 1985, c. C-46, or alternatively, a formally preferred indictment.

5. In the absence of explicit denial, it is advanced that the aforementioned judicial involvement stands as an uncontested factual premise. The doc classified as court documentation, distinct from inherently judicial documentation, and is therefore not protected by administrative or adjudicat

IV. Evidentiary Record and Signature Modalities

6. The identification of the presiding judicial officer is substantiated by a handwritten endorsement, executed in the capacity of Regional S Chapter 11 Debtors matter, bearing court file number CV-12-9719-00CL, returnable on 2014-01-03. While handwritten judicial endorsements the preceding decade, and no criticism is directed here toward the propriety of that historical practice.

7. An exhaustive review of supplementary endorsements reveals a consistent pattern whereby the judicial officer endorsed documents originating bankruptcy and insolvency litigation. Notably, these documents lack cryptographic digital signatures. The evidentiary record demonstrates that digital signatures, preferring physical blue or black ink, or digitized scans of handwritten signatures, a practice maintained until 2025.

8. By logical extension, forensic analysis indicates that the indictment likely utilized an Adobe cryptographic signature executed by the Attorney potentially from the Ministry of the Solicitor General or Detective Virani's investigative unit.

V. Jurisdictional Geography and Historical Context

9. It is demonstrably evident that the judicial officer has not historically presided over criminal matters, except for the issuance of adminis protocols.

10. The geographic and historical context further clarifies jurisdictional parameters. The bankruptcy and insolvency administrative offices were lo administrative personnel prior to their relocation to the family law registry at 361 University Avenue. Judicial chambers likely remained at 361 address at 130 Queen Street West, Toronto, Ontario.

11. Additional historical linkage is established by documentation from 1988, evidencing professional interconnectivity between the judicial officer Comparative handwriting analysis between the endorsement of 2024-09-23 and historical documentation from 2014-01 yields substantial ortho facie validity of the assertions herein.

VI. Forensic Analysis of Systemic Parameters

12. A forensic examination of systemic parameters, including conversion from Little Endian to Big Endian UTF-16 architecture and translati ANSI-compliant linguistic format, reveals underlying algorithmic chronologies. The decoded data matrix conclusively establishes the timing modifications.

VII. Jurisprudential Application and Doctrine of Nullity

13. The procedural anomalies described above—specifically, the in camera reception of undisclosed information by a judicial officer acting should not be viewed as mere procedural irregularities. These deviations constitute fundamental jurisdictional defects, violating the Criminal

R.R.O. 1990, Reg. 194. Consequently, any judicial act arising from such unauthorized circumstances is, ipso facto, an absolute nullity, render curtailment of liberty under these parameters is definitively ultra vires.

14. The jurisprudence of the Supreme Court of Canada unequivocally supports the classification of such ultra vires actions as absolute nullities, ra Star Newspapers Ltd. v. Ontario, 2005 SCC 41 ("Toronto Star Decision") at paragraphs 18-22, the Supreme Court rigorously scrutinized the ju camera proceedings or issue sealing orders that contravene the foundational Open Court Principle. The Court mandated that any departure fror by necessity to prevent a serious risk to the proper administration of justice; absent such justification, the resulting orders lack jurisdictional va
15. Applying the jurisprudential principles of the Toronto Star Decision to the present factual matrix, it is clear that the alleged in camera receptior Court, without any recorded justification meeting the strict threshold of necessity, constitutes a fatal jurisdictional overreach. The judicial offic jurisdiction to conduct secret proceedings in this context, renders any resultant warrants or process unsalvageable as mere irregularities. The al actions are absolute nullities. Thus, the legal posture must revert to the status quo ante, as the foundational process underlying the arrest event legally imperceptible.
16. Kindly inform me whether there has been a denial to my access request for the same including those foundational documents of which I am en are not able or willing to relay the same, I will escalate the same to the Primus Inter Pares of the SCJ (Ontario) and ask for his unequivocal res emails herein or directly to me via email or fax.
17. I confirm that I have requested and am entitled to email provision and disclosure of the same. Whether any endorsement morphed into a valid an endorsement. Lastly in this regard, to the extent that Ms. Simion and I view or understand the word “soon” differently, would she kindly co date she intends to provide me with the response as represented.
18. Finally in the overall sense, I confirm that I have not escalated with outside channels like the Auditor General or others but I can only be so pa grounds, purported or otherwise, that could deny me access to the likes of an Information/Indictment and/or endorsement, kindly advise me of legal and efficient manner (i.e. respecting the public purse).
19. In closing and in relation to what I believe I have correct from a hexadecimal standpoint by way of inputs and amendments post facto to certai although I may be slightly off in the translation or conversion from hexadecimal to ANSI text. "While I raise these points out of an abundance against potential interference or extortion as previously noted—I reserve the right to continue exercising my legal options until full compliance economy and respect for the court’s time, I propose we establish clear timelines for this request. Of course, it may be that the public needs to b make requests albeit with payment of fees for the same to ensure the public interest is well-suited. Certainly, any signed document in the form endorsement, which was and is customary for CJ Morawetz is not a document that would be one that the law enforcement branch would have likes of a summons or arrest warrant per se and has no legal effect per se in terms of the required document to be issued to commenc a crimina judges or on their behalf must remain in the primary custody and control of the judiciary but nonetheless the MAG would have control of the s provided to an accused or a party upon reuqest and without fees and in order for the system, as publicly decried by the MAG in the MAG CSD a demand for the court document at issue.

    To that end, I intend to escalate this to the Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Justice. I will request a direction to the relevant Registrars and Courts of Justice Act, to ensure adherence to the principles of judicial independence and the separation of powers." I also note that since docu at a court office by directions of the DAG (Ontario) and then approval by the CJ of the SCJ, it is important to know whether documents were d retrieved or recreated (even copies).

20. As noted, I will be intermittently unavailable over the next several days so I thank you in advance for your patience.
21. If anything is unclear, please let me know immediately.
22. Thank you kindly.

Respectfully,
Mr. Kevin A. McLean (BA, JD, CIM)

The instant requisition is advanced strictly pursuant to the fundamental entitlements vested in an accused entity under the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms (specifically Se the inviolable open court principle, and the MAG CSD Court Information Access Guide (2019). It is reiterated ex abundanti cautela that the present demand is exclusively a requisitio absolute custody and control of the judiciary, pursuant to Section 76 of the Courts of Justice Act, and is wholly distinct from a request under the Freedom of Information and Protectio that the judiciary retains absolute and exclusive dominion over such records, the preservation of which is a fundamental requisite for the maintenance of judicial independence pursu

Notwithstanding, subsequent to the execution of an exhaustive and highly sophisticated forensic digital manipulatio and unequivocally retracted.

A synthesis of principles derived from cybersecurity protocols, advanced vector morphology, and constitutional jurisprudence now substantiates, with a high degree of probability, tha subsequent erasure from the original Intake Court Endorsement appertained to Chief Justice Geoffrey B. Morawetz.

Precise Forensic Analysis: The Optical Character Recognition Font-Parsing Anomaly (The Morphological Transmutation of "C J G.B. M")

The character sequence "CL (M)" does not represent arbitrary alphanumeric data, nor does it constitute a recognized bureaucratic acronym. Rather, it is posited to be the mathematic Optical Character Recognition (OCR) and vector morphology failure, precipitated by the deployment of third-party software to expunge the string "C J G.B. M" from a layered Portable

1. The "J" to "L" Anomaly (Stem Shearing)

To comprehend this morphological shift, an understanding of digital typographic rendering is required. Within serif typefaces, characters are rendered utilizing mathematical equations directional vectors. The capital letters "J" and "L" share a substantially identical central vertical stem. The character "J" is distinguished primarily by the extension of this stem below th

It is hypothesized that the forceful deletion of the overlapping digital signature image via the GrapeCity application precipitated a catastrophic spatial collapse at the precise coordinat text. The invisible bounding box encompassing the "J" sustained a severe truncation on its leftward margin, thereby severing the vector control points requisite for the rendering of the vertical stem bracketed by minor horizontal serifs.

Subsequently, the intrinsic OCR engine, in its automated attempt to reconstruct the corrupted PDF stream, evaluated this fractured geometric entity. A heuristic confidence-score ana with a recognized Unicode glyph. Deprived of the defining leftward finial, the algorithm necessarily cross-referenced the residual stem against its internal typographic repository. In ma terminal but retaining right-oriented basal geometry defaults to the character bearing the highest probability match: the letter "L".

Absent these spatial anchors, the characters were subjected to a violent morphological collapse into identical coordinate space. The internal horizontal crossbars, spurs, and vertical failure, being mathematically obliterated by intense vector compression and pixel-rendering conflicts.

The sole surviving elements of this digital compression were the most mathematically elementary, outermost vector paths:

- The leftward-sweeping outer curve of the "G" was isolated, divested of its crossbar, and algorithmically interpreted as an open parenthesis: "("
- The rightward-sweeping outer curve of the "B" was similarly isolated, divested of its stem, and interpreted as a closed parenthesis: ")"

Consequently, the original anchor initials "C J G.B. The Justice Sector Security Office Communication: Jurisdictional Admissions and the Invocation of Rule 8

Subsequent to perceived administrative delays, further correspondence was directed to the Superior Court of Justice Correspondence Unit on August 22, 2025, seeking access to th communications were directed to Regional Senior Justice Firestone, and two to Chief Justice Morawetz.

On August 26, 2025, a communication was received from the Justice Sector Security Office (JSSO), wherein it was intimated that continued correspondence might precipitate "some records was characterized as "harassment." This communication, read in conjunction with an anomalous "DIVERSION" notification, may be construed as an inadvertent concession Justice Morawetz.

The Exclusion of the Regional Senior Justice: Pursuant to Section 14 of the Courts of Justice Act, the Regional Senior Justice exercises delegated administrative authority for the interpreted merely as a generalized administrative grievance, it would stand to reason that the JSSO would have sought to insulate the Regional Senior Justice. Conversely, the JSS Regional Senior Justice while explicitly invoking the name of the Chief Justice on three separate occasions. Such an omission implies that the Chief Justice was being addressed not specific adjudicative capacity.

The Rule 8 Implication ("Is Presiding"): The JSSO communication explicitly cited the prohibition against communicating with a judicial officer "with respect to matters that are, or m out-of-court discourse regarding a proceeding over which a judge "is presiding."

The procedural mechanism by which a Chief Justice situated at Osgoode Hall may be deemed "presiding" over a criminal intake matter at a separate locus warrants scrutiny. In the c the issuance of an Intake Court Endorsement—the judicial officer who issues the instrument becomes "seized" of that specific application. Until such time as the warrant is executed, issuing judge is the sole judicial officer who "is presiding" over the instrument.

The Garofoli Principle: Under established criminal procedure pertaining to challenges of warrant validity, the issuing judge retains initial jurisdiction over the foundational materials. categorized the Chief Justice as the "presiding" judge over the September 23, 2024 proceeding.

The Inherent Jurisdiction of an Issuing Judge to Vacate or Set Aside Ex Parte Orders and Non-Orders

No statutory restriction within the Criminal Code prohibits an authorizing judge from vacating an order of their own making. Under Canadian jurisprudence, the issuing judge is precis it is established that the court was misled.

The foundational precedent governing this doctrine is articulated in Wilson v. The Queen [1983] 2 S.C.R. 594. The rule therein establishes that, whereas court orders are generally im review and may be set aside by the issuing judge upon the adduction of new evidence demonstrating that the order was procured through fraud, material non-disclosure, or misleadi

The jurisprudential distinction between judicial roles is defined as follows:

The Reviewing Judge (Trial Court): Pursuant to R. v. Garofoli, the reviewing judge evaluates the warrant to ascertain whether the affiant provided requisite grounds and whether ev This review focuses on constitutional compliance.

The Authorizing Judge (Issuing Court): Given that ex parte proceedings rely exclusively on the absolute candor of the state, the issuing judge retains inherent jurisdiction over the enforcement personnel misled the court, omitted material facts, or unlawfully altered the endorsement resulting in a fraudulent document, a "fraud upon the court" has materialized. T to immediately vacate, quash, or set aside the initial order.

Consequently, the inherent jurisdiction of a Superior Court judge to vacate an ex parte order—or to declare an altered document a nullity—upon being deceived by law enforcement a

Section 3.1 of the Criminal Code: The Validity of Acts, the Issuance of Process, and the Ramifications of Statutory Nullity

This procedural matrix presents a complex academic conundrum. Section 3.1 of the Criminal Code stipulates that acts are valid from the time they are made. Nonetheless, upon the by a justice, no subsequent formal process (e.g., a summons or an arrest warrant) is strictly mandated to lawfully initiate a criminal proceeding. The proceeding is deemed commenc itself; the statute delineates between the commencement of the "proceeding" and the commencement of a formal "prosecution" or the execution of process.

This distinction is of paramount importance concerning the temporal framework established by the Supreme Court of Canada in R. v. Jordan. The rigid timelines prescribed therein cc (i.e., the laying of the Information).

Accordingly, even assuming arguendo that the Chief Justice was initially seized as the "presiding judge" upon the laying of the Information, such jurisdiction would have arguably laps expiration applies irrespective of the specific date utilized to mark the commencement of the proceeding—taking note of the irregular and conflicting dates affixed to the documents, v aforementioned digital manipulation perpetrated by entities extraneous to the Originating Courthouse staff.

Should the requisite act (the warrant or summons) have never been lawfully completed or issued due to state-actor interference, the result is a statutory nullity. It is imperative to stipu intended to cast aspersions upon the judicial officer in question. If an order is manipulated post-issuance, or if statutory prerequisites are frustrated by third parties, the judicial officer

It is submitted that reliance upon incontrovertible, documented software vulnerabilities (e.g., whitespace anomalies designated as DOC-6507) furnishes sufficient and necessary evid production. The candor previously exhibited by the Deputy Attorney General in November 2025 is noted, alongside the statutory prohibition against the destruction of judicial docume maintained that no jurisdictional authority exists to deny access to an Information/Indictment and its corresponding endorsement.

Consideration has further been directed toward the hypothesis that multiple judicial officers may have exercised distinct jurisdictional functions (e.g., the authorization of search or ge bifurcation would align with the procedural mechanics of ex parte and in camera chambers applications.

The Requisition for Production and Associated Systemic Implications

Predicated upon the adduced forensic evidence and the jurisdictional admissions referenced herein, a high probability exists that the Originating Court Office retains custody of the u of 6 of the standard Information package, bearing the unaltered signature block.

The systemic characteristics of the alleged documentary alteration elevate the matter beyond a localized clerical anomaly to a substantive institutional deficiency. Provided that the pr rather than a duly sworn Information (Form 2), the entire proceeding is exposed to the legal reality of constituting a jurisdictional nullity (coram non judice), rendering it void ab initio.

The deliberate alteration of a judicial record to effectuate a deprivation of liberty triggers robust remedies pursuant to Section 24(1) of the Charter, potentially exposing state actors to infliction of mental suffering, and systemic bad-faith violations. The digital artifact "CL (M)" serves as permanent, incontrovertible evidence of this documentary interference.

While it is acknowledged that locating these original documents necessitates diligent administrative effort, the burden of rectifying state-sponsored documentary manipulation must nc implications for liberty and security of the person, the judiciary bears an absolute constitutional duty to preserve and produce the unadulterated court of record.

Therefore, a formal, respectful, yet firm demand is hereby issued for the following:

SUBJECT: REITERATED URGENT DEMAND for Production of Documents – Information Indictment Package & Intake Court Endorsements

To the Addressees Named Above:

I am writing to formally reiterate and aggressively escalate my outstanding demands regarding the severe procedural irregularities, profound forensic anomalies, and deliberate c my matter.

I note for the formal record that I have made continuous, rigorously documented requests to the Originating Court Office since March 11, 2026. I received explicit confirmation in me shortly regarding these issues, establishing a clear administrative deadline of Sunday, March 15, 2026. To date, this commitment remains flagrantly unfulfilled. This represent obfuscation that fundamentally breaches the doctrine of legitimate expectations and the duty of honest performance owed by public servants.

This sustained delay is entirely unacceptable, particularly in light of the highly concerning forensic evidence of document tampering, spoliation, and procedural overreach that ha justice system is inextricably predicated upon the unimpeachable integrity of its originating instruments. The continued withholding of these materials fundamentally subverts the jurisdiction, operating as a direct affront to Sections 7, 9, and 11 of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. I am demanding immediate clarification and the production of incontrovertible facts:

1. Jurisdictional, Signatory Irregularities, and the Limits of Administrative Delegation

Under the Criminal Code and the Criminal Proceeding Rules of the Superior Court of Justice (SCJ), the clerk of the court is entitled to sign on behalf of the making, giving, issuin administrative delegation is strictly bounded by both geographic location and designated subject-matter jurisdiction. The powers of a registrar are not infinitely portable nor unilat

At the relevant time in 2024, Ms. Simion was not a "local registrar" at the SCJ 361 University Avenue courthouse. Official government directory records definitively establish her p Management – Civil Matters, situated on the 7th floor of the 330 University Avenue facility.

Conversely, the identical directory records verify that Natasha Marjadsingh was the only individual holding the title of Court Administration Supervisor (Interim Position) operating Manager of Court Operations situated on the ground floor of the 361 University Avenue courthouse—specifically within the Family Law Division. This undeniable geographical ar Simion appropriately kept Ms. Marjadsingh copied on our prior correspondence, rather than escalating the matter directly to the Deputy Attorney General (DAG) of Ontario. It wa exclusive jurisdictional purview over that specific registry.

To be absolutely clear for the record: I am not faulting the registry staff or clerks for the substantive judicial overreach or ultra vires conduct of Madam Justice Shore. The adminis remitted to them. Rather, my demand is strictly a matter of the factual provision of documents that exist within the court's repository. The administrative delegation of clerical task any conceivable circumstances, eclipse or substitute the non-delegable judicial function of independently assessing reasonable and probable grounds before authorizing an arre authority to administratively synthesize a criminal warrant. Any such action operates strictly ultra vires, rendering the resultant process an irremediable nullity ab initio.

2. The "Smoking Gun": Digital Artifacts, GrapeCity.PDF, and the Forged Signature of Natasha Marjadsingh

Beyond the profound jurisdictional failures delineated above, there is incontrovertible, forensic documentary evidence pointing to the deliberate fabrication of the False Informatic manipulation software. This constitutes the ultimate "smoking gun," proving that state actors actively intercepted, altered, and forged judicial records.

A. The Original Signatory (Natasha Marjadsingh)

Documentary evidence—including a February 24, 2021 Notice of Application for an estates matter, as well as internal Ministry recognition via Staff Excellence Awards—incontrov standing Local Registrar and Acting Group Leader at the SCJ. During the critical period of September 2024, she was the primary supervisor and acting leader at the relevant SC would naturally and automatically appear on any legitimate SCJ civil/family "Intake Court Endorsement" generated within that specific architectural silo.

B. Section 508.1(2) and the Errant Adobe Signature Block

Under section 508.1(2) of the Criminal Code, a telewarrant process solely requires an "information on oath" that may be submitted via a statement that is deemed under oath. Cr absolutely does not require a formal, third-party authenticated digital cryptographic signature certificate (such as an embedded Adobe Public Key Infrastructure [PKI] block).

Therefore, the presence of a formal Adobe signature block in the fabricated criminal package is a glaring, fatal anomaly. It exists for one singular reason: the perpetrators did not illicitly misappropriated an existing civil/family "Intake Court Endorsement"—which had been originally signed by Local Registrar Marjadsingh via a certified Adobe block—and su masquerade as a criminal OCJ intake form purportedly sworn by a Toronto police court officer (Mrs. Frugoni-Rojas).

C. The GrapeCity.PDF (Mescius) Limitations and the Failed Erasure

This state-sponsored forgery was fundamentally botched due to well-documented technical deficiencies within the GrapeCity Documents for PDF (GcPdf) manipulation API. Whe Adobe signature watermark to erase Marjadsingh's name, the software catastrophically failed due to the following structural limitations:

- Strict PDF Compliance & Loss of Custom Data: GcPdf historically struggled to map proprietary custom metadata and interactive elements that deviated from strict Adob custom Adobe signature layer properly, leading to an incomplete layer extraction and a shattered cryptographic hash.
- Font-Specific Crashes and Text Layout Bugs: Older versions of GcPdf were plagued by font parser crashes (notably involving corrupted arimon__.ttf fonts) and sever returned incorrect coordinates. This rendered the programmatic or manual deletion of specific text strings within complex, layered signature blocks highly unstable.
- Missing Whitespace and Flattening: Technical bugs (such as DOC-6507) frequently caused whitespace ignoring—which unnaturally bunches letters together. Furthermo layered text strings into the document's rasterized background, rendering them entirely immune to simple digital deletion.

D. The Indelible Digital Artifact: "(C L M)"

Because of these precise, documented software limitations, when the manipulator attempted to digitally erase Natasha Marjadsingh's signature block to fraudulently replace it wi a hard software barrier. They could not cleanly remove the capital letters that physically intersected with the embedded Adobe watermark component without entirely corrupting t

Specifically, the capital "L" (derived from her title "Local Registrar") and the capital "M" (derived from "Marjadsingh") could not be deleted. This forced, incomplete, and highly am —a permanent, unerasable digital footprint of the forgery.

This forensic artifact proves beyond a shadow of a reasonable doubt that the document did not originate organically from Mrs. Frugoni-Rojas at the OCJ. Instead, it was an interr processed, and signed by Natasha Marjadsingh in her official capacity as Local Registrar, which was subsequently—and clumsily—manipulated using flawed PDF software by st record.

3. Architectural Displacement, Technological Siloing, and the "Family Law" Silo Bypass

An "Intake Court Endorsement" is fundamentally an administrative construct inextricably bound to the Family Law Rules, remaining entirely anathema to the Criminal Code and i deliberately circumvented away from the rigorously audited criminal e-intake portal. A genuine judicial electronic issuance utilizes the ICON architecture, which strictly requires a however, bears an obsolete, 6-digit identifier indicative of the FRANK system, which is utilized almost exclusively by the Superior Court family division.

The weaponization of civil infrastructure—under the purview of Madam Justice Shore, Family Team Leader—to generate unrecorded, ex parte penal instruments affecting the fur jurisdictional nullity. Bypassing the criminal Justice of the Peace intake system to seek authorizations in solitary civil chambers constitutes egregious forum shopping and an absc transparently in open court, not clandestinely synthesized in the opaque recesses of family law registries to be weaponized later by law enforcement.

4. The "Laying" versus "Filing" Dichotomy and the Void Record

The semantic and jurisdictional distinction between the physical "laying" of an Information under section 504 of the Criminal Code and its subsequent clerical "filing" is a foundati laying initiates the proceeding and requires independent judicial evaluation; filing is the mandatory clerical submission to secure the document within the court of record.

Ministry representative Mr. Sinnadurai has previously, formally admitted on the record that no Criminal Code Form 2 Information was ever formally filed within the criminal registr 2024. The fundamental failure to properly originate this process via the mandated penal architecture renders the entire proceeding a pure legal fiction. It is sustained solely by da operating strictly coram non judice. The subsequent reliance on these unfiled, phantom proceedings to authorize deprivations of liberty represents a catastrophic rupture in the ru record cannot, ipso facto, exercise jurisdiction in the absence of said Court Records.

5. Intentional Omission of Identifying Pages and State-Sponsored Spoliation

If Natasha Marjadsingh's name had been properly included along with pages four and five (out of six) in the Lincoln County Law Association (Niagara) Form 2 package, it would Justice Shore's name. Additionally, the inclusion of Ms. Marjadsingh's true and unaltered signature block would have allowed me to definitively identify the exact court level and c

The deliberate physical or digital excision of the jurat (the page containing the oath and the judicial signature) sanitizes the document's clandestine origins. This suppression of ir state-sponsored spoliation. Under the doctrine of omnia praesumuntur contra spoliatorem (the presumption against a spoliator), the intentional destruction, obfuscation, or mutila adverse inferences and triggers mandatory first-party disclosure obligations regarding state misconduct (R. v. McNeil, 2009 SCC 3).

With great respect, now is the time to distance yourself from Justice Shore and her reign of terror. Even on the Dipoce, McIntosh and Nash cases, she is a judicial office but that in turn makes the point, she often acts Factum A Judice, Quod Ad Officium Jure Non Pertinet, Ratum Non Est and Coram Non Ju before a person who is not a judge.

Please be advised that you remain legally bound to produce these documents regardless of any ensuing escalation, collateral investigations, or administrative inertia. You canno investigation into the veracity of these foundational records.

I. PROCEDURAL POSTURE AND JURISDICTIONAL MANDATE

1. Pursuant to the imperative requirements of procedural fairness and the fundamental principles governing a court of record, formal rec proceedings styled His Majesty the King v KA McLean, 2026 (the "Proceeding"), presently designated under court file number 24-457197

2. It is strictly necessitated that all evidentiary documentation, administrative paper, intrinsic information, and corresponding [court recor documents] (the "Court Documents") be forthwith transmitted to the registry of the Superior Court of Justice situated at 361 Univer Ontario (the "Receiving Registry"), from the courthouse wherein the matter originated (the "Originating Courthouse").

3. For the purposes of precise legal demarcation, any reference herein to Court Documents or Court Records is to be strictly construe from, [judicial records] (the "Judicial Records") and [judicial information] (the "Judicial Information"). This bifurcation is expressly operational distinctions articulated within the Annual Report of the Office of the Auditor General of Ontario, 2019 (the "2019 Auditor General information from constitutionally protected judicial domains.

4. The procurement of the aforementioned Court Records and Judicial Records is an imperative exigency; failing the facilitation of un present date, immediate procedural escalation shall be effectuated pursuant to the Criminal Proceedings Rules for the Superior Court of Justice to preserve the integrity of the public interest and the administration of justice.

II. SPOLIATION, RECORD INTEGRITY, AND DECLARATIONS OF NULLITY

5. Grave apprehensions are harboured regarding the potential obfuscation, intentional destruction, or spoliation of the foundational acta, and subsequent judicial endorsements, which constitute integral components of the required Court Records and Judicial Records.

6. In limine, the absence or systemic obliteration of such indispensable Court Documents transitions the matter from a mere procedural ostensibly operating as a court of record cannot, ipso facto, exercise jurisdiction in the absence of said Court Records; any proceedings circumstances are unequivocally ultra vires and void ab initio. The failure to maintain the Court Records is a direct contravention of the governing judicial transparency, demanding a categorization of strict nullity.

7. This foundational tenet is firmly anchored in the jurisprudence articulated by the Honourable Justice Durno in R v Rowlands, 2003 Canl Decision"). In the Rowlands Decision, it was definitively established that a court of record is deprived of its foundational jurisdiction when adjudicative transcripts are irreparably lost or destroyed. The deprivation of the Court Records paralyzes the adjudicative process, the absolute impossibility. Applying this doctrine to the present exigency, if the acta within the Originating Courthouse have been subjected permanently stripped of its authority to proceed, effectuating a fatal jurisdictional defect.

III. CHARTER REMEDIES AND THE STATUS QUO ANTE

8. The necessity of effectuating access prior to the aforementioned temporal deadline is dictated by the requirement to determine the pre sought under section 24(1) of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, Part I of the Constitution Act, 1982, being Schedule B to the Ca

9. The ascertainment of the existence of the Court Records and Judicial Records governs whether the appropriate remedy manifests a declaration of acquittal, the latter being necessitated to restore the status quo ante and extinguish the unfounded prosecutorial apparatus

IV. EXHAUSTION OF ADMINISTRATIVE REMEDIES AND PRIVILEGE EXEMPTIONS

10. It is affirmed that administrative escalation has been strictly confined to the Originating Courthouse for the explicit purposes of invest available procedural avenues prior to seeking formal intervention from the presiding judiciary.

11. Furthermore, any invocation of informant privilege or public interest immunity to shield the requested Court Documents or Judicial As enunciated by the Supreme Court of Canada in R v McClure, 2001 SCC 14 at para 40 (the "McClure Decision"), privileges of this natu innocence at stake exception. Where the withholding of Court Records obfuscates exculpatory evidence essential to demonstrating ar ensuring that the fundamental liberties of the accused are protected against systemic overreach.

V. REPRESENTATIONS, THE DUTY OF HONEST PERFORMANCE, AND PROSPECTIVE ESCALATION

12. It is submitted that the necessity of invoking the investigatory powers of, inter alia, the Office of the Auditor General of Ontario is a la absence of a response necessitates such an escalation, particularly as reliance was reasonably placed upon explicit representations indic forthcoming expeditiously.

13. If the temporal parameter of "soon" was intended to encompass the present date, immediate advisement is formally requested. An obj aforementioned representation, initially conveyed several weeks prior on a Sunday, dictated the provision of access to the statutorily m upon request and no later than a few days subsequent to said representation.

14. The obligation to act in good faith, underpinned by the doctrine of uberrimae fides applicable to the Crown and its executive apparatus, s any reliance upon half-truths or obfuscatory silence. This principle is inextricably tied to the jurisprudence established by the Supreme 2020 SCC 45 (the "Callow Decision"). In the Callow Decision, the Court definitively ruled that the duty of honest performance precludes a knowingly misleading another party through deliberate silence or the omission of material facts when a duty to correct a misapprehens present circumstances, the continued silence and failure to fulfill the representation of impending access constitutes a breach of this du correct the understanding that access would be provided "soon" operates as active deception through omission, thereby undermining t administrative and judicial interactions.

Should any ambiguity persist regarding the parameters of this requisition, immediate advisement is strictly required; in the ab conclusively presumed that the directives contained herein are unequivocally comprehended and shall be executed forthwith.
19. Furthermore, it is formally requisitioned that any judicial authorizations, including but not limited to search warrants, general warrants, falling within the exclusive jurisdictional purview of the Superior Court of Justice—pursuant to the legislative parameters delineated in c C-46 (the "Criminal Code")—be produced and disclosed gratis and without the imposition of administrative tariffs.

PART I: FACTUAL CONTINGENCIES AND THE DESTRUCTION OF THE ACTA

The Clandestine Chamber Proceeding and Subsequent Spoliation

1. This supplementary correspondence is formally submitted to squarely address the highly probable contingency wherein the Honourable Madam Justice Shore, administrative actor engaged in the deliberate deletion or destruction of the requested foundational court documents. This destruction is posited to have occurr of the authentic information package (the "Authentic Information Package") into the corrupted artifact currently relied upon by the state (the "False Informati November 1, 2024, as explicitly corroborated by the formal admissions remitted by Ministry of the Attorney General representative Mr. Sinnadurai in June and J
2. This analysis proceeds upon the foundational assumption—tendered strictly for the purposes of this requisition and without constituting an admission of lawful p purportedly sworn in private judicial chambers. This premise relies directly upon the incontrovertible representation advanced by the Superior Court of Justice F Amirthalingam, who conceded that the proceeding was executed "in chambers," entirely devoid of the transparency afforded by an open courtroom and conspi contemporaneous audio recording or transcription.
3. It is further assumed, without conceding validity, that following this irregular ex parte chamber proceeding, the Authentic Information Package was inexplicably r the 1st floor of the 361 University Avenue Courthouse. This systemic failure to properly file the instrument fundamentally offends the strict, mandatory operation Criminal Proceedings Rules for the Superior Court of Justice (Ontario), SI/2012-7.

PART II: THE APPLICATION OF MACHINE-READABLE JURISPRUDENCE BY ANALOGY

The Extrapolation of OIPC Doctrines to Judicial Repositories

4. While it is formally acknowledged that the present requisition is not strictly governed by the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act, RSO 1990, c exclusive custody maintained by the Superior Court over its adjudicative acta—the legal doctrines and strict analytical frameworks developed by the Office of th "OIPC") regarding the extraction of machine-readable records apply by necessary, unyielding analogy. The judiciary cannot arbitrarily assert that the destructio record when the underlying metadata, database fields, and digital fragments remain dormant yet extractable within the court's technological infrastructure.
5. The legal test for production stems from interconnected legislative provisions meticulously designed to future-proof institutional transparency and prevent public to circumvent disclosure obligations. Pursuant to the capability provision analogous to section 2(1)(b) of the FIPPA, the conceptual definition of a "record" expa produced from a machine-readable format utilizing the computer hardware, software, and technical expertise normally resident within the institution.
6. The underlying legislative and equitable intent is unequivocal: a public institution cannot seek refuge behind the complexity of its databases to deny access to f the exact moment the digital fields residing within the Integrated Court Operation Network or the FRANK system can be programmatically queried and compile

PART III: THE TWO-PART ANALYTICAL THRESHOLD FOR DIGITAL RECONSTRUCTION

The "Normal Expertise" and "Unreasonable Interference" Framework

7. When an institution seeks to evade production by erroneously characterizing a data extraction as the impermissible "creation of a new record," a rigorous two-p dismantle such administrative obfuscation.
8. Part 1: The Normal Expertise and Equipment Test: To compel production, the institution must merely possess the capability to generate the requested inform normal operational expertise. What constitutes "normalcy" operates upon a sliding scale inextricably linked to the sophistication of the institution. For a modern standard database queries, running foundational extraction scripts, or exporting relational tables is fundamentally "normal" and expected. While the law manda compelling the institution to formulate custom-generated answers, the digital extraction of the Authentic Information Package's metadata undeniably constitutes necessitate the procurement of novel software licenses, the acquisition of extraneous hardware, or the retention of external forensic consultants.
9. Part 2: The Unreasonable Interference Test: Operating analogously to the regulatory carve-out codified within section 2 of RRO 1990, Regulation 460, an ins readable record if the extraction process would unreasonably interfere with its core operations. The jurisprudential bar for "unreasonable interference" is exceed essential business activities—such as paralyzing critical hospital infrastructure—and cannot be satisfied by mere administrative inconvenience, annoyance, or t burden to prove such catastrophic interference rests entirely upon the institution, requiring detailed, convincing affidavit evidence, which is manifestly absent in

PART IV: SEMINAL JURISPRUDENCE AND THE DIGITAL SEVERING DOCTRINE

Application of OIPC Precedents to the Fractured Judicial Record

10. A comprehensive review of seminal OIPC jurisprudence unequivocally supports the mandated extraction of the underlying digital framework of the Authentic Inf document's purported destruction.
11. In Order PO-3373, the adjudicator established the "New Code and Critical Systems" threshold, upholding the withholding of raw system logs solely because tra to write entirely untested programming, thereby pulling them away from safeguarding critical provincial systems. The extraction of the acta herein requires no s pre-existing query functionalities inherent to the court's database architecture.
12. Conversely, in Order MO-4355, the OIPC delineated the "Not Normally Used" threshold, ruling that customized analytical summaries did not constitute existing analytical work falling outside the institution's normal administrative scope. The present requisition demands no subjective analysis or summarization; it deman footprints corresponding to the ex parte chamber proceeding.
13. Crucially, Order MO-1989 established the foundational doctrine of "Database Extraction as Digital Severing." Institutions are legally expected and required to ut information. The extraction of the uncorrupted data fields to reconstruct the Authentic Information Package is legally synonymous with digital severing and is a
14. Finally, Order PO-4430 profoundly differentiated between structured relational data and unstructured free-text, ruling that while forcing manual extractions from unreasonable interference, querying structured databases (such as court registry systems) is a standard, mandated obligation.

PART V: CONCLUDING IMPERATIVES

The Unyielding Obligation of the Court of Record

15. Therefore, assuming the physical destruction of the Authentic Information Package post facto to its unauthorized GrapeCity SDK manipulation, the Superior Co jurisdiction—and the equitable principles mirrored in the aforementioned FIPPA jurisprudence—to digitally reconstruct and produce the machine-readable recor destruction of the physical paper cannot serve to permanently immunize an extra-judicial deprivation of liberty from appellate scrutiny. The unadulterated digital ex debito justitiae.
16. Should no explicit confirmation be remitted dictating that this formalized extrapolation is formally required by the Originating Court Office, it shall be functionally is formally tendered to your attention for meticulous administrative record-keeping and to foster a cooperative access partnership, reinforcing the incontrovertib "upon request" demands literal, immediate satisfaction, strictly precluding any administrative obfuscation or delay extending beyond a twenty-four-hour tempora

SUBJECT: Formal Requisition and Notice of Impending Escalation Regarding the Absolute Deprivation of Foundational Court Records

PART I: TEMPORAL CONTEXT AND THE EXTANT REQUISITION
The Unyielding Demand for the Production of the Unadulterated Acta

1. It is hereby formally documented that a period encompassing eighteen consecutive days has precipitously elapsed since the initial requ courthouse (the "Originating Courthouse") and the originating court office (the "Originating Court Office"). Said requisition demande "Information") or the indictment (the "Indictment"), acting in inextricable concert with the intake court endorsement (the "Intake Cou production in their authentic, unadulterated, and natively generated forms.
2. The foundational architecture of the Canadian criminal justice system is inextricably predicated upon the unimpeachable integrity of i derogable statutory and common law entitlement of an accused individual to be provided with copies of the aforementioned charging docur of administrative fees. The continuous withholding of these materials fundamentally subverts the procedural safeguards inherently attacl demand encompasses not merely the textual substance of the instruments, but their mathematically verifiable, cryptographically sound digi SDK software manipulation that has heretofore catastrophically contaminated the secondary records advanced by state law enforcement age
3. It is a foundational constitutional cornerstone that a rigorous semantic, procedural, and jurisdictional distinction exists between the "la Criminal Code, RSC 1985, c C-46 (the "Criminal Code") and its subsequent clerical "filing" within the court repository. The physical ac judicial evaluation of reasonable and probable grounds. The subsequent filing is the mandatory clerical submission to secure the document previously procured from Ministry representatives irrevocably confirm that no Criminal Code Form 2 Information was ever formally filed v material timeframe. This fundamental failure to properly originate the process via the mandated penal architecture is entirely fatal to the le legal fiction sustained by extra-judicial momentum rather than lawful adjudicative authority.

PART II: ADMINISTRATIVE INERTIA AND THE DOCTRINE OF LEGITIMATE EXPECTATIONS
The Breach of Procedural Fairness and the Resulting Jurisdictional Nullity

4. The persistent administrative silence is noted with profound concern, particularly as it operates in direct contravention of the explicit rep March 15, 2026, wherein it was affirmatively communicated that a substantive response would be remitted with imminent dispa comprehensively elucidated by the Supreme Court of Canada in Baker v. Canada (Minister of Citizenship and Immigration), [1999] 2 SCI public authority makes a specific representation regarding the administrative procedure it will adhere to. The failure of the Originating Cou commitment to provide the requested foundational acta constitutes a profound breach of procedural fairness.
5. This administrative obfuscation—specifically, the systemic failure to produce the foundational documents historically utilized to auth procedural irregularity. In circumstances where an institution exercises plenary custody and control over an essential adjudicative artifact judicial doctrine of omnia praesumuntur contra spoliatorem (the presumption against a spoliator) is inexorably activated. The deliberate se prevents a proper de novo review and eviscerates the constitutional right to make full answer and defence as enshrined within section 7 of t I of the Constitution Act, 1982, being Schedule B to the Canada Act 1982 (UK), 1982, c 11 (the "Charter"). Consequently, this documentar stripping the ensuing proceedings of any presumption of regularity and necessitating immediate rectification by the issuing tribunal to restor
6. Furthermore, the profound absence of a contemporaneous Digital Recording Documentation (the "DRD") audio file corresponding to the warrant was purportedly authorized severely vitiates the accused's capacity to subject the judicial authorization to substantive appellate r execution of an application pursuant to R. v. Garofoli, [1990] 2 SCR 1421, effectively immunizing the state's preliminary investigative con record, the failure to generate a verifiable transcript of an ex parte deprivation of liberty is antithetical to transparent adjudication and manc integrity of the judicial repository.

PART III: EXECUTIVE OVERSIGHT AND THE SEPARATION OF POWERS
The Invocation of the Chief Law Officers of the Crown

7. In light of the aforementioned systemic failures and the continued sequestration of judicial records, the Honourable Attorney General of O Attorney General, Mr. David Corbett, have been formally copied on this correspondence. The inclusion of the chief law officers of t constitutional implications inherent in the obfuscation of the judicial repository. As forcefully articulated by the Supreme Court of Canad para 30, the open court principle (the "Open Court Principle") is a foundational hallmark of a democratic society, establishing a nearly im of public access to adjudicative records. Unfettered judicial openness actively deters systemic mischief and ensures unwavering publi continued sequestration of the Information and the Intake Court Endorsement flagrantly offends this constitutionally protected imperative.
8. The Attorney General, acting as the ultimate fiduciary guardian of the administration of justice, is thereby apprised of this profound institut of the penal process appears to have been unlawfully supplanted by an opaque, extra-judicial administrative void. When penal instr administrative silos—functionally bypassing the rigorously audited ICON criminal registry—the indispensable separation of powers bet independent adjudicative branch is critically compromised. State actors cannot arbitrarily utilize the opaque shroud of administrative burea equitable fraud, or protect themselves from the piercing light of public scrutiny.
9. Moreover, the absolute unavailability of the acta necessitates immediate clarity regarding the potential application of section 74 of the Co of Justice Act"). The Deputy Attorney General maintains the singular statutory authority to issue directions for the destruction or perm longer required." If the foundational records have been subjected to a section 74 destruction directive, the executive branch must immediat said directive, including the requisite approval of the Chief Justice. If no such directive was lawfully promulgated, the disappearance of the an act of administrative spoliation of evidence, compelling mandatory first-party disclosure obligations regarding state misconduct as prescr

PART IV: ULTIMATUM, MANDATORY PRODUCTION, AND CONCLUDING DIRECTIVES
The Inexorable Escalation of the Demand Ex Debito Justitiae

10. Should the demanded documentation not be securely transmitted by 12:00 hours (noon) today, this requisition shall be aggressively authorities. It is categorically reaffirmed that an absolute statutory and common law entitlement exists to receive copies of the Inf endorsements generated during the material temporal period. Pursuant to the authoritative framework established in Hale v. Ontario (Crim 48, the Originating Court Office undeniably retains overarching legal control of its own acta and is subject to an unyielding, non-dele justitiae. The failure to provide these instruments immediately upon request cannot be countenanced or subsequently cured.

11. It must further be declared, as a matter of incontrovertible temporal reality, that eighteen months have precipitously elapsed since the Consequently, any theoretical prosecutorial jeopardy has been absolutely extinguished pursuant to the strictures delineated by the Supreme paras 46-47. The passage of this mandated temporal threshold functionally excises any residual state authority to maintain an activ prosecution to an unvarnished historical audit of state conduct.
12. Kindly advise whether the persistent administrative obfuscation necessitates the immediate escalation of this matter to the Executive Cou Auditor General of Ontario (the "Auditor General") for exhaustive executive and financial review. It is an incontrovertible tenet of provi Council, comprised of the Ministers of the Crown and chaired by the Premier of Ontario, exercises plenary executive authority over the a the exclusive prerogative to mandate policy, formulate administrative priorities, and issue binding directives via Orders-in-Council. Where engage in the sequestration of judicial acta, thereby systematically subverting the administration of justice, the invocation of the Executi necessitated to compel absolute compliance with statutory mandates.
13. Concurrently, the systemic failure to preserve or produce foundational court records inevitably implicates profound deficiencies in internal resources. This catastrophic lapse inextricably engages the mandatory investigatory mandate of the Auditor General to guarantee institutio to the Auditor General Act, RSO 1990, c A.35. Specifically, the conspicuous failure of the DRD infrastructure to furnish paid-for transcripts for-Money performance audit to determine whether taxpayer funds allocated for the modernization of court operations have been inexcusa disseminate these records constitutes a material failure in administrative efficiency that falls squarely within the Auditor General's purvie stipulated meridian deadline, further administrative, constitutional, and appellate escalation shall commence without delay.
14. The ultimate necessity of effectuating this formalized escalation to independent oversight entities remains strictly contingent upon t compliance with their mandatory statutory obligations and antecedent procedural representations. Notwithstanding any such prospectiv persists in esse, remaining unequivocally extant and commanding absolute satisfaction directly through the Originating Court Office at first

PART V: THE IMPERATIVE OF BONA FIDES AND FOUNDATIONAL GOVERNMENTAL TENETS

The Comprehensive Obligation of the State Apparatus

15. The imperative for state apparatuses and governmental entities to act with bona fides towards the citizenry inexorably demands unimpeachable fairness, and scrupulous adherence to the most elevated ethical standards across all administrative interactions and adjudica obligation encompasses, but is strictly not limited to, the following foundational tenets:
16. Adherence to the Rule of Law: Governmental entities must operate strictly within the prescribed bounds of the law, ensuring that all adr consistent with established legal frameworks, codified policies, and authoritative directives.
17. Impartiality and Non-Partisanship: Adjudicative decisions and administrative actions undertaken by state bodies must be demonst assiduously avoid favouring specific individuals or groups over others, thereby guaranteeing equitable treatment for all subjects.

SUBJECT: Formal follow up to the access request of which Ms. Simion represented she would have a response soon as of 10 days ago

PART I: CONTINUATION OF EXTANT REQUISITION, THE OPEN COURT PRINCIPLE, AND EXTINGUISHMEN

Categorical Demand for the Immediate Production of Foundational Documentation

1. The present correspondence is formally submitted as an unyielding continuation of the antecedent, extant requests effectuated upon the Office"), demanding the immediate provision of foundational court documents that remain strictly within the exclusive custody and contr
2. It is unequivocally confirmed that the aforementioned request shall remain active and legally extant until comprehensively satisfied ex information package (the "Information Package") in its authentic form, alongside the intake court endorsement (the "Intake Court demanded.
3. The obligation to produce the aforementioned documentation applies indiscriminately, whether the materials are presently situated withi office (the "Court Office"), wherein the criminal proceeding (the "Criminal Proceeding") was commenced, or whether said materi control, and/or custody of Madam Justice Shore's judicial chambers and/or by way of her designated judicial assistant.

Inherent Jurisdiction, the Immutable Master Record, and the Doctrine of Nullity

4. The inherent jurisdiction of the Superior Court of Justice to fundamentally govern its internal repository dictates a strict, non-delegabl tribunal of inherent jurisdiction cannot lawfully operate upon documents that inexplicably vanish from internal filing architectures while (an arbitrary deprivation of liberty.
5. Ipso facto, the utilization of undocumented proceedings to effectuate a deprivation of liberty is not a mere procedural irregularity; ra representing a direct contravention of established statutory mandates, equitable principles, and the common law rules governing the adn quo ante is mandated where fundamental records are obfuscated.

The Unrecorded Ex Parte In Camera Hearing and Constitutional Imperatives

6. Concerning the absence of an audio recording of the subject proceedings, it is noted that Madam Justice Shore was categorically in erro pertaining to case conferences in civil proceedings, an interpretation entirely distinct from the requirements involving a criminal matter a the swearing of an Information (Form 2) but due to Shore J. not knowing the distinction between an Intake Court Endorsement and a For per se. However, that did not stop the clock in the Proceeding being commenced.
7. The central inquiry necessitates a determination as to whether a judicial officer is legally obligated to transcribe an in-person ex pa Hearing") wherein law enforcement officials seek the authorization of criminal charges and the subsequent execution of an arrest Information") within judicial chambers.
8. It is conceded that the Criminal Code, R.S.C., 1985, c. C-46 (the "Criminal Code"), specifically sections 504 and 507, does not explicitly information or the immediate issuance of an arrest warrant, standing in stark contradistinction to the stringent statutory frameworks go communications delineated within Part VI of the Criminal Code. Consequently, the administration of an oath within judicial chambers s permissible.
9. Nevertheless, operating as a court of record, the failure to generate a contemporaneous transcript severely vitiates an accused individua substantive appellate or collateral review, thereby fundamentally frustrating the execution of an application pursuant to R. v. Garofo (Garofoli). Such an omission ostensibly catalyzes significant constitutional challenges grounded upon sections 7, 8, and 9 of the Canad Constitution Act, 1982, being Schedule B to the Canada Act 1982 (U.K.), 1982, c. 11 (the "Charter").
10. In the absence of a transcribed record, the reviewing judicial entity is strictly confined to the four corners of the written Form 2 Infor representations articulated in limine within chambers are irrecoverably lost to antiquity and remain legally impotent to salvage a fundan necessity arises for the production of the information-to-wit (the "Information-To-Wit") alongside any handwritten annotations inscribed
11. Furthermore, modern appellate jurisprudence consistently rebukes the administrative practice of conducting unrecorded chamber hearing the foundational tenets of a court of record and diametrically opposed to the principles of transparent adjudication.

Judicial Custody, the Open Courts Principle, and the Veracity of the Record

12. The directives promulgated by the Canadian Judicial Council explicitly underscore the imperative for a judicial institution to meticulou adjudicative documentation, particularly within the context of an unrecorded Ex Parte In Camera Hearing.
13. The abdication of custody and control over the acta of a court of record is universally prohibited. As elucidated by the Canadian Judicial (extraneous administrative bodies by their mandatory obligation to preserve the record of proceedings, ensuring that appellate tribunals ca and that subsequent jurists can adhere to established precedent.
14. The court record functions as an unimpeachable source of truth; information upon which a tribunal relies to formulate a legal determina reliability and accuracy. Upon the judicial determination of a factual proposition within a proceeding on a balance of probabiliti incontrovertibly true.
15. Concomitantly, in strict adherence to the open courts principle, judicial bodies bear an unwavering responsibility to ensure that the doc permanently and publicly accessible. Concurrently, courts function as the fiduciary guardians of the voluminous records tendered by thir and institutional justice partners.
16. In contradistinction to the procurement of case conference transcripts—which necessitate advance financial retention by an author prerequisite of judicial acknowledgment—the present demand for existing foundational documentation requires no such judicial consent (

The Expansive Interpretation of Custody and Control Jurisprudence

17. While the classification of the immediate request falls outside the strict purview of freedom of information legislation, the overarchi unequivocally applicable. It is legally immaterial whether the requested documentation is situated within the immediate, physical conte elsewhere within the judicial infrastructure.
18. This expansive interpretation is fortified by appellate jurisprudence. In referencing the foundational principles of documentary control articulated in Canada Post Corp. v. Canada (Minister of Public Works) (1995), 1995 CanLII 3574 (FCA), 30 Admin. L.R. (2d) 242, [19 by the Court of Appeal for Ontario.
19. As articulated by Letourneau J.A. at page 245 of Canada Post, the legislative conceptualization of "control" is intentionally left undefin Parliament eschewed any distinction between ultimate and immediate, full and partial, transient and lasting, or de jure and de facto cont definition of control strictly to the power of disposition, such limitations would have been explicitly codified.

20. Applying this authoritative jurisprudential framework to the factual matrix at bar, the resulting conclusion is self-evident: the Superior control over the Information Package and the Intake Court Endorsement. Whether these documents are transiently located within a judici filed within the central registry (de jure control), they remain unequivocally under the plenary dominion of the court. Therefore, the fa under the guise of internal displacement or administrative sequestration, is ultra vires the administrative authority of the court and constit right of access to the judicial record.
21. Furthermore, this requisition explicitly encompasses the immediate production of the "Information-To-Wit" and any concomitant handw clerical endorsements inscribed upon the reverse side of any foundational document. Such constituent elements form an inextricable information package (the "Information Package") and are strictly subject to this mandatory demand for production. The historical re adjudicative events, irrespective of their procedural irregularity.
22. Given that Madam Justice Shore presently presides as the Family Law Team Leader for the Superior Court of Justice located at the 3 hereby confirmed that this non-statutory access request has been unequivocally directed to the correct and originating courthouse, ar wherein this anomalous instrument was seemingly precipitated. The deliberate circumvention of the established criminal e-intake porta structural displacement that necessitates immediate institutional auditing.
23. Should Justice Shore wish to formally deny any involvement regarding the synthesis, authorization, or administrative routing of these re issue such a denial via the Manager of Court Operations. In such an eventuality, the undersigned is fully prepared to adduce incontrovertil the contrary. Consequently, there exist absolutely no lawful, statutory, or administrative grounds to withhold the authentic documents, in Package and the intake court endorsement (the "Intake Court Endorsement"), irrespective of the specific form it originally assumed exact administrative means by which it was transcribed into its final, corrupted iteration.
24. It is further declared, as a matter of incontrovertible temporal reality, that eighteen months have precipitously elapsed since the date i Consequently, any theoretical prosecutorial jeopardy has been absolutely extinguished pursuant to the strictures delineated within the C the Constitution Act, 1982, being Schedule B to the Canada Act 1982 (UK), 1982, c 11 (the "Charter"), and definitively operationalized 2016 SCC 27 (the "Jordan Decision") at paragraphs 46 and 47. The passage of this mandated temporal threshold fundamentally excise penal posture, thereby transitioning the judicial paradigm from active prosecution to a necessary, unvarnished historical audit. Having fundamentally predicated upon a False Information Package—the undersigned is systematically exhausting all other available admi accountability.
25. The continued concealment of the foundational acta constitutes an egregious, actionable abuse of process that offends the foundationa 2021 SCC 25 (the "Sherman Estate Decision") and Canadian Broadcasting Corp v. Named Person, 2024 SCC 21. Section 2(b) of the C (the "Open Court Principle"), establishing a formidable, nearly impenetrable presumption in favour of judicial transparency that affords functional workings of the adjudicative branch. The Supreme Court of Canada has consistently held that unfettered judicial openne unwavering public confidence. Should correspondence satisfying this requisition not be securely transmitted by the Originating Court Of administrative and constitutional escalation shall commence without delay to compel the mandatory provision of all corresponding d utilized to circumvent a transparent investigation into the veracity of these foundational records.

PART II: STATUTORY DUTIES, STRUCTURAL DUALITY, AND THE OBLIGATIONS OF THE DEPUTY ATTORNEY GEN

7. The obligations statutorily imposed upon the Deputy Attorney General command rigorous exposition, specifically concerning the dual a office. Pursuant to the explicit architectural framework established within the Public Service of Ontario Act, 2006, SO 2006, c 35, S through the Ethics Regulation, O Reg 383/07 (the "Ethics Regulation"), the Deputy Attorney General concurrently functions as the chie personnel and as the ultimate Ethics Executive for the Ministry. The pervasive administrative silence documented herein regarding the rec systemic failure to rectify the record in limine.
8. This structural duality necessitates an uncompromising standard of institutional accountability. The efficacy of the PSOA relies fundam broad executive discretion must remain perpetually answerable to an independent ethical standard, thereby avoiding a "closed-loop" c with documented assertions of state-sponsored spoliation, documentary fabrication, and the clandestine synthesis of an arrest warrant vi is statutorily compelled to intervene. As elucidated in the broader administrative jurisprudence concerning fiduciary public duties, t investigate and rectify the intentional suppression of an originating document constitutes a profound abdication of the merit principle.
9. Because the registry staff operate beneath the executive umbrella of the Ministry of the Attorney General, the Deputy Attorney Gen administration of justice is not perverted by bureaucratic obfuscation. The executive branch cannot prioritize the shielding of operational If the foundational records were never lawfully submitted or filed in accordance with the Criminal Proceedings Rules for the Superior C Proceedings Rules"), the Ethics Executive is bound to formally declare the antecedent administrative actions as absolute nullities to pres and to immediately restore the status quo ante.
10. To serve as an explicit evidentiary reminder for the Deputy Attorney General, appended hereto are copies of electronic correspondence w no directive was issued for the destruction of any court documents or materials harboured within a court office pursuant to section 74 Consequently, the complete absence of these foundational records cannot be shielded under the guise of authorized administrative disposi unauthorized spoliation.

Nota Bene: The Boundary of Inherent Jurisdiction and Equitable Rectification

11. It is anticipated that the Judicial Branch or court administration might hypothesize that the inherent jurisdiction of the Superior Court Constitution Act, 1867, 30 & 31 Vict, c 3, operates to retroactively cure the documentary defects under the equitable doctrine of rectifi and must be unequivocally dismissed. As enunciated in MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. v. Simpson, 1995 4 SCR 725, inherent jurisdiction exist the court and the fundamental rights of the subject; it is emphatically not a sword to be weaponized to cure fatal procedural omissions irremediable nullity where foundational jurisdictional prerequisites remain wholly unfulfilled. In accordance with Marcos v. Lad, 2 manipulated instruments into the judicial ecosystem constitutes an abuse of process that triggers the Court's remedial jurisdiction to strik to artificially salvage an extra-judicial fabrication.

PART III: JURISDICTIONAL NULLITIES, SPOLIATION, AND THE PHANTOM PROCEEDINGS

12. An exhaustive forensic and jurisprudential analysis demonstrates that the judicial instrument weaponized to authorize a deprivation of l Endorsement—is an irremediable jurisdictional nullity. The fundamental pillars of the Canadian justice system dictate that the unbrol forms, and a verifiable judicial record are absolute prerequisites to the lawful exercise of penal authority. An Intake Court Endorsement i Law Rules, O Reg 114/99 (the "Family Law Rules"), remaining entirely anathema to the penal architecture of the Criminal Code, RSC 19 Peace sitting in criminal intake possesses no statutory authority, nor any system template within the Integrated Court Operation Ne endorsement affecting the liberty of the subject.
13. Official correspondence remitted by the Ministry of the Attorney General, Crown Law Office - Civil Law, definitively establishes Specifically, the Ministry formally confirmed the absolute absence of responsive criminal court records within the Superior Court of Just the Ontario Court of Justice during the material temporal period comprising August, September, and October of 2024. This complete swearing event purportedly documented within the Information Package is a mere phantom proceeding, thereby proving that the underl standard, lawful intake architectures and was functionally devoid of judicial oversight.
14. Furthermore, the Information Package exhibits textbook manifestations of spoliation—the intentional destruction, alteration, or concealm deliberate excision of the jurat and the statutorily mandated pages of a standard form 2 information (the "Form 2 Information"), f endorsement, completely eviscerates the document's legal validity. By destroying the jurat, the physical record delineating the identities erased, thereby sanitizing the instrument's clandestine origins. Pursuant to the strictures established in McDougall v. Black & Decka destruction or obfuscation of evidence by a state apparatus irreparably prejudices the constitutional rights of the accused to proffer a full a and invites the strongest adverse inferences regarding the integrity of the judicial repository.

15. The exact mechanics of this in camera circumvention have been incontrovertibly established. As graciously confirmed by Ms. Amirtha Management Office (the "RMO"), Court Officer (Toronto Region) Mrs. Frugoni-Rojas personally accompanied the investigating weaponization of this specific court officer as the informant in such an irregular capacity precipitated a wide-scale, libellous defamation the subsequent, procedurally defective filing of the False Information Package within the non-originating Ontario Court of Justice located
16. In strict fairness to Madam Justice Shore, it must be acknowledged that the procedural anomaly of an unrecorded ex parte in camera hea statute. As established in R. v. Lupyrypa, section 507 of the Criminal Code formally mandates strict transcription requirements under se witnesses, thereby technically exempting the unsworn oral allegations of a police informant from mandatory digital recording. Howeve statutory exemption, executing critical adjudicative functions entirely off the record in the secluded confines of a judge's chambers is an u modern judicial standards. As forcefully articulated by the Justice of the Peace Review Council in the disciplinary decisions of Re Fou business in private offices or hallways is highly problematic and is rightfully characterized as risk-management "folly." This substand court of the complete factual matrix, drastically complicating the accused's constitutional right to meaningful appellate review and a environment fundamentally incompatible with transparency.
17. It is formally noted that, had the undersigned possessed the antecedent knowledge that Mr. Sinnadurai functioned simultaneously as cou with him would have ceased forthwith. While certain admissions and representations of assistance were proffered by said counsel, the been independently ascertained without his intercession, rendering his involvement an unnecessary obfuscation.
18. A critical procedural anomaly arises concerning the deliberate misapplication of statutory sections to artificially manufacture exigency. designates the subject as "NFA" (No Fixed Address) upon the primary page, despite the investigating officers retaining acute awarenes residential tribunal proceedings. This deceptive nomenclature was not a mere clerical oversight; it was strategically deployed to satis 507(4) of the Criminal Code. By falsely labeling the applicant as lacking a fixed address, the police actively misled the presiding jurist in issuance of a summons, forcing the immediate authorization of a warrant in the first instance to ensure court attendance. Concurrently, th on a warrant strictly governed by section 507 represents a profound procedural fiction, as no prior appearance notice existed to be jurispru
19. The unauthorized incorporation of this civil document to execute an arrest fundamentally violates the strictures of a lawful form 7 w critical dimensions: it fails to include the statutory designation "FORM 7"; fails to direct the order to peace officers in a specific territori articulate the specific offence in a manner sufficient to inform the accused; fails to outline the statutory legal basis justifying the appr immediately arrest; omits the date of physical signature; omits the locus of signature; and, most fatally, fails to bear a valid, verifiable sign
20. Should the Judicial Branch or its administrative delegates attempt to retroactively invoke section 599 of the Criminal Code to legally jus systemic failure to properly transmit the record from the Superior Court of Justice to the Ontario Court of Justice, such reliance is statu applies solely to matters wherein an accused is or may be indicted. Given the formal election to proceed summarily, section 599 is statu 599 operates conceptually as a formal change of venue provision historically designed to facilitate the geographic relocation of a jury tria intended by Parliament to serve as a de facto administrative mechanism for transferring an initial charging document (Information Packa actual package had to be transferred but it was not. Moreover, without an Order by way of motion (application) of the Crown or accuse remained in the custody and control of the Originating Courthouse with the Originating Court Office. Pursuant to R. v. Mirzoyan, 2019 O 426 (Ont CA), administrative transfers betwixt distinctly legislated judicial regions absent a formal, written transfer order are strictly in emanating from a tribunal fundamentally lacking strict territorial competence is a legal nullity ab initio.

Nota Bene: The "Laying" Versus "Filing" Dichotomy

21. The semantic and jurisdictional distinction between the "laying" of an Information and its subsequent clerical "filing" is a foundational bypassed. Pursuant to section 504 of the Criminal Code, the physical act of laying an Information before a constitutionally appointe independent judicial evaluation of reasonable and probable grounds. Conversely, "filing" constitutes the subsequent clerical submission been irrevocably acknowledged by state representatives that no Form 2 Information was ever filed within the Ontario Court of Justice between August and October 2024. The fundamental failure to properly originate the process via the mandated penal architecture is proceeding, rendering it a pure legal fiction sustained solely by database momentum.

PART IV: CRYPTOGRAPHIC DEPRIVATION, THE CPIC TRAP, AND FORGERY OF THE JUDICIAL RECORD

22. The timeline of the Canadian Police Information Centre (the "CPIC") entry represents a fatal procedural trap into which the investiga authorized, yet unverified oral directive derived from solitary chambers, the officer immediately caused the warrant to manifest upon actionable across the national jurisdiction. Upon subsequent receipt of the formalized, yet fundamentally defective, PDF Intake Cour recognized its structural invalidity. However, the officer was rendered practically functus officio regarding the warrant's existence. La warrant from the CPIC registry without a secondary judicial order formally rescinding it, the officer was caught in a trap of his own maki
23. Because the officer could not rely upon the physical paperwork to withstand the applicant's legal scrutiny in the field, he was compe station, executing the CPIC-based arrest while deliberately suppressing the defective physical document from the accused. This constitu the Criminal Code, which mandates the production of the warrant. This deliberate circumvention elevates the matter from a mere C kidnapping at law, as the mens rea to unlawfully confine was cemented the exact moment the officer recognized the warrant's invalidity y
24. Should the Judicial Branch invoke section 3.1 of the Criminal Code to assert that the clerk of the court was legally empowered to ac Endorsement on behalf of Madam Justice Shore, the jurisprudence dictates a fatal paradox. As established in R. v. Harris, 2004 AB constitutes the moment of legal reality, effectively eliminating the common law delay between judicial utterance and clerical filing. I pronouncement in open court. The digital timestamps embedded deeply within the unalterable metadata of the False Information Pacl precisely to universally mandated unionized lunch closures for court administrative staff. In accordance with R. v. Gledhill, 2020 ONCJ 4 systemic irregularities, this indisputable temporal reality precludes the physical and administrative possibility of a lawful, open-court pro existence of a clandestine, unauthorized adjudicative proceeding conducted entirely without public access, a court reporter, or procedural
25. The typed assertion of a digital signature affixed to the Intake Court Endorsement profoundly fails the cryptographic imperatives comma 5 (the "Canada Evidence Act") and the Electronic Commerce Act, 2000, SO 2000, c 17. The absolute absence of a verified, asymmet embedded within the document's metadata dictates that the instrument is legally unsigned. It may be hypothesized by the Judicial Branch that the anomalous presence of the GrapeCity SDK metadata is merely a benign software update, thereby attempting to rely upon the presumed systemic integrity of electronic documents under section 31.2(1) of the C irreparably rebutted. A genuine judicial electronic issuance utilizes the ICON architecture, which requires a strict, sequential seven- obsolete, six-digit identifier indicative of the FRANK system, which is utilized almost exclusively by the Superior Court family divis conceivable cavil that the document is an amalgamated, stitched instrument. The presence of a fatal "Item already has an owner" object e the document was artificially assembled post-facto by state entities, representing a structural collision between civil drafting practices and
27. As robustly determined in R. v. Smith, 2020 ONCJ 611 (the "Smith Decision") at paragraph 28, the fabrication of signatures and their satisfies the essential elements of forgery. Utilizing a manipulated, pasted-together PDF document to justify the detention of a subject co to section 368 of the Criminal Code. Any administrative reliance upon technical service rules or temporal limitation periods is thoroughly omnia corrumpit (fraud unravels everything); a statutory limitation clock cannot commence ticking upon an order that never legally existe

PART V: COMPARATIVE JURISDICTIONAL INTERPRETATIONS, ULTRA VIRES PRONOUNCEMENTS, AND CJC IMP

28. The systemic procedural subversion identified herein is further contextualized by an established jurisprudential propensity by the p expansive, ultra vires authority when confronted with jurisdictional boundaries. In stark contrast to the restrained, legislatively con application of rule 1(8) of the Family Law Rules operates to unlawfully impose significant monetary penalties without the requisite significant discourse among legal commentators, highlighting a schism in how judges approach non-compliance.
29. In Altman v. Altman, 2022 ONSC 4479 (the "Altman Decision") at paragraph 44, the Honourable Justice Faieta decisively concluded impose accumulating financial penalties for non-compliance beneath the umbrella of rule 1(8) of the Family Law Rules. Justice Faieta m may only ensue under the heightened procedural safeguards of formal contempt proceedings as enumerated within rule 31 of the Fa reasonable doubt and strict compliance with the doctrines established in Carey v. Laiken, 2015 SCC 17.
30. This rigorously exact jurisdictional constraint was identically affirmed by Justice Kraft in Monga v. Monga, 2024 ONSC 761 (the discordant ruling in DiPoce v. DiPoce, 2022 ONSC 2099 (the "DiPoce Decision"), wherein accumulating daily fines of $2,500 were im deeply concerning pattern of administrative and judicial overreach. This jurisprudential propensity to exceed statutory authority rende arrest warrant within a family law registry conceptually consistent with a broader methodology of jurisdictional usurpation.
31. Furthermore, under the Criminal Proceedings Rules, originating documents must be electronically submitted and formally filed with the distinction between submitting a document via email for review and formally filing it upon the docket. The complete circumvention of the coupled with the funneling of the sworn information through improper, civil administrative channels, establishes an absolute jurisdictiona occurred coram non judice (before one who is not a judge of competent jurisdiction), cementing the resultant orders as incurable legal nul
32. Returning to the pervasive administrative delay detailed supra, while Ms. Simion previously represented that a response to this access r clear that this administrative compliance is being actively and improperly impeded by Madam Justice Shore. There exists absolutely n Justice Shore to persistently hold up this process, as she has historically done with the undersigned and other litigants. Strict compli individual is above the law, although Madam Justice Shore's entrenched pattern of lawlessness and the usurping of concurrent jurisdiction
33. While the undersigned respectfully acknowledges the finite resources and time constraints of the judiciary, this pattern of obstruction necessitates immediate rebuke, severe sanction, and constructive remedies to prevent further deleterious harm to the public. The continu malfeasance from public scrutiny cannot be tolerated within a functional democracy.
34. The capitulation of exclusive possession of a software-manipulated instrument to law enforcement absent the retention of an unco constitutes an egregious breach of the Canadian Judicial Council frameworks. As codified within the Blueprint for the Security of Cour (the "Judicial Information") must remain under the uncompromising, exclusive control of the judiciary, adhering to principles analog advanced by the executive branch that the digital transmission of the instrument to law enforcement seamlessly transfers the bur fundamentally misapprehends the constitutional architecture and is intellectually bankrupt. The frameworks establish an indivisible, preserve an immutable master record. A document wielded to orchestrate the deprivation of human liberty cannot simultaneously ex registry.

PART VI: CONCLUDING MANDATES AND PRODUCTION IMPERATIVES

Given the continued passage of time and the failure to provide a response appending the requisite documents to which I am entit herein. While I sincerely appreciate your work ethic and the heavy administrative demands placed upon your office, this prolonge Consequently, I am formally adding the Honourable Mr. David Corbett, Deputy Attorney General of Ontario, to this correspondenc ethical oversight.

I remind all parties of their professional, statutory, and prescribed obligations pursuant to the Public Service of Ontario Act, 2006 comprehensively cited in my Book of Authorities filed in reference to my applications (Form 1 and Form 5) which have been duly Rules.
The promulgation of the PSOA constituted a fundamental paradigm shift toward a decentralized, ethics-centric framework predica institutional accountability, and the preservation of the public trust. In relation to these statutory obligations, I note the following:

1. The Role of the Ethics Executive and the PSC: Pursuant to the Ethics Regulation (O. Reg. 383/07), the Deputy Minister ser public servants within the Ministry. Furthermore, Mr. Corbett concurrently sits as a Commissioner on the Public Service Commiss definitive institutional guardian of the Merit Principle, mandated to ensure that employment practices and executive actions rema transparent.
2. The Structural Duality and Institutional Accountability: The Deputy Attorney General simultaneously acts as the ultimate e personnel (including the Court Services Division) while also serving as the ultimate arbiter of professional ethics. This concentrat configuration. The efficacy of the PSOA relies fundamentally upon the principle that those who exercise broad executive discretio independent ethical standard. This structural duality demands unflinching, objective scrutiny to ensure that the administrative app prioritize executive self-exoneration over the revelation of administrative truth.
3. The Duty of Candour and Administrative Transparency: The pervasive administrative silence documented herein regarding documents represents a systemic failure to rectify the record in limine. I explicitly note and confirm that Mr. Corbett was unequivo destroyed at his direction. Consequently, the executive branch cannot utilize administrative inertia to circumvent a transparent inv documents, which must still reside within your custody and control.
Furthermore, while I am actively exhausting collateral avenues of inquiry outside of this specific non-FIPPA process, those efforts frames of reference to the underlying records. It remains an incontrovertible fact that the judiciary retains absolute custody and co Consequently, the constitutionally protected Open Court Principle applies with full force to these records for the benefit of the pub administrative processes.

The maintenance of this structural duality without rigorous transparency constitutes a barrier to the Rule of Law. I require that the sanctity of the court documents be preserved.

SUBJECT: Kind response to your email of Sunday, March 15, 2026, with thanks

Dear Ms. Simion and Ms. Marjadsingh:

PART I: ACKNOWLEDGMENT OF RECEIPT AND JURISDICTIONAL CRYSTALLIZATION

1. Receipt of the electronic correspondence transmitted on the evening of Sunday, March 15, 2026, is hereby formally ackno promptitude and administrative courtesy demonstrated by the registry. In reciprocating such administrative alacrity, the present exceeding comprehensiveness to guarantee the unequivocally efficient utilization and optimal preservation of public resources. Deputy Attorney General of Ontario (the "DAG"), has been formally excluded from the present and subsequent communication

2. Should adversarial counsel or a Reviewing Court postulate that the unilateral exclusion of the DAG at this embryo presumption that the chief law officer of the Crown is an indispensable party to matters engaging profound constitutional implic fundamentally flawed syllogism that impermissibly conflates executive oversight with the independent administration of substantive constitutional challenge necessitating formal notice to the Attorney General; rather, it constitutes a highly speci internal, exclusive operational custody of the Superior Court of Justice. To invite the executive branch into the judiciary's inte apprehension of state-sponsored documentary manipulation forms the crux of the inquiry—would constitute an egregious governance of these foundational records is assigned exclusively by law to the judiciary, subject to the plenary direction of pursuant to the judicature sections of the Constitution Act, 1867 and section 76 of the Courts of Justice Act, RSO 1990, c C.43.

3. Given the paramount constitutional implications of this matter, the absolute necessity of preserving public resources, ar analogous to a Zero Trust Architecture—as explicitly codified within the Blueprint for the Security of Court Information (exposition of the jurisdictional and procedural irregularities currently contaminating the judicial repository is strictly necessitat artifact presented by an external executive actor can be inherently imbued with a presumption of regularity; absolute verificatic is a strict constitutional imperative.

4. The active engagement of the administration situated upon the first floor of the Superior Court of Justice facility at 361 U functionally solidifies its jurisdictional status. Exhaustive inquiries have unequivocally confirmed that disparate registries Ontario Court of Justice situated in Brampton (Central West Region), the Ontario Court of Justice at 10 Armoury Street, the S and the second and fourth-floor criminal intake registries of the Originating Courthouse—possess absolutely no responsive re the strictures delineated within rule 1.03 of the Criminal Proceedings Rules, the first-floor family registry is ipso facto the origi control of the contested foundational instruments.

5. While it may be postulated by a Reviewing Court that the mere exhaustion of disparate registries does not affirmatively pro a restrictive syllogism ignores the fundamental doctrine of state accountability. The contested instrument bears the explicit non imprimatur of a Superior Court jurist. Consequently, the evidentiary burden shifts irrevocably to the Originating Courthouse to the instrument a complete extra-judicial fabrication. A court of record possesses an inherent constitutional duty to police its unchecked circulation of unverified mandates affecting the liberty of the subject.

6. Furthermore, should adversarial counsel attempt to rationalize the administrative deflection towards disparate venues—mos Armoury Street—by invoking the statutory transfer mechanisms delineated within section 599 of the Criminal Code, such a mandates that the official possessing custody of the indictment, and all corollary writings and exhibits, shall transmit them fort ordered to proceed. However, the activation of this statutory transmission is strictly predicated upon the formal issuance procurement of such an order fundamentally necessitates the prior execution of a formal application or motion, which, sine qua of natural justice, specifically the mandatory provision of formal notice to the accused. It is an incontrovertible factual al Consequently, in the absolute absence of a jurisdictionally sound transfer order, any purported transmission of the acta to an Ipso facto, the unbroken chain of custody and the unyielding obligation of retention remain inextricably affixed to the Originatir

PART II: THE PROCEDURAL ANOMALY AND JURISPRUDENTIAL APPLICATION

7. Pursuant to the judicature provisions enshrined within section 96 of the Constitution Act, 1867, an intake court endorseme an administrative construct inextricably bound to the Family Law Rules, O Reg 114/99, remaining entirely anathema to the Cr penal architecture. A comprehensive jurisprudential review reveals a singular, highly anomalous instance of such terminology the jurisdiction of the Ontario Review Board in the matter of Brown (Re), 2026 CanLII 10959 (ON RB) (the "Brown Decision")

8. In the Brown Decision, the adjudicative body was confronted with an Intake Court Endorsement strictly in a post-arrest co health complexities and psychiatric remands subsequent to a lawful apprehension. Applying the incontrovertible legal principl factual matrix reveals a catastrophic procedural inversion. In the instant matter, the Intake Court Endorsement was weaponized lawful warrant in the first instance. This artificial transposition of a post-arrest, family-centric administrative tool to authorize 2024, renders the instrument manifestly ultra vires and void ab initio.

9. It may be hypothesized by adversarial counsel that such semantic deviations constitute mere clerical variances curable unde of the Criminal Code, or that they are shielded by the inherent jurisdiction of the Superior Court of Justice. This postul administrative and constitutional law that inherent jurisdiction cannot contradict legislative will. The inherent jurisdiction of a su explicit statutory preconditions precedent to the deprivation of liberty. An Intake Court Endorsement inherently lacks the evidentiary assessment commanded by section 504 of the Criminal Code. The formal admission by Mr. Sinnadurai, represen form 2 information (the "Information") was ever formally laid or filed betwixt August and October 2024 entirely eviscerates a of this foundational jurisdictional prerequisite ensures that the resultant adjudicative acts operate strictly coram non judice.

10. Where the Superior Court of Justice is engaged, the strict procedural mandates of the Criminal Code necessitate the "Indictment"). By necessary analogy to the procedures governing informations to obtain specialized search warrants and tele Code, such foundational instruments must still be formally submitted to the tribunal electronically. Pursuant to rule 1.03 of th Indictment explicitly incorporates an Information without restriction. Furthermore, rule 4.10 of the Criminal Proceedings Rule What remains highly conspicuous is the deliberate statutory reliance upon the nomenclature "submitted" rather than "filed" per

11. The act of submitting the instrument ensures unequivocally that the Information or Indictment is immediately deposite Courthouse and its attendant court office. The Criminal Proceedings Rules remain notably silent regarding restrictive tempo reinforcing the absolute requirement of custody and control within the Originating Courthouse. This critical distinction between document must be submitted to a "court of record", a mandate that persists vigorously even by email subsequent to the for posture suggest that after-hours electronic submissions somehow obviate the necessity for institutional retention, such an argu defined by its immutable repository; the electronic submission mechanism merely modernizes the conduit of transmissio institutional custody.

PART III: EXTRA-JUDICIAL BYPASS AND DIGITAL MANIPULATION

12. The forensic trajectory of the documentary evidence dictates that law enforcement personnel actively circumvented the rig extra-judicial, oral directive was purportedly solicited in solitary chambers from a jurist of the Superior Court of Justice, Mada on October 2, 2024. This sequence of events was subsequently corroborated by Superior Court of Justice Recording Managem 2025.

13. This directive was subsequently reduced to writing by the first-floor registry personnel, transmitted electronically to the To malicious digital manipulation via GrapeCity Documents for PDF software. The resultant artifact falsely masquerades as synthesized long after the seminal docket dates of September 23, 2024, and October 2, 2024, and definitively modified subseque

14. It could be advanced that assertions of digital manipulation and extra-judicial oral directives are inherently speculative or requisition premature. Conversely, it is precisely the existence of anomalous, verifiable metadata—specifically the embedde recorded admissions from the Recording Management Office, that crystallizes the absolute legal necessity of this requisition. judicial acta from the Originating Courthouse is the sole, constitutionally acceptable mechanism to definitively rebut this pri spoliation.

PART IV: CANADIAN JUDICIAL COUNCIL IMPERATIVES AND THE SEPARATION OF POWERS

15. The custody, classification, retention, and ultimate transparency of these judicially synthesized documents fall exclusively v the plenary supervisory jurisdiction of the Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Justice. The administration is formally dir Judicial Council frameworks:

a. Blueprint for the Security of Court Information (7th Ed., 2024): Policy 1 explicitly reaffirms that administrative independ policy dictates that judicial information (the "Judicial Information") must remain under the uncompromising, exclusive con possession of a software-manipulated instrument to law enforcement—absent the retention of an uncorrupted master acta with breach of this doctrine.

b. Any proposition that the Canadian Judicial Council frameworks constitute mere administrative guidelines devoid of bind constitutional architecture. These policies are not aspirational directives; they constitute explicit codifications of the unwritten and the open-court doctrine. Consequently, should it be advanced by the executive branch that the digital transmission of the i the burden of archival retention, such an argument is intellectually bankrupt. The frameworks establish an indivisible, non-dele immutable master record of all judicial authorizations.

c. Model Definition of Judicial Information (2020): The contested instrument categorizes strictly as adjudicative information (th 3, encompassing all orders, endorsements, and warrants generated by a judicial officer. Such highly sensitive data cannot be unil

d. Model Policy for the Classification of Court Information (2022): Endorsements and orders are explicitly classified as publi restricted court information (the "Restricted Court Information"). They must be reliably indexed, securely maintained, vigorously uphold the open-court principle. A document wielded to orchestrate the deprivation of human liberty cannot simul within the registry.

e. Model Policy for the Retention of Court Information (2022): Foundational records must be preserved indefinitely to main "Court Record"). A tribunal of inherent jurisdiction cannot lawfully operate upon documents that mysteriously vanish from in utilized by state actors to justify an apprehension.

16. The doctrine of judicial independence is irrevocably entrenched within sections 96 through 100 of the Constitution Act, 18 state demands an impenetrable separation betwixt the executive enforcement apparatus and the adjudicative branch. Registry pe authority of the Chief Justice, are legally bound to insulate this independence by ensuring that all adjudicative records remain sq

PART II: ANTICIPATORY REBUTTALS AND THE EXHAUSTION OF LOGICAL COUNTER-ARGUMENT

6. It is anticipated that opposing counsel, or alternatively, the Presiding Divisional Court President, might hypothesize that the anomalous pres electronic artifact resulting from a province-wide software modernization initiative executed internally by the Ministry of the Attorney G fundamentally eviscerated by the formal, written admission of Ministry representative Mr. Sinnadurai, who unequivocally conceded the abs under the Criminal Code, RSC 1985, c C-46 (the "Criminal Code") involving Court Officer Frugoni-Rojas from August to October 2024. We update, legitimately processed instruments would undoubtedly populate the central ICON repository in their mandated chronological se failure to locate any corresponding documentation, ipso facto, confirms the irregular, localized, and extra-judicial genesis of the False hypothesis intellectually bankrupt and factually unsustainable.
7. Furthermore, it might be erroneously posited by adversarial parties that state law enforcement actors lack the requisite incentive or opera instrument when standard judicial avenues theoretically remain accessible. This postulation fails in limine. The forensic record demonstra apparatuses to rapidly synthesize a warrant to retroactively sanitize an antecedent, unlawful deprivation of liberty, thereby effectively cir artificially establish a status quo ante following a primary intake refusal by a constitutionally appointed judicial officer. The technological object structures provides the exact vector for this jurisdictional overreach, operating in direct, flagrant, and egregious contravention o condemned by the Supreme Court of Canada in R. v. Grant, 2009 SCC 32. It is a well-established socio-legal tenet that state actors, w procedural failures, occasionally resort to extralegal mechanisms to secure process; the forensic fingerprint of GrapeCity SDK is the circumvention.
8. A tertiary counter-argument may suggest that the nomenclature "Intake Court Endorsement" reflects mere localized vernacular inform semantic deviations ought to be overlooked de minimis under the guise of administrative flexibility or clerical variance. This assertion jurisdictional and constitutional consequence. A criminal judicial officer is statutorily bound by the strict construction of the Criminal Code a instrument "on its face"—a highly permissive, administrative standard distinctly and exclusively reserved for civil and family registries opera 194. Conversely, section 504 of the Criminal Code explicitly mandates a rigorous, substantive prima facie inquiry into the evidentiary found process. The conflation of these diametrically opposed standards is not merely semantic; it is indicative of profound, structural cross-contar lower threshold of civil processing has been improperly and unconstitutionally applied to authorize severe, ongoing deprivations of liberty.

PART III: BEST EVIDENCE RULE AND THE INTEGRITY OF ELECTRONIC DOCUMENTS

9. Where a physical warrant of arrest is rendered strategically or administratively unavailable by the Crown—whether through alleged loss, persists actively upon the Canadian Police Information Centre (the "CPIC") registry to justify the continued restriction of an accused's liberty Evidence Rule to systematically reconstruct the underlying judicial acta. The withholding of the primary instrument by state actors demand of any secondary evidence proffered to justify the ongoing detention or encumbrance of the subject, as the state cannot be permit malfeasance.

10. Pursuant to the long-standing common law doctrine governing secondary evidence, the court is authorized to accept clerk's minutes, determinative proof of an outstanding warrant. However, such judicial acceptance is entirely, strictly predicated upon the irrefutable re integrity of the surrogate materials. Where the secondary materials bear the undeniable hallmarks of forgery, post-production manipulation, reduced to an absolute nullity, and they must be summarily struck from the record.
11. Furthermore, pursuant to the explicit provisions of section 31.2(1) of the Canada Evidence Act, RSC 1985, c C-5, read in inextricable c 2000, c 17, the judiciary may theoretically rely upon the statutorily presumed systemic integrity of the electronic documents system to as However, where the electronic system exhibits profound, demonstrable structural corruption—as evidenced by the GrapeCity SDK renderir distinct textual elements, and fundamentally missing cryptographic hashes—the statutory presumption of systemic integrity is irreparably back to the state to prove the instrument's authenticity beyond a balance of probabilities, a burden that simply cannot be discharged using t

The absolute absence of these strictly "PKI") markers within the False Information Package demonstrates incontrovertibly that it was improperly exported from the Case Cen fundamentally compromised by external software prior to its illicit, retroactive deployment against the accused.

PART IV: INHERENT JURISDICTION, EQUITABLE RECTIFICATION, AND SPOLIATION

13. The Superior Court of Justice is a tribunal of inherent, original, and plenary jurisdiction derived directly from section 96 of the Constitutio constitutional jurisprudence such as MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. v. Simpson, [1995] 4 SCR 725, this expansive jurisdiction is not merely a absolutely essential to the maintenance of the rule of law. When a judicial record is discovered to have been fraudulently manufactured, ma state, the Court is bound by a non-delegable, constitutional duty to expunge the corruption and synthesize an authentic record ex de functioning as an engine of fraud, while its own administrative machinery is co-opted for ultra vires law enforcement purposes.
14. It must be strictly delineated, however, that Inherent Jurisdiction and Equitable Jurisdiction are conceptually and functionally distinct c administrative bodies to subvert the unambiguous, mandatory statutory intent of the Criminal Proceeding Rules, nor can they be utilize where none historically or statutorily existed at the time of the purported issuance. Inherent jurisdiction exists as a shield to protect the emphatically not a sword to cure fatal Crown procedural defects or to breathe legal life into an Irremediable Nullity.
15. The equitable remedy of rectification empowers the judiciary to rigorously revise written instruments to accurately reflect the true, historical reality. If a clandestine adjudicative proceeding transpired within private administrative chambers rather than an open court, the judicia instrument that falsely asserts a regularized process occurred in open session. The Court is affirmatively mandated to retrieve the underlyir digital evidence against active, ongoing spoliation, and reconstruct the record ab initio to reflect the true, unvarnished reality of the proceedi
16. As powerfully articulated by the Supreme Court of Canada in R. v. Hayes, [1989] 1 SCR 44 (the "Hayes Decision"), the judiciary possesses to reconstruct a defective, absent, or incomplete record—in that specific instance, a missing jury charge—utilizing narrative reconstruction, foundational principles enumerated in the Hayes Decision apply with equal, if not exponentially greater, force to the foundational instrume authorize the initial deprivation of liberty.
17. Moreover, the robust jurisprudence established in Marcos v. Lad, 2021 ONSC 4900 affirms, without equivocation, that the Superior Cou sanction the fabrication of evidence and the deceptive manipulation of legal instruments. Any institutional refusal or calculated administrative reluctance to immediately preserve these specific, critical electronic artifacts contrave actionable, state-sponsored spoliation of evidence. Furthermore, such deleterious actions unequivocally and instantly trigger the Crown's mandatory first-party disclosure obli expansively prescribed in R. v. McNeil, 2009 SCC 3, thereby rendering the proceedings susceptible to a judicial stay under section 24(1) of

PART V: LAYING VERSUS FILING AND THE COMMENCEMENT OF PROCEEDINGS

19. The semantic, procedural, and jurisdictional distinction between the "laying" of an Information and its subsequent clerical "filing" is n foundational constitutional cornerstone to Canadian criminal jurisprudence. Pursuant to section 504 of the Criminal Code, the physic appointed Justice initiates the proceeding and strictly requires the active, independent judicial evaluation of the informant's reasonable a mandatory, subsequent clerical submission of said authorized document to the Registrar under the Criminal Proceeding Rules to permanen
20. In the present matter, it has been formally, undeniably, and irrevocably acknowledged by state representatives that no Information utilizing Ontario Court of Justice (the "OCJ") or the Superior Court of Justice criminal registries between the material dates of August and Octobe process via the mandated penal architecture is entirely fatal to the legal existence of the entire proceeding, rendering it a pure legal fic judicial authority.
21. Given that the OCJ Armoury Street Courthouse mysteriously and inexplicably generated a novel, secondary file number on October proceeding is strictly necessitated to resolve the procedural paradox. The absolute absence of said antecedent file within the designate highly disturbing conclusion that the proceeding was administratively harbored within the first-floor family registry of the Originating Court Justice Shore presided as the family law team leader within this exact environment, operating wholly outside the purview, scope, and jurisdiction.

PART VI: STATUTORY PRONOUNCEMENTS AND ADMINISTRATIVE DELEGATION

22. It is absolutely imperative to thoroughly contextualize the rigorous application of section 3.1 of the Criminal Code, which dictates that anyt from the exact moment it is pronounced, irrespective of its immediate reduction to formal writing. This provision fundamentally emphasizes t that justice is dispensed publicly and concurrently.
23. In the seminal case of R. v. Harris, 2004 ABQB 205 (the "Harris Decision"), the Court confirmed that the oral pronouncement from the effectively eliminating the historic common law delay between judicial utterance and subsequent clerical filing. Application of this rigid, ter fatal paradox for the Crown: as no oral pronouncement ever occurred within the confines of an open, publicly accessible court, the ips artificially validate the existence of the False Information Package fails entirely in limine.
24. Similarly, in R. v. Brooks, 2021 ONCJ 717 (the "Brooks Decision"), the Court affirmed that section 3.1(2) conceptually empowers the Clerk of the judiciary, but solely to accurately reflect a lawful order already made. However, this narrow administrative extension cannot mag judicial authorization was never lawfully procured, or where the foundational jurisdictional prerequisites remain wholly unfulfilled. The adm conceivable circumstances, eclipse or substitute the non-delegable judicial function of independently assessing reasonable and probable gr
25. Furthermore, in R. v. Gledhill, 2020 ONCJ 412 (the "Gledhill Decision"), the Court forcefully utilized section 3.1 to establish precise, imm section 11(b) of the Charter. The application of the highly scrutinizing analytical framework derived from the Gledhill Decision to the instan embedded deep within the unalterable metadata of the False Information Package manifest at precisely 11:48:25 AM and 12:59:50 PM. This indisputable temporal reality ther of a lawful, open-court pronouncement having occurred at those exact moments, further irrevocably corroborating the existence of a clande solitary chambers entirely without a court reporter, public access, or procedural regularity.

PART VII: JURISDICTIONAL OVERREACH AND IRREMEDIABLE NULLITIES

26. The False Information Package purportedly involves the authorization of a Justice of the Peace who is formally assigned by an Order in 1990, c J.4, specifically and exclusively to the Central West Region (Brampton). Nevertheless, this specific judicial officer purportedly a Region without the absolute requisite geographic transfer order having been formally executed, signed, and gazetted pursuant to section 59

The False Information Package is forensically contaminated with a myriad of irreconcilable anomalies: a non-compliant six-digit identifier in terminology within a purportedly criminal instrument, computation drifts explicitly tied to the specific calculation methodologies of Rule programmatic +1 day algorithmic error unique to civil time-computation software), and the undeniable, deeply embedded programmatic sign

PART IX: CUSTODY, CONTROL, AND CPIC AUDIT TRAILS

33. The governing jurisprudence concerning the production of state and judicial records dictates that overarching legal control, rather than mer standard for compelling production. This fundamental, unyielding principle is comprehensively articulated in Hale v. Ontario Criminal Revie the Supreme Court of Canada in *Canada (Information Commissioner) v. PART X: PUBLIC INTEREST ISSUE – IS THIS A SYSTEMIC ISSUE?

36. It must be forcefully observed that a profound, overarching public interest issue is fundamentally engaged herein, necessitating immediate, circumvention of penal procedural architectures by state actors. The Ministry of the Attorney General Court Services Division guide p asserting that: “Warrants of arrest (also known as Warrants in the First Instance) may or may not be filed with the court... If a warrant of ar only publicly accessible after the accused has been arrested...” This generalized administrative directive is structurally nonsensical and ent mandatorily required by law to securely retain a true, unalterable copy of the foundational acta, irrespective of whether secondary enfo instruments within divergent jurisdictional courthouses.
37. It is respectfully submitted that a documented modus operandi of the TPS has materialized, evidencing a deeply entrenched systemic analogous authorizations equally capable of being issued by a Justice of the Peace or an Ontario Court Judge—directly from judges jurisdiction. The tactical preference for this irregular avenue is manifestly designed to intentionally circumvent the integrated, meticulously lo Mr. Sinnadurai in formal correspondence dated June 25, 2025, and July 4, 2025, the investigating detective or arresting officer receive “Warrant in the First Instance”), which is subsequently and maliciously manipulated via external software prior to its eventual, significantly de

38. In the alternative, should the Crown or the state affirmatively posit that the adjudicative process transpired entirely within the private confi Madam Justice Shore would have necessarily reviewed the sworn Information absent the retention of a physical copy within her predominantly and explicitly in her designated capacity as the Family Team Leader, Justice Shore exercises a highly robust administrative structural assignment and coordination of judicial duties amongst the bench. Given the expansive, time-sensitive scope of this administrativ administrative latitude, time, and inherent authority to rapidly review the Information and issue the corresponding arrest warrant from her ch be expeditiously transitioned along the administrative chain of custody, effectively offboarded to the registry clerks for immediate processing archived within the judicial office. Nevertheless, the mere transience of the physical document across the judicial desk does not conceptua paramount, non-delegable duty to maintain a permanent, immutable record of the authorization within the Originating Courthouse.

LEGAL ANALYSIS: TRANSMISSION OF AN INFORMATION AND SECTION 599

39. The fundamental inapplicability of section 599 of the Criminal Code to the present factual matrix must be unequivocally established. Shoul to legally justify the absolute absence of a transfer order or the systemic failure to transmit the record from the Superior Court of Justice to bankrupt. Section 599(1) explicitly and strictly applies solely to "a court before which an accused is or may be indicted." As the Crown has f not face an indictment. Consequently, section 599 is statutorily inapplicable to summary conviction proceedings in limine. Furthermore, se Venue” provision, historically designed to facilitate the geographic relocation of a jury trial (e.g., transferring proceedings from Toronto to pre-trial publicity or localized risk. It was never intended by Parliament, nor can it be legally contorted by the Crown, to serve as a routin initial charging document from the swearing judicial officer to the provincial intake registry.
40. The procedural architecture dictating the movement of an Information from the Superior Court of Justice to the Ontario Court of Justic jurisdiction of Ontario, all criminal proceedings necessarily commence within the OCJ, irrespective of the ultimate severity of the alle imperative for a warrant, an Information is sworn before a "justice" pursuant to section 504 of the Criminal Code. While this function is cus Court judges are statutorily recognized as ex officio justices. Therefore, an SCJ judge—even one principally presiding upon the family be informant's oath and authorize the warrant. Crucially, however, the mere swearing of the Information before an SCJ judge does not legally ‘ trial purposes. There exists no formal statutory requirement for a court-to-court transfer order. Once the SCJ judge executes the warrant transports that sworn Information and administratively files it with the OCJ clerk's office (the Intake Court). The onus of filing rests absolut

Dear Sirs/Mesdames/Other Gender-Neutral Pronouns:

As promised, please find Tab #1 (Factum For Motion in Writing) for NOM #3 for service upon the relevant persons. The remainder will be provided with the motion record which is Tabs #1 to #21 and enumerated consecutively. I provide this as a courtesy in light of the failure to file a First Defence by the Respondent Insurance Companies and LAT and to "deliver" Notices of Appearances.

As noted and discovered, all of the proven allegations and highly pointed special categories of nullities where the Divisional Court is implicated are unequivocally and absolutely directed at Madam Justice Shore herein.

Thank you.

Yours faithfully,

/KAM

Court file number: DC-24-00000718-00JR
Type of document: Applicant's NOM #3 Motion Record in multiple parts (Part 1 is attached)
Short title of proceeding: McLean v. TDHA et al
Party: Mr. Kevin A. McLean (B.A., J.D, CIM) (mcleansettlement@gmail.com)

TO: RESPONDENTS BUT WAY OF DECLARED BY EMAIL COUNSEL (Including the Respondent Insurance Companies, the Executive Director of the Licence Appeal Tribunal (LAT), the Attorney General of Ontario (AGO), and the Associate General Counsel (AGC) or corresponding office)

TO: THE REGISTRAR, ONTARIO SUPERIOR COURT OF JUSTICE (DIVISIONAL COURT)

SUBJECT: FORMAL SERVICE OF THE APPLICANT'S NOTICE OF MOTION NO. 3 (NOM #3) MOTION RECORD (Part 1 of 2)

I. INTRODUCTORY PROLEGOMENA AND TRANSMISSION OF ACTA

This formal, definitive, and profoundly weighty correspondence is hereby dispatched in rigorous and unwavering fulfillment of the antecedent undertaking to submit the Applicant's voluminous, complex, and dispositive Notice of Motion No. 3 (NOM #3) Motion Record. This compendium is inclusive of all supplementary documentary and exhaustive evidentiary materials which fundamentally and directly pertain to the above-referenced judicial review proceeding. The intrinsic gravity and the consequential implications of the lis pendens—a matter concerning the rightful adjudication of constitutional liberties within an administrative framework—necessitate this immediate filing to ensure that the matter proceeds with the requisite celerity, procedural rectitude, and an absolute fidelity to the principles of justice that underpin the Courts of Justice Act.

Enclosed herewith is the initial, but by no means exhaustive, instalment, which has been designated Part 1, comprising a consequential segment of the complete and comprehensive documentary compendium. This inaugural submission contains the systematically tabulated and consecutively enumerated materials, the entirety of which culminates with the requisite Draft Order, a pivotal jurisdictional document which is logically situated and clearly referenced at Tab 21 of the overall record. This complete filing, spanning several thousands of pages of documentary evidence, constitutes an articulate, forceful, and irrefutable exposition of the compelling legal position necessitating the immediate and substantive intervention of this Honourable Superior Court to address the systemic failures that have precipitated this extraordinary recourse. The Applicant, in the exercise of his constitutional rights, presents this acta to delineate the failures of the administrative process below.

II. PROCEDURAL ELABORATION AND CURIAL AMENITY

It is a substantive matter of formal confirmation that the entirety of the electronically submitted record has been rendered in a state of reasonably precise and navigable electronic bookmarking, thereby efficaciously optimizing the preliminary organization for immediate comprehension. Nevertheless, and notwithstanding the execution of this initial, indispensable preparatory measure, the immense compilation shall imminently undergo further, comprehensive technical refinement. This subsequent, highly specialized refinement involves the rigorous implementation of internal hyperlinking and meticulous cross-referencing across the entirety of the record. The purpose is to ensure the utmost ease of navigation between the Factum, the evidentiary Statutory Declaration (which can be reduced to an appended affidavit if necessary but provided for temporal purposes in such format due to the urgency and necessary, inter alia, return of property or confirmation of destruction by those who de facto and de jure stole from me tainting this proceeding), and the cited authorities.

This technically advanced undertaking is extended not merely as a superficial convenience, but as a deliberate and essential curial amenity, fundamentally designed to construct the most expeditious and intellectually unencumbered intellectual pathway for the Presiding Honourable Justice when engaging with the complex evidentiary matrix. This refinement is a critical mechanism to mitigate the logistical complexities arising from the record's prodigious magnitude, ensuring the Tribunal's constitutional overreach and the Respondents' deleterious conduct are immediately accessible for judicial scrutiny. Furthermore, by reason of the sheer volume of the documentary evidence and legal authorities amassed in support of the Applicant's articulated position, the complete NOM #3 Motion Record is necessarily and pragmatically segregated into discrete electronic parts. This essential segmentation ensures seamless, secure, and efficient transmission to the Court and all interested respondents thereby deliberately obviating any potential for technological impediment or administrative confusion in processing the entirety of the voluminous acta.

III. SUBSTANTIVE PRÉCIS OF RELIEF SOUGHT

It is considered procedurally and substantively imperative that the Honourable Court, alongside all respondents (not technically "parties"), take explicit notice, in limine, of the profound substantive exigencies and fundamental jurisdictional imperatives motivating the NOM #3. The application predicates, with undeniable force, upon the manifest and inescapable necessity for the Divisional Court to exercise its superior, inherent jurisdiction to grant efficacious and essential remedies, the scope of which fundamentally and decisively transcend the statutory limitations and the restrictive, inherent authority of the Licence Appeal Tribunal. The underlying premise, which is capable of an irrefutable extrapolation of legal principles, is that the Tribunal, having acted arguably ultra vires its mandate in its disposition or, more precisely, its failure to properly address constitutional questions, has created a jurisdictional void and a constitutional lacuna that only the supervisory jurisdiction of this Court may fully and finally rectify.

The constellation of relief sought, as meticulously detailed within the Factum of the Applicant, is substantially and logically predicated upon two principal and non-severable components:

1. Constitutional Determination and Procedural Due Process: An unequivocal Order establishing that the determination of the requisite Charter relief shall proceed forthwith, either via detailed written argument or an expedited oral hearing, to be finally adjudicated and definitively rendered by the presiding Divisional Court Judge within a strictly defined, narrow temporal parameter, such as thirty (30) days from the date of the issuance of the Order. This immediate adjudication is not merely preferential but is rendered indispensable to rectifying the current status quo ante, which is undeniably and fundamentally compromised by reason of the protracted denial of the Applicant's constitutional entitlements pursuant to section 7 and section 15 of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. The delay, prima facie, amounts to irreparable prejudice, thus demanding an immediate restoration of procedural fairness and the cessation of the constitutional stagnation currently afflicting the proceeding. The mens rea, or lack of due diligence, demonstrated by the systemic actors in permitting this situation to subsist, justifies this robust judicial intervention.
2. Exemplary Costs and Judicial Rebuke: An Order awarding Full Indemnity Costs against any and all Respondents who elect to oppose, or who demonstrate a failure to unequivocally consent to, the straightforward and self-evident remedial measures herein sought. This extraordinary entitlement is claimed, not capriciously, but on the compelling and judicially recognized basis of the demonstrated and egregious nature of the underlying systemic and procedural misconduct. Such malfeasance has rendered this judicial intervention an inescapable matter of absolute procedural and legal necessity, designed to prevent the perpetuation of injustice. The legal syllogism articulated within the Applicant's Factum posits that such indefensible conduct—conduct which suggests an intentional disregard for the Applicant's constitutional rights and the process of justice—is ipso facto sufficient to justify a punitive and corrective measure on the highest, full indemnity basis. This serves the dual purpose of compensating the Applicant for the unnecessary expenditure of resources and providing an appropriate in terrorem effect against those corporate entities and governmental offices that would otherwise countenance the continuance of the deleterious acta under judicial review.

IV. CONFIRMATION OF SERVICE

Confirmation is likewise unequivocally afforded that due and diligently attested service upon all interested persons and counsel of record, including the statutorily mandated service upon the respective Attorneys General owing to the constitutional nature of the claims advanced, shall be effectuated forthwith. This service will strictly adhere to the modalities prescribed by the Rules of Civil Procedure. Subsequent to the rigorous completion of the entirety of the multi-jurisdictional service process, a formal Affidavit of Service, meticulously documenting precise compliance with Rule 16 and its associated strictures, shall be generated, commissioned, and filed with the Registry. This document will serve as the final and conclusive proof of service upon all necessary persons, thereby perfecting the procedural record for the Court's consideration.

I will continue all due diligence efforts to ensure that the open court principle and the truth seeking function of civil litigation is honoured. To the extent that I obtain further relevant evidence to the same, I will provide it as a courtesy.

Part 2 of 2 shall follow.

Short Title of Proceeding: McLean v. TDHA et al (the "Within Proceeding")

Applicant's Email: mcleansettlement@gmail.com

SUBJECT I: PROVISION OF THE UN-NOTARIZED OR UN-COMMISSIONED AFFIDAVIT OF SERVICE, MULTI-PURPOSED (AFFIDAVIT #28) IN THE WITHIN PROCEEDING SUBJECT II: AMPLIFICATION OF THE EXIGENT CIRCUMSTANCES NECESSITATING IMMEDIATE CONSIDERATION OF THE APPLICANT'S NOTICE OF MOTION (NOM #3) DUE TO FURTHER ACTS OF FRAUD AND MALFEASANCE CONCERNING PERSONAL PROPERTY AND INFORMATION

Dear Sirs/Mesdames/Other Gender-Neutral Pronouns:

I. Introduction, Preliminary Adoptions, and Procedural Ratio

I cordially write regarding the above Subjects of this correspondence. I thank the Recipients in advance for the time and consideration they dedicate to this correspondence and its attachments, which are incorporated herein by reference and/or inclusion. It is fully appreciated that the Recipients operate with finite, yet profoundly valuable, professional and institutional resources, which is precisely why the Applicant has undertaken immense and fastidious effort to research the salient legal issues herein and apply them comprehensively to the extant factual matrix. This detailed approach is not merely an exercise in rhetorical flourish but an attempt to mitigate any potential confusion, ambiguity, or procedural locus standi challenge that might otherwise burden the judicial process and the Recipients' professional obligations. The central procedural ratio of this document is the demonstration of both diligent compliance, through the provision of the Affidavit, and the immediate, escalating need for judicial protection against the egregious acta being perpetrated. This dual emphasis serves to underscore the Applicant's good faith while simultaneously placing the onus of responsibility for the ongoing crisis upon the opposing parties and the relevant judicial administration.

The Applicant adopts all definitions and conventions from previously, indirectly or directly, cited correspondence and all documentation contained within the index to the Applicant's NOM #3 motion record (the "Motion Record"). Specifically, the Applicant provides the following definitions for the purposes of precise legal articulation and consistent terminology throughout the Within Proceeding:

i. Affidavit of Service (the "Affidavit");
ii. Notice of Motion (the "NOM");
iii. Toronto-Dominion Insurance Group of Automotive Insurance Companies (the "TDI");
iv. Further acts of fraud involving my stolen property (the "TDI Karat Theft of this week");
v. Rules of Civil Procedure (the "Rules");
vi. Courts of Justice Act (the "Act");
vii. McLean v. TDHA et al (the "Within Proceeding");
viii. Privacy legislation, including but not limited to the Personal Information Protection and Electronic Documents Act (the "PIPEDA"), and all analogous provincial statutes (the "Privacy Regime");
ix. The agent of the Respondent Insurance Companies, as he once was by LSO Directory, engaged in fraudulent impersonation (the "Epstein Cole LLP Client").

II. Substantive Provision of Documentation and Evidentiary Efficacy: The Nunc Pro Tunc Principle

This correspondence serves as the formal transmittal mechanism for the un-notarized or un-commissioned Affidavit (Affidavit #28) pertaining to the service of documentation in the Within Proceeding. The Affidavit is appended hereto and its contents are incorporated in extenso as if fully restated herein, thereby establishing a formal nexus between the act of service and the judicial record. The provision of this documentation, although presently un-commissioned, does not diminish its inherent factual veracity, which is sworn to by the Applicant. It is a demonstrable commitment to transparency and timely disclosure, reserving the right to file the formally commissioned document nunc pro tunc—literally, "now for then"—a judicial doctrine utilized to remedy procedural omissions where the delay is minimal and does not prejudice the opposing parties (of which there are none). The service of this un-commissioned instrument immediately achieves the substantial compliance required for procedural advancement.

The submission of this Affidavit, notwithstanding its temporary un-commissioned status, is effectuated for multi-purposed utility, primarily to establish prima facie evidence of service as required by the Rules, specifically Rule 16, and to delineate the immutable chronological progression of the Within Proceeding. This preemptive submission is critical; it ensures that the evidentiary foundation for the subsequent procedural steps, including the hearing of the NOM #3, is robustly established and available for the Recipients' immediate perusal and instruction.

Furthermore, it pre-emptively addresses and vitiates any potential procedural challenges regarding timely notification of all interested parties, thereby eliminating opportunities for delay based on technical non-compliance which could, in turn, frustrate the ends of justice and exacerbate the Applicant's ongoing prejudice. The Applicant operates on the principle of uberrima fides (utmost good faith), providing evidence even if a formal technicality is pending, to accelerate the judicial process. This transparent disclosure of the completed service acta mandates that the Recipients cannot plead lack of notice or surprise regarding the impending filing of the Motion Record or the substantive arguments contained within the NOM #3.

III. Exigent Circumstances and the Necessitas for NOM #3: The Constitutional Dimension of Harm and Suspicion

The provision of the aforementioned Affidavit is rendered all the more exigent and pressing in consequence of the egregious and subsequent TDI Karat Theft of this week. This new and reprehensible sequence of events involves further unauthorized access, manipulation, and deprivation concerning the Applicant's personal information (the "Personal Information"), confidential information, personal health information, and sensitive personal information. The continuity of such calculated deprivation and unauthorized access necessitates an immediate judicial response, confirming that the issues at the heart of the litigation are dynamically deteriorating and that the Respondents (or their affiliates) continue to exert an unauthorized dominion over the Applicant's private sphere. This phenomenon signifies a distinct escalation in the perceived risk to the Applicant's safety and proprietary interests, moving beyond mere financial damages to encompassing fundamental liberty and privacy concerns enshrined within Canadian jurisprudence and quasi-constitutional documents.

The judiciary's authority must be exercised in the affirmative to arrest this negative trajectory and re-establish the lawful status quo ante.
Such unauthorized acta directly and severely contravene the fundamental tenets of privacy legislation, including the PIPEDA and the broader Privacy Regime, and the Applicant's status quo ante rights concerning the inviolability of private dominion. The persistence of these unlawful activities, purportedly perpetrated ipso facto against the Applicant, incontrovertibly furnishes additional, compelling evidence that the underlying issues giving rise to the Within Proceeding are not merely historical infractions, susceptible to remedial measures over an extended timeline, but represent an ongoing and deleterious campaign of malfeasance.
Crucially, while the Applicant maintains a rigorous decorum and refrains from unsupported conjecture concerning the precise orchestrators of the current acta, the timing of this new deprivation is deemed most suspicious. The only established and known facts are: (1) the identity of the initial de facto thief, (2) his unequivocal agency tie to the Respondent Insurance Companies (the TDI entities), and (3) the subsequent, clear instance of impersonation executed by the Epstein Cole LLP Client. These facts construct a compelling circumstantial narrative that necessitates urgent investigation and judicial constraint. This ongoing pattern of conduct exponentially amplifies the irreparable harm that the Applicant continues to suffer, moving the matter from one of ordinary dispute resolution to one demanding extraordinary interim and injunctive relief to prevent the complete erosion of proprietary control over personal data. The very integrity of the judicial process is arguably implicated when parties demonstrate such a patent disregard for proprietary and informational boundaries during the pendency of active litigation, manifesting a brazen attempt to circumvent or undermine the authority of the Court. The Applicant posits that this conduct exhibits a sophisticated extrapolation of prior, lesser infractions into a concerted, high-gravity acta demanding judicial scrutiny sine mora (without delay).

IV. Obligation of Mitigation and Procedural Finality: The Equitable Duty

To the extent that any Respondents or their duly authorized agents possess knowledge of this unconscionable conduct and are vested with the ability, power, or operational control to interdict or cease the same, it is requested with the utmost seriousness that active and immediate steps be taken to mitigate the ongoing harm. This active duty of mitigation is a foundational principle of equity and civil responsibility, extending beyond passive cessation to requiring affirmative measures to claw back or neutralize the unlawful informational control. Any willful omission to act in the face of known, ongoing breaches, particularly where such breaches involve sensitive information protected by the Privacy Regime, shall be considered a compounding factor, evidencing a corporate or institutional mens rea in the Applicant's pursuit of aggravated and punitive remedies. The Recipients are hereby put on formal notice of this escalating exposure to adverse findings predicated upon the doctrine of respondeat superior (let the master answer).
Furthermore, the Applicant affirms the procedural finality regarding the evidentiary status of the service: This Affidavit of Service, to be commissioned shortly and without delay, will be formally and irrevocably included under the remaining tab of the Motion Record, subsequent to which the entirety of the Motion Record will be filed with the Court as such. The function of this filing is to ensure comprehensive documentary submission well in advance of the judicial hearing date. A complete and comprehensive copy of the same, including the duly commissioned Affidavit, will be served concurrently upon the Non-Respondents who have already been served with prior documentation in the Within Proceeding, thereby satisfying the procedural imperative of complete documentary dissemination to all interested parties. This meticulous approach ensures that all parties, whether designated as Respondents or Non-Respondents, possess the full evidentiary context required to prepare for the substantive hearing of the NOM #3.

V. Legal Syllogism and Conclusion: The Mandate of Judicial Alacrity

It is a core syllogism that judicial intervention becomes an absolute necessitas when non-judicial entities engage in a continuous course of action that is ultra vires their lawful mandate and which manifests an inherent mens rea—a guilty or deliberate mind—to disregard the Applicant's entrenched justiciable rights. The deliberate and repeated nature of the alleged infractions, extending into the current week, provides a strong extrapolation that the Respondents' activities are calculated, volitional, and systematic, rather than merely negligent or accidental administrative failures. This animus necessitates a judicial remedy of a protective and pre-emptive nature, rather than a mere compensatory one, to prevent further proliferation of the alleged harm. The Court is therefore urged to consider the protective dimensions of the relief sought in NOM #3 as being paramount to the curative, emphasizing the doctrine of irreversible judicial protection.

The factual extrapolations flowing from the TDI Karat Theft of this week demonstrate that the core relief sought by the NOM #3—which fundamentally concerns the preservation of rights, the cessation of unlawful processes, and the maintenance of evidentiary purity—is not merely desirable, but is now a matter of acute and immediate judicial necessity. The current situation demands an adjudication ex parte if the initial circumstances warrant such protective measures, followed by inter partes proceedings at the earliest judicial opportunity, lest the Respondents benefit from the temporal delay inherent in standard scheduling and thereby consummate their alleged unlawful objectives, rendering the Court's future orders irrelevant.

As this NOM #3 was made this week on Monday, the timing of the fraudulent conduct on Tuesday, November 18, 2025, is a pattern as the service of the Motion Record was thereafter.

The further investigations currently underway concerning the TDI Karat Theft of this week shall, without a scintilla of doubt, serve only to buttress the Applicant's assertions of systemic and ongoing breach, providing granular evidentiary detail to the Court. Consequently, the NOM #3 must be prioritized on the judicial docket to address these accumulating and compounding harms in limine (at the threshold). The failure to expeditiously address the substantive legal issues and the underlying causative mechanisms that permit such ongoing breaches risks the judicial validation of an unlawful status quo and potentially renders the ultimate judgment nugatory—a hollow victory devoid of practical effect that severely undermines the purpose of the Act. This would constitute a profound miscarriage of justice that the Applicant seeks strenuously to avoid through this detailed and urgent correspondence.
The conclusions drawn herein are thus rendered self-evident: the necessity of the NOM #3 has been logarithmically elevated by the Respondents' latest purported acta, placing a definitive and urgent onus upon the Recipients to acknowledge the amplified gravity and inherent procedural complexity of the Within Proceeding. The immediate scheduling and contemplation of the relief sought are prerequisites for restoring the equitable balance between the litigating parties and ensuring that justice is not merely promised, but substantively delivered with alacrity and finality.

Yours most appreciatively and gratefully,

/s/Mr. Kevin A. McLean (BA, JD, CIM)

SUBJECT: ENCLOSURE OF THE COMPREHENSIVE NOTICE OF MOTION NO. 3 MOTION RECORD, INCORPORATING METICULOUS HYPERLINKING AND BOOKMARKING ACROSS THE ENTIRETY OF THE TABLE OF CONTENTS AND TABS 1 THROUGH 22, WITH PARTICULAR EMPHASIS UPON THE FACTUM, THEREBY FACILITATING JUDICIAL REVIEW AND EXPEDITING THE DETERMINATION OF SUBSTANTIVE MATTERS.

I. INTRODUCTION AND CONVEYANCE OF MATERIAL

The present correspondence functions as the formal instrument effecting the transmission of the Notice of Motion No. 3 Motion Record of the Applicant, Mr. Kevin A. McLean. This extensive evidentiary and argumentative repository has been prepared with scrupulous, even obsessive, attention to detail, manifesting as an exceptionally robust system of hyperlinking and bookmarking meticulously integrated within the electronic document's architecture. This intricate framework specifically traverses the entirety of the Table of Contents and the sequential contents housed within Tabs 1 to 22. Particular diligence has been exercised in ensuring that the Factum contained therein—the central legal submission of the Applicant—is comprehensively and recurrently cross-referenced with maximum precision to the evidentiary material, thereby establishing a foundation of undeniable factual nexus between the legal submissions and the primary evidentiary foundation.

The preparation of this record embodies a paramount commitment to the principles of judicial economy and procedural transparency, which are recognized as foundational pillars of the Canadian justice system. The exhaustive hyperlinking and bookmarking are not merely superficial aesthetic enhancements, but rather a sophisticated, functional mechanism devised to afford this Honourable Court immediate, seamless, and unerringly precise navigability through the voluminous documentation. The meticulous cross-referencing establishes an unimpeachable factual nexus, thereby minimizing the judicial expenditure of time requisite for the laborious, meticulous verification of every single citation and evidentiary reference. This proactive adherence to the highest echelon of best practices in digital litigation manifests the Applicant's profound respect for the scarce resources of the court system and the imperative for an expeditious, reasoned, and procedurally unimpeachable determination. The conveyance of these electronic copies, executed as a profound gesture of bona fides and professional obligation, underscores the gravity attributed to the unimpeded and accurate apprehension of the material facts and the complex legal propositions proffered. The comprehensive, self-contained nature of this document is ultimately intended to facilitate the Court’s judicious review and to ensure the most efficient possible disposition of this judicial review proceeding, precluding any plausible argument of procedural deficiency or informational opacity.

II. OBSERVATIONS ON THE OCCP PORTAL AND FILING REQUIREMENTS

It is noted that the Case Centre functionality within the MyOntario portal has been duly activated in relation to the Ontario Civil Claims Portal (OCCP), signifying a pivotal and necessary evolution in the digitalization of the Ontario superior courts. This transition requires a corresponding elevation in the technical proficiency of all litigants. Consequent upon this institutional transition, necessary steps shall be undertaken forthwith to achieve complete and proficient familiarization with the intricate procedural and operational dictates of the said portal, ensuring a complete and in limine comprehension of all associated technical specifications, security protocols, and upload idiosyncrasies. This is to ensure strict and unimpeachable compliance with all relevant Rules of Civil Procedure, attendant practice directions, and specialized electronic filing requirements recently promulgated by the Chief Justice.

Furthermore, profound recognition is accorded to the stringent temporal mandate governing the uploading of all exhibits, evidence, and authorities intended for reliance during the scheduled forthcoming written hearing. The temporal exigency—an acute and pressing demand—requires that this complete, compiled upload must be consummated approximately three (3) clear, full days prior to the established date of the hearing, specifically by the two o'clock post-meridiem (2:00 p.m.) deadline. This procedural deadline is understood not as a flexible suggestion or an administrative guideline, but as an unforgiving, absolute threshold. Failure to comply with this electronic filing requirement shall ipso facto jeopardize the admissibility and, consequently, the judicial consideration of the requisite documentation, thereby incurring the non-negligible risk of procedural forfeiture and severely compromising the Applicant's substantive rights to due process. Strict, absolute, and demonstrable adherence to this technological and chronological imperative is therefore guaranteed by the Applicant, ensuring no procedural deficiency shall be imputed to this moving party.

III. JURISPRUDENTIAL CONTEXT AND PROCEDURAL IMPERATIVE

A fundamental jurisprudential principle dictates that a party alleging mala fides or fraud must prosecute its claim within the procedural ambit of the specific proceeding where the alleged fraudulent conduct originated or where the resultant administrative decision was rendered. The jurisprudential foundation for the selection of this forum—the Divisional Court via a JRPA Application—rests upon the established doctrine of procedural propriety, which rigorously constrains attempts at a collateral attack upon prior judgments or administrative determinations. This principle ensures the orderly administration of justice by preventing multiple proceedings challenging the same root issues.

Notwithstanding the potential for a more financially lucrative quantum of damages potentially obtainable through a direct petition sounding in the egregious elements of fraud—a course analogous to the specialized fraud litigation procedural mechanisms extant in the Province of British Columbia—the immutable dictate of Ontario procedural law prevails. This jurisdiction mandates that any challenge predicated upon allegations of mala fides, systemic irregularity, or ultra vires conduct (action taken without legal authority), particularly those possessing the highly prejudicial hallmarks of a fundamental vitiation of process (akin to the requisite standard for mens rea in a criminal context, applied here analogously to corporate or administrative intent), must be formally and singularly adjudicated within the original proceeding or via the prescribed mechanisms of judicial oversight, such as judicial review. Therefore, the prevailing Ontario procedure dictates that the instant JRPA Application is confirmed, a fortiori, as the procedurally correct, statutorily sanctioned, and unavoidable legal container within which the documentation requisite to expose and remedy the alleged ultra vires conduct and subsequent fraud must be definitively filed, addressed, and resolved by the superior courts of jurisdiction. The utilization of this JRPA, therefore, constitutes a meticulous adherence to the established lex fori (law of the forum).

IV. IMPLICATIONS OF NON-FILING OF NOTICES OF APPEARANCE

It is again formally underscored, for the benefit of the Respondent parties and the judicial record, that the Respondent Insurance Companies and the Licence Appeal Tribunal (LAT) have not yet duly filed and delivered their respective Notices of Appearance in this proceeding. The current procedural posture of these entities is consequently drawn into sharp and unambiguous relief by their sustained omission to comply with the mandated initial filing requirements, as set out in the relevant Rules. This sustained absence constitutes a definitive procedural bar, which may preclude their subsequent participation in the substantive hearing of this matter, unless cured by extraordinary judicial dispensation.

Should these parties subsequently determine that a participatory role is desired, or should they seek to make submissions concerning the Applicant's motion, it shall become incumbent upon them to seek formal leave to appear by way of a substantive, documented motion to the Divisional Court. The grant of such extraordinary relief is profoundly discretionary and is strictly predicated upon a demonstration of compelling merit, the absence of any demonstrable prejudice to the Applicant, and the provision of a satisfactory, exhaustive, and credible explanation for the antecedent failure to adhere to the established filing deadlines. This strict procedural sine qua non is essential for the preservation of the integrity and predictability of the litigation schedule and ensures that the status quo ante—the legal position of non-participation and the attendant consequence of limited rights—is not unilaterally disturbed without judicial oversight. The Court's supervisory function is robustly invoked to ensure that such procedural omissions are addressed rigorously and formally, thereby maintaining the fairness and predictability essential to the just administration of justice.

V. RESERVATION OF RIGHTS AND CONCLUSION

The Applicant hereby expressly reserves all rights to rely upon this specific correspondence, as an unequivocal statement of procedural position and intent, for any and all lawful purposes throughout the remaining tenure of this litigation and any derivative proceedings, including its potential tender as evidence of procedural notification.

As previously articulated, and out of an abundance of caution, Part 1 and Part 2 of the meticulously hyperlinked and bookmarked Motion Record shall follow this transmittal as a separate electronic delivery. This division of files is a technical necessity owing to the maximum size constraints imposed by email servers for single attachments.

Sincere appreciation is hereby extended for the professional consideration and immediate attention afforded to this critical material, the prompt review of which is essential to the timely advancement of this judicial review and unravelling the errors that have spawned from Shore J.

I reserve the right to rely on this correspondence for any lawful purpose including the making of the NOM #3 one week ago along with meticulous courtesy notice and service of all documents.

Sincerely,

/s/ Mr. Kevin A. McLean (B.A., J.D., CIM)

SUBJECT: Enclosure of the NOM #3 Motion Record with Extensive and Meticulous Hyperlinking and Bookmarking within the Table of Contents, Tabs 1 to 22, with Emphasis Involving the Factum
Dear Sirs/Mesdames/Other Gender-Neutral Pronouns:

I. TRANSMITTAL OF INAUGURAL COMPONENT SUBMISSION AND EVIDENTIARY AUTHENTICATION

As has been previously and unequivocally undertaken by the undersigned, the instant communication constitutes the formal transmittal of the inaugural component (Part I of II) of the overarching legal submission that will ultimately define the parameters of this proceeding. It is herein confirmed that the appended Factum, which serves as the principal argumentative instrument, has been rendered with a degree of meticulousness that warrants specific judicial consideration and mention, thereby facilitating the subsequent adjudication. The instrument incorporates a comprehensive system of internal hyper-citations that correspond precisely and seamlessly to the requisite Tabs and page enumerations of the voluminous and compendious evidentiary record. This sophisticated referencing structure is deliberately employed to ensure the preservation of analytical continuity and to expedite the comprehension of the judicial officer. Furthermore, external linkages have been duly embedded within the textual fabric of the Factum, constituting the authoritative and jurisprudential bases for every material legal assertion contained within the instrument. This integration ensures that the submitted materials are not merely assertions in vacuo, but are robustly grounded in the prevailing corpus juris and relevant statutory enactments. The submission, by virtue of this intricate compilation and cross-referencing, renders the critical issues immediately and incontrovertibly justiciable, compelling the necessary judicial attention to the merits of the proposition advanced.

FORMAL ATTESTATION OF SERVICE, DEEMED ACCEPTANCE, AND PROCEDURAL ACQUIESCENCE

It is hereby formally and with requisite solemnity attested, as of the current date of execution of this document, that the process of service has been duly and properly effected upon all designated persons or entities, strictly pursuant to the procedural mandates stipulated in the Rules of Civil Procedure and/or any ancillary Rules of Practice governing these proceedings. In furtherance of the paramount principle of full and candid disclosure to the Court, it is confirmed that a multiplicity of various recipients have provided an acknowledgment of receipt, primarily, though not exclusively, in the form of automated electronic replies, which nevertheless fulfill the threshold requirement for proof of delivery.

Crucially, a material assertion, with profound procedural implications, is advanced: None of the designated Non-Respondents, within the established style of cause, have registered any formal controversy, objection, or substantive dispute regarding the facts, assertions, or evidentiary material proffered for the Court's contemplation. This deliberate, calculated absence of opposition or formal rebuttal, ipso facto, gives immediate rise to the necessary prima facie presumption of an implicit and legally binding acceptance of both the efficacy of the service process and the underlying substantive accuracy of the materials transmitted. This non-action is not construed as mere passivity, but rather as an affirmative procedural acquiescence, which compels the deduction that all served instruments are deemed procedurally sound and materially accurate, thereby constituting a fundamental and irrevocable procedural waiver of the right to contest the initial introduction of these materials in limine.

III. SYLLOGISTIC EXTRAPOLATION ON JUDICIAL SERVICE AND DOCTRINE OF AGENCY

Of paramount significance is the formal attestation regarding the demonstrable efficacy of service upon the Honourable Madam Justice Shore, the judicial officer seized of this matter. It is herein confirmed that Mr. Sinnadurai, Esquire, a barrister and solicitor, and his professional assistant, Ms. Kwok—with whom a professional acquaintance has been established since the summer of MMXXV and subsequently—have not, at any juncture, registered any dispute concerning the propriety or the legal sufficiency of service effected upon Her Ladyship through their office. This service, it is syllogistically and logically posited, is validated by the undeniable professional retention of Mr. Sinnadurai as retained counsel to Her Ladyship in the context of this specific file and/or the related proceedings.

The established doctrine of agency dictates that service upon retained counsel constitutes effective service upon the client, and in this judicial context, this principle stands unassailable. Therefore, the antecedent delivery of duplicative documents to the respective Managers of Court Operations for the Divisional Court and the Superior Court of Justice (SCJ) at 361 University Avenue—which constitutes the non-Divisional Court location of the Honourable Madam Justice Shore's chambers—is, by this confirmation of counsel’s authority, deemed an ultra vires and superfluous administrative act. The independent undertaking of such delivery would be entirely lacking the necessary legal actus or practical utility, as the matter of notification and receipt has been definitively concluded through counsel. The status quo ante—the state of procedural sufficiency—is thereby maintained solely by this singular, effective, and procedurally compliant service upon Her Ladyship's authorized representative.

IV. CONCLUSION AND COMPULSORY PRESUMPTION OF NON-OPPOSITION

In the eventuality that no substantive motions—including, but not limited to, applications for directions, motions to strike, or any request for interim or interlocutory relief that might impede the scheduled progression of this matter—are duly filed by either the Respondent Insurance Companies and/or the Licence Appeal Tribunal (LAT) within the requisite temporal framework established under the Rules for the proper service and subsequent commencement of such applications, then the undersigned shall, in application of established and compelling legal principles, invoke the formidable presumption of non-opposition with respect to Notice of Motion No. 3 (NOM #3). This presumption is not merely ceremonial; it constitutes a definitive legal entitlement, thereby rendering NOM #3 uncontested and ripe for immediate disposition by the Court based exclusively upon the submitted materials.

A certified true copy of the within Transmittal and formal Attestation shall be forthwith remitted to all designated persons or entities as Non-Respondents. This serves as supplemental evidence of service and provides the requisite and explicit notification of the procedural consequence—the inevitable invocation of the foregoing presumptions—ensuring that no subsequent objection pertaining to lack of notification may be entertained in limine by the Court.

Respectfully Submitted,
Mr. Kevin A. McLean (B.A., J.D., CIM)

INTRODUCTION AND ADOPTED DEFINITIONS

I cordially write regarding the above Subjects of this correspondence, the cumulative import of which necessitates an expeditious and judicious resolution by this Honourable Court. I tender my sincerest appreciation in limine for your valuable time and considered deliberation concerning this material correspondence and its contemporaneous enclosures, including the designated Part 2 of the Motion Record and the in force Divisional Court JRPA Guide. Acknowledging the finite, yet unequivocally valuable, resources at the Court's disposal, it is incumbent upon me to confirm that I have devoted an immense quantum of time to the exhaustive research and methodical analysis of the complex legal issues herein delineated, and their appropriate application to the intricate factual matrix of this file, thereby ensuring maximal efficiency in the judicial process. This effort is not merely about procedural compliance, but about safeguarding the integrity of the judicial review process itself, which is a cornerstone of public confidence in administrative law. The function of judicial review, as the primary mechanism for the supervisory jurisdiction of the superior courts, is to ensure that administrative bodies, such as the LAT, operate within the boundaries of their statutory mandate and adhere to the fundamental tenets of natural justice. This proceeding, therefore, is fundamentally resolution-oriented, seeking judicial pronouncements that define the legal boundaries of procedural regularity and compel adherence to the governing Rules. This is necessary to obviate the need for protracted and superfluous litigation stemming from the initial, profound procedural irregularities, and to restore the Applicant's right to an unblemished review of the administrative decision-making process.

The resolution sought in this correspondence is fundamentally resolution-oriented, aiming to secure judicial pronouncements that define the legal boundaries of procedural regularity and compel adherence to the governing Rules. This is necessary to obviate the need for protracted and superfluous litigation stemming from the initial, profound procedural irregularities. Furthermore, and in the interest of terminological precision and economy of expression, I formally adopt all definitions, whether explicitly, indirectly, or directly, contained within previously exchanged correspondence and documents forming the record, including but not limited to the Rules of Civil Procedure (the "Rules") and the Judicial Review Procedure Act (the "JRPA").

The present correspondence operates with a tone that is very formal, yet simultaneously gracious and fundamentally resolution-oriented, maintaining a strictly cognitive and non-emotional posture throughout its articulation, thereby ensuring the discourse remains immutably anchored in the objective reality of legal and procedural fact. This approach is paramount to facilitating the prompt administration of justice.

Status Update and Definitive Conclusions Regarding Extra-Judicial Proceedings

The Locus Standi of the Case Conference and Procedural Mens Rea

As previously communicated, please find Part 2 of 2 attached (the "Attachment"), which contains supplementary evidence integral to the Applicant's position. Subsequent to my prior communication, I have secured confirmation via the specific auto-reply received from the representative of Tribunals Ontario (the "Tribunals"), Ms. Maciel, who was the individual charged with the attempted service of the Notice of Application (the "NOA") for the Licence Appeal Tribunal (the "LAT"). The confirmation of Ms. Maciel's confirmed and indefinite absence, devoid of any stipulated return date for [illegible]mption of duties, precipitates a foundational procedural and legal impossibility regarding the requisite filing of the affidavit of service for the NOA. The successful and demonstrable service of the originating process, evidenced by a properly sworn affidavit, is not merely a formality, but a jurisdictional prerequisite (sine qua non) for the validity of all subsequent procedural steps; the absence of a competent affiant renders this fundamental step incapable of perfection, thus vitiating the procedural chain in toto.

The inescapable syllogism, therefore, is that in the complete absence of an affiant competent to execute the affidavit of service, the request by the LAT for a case conference on December 3, 2024, at approximately 3:30 p.m., was void *ab initio, possessing no legal force or effect from its purported inception. This defect is patent on the face of the record, as the Court could not have been presented with the necessary proof of jurisdiction over the Respondents. Ipso facto, it is axiomatic that no case conferences could have been lawfully or properly conducted in the complete absence of a perfected service record, as the Tribunal lacked the demonstrable jurisdiction over the parties mandated by the Rules at that material time. The consequence of this profound procedural nullity dictates that the legal status quo ante must be rigorously restored, which necessitates completely disregarding the purported extra-judicial proceedings and any directions that may have stemmed therefrom. The inherent flaw is that the Tribunal's action, however well-intentioned, fails the test of procedural vires when measured against the mandatory requirements of the Rules. A proceeding cannot be validly commenced without proof of service on the opposing party, as the court's jurisdiction over that party is derived from the fact of notice. The very concept of procedural fidelity demands this conclusion, as the mens rea (intent/knowledge) of the moving party (the Tribunal) cannot supersede the explicit dictates of the Rules concerning service. Furthermore, allowing directions derived from a void ab initio conference to stand would undermine the principle of judicial economy by injecting uncertainty into the procedural framework, inviting further litigation on collateral issues of validity.

Unavailability of Digital Recordings, Judicial Scrutiny, and Ultra Vires Actions

The substantive relief sought pertaining to the mandatory obtainment of the transcripts from those purported case conferences remains entirely extant, retaining its full legal force, especially as Madam Justice Shore has heretofore declined to judicially acknowledge the existence or content of the same. This judicial non-acknowledgement, while perhaps intended to minimize judicial entanglement in extra-procedural matters, paradoxically creates a record gap that obstructs the Applicant's ability to demonstrate the full procedural history of the dispute. The integrity of the appellate record, which must be complete and accurate, is a fundamental right guaranteed by the principles of natural justice and procedural fairness. The Applicant's right to review the totality of the administrative record, including all interactions that influence the progression of the judicial review, is not discretionary.

My due diligence efforts are continuous and exacting, seeking to compel the production of this essential documentation, which is required for a complete record of review. Furthermore, I have been demonstrably unable to obtain the Compact Disc (CD) copies of the digital recordings, notwithstanding the fact that I remitted the requisite payment to secure this material. The continuous denial of delivery, coupled with the retention of the remitted funds, constitutes a prima facie breach of contract and an affront to the principles of natural justice. It remains sub judice and highly problematic why Madam Justice Shore has ostensibly taken the position that I should be deprived of funds paid and unreturned while simultaneously being denied receipt of the digital recordings to which I am definitively entitled by the executed Request Form Undertaking of October 2025. This situation constitutes an ongoing denial of the right to access the full administrative record under section 10 of the Judicial Review Procedure Act and is a direct impediment to the Applicant's ability to conduct effective review. The denial of this paid-for evidence, which forms part of the administrative record (however flawed), constitutes an action that may be considered ultra vires (beyond the powers) the authority conferred by the JRPA and the inherent principles of natural justice, specifically the right to a fair hearing and the ability to review the complete record without impediment. A core tenet of procedural fairness is the expectation that the fruits of a legally binding agreement (the undertaking and payment) will be delivered promptly. The denial of the full administrative record for review violates the principle of completeness, which is essential for effective appellate or supervisory review and the constitutional right to access the courts. If a thirty (30) day period was stipulated for the provision of the recordings, that period has demonstrably elapsed without adherence to the procedural covenant, constituting a breach of the undertaking. Furthermore, the argument that these were in camera proceedings does not diminish the need for transcription, as the Applicant retains the right to review the transcript for errors of natural justice, such as procedural unfairness, bias, or the failure to give proper deference. Consequently, further due diligence efforts are continuing with the Office of the Public Complaints Commissioner (the "OPCC") in relation to the compulsory securement of the recordings via Zoom or other verifiable means, ensuring the principle of audi *alteram partem (the right to be heard) is not vitiated by the withholding of the record. The Court's intervention is required to prevent a miscarriage of justice predicated upon the incomplete administrative record, and to compel the immediate release of the paid-for recordings or the return of the funds remitted.

Procedural Compliance and the Evolving Divisional Court JRPA Guide

NOM #3, the Compendium Requirement, and Procedural Symmetry

In relation to Rule 4.05.3 of the Rules of Civil Procedure (the "Rules"), the ultimate deadline for filing is noted to be 2:00 p.m. three days prior to the mandated hearing date of December 3, 2025. This Rule provides a clear procedural timeline which must be rigorously respected. It is further noted that if the Notice of Motion #3 (the "NOM #3") is unopposed de jure (as a matter of law), a compendium is not a mandatory prerequisite per se. Nevertheless, the Motion Record for NOM #3 has been deliberately and sufficiently hyperlinked and meticulously bookmarked in a comprehensive "compendium style," thereby proactively mitigating any administrative burden upon the Court and fulfilling the spirit, if not the strict letter, of the requirement. This proactive submission underscores the Applicant's commitment to judicial efficiency and the principle of good faith litigation. To the extent that a formal "Compendium" is not de jure required due to the presumable absence of opposition—which would necessarily be the case unless the Respondent Insurance Companies and the LAT were able to secure an ancillary order in limine—I shall nonetheless include all filed documentation relevant to the hearing for NOM #3. This approach ensures procedural symmetry, eliminates the potential for a subsequent technical objection based on form, and facilitates the Court's ready access to the relevant evidentiary landscape. The purpose is to make the conclusions of the motion self-evident through the organization of the materials, thereby promoting both judicial and litigant efficiency.

The Retroactivity of Practice Guides and Lex Prospicit Non Respicit

The Divisional Court Judicial Review Procedure Act Guide (the "JRPA Guide") has undergone recent, substantive amendment, specifically in relation to hyperlinking, which necessitates that the in force version at the material time—the version which governed the Applicant's commencement of the JRPA Proceeding—be furnished to the presiding judicial officer. The legal principle of prospective application must govern this dispute, as any contrary finding would violate the right to procedural fairness. I shall presume that NOM #3 will be unopposed relative to the Confirmation of Motion required, and shall incorporate the same into the Motion Record for NOM #3 along with a physical exemplar of the JRPA Guide as it existed prior to the amendments most recently effected in 2025, or as it is demonstrably reflected in the metadata of late June 2025.

The alterations are most noticeable in that the iteration of the Guide to Judicial Review in Divisional Court not in force at the relevant time, represented as of late June or early July 2025, includes new and comprehensive sections regarding judicial case management that appear to impose new scheduling requirements:

"Case Management
Once you commence your application for judicial review or your motion for leave, there are steps that you must take regarding the schedule for the exchange of court documents and any preliminary issues. These steps are set out in the Consolidated Practice Direction for Divisional Court Proceedings.
All proceedings in the Divisional Court are subject to judicial case management. The purpose of case management is to facilitate access to justice through the timely adjudication of proceedings in the Divisional Court in a cost-effective and proportional manner.
This means that you may receive written directions from a judge and a judge may direct that there will be a case conference prior to the hearing of your motion or application.
As part of this process, the time for the delivery of court materials may be determined or changed as set out in directions from the Court. Other issues may be addressed, as set out in the judge's directions.
Directions are normally sent to the parties by email."

It is a self-evident legal conclusion that a non-statutory "guide" is not imbued with retroactive effect, a principle encapsulated by the ancient legal maxim lex prospicit non respicit (the law looks forward, not backward). This maxim is fundamental to the rule of law, ensuring legal certainty and fairness. Procedural rules are generally presumed to be prospective in their operation unless the language compelling retrospective application is explicit and unambiguous, a condition not met by a non-statutory practice guide. While I maintain a vigorous academic disagreement with certain elements of the language concerning case management per se contained therein, the merits of that discursive point are presently moot as the Guide cannot retroactively cure procedural defects in the case at bar, nor impose obligations that did when the proceeding was initiated. I remain firmly of the view that the LAT retains the mandatory, statutory obligation to file the record of proceeding forthwith as dictated by the JRPA prior to the guide's amendments, and this statutory duty cannot be superseded by a practice direction.

Case Management Assignment: The Jurisdictional Flaw Under Rule 38.07(2)

The purported exercise of judicial authority in assigning this proceeding for case management or issuing written directions must be rigorously scrutinized against the jurisdictional pre-conditions set out in Rule 38.07(2) of the Rules of Civil Procedure. This Rule governs the point at which a judge may assign a proceeding for case management and states:

"No Consent

(2) At any time on or after the filing of the first defence in a proceeding to which this Rule may apply, a regional senior judge or, subject to the direction of a regional senior judge, any judge or associate judge may assign the proceeding for case management under this Rule,

(a) on his or her own initiative; or

(b) on the request of a party or on motion if the court requires it." (Emphasis added)

The language of Rule 38.07(2) is clear and dispositive: the power to assign a proceeding for case management, whether on the Court's own initiative or upon the request of a party, is contingent upon the jurisdictional trigger event: the filing of the first defence. As established in the conclusion regarding NOM #2, the LAT and the Respondent Insurance Companies have demonstrably failed to file their Notices of Appearance (NOAs) or their First Defence. This failure is a matter of irrefutable record, legally corroborated by the adverse inference doctrine arising from their sustained silence and inability to cure the defect nunc pro tunc.

In the context of a Judicial Review Application, the "First Defence" is not merely an equivalent to a Statement of Defence, but is typically marked by the filing of the Respondent's Record and/or Factum, or at a minimum, the Notice of Appearance required under the Rules to acknowledge the proceeding and indicate an intention to defend the administrative body's decision. In this case, the complete absence of any responsive document that constitutes a "First Defence" means the fundamental procedural trigger required by the Rules for the commencement of case management has not been pulled. Consequently, the assignment of this proceeding for case management, and any judicial directions issued pursuant thereto, were procedurally and jurisdictionally flawed, as the prerequisite for assigning the proceeding for case management under Rule 38.07(2) had not been met. While a judge possesses the inherent authority to manage proceedings, this power cannot be permissibly exercised in contravention of a clear and mandatory procedural precondition established by the Rules themselves, which are statutory instruments authorized by the Courts of Justice Act. The action of assigning the proceeding for case management, and subsequently issuing directions based on that assignment, was void *ab initio, as it lacked the fundamental jurisdictional basis of a filed "First Defence." The Rules are designed to provide a predictable framework, and their contravention by an administrative assignment renders that assignment inherently defective, necessitating a return to the status quo ante where the Respondents are required to comply with their basic obligations before judicial management can commence.

The Limits of a Judge's Authority and the Hierarchy of Judicial Assignment

Furthermore, even assuming, for the purpose of argument alone, that a proceeding could be assigned for case management without the requisite filing, the subsequent direction by Madam Justice Shore to assign steps to herself as a particular case management judge represents an impermissible assignment of authority. Rule 38.07(2) indicates that a judge may assign the proceeding for case management, which is purely an "assignment for case management" *per se. The assignment of all subsequent steps to a particular judge is typically reserved for the Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Justice (SCJ) or the Associate Chief Justice of the SCJ—the quintessential President and Vice-President of the Divisional Court, an intermediate appellate court. This distinction is critical: the power to administratively designate a judge to take charge of a file for all purposes rests with the designated leadership of the Court, not with the individual judge. The Divisional Court, unlike the general SCJ, is a court of intermediate appeal and its internal administration must adhere strictly to the established protocols for judicial assignment. While a judge may be designated as the case management judge after the initial assignment is properly made, they cannot unilaterally self-assign the entirety of the proceedings to themselves and simultaneously issue binding directions absent the jurisdictional foundation (the filed defence). Madam Justice Shore's purported written directions or order directing a case conference prior to the hearing of the JRPA Application are therefore without lawful procedural foundation, reinforcing the Applicant's argument that these extra-judicial proceedings are a complete legal nullity. The principle of delegatus non potest delegare (a delegate cannot delegate) may not strictly apply but that the principle that judicial authority must be exercised in accordance with established rules of assignment is paramount to maintaining institutional integrity.

Non-Compliance with Case Center: Denial of Procedural Parity and Impediment to Acta

Notwithstanding the foregoing, the Case Center language within the prior JRPA Guide unequivocally stipulated that I was entitled to an invitation to Case Center upon the initiation of the JRPA Application, an entitlement that was denied in this proceeding:
"Case Center is an online document sharing platform which allows the Divisional Court to electronically view your court materials. The Divisional Court uses Case Center for both remote and in-person hearings. After you have brought an application or motion for leave, you will receive an email to register for Case Center and upload your materials. There is no fee to use Case Center".

The non-compliance inherent in the failure to extend such an invitation constitutes a systemic deficiency in the administration of the file, representing a matter of profound disappointment and, more critically, a denial of procedural parity with litigants whose proceedings were administered correctly. This denial of electronic access has forced the Applicant to engage in more cumbersome, paper-based processes, impeding the efficient acta (acts/transactions) of the litigation. This systemic deficiency is formally directed towards Madam Justice Shore's oversight of the matter. The quoted language under the "Case Management" section of the Divisional Court Guide to Judicial Review, which was not in force at the relevant time, serves as unequivocal proof that the JRPA Guide did not exist in that specific iteration at the time of the dispute, highlighting the fluid procedural environment. Consequently, the procedural irregularities witnessed here are symptomatic of a transition period, and it appears this NOM #3 and the attendant JRPA Application may represent the last vestiges of a "dying breed" of proceedings predating the current, formalized procedural regime of judicial case management. This non-compliance is highly prejudicial, forcing the Applicant to shoulder unnecessary burdens of manual document management and service, a condition not suffered by those whose files were administered correctly via the Case Center platform.

The Hierarchy of Law and the Limits of Inherent Jurisdiction

Upon a balance of probabilities, the quoted language attributed to Madam Justice Shore may well have reflected her desired procedural status quo at the time of the dispute; however, judicial preference does not possess the force of the governing law. I shall therefore make express reference to the legal principles concerning retroactivity versus retrospectivity versus the proactive force of legislative and regulatory instruments, and the impact upon procedural due process.
Legal Hierarchy of Authority:

1. Statute (Judicial Review Procedure Act): Supreme expression of legislative will, binding on the Court and all parties.
2. Regulation (Rules of Civil Procedure): Statutory instrument authorized by the Courts of Justice Act, governing the conduct of all civil proceedings.
3. Practice Direction/Guide (Divisional Court JRPA Guide): Administrative tool to aid in the application of the Rules, possessing no statutory authority to override the Statute or the Rules, and therefore having only persuasive, not prescriptive, force.

It remains my substantiated view that particular provisions of the current Divisional Court JRPA Guide are not perfectly aligned with the Rules, nor with the enabling Judicial Review Procedure Act (the "JRPA" or the "statute"), nor with the foundational common law. The JRPA Guide is not a regulation, is not subsidiary legislation, and does not constitute "source law"; its function is descriptive, not prescriptive, and must yield to the higher sources of law. As such, it is subject to the Rules of Civil Procedure, which are in turn subject to the statute, the ultimate interpretation of which is subject to the common law. In the event of an irreconcilable conflict between the common law and the principles of equity, equity prevails (lex ferenda). Notwithstanding this hierarchy, inherent jurisdiction, while vast and essential for the functioning of the Court, cannot be permissibly utilized to override clear Legislative will as expressed in a statute or its attendant regulations; to do so would be an act of legislative ultra vires and an overreach of judicial authority, potentially resulting in an appealable error and a denial of due process. The reliance on an administrative Guide to retroactively impose case management, particularly one that undermines a mandatory prerequisite of the Rules, is an application of lex obliqua (oblique law) rather than lex recta (straight law). The maxim lex prospicit non respicit confirms that the Applicant's procedural rights must be assessed based on the law and rules in force at the time the cause of action accrued and the proceeding was commenced, not by subsequently amended administrative directions.

Confirmation of Procedural Diligence

I provide the preceding exposition to confirm the rationale for the deliberate omission of hyperlinks in the JRPA Guide references within the Motion Record served upon the relevant Respondents and Non-Respondents, as the inclusion would have improperly directed the reader to the incorrect, amended JRPA Guide. For the Court's convenience, I confirm that the correct, in force version of the Divisional Court JRPA Guide (as applicable at the material time) is enclosed with this correspondence, along with Part 2 of 2 of the Motion Record. This meticulous approach ensures procedural integrity and avoids any possible confusion regarding the governing procedural framework at the material time, whilst maintaining meticulous attention to ensuring perfected service and notice, notwithstanding the potential relief offered by the provisions of Rule 38.07. All such steps are taken out of an abundance of caution and are undertaken without any concurrent or implied waiver of my substantive or procedural rights, which are preserved in toto.

Conclusion on NOM #2 and NOM #3 and Confirmation of Motion Compliance

I note, regarding the Draft Order for NOM #2, that I was operating under the misapprehension, a misconception consistent with my post-March 2025 discovery evidence, that the LAT and the Respondent Insurance Companies had successfully filed their Notices of Appearances (the "NOAs"). This assumption was demonstrably not the factual status quo, as corroborated by the adverse inference doctrine. Approximately one month has now elapsed since I sought definitive proof or disproof of the filing and service of their NOAs. The complete absence of proffered evidence, combined with the subsequent inability of the parties to file nunc pro tunc (now for then), leads to the unequivocal conclusion that the NOAs were never filed, a finding which must be drawn by the Court in the interest of procedural clarity. Furthermore, the LAT's request for a case conference was procedurally predicated upon the "filing" of a First Defence at the time of the request, a requirement that was not met, as detailed extensively in the analysis of Rule 38.07(2). The Respondent Insurance Companies conspicuously refrained from participating in the process concerning potential preliminary issues. Consequently, in the absence of the filing of a First Defence or any NOA, the Respondents could not have lawfully received notice of any procedural steps or documentation within this JRPA Proceeding, thereby rendering their formal participation severely curtailed.

Moreover, in light of the requirements under Rule 37.10.1 regarding the Confirmation of Motion, I note the following procedural reality:

> "Confirmation of Motion
> 37.10.1 (1) A party who makes a motion on notice to another party shall confer or attempt to confer with the other party and shall, not later than 2 p.m. five days before the hearing date,
> (a) give the registrar a confirmation of motion (Form 37B) by,
> (i) sending it by email to the court office, or > (ii) leaving it at the court office; and > (b) send a copy of the confirmation of motion to the other party by email."

I submit that, pursuant to the unique and compelling factual acta herein, the procedural landscape was definitively established not merely by the filing and payment for the Certificate of Perfection, but ipso facto by the subsequent, protracted cessation of any formal or active participation by the Respondents. This confluence of events—the complete perfection of the record antecedent to the Listing for Hearing—has consequentially precluded the formal, regulatory definition of opposing "parties" as contemplated by the Rules of Civil Procedure. The extended and considerable delay in the judicial process has rendered the appearance of any putative Respondent moot for the purposes of immediate procedural determination.

The absence of the requisite procedural condition, specifically the lack of a Listing for Hearing, combined with the de facto non-appearance of Respondents subsequent to the completion of the Certificate of Perfection, dictates a finding that the strict application of subsection 37.10.1(b) is presently vitiated and rendered nugatory. It is a fundamental legal principle that the strictures of the Rules cannot be imposed where the factual and procedural basis for their operation does not in effect, exist. My conclusion, therefore, becomes self-evident: the extant Rule 37.10.1(b) is, under these singular circumstances, utterly superfluous.

The status quo ante prevailing at the material time is demonstrably reflected in the then-operative Divisional Court Judicial Review Practice Guide, a relevant regulatory instrument. This Guide articulated a precise circumscription on the scope of mandatory judicial case management, unequivocally stating that: "Most motions and applications for judicial review in the Divisional Court are subject to judicial case management." The employment of the quantifying adjective "Most" is, prima facie, determinative; it prohibits an interpretation that would compel the absolute and universal application of case management to all matters.

The judicial pronouncement articulated in the Intake Court Endorsement [sic] dated February 3, 2025, whereby a mandatory and universal proposition was purportedly adduced, exhibits a profound discrepancy with the official and contemporaneous regulatory framework. It remains beyond my comprehension from whence this verbatim quotation was derived, yet the resulting necessity for comprehensive, painstaking research—a dedication spanning from May 2025 to the present date—has been compelling.

I further submit that the highly specialized and erudite registry staff, including Ms. Gentles with whom I became acquainted during the summer and autumn of 2025, would have possessed an intimate and unequivocal knowledge of the content of the Rules of Civil Procedure and the Divisional Court Practice Directions. Their expertise would preclude any assumption that such universal and mandatory language was contained within the official regulatory instruments. Consequently, the application of such a directive, if it purports to impose an obligation outside the express terms of the Rules or the Guide, is ultra vires the foundational procedural authority.

I must respectfully note that, in other less constrained procedural contexts—specifically, those not characterized by such immense delays and the consequent crystallization of the procedural record without opposing participation—I would deem it necessary to challenge the language presently contained within the current Divisional Court JRPA Guide, particularly the provisions effective June 2025. Nevertheless, this reservation of jurisprudential contention is a question for a future determination and is not requisite for the resolution of the matter in limine.

The requirement to "confer or attempt to confer with the other party" presupposes the existence of a legally recognized opposing party who has formally attested to their participation by filing a defence. Since the Respondents are technically in default and have not filed the requisite documentation to become formal "parties" in the sense contemplated by this Rule, the obligation to confer is diminished, though not entirely extinguished. The Applicant's conferral obligations cannot force an unrepresented or defaulted party to engage, nor can a non-response be deemed an agreement to a motion's content.

However, in the utmost spirit of professional courtesy and respecting the Court’s time and the interests of others, I have attempted to confer with the Respondents and Non-Respondents per se through the various notifications provided. I will now proceed to give the registrar the Confirmation of Motion in the required Form 37B by sending it via email to the court office, thereby satisfying the core obligation under Rule 37.10.1(1)(a). This proactive step ensures the Court is fully informed of the Applicant's intention to proceed on the scheduled date, thus promoting judicial efficiency despite the Respondents' procedural omissions. Furthermore, recognizing the interest of the Attorney General of Ontario (AGO) to be heard at the hearing of the JRPA Application, and to maintain transparency, I will provide copies of the Confirmation of Motion to the Non-Respondents, ensuring that all interested entities are duly apprised of the Applicant's intention to proceed on the scheduled date.

Irrespective of the ultimate disposition of NOM #3, transcripts from the case conferences are imperatively required. This requirement stems from the need for judicial oversight and the ability of the Applicant to exercise his right of appellate review; the alleged in camera nature of those proceedings does not defeat the right to a complete record for judicial scrutiny. The principle of accountability dictates that the record must be capable of being reviewed. My Confirmation of Motion shall subsequently follow to ensure a singular, cohesive motion record. My position regarding the lack of opposition to the same will be predicted upon a de *jure conclusion (a legal certainty dictated by the lack of filing and the subsequent lack of jurisdiction for case management), as opposed to a de *facto one (a mere factual observation). The legal conclusions arising from the procedural defaults are clear, and I have now drawn the necessary distinction with the required specificity. Those procedural defaults remain uncorrected without repentance or explanation.

I reserve the unqualified right to rely upon the entire exposition contained in this comprehensive correspondence for any lawful purpose whatsoever, inclusive of the future determination of costs, particularly in the context of the pervasive procedural irregularities and the lack of response from opposing parties documented herein. The systemic failures and procedural defects that have necessitated this extensive motion practice—including the failure of service, the void ab initio case conferences, the denial of the paid-for record, and the unauthorized invocation of Rule 38.07(2)—constitute exceptional circumstances justifying an award of substantial indemnity costs against the defaulting parties to deter future similar breaches of procedural fidelity.

Yours most appreciatively and gratefully,

SUBJECT: COMPLETION OF THE REQUIRED STEP OF GIVING THE CONFIRMATION OF MOTION PURSUANT TO RULE 37.10.1

Dear Sirs/Mesdames/Other Gender-Neutral Pronouns:

5501

I. Preliminary Formalities and Jurisdictional Compliance

Pursuant to the requisite procedural undertaking, I hereby transmit, by way of this electronic missive, the annexed Confirmation of Motion (hereinafter, the 'Confirmation') appertaining to the Third Notice of Motion (NOM No. 3). This transmittal is executed in strict observance of the provisions set forth in the Rules of Civil Procedure, specifically satisfying the mandatory minimum five-day temporal threshold antecedent to the scheduled written adjudication of December 3, 2025.

I further confirm that this document, constituting the official acta of confirmation, has been dispatched solely through electronic means to the Divisional Court, thereby obviating the necessity for, and concurrently negating the intention of, physical deposit at the designated court office, as permitted by the governing Rules.

II. Substantive Confirmation and Service Protocol

A true copy of the Confirmation is concurrently disseminated to the named Respondents—who are currently categorized as non-parties in the strict sense of the originating process—not as a matter of obligatory service, but rather as an exercise of professional courtesy and a demonstration of an ineluctable abundanti cautela.

The formal process of service upon the distinct class of Non-Respondents shall be meticulously executed by me, precisely as stipulated by the explicit, unambiguous terms articulated within the Confirmation of Motion itself. I submit that the prima facie conclusion to be drawn is that all parties potentially affected by the Motion are apprised of the Applicant's intention to proceed on the aforementioned date.

III. Documentation Compendium and Subsequent Filing

Furthermore, any supplemental documentation referenced in the Confirmation is predicated upon the contingent, albeit precautionary, inclusion of a comprehensive Compendium. The filed repository of documents shall exclusively comprise documentation filed by me, the Applicant, given the extant circumstance wherein the Respondents have not, to date, tendered any responsive filings; this observation is submitted without the slightest castigation of the Ministry of the Attorney General of Ontario (AGO), whose exceptionally erudite and esteemed counsel previously conveyed, in correspondence dated late January 2025, their considered determination regarding non-participation in the substantive merits of the immediate application.

Whatever the rationale was for the same is somewhat speculation but it seems that she, by way of compliment, took the "high road" or a distancing from that which was unknown to me but for I must say one of the more Herculean efforts to read between the lines and behind the curtain of what might have been by way of an Intake Court Endorsement [Sic] and a fake Criminal Code Form 2 "Information". In my view, it appears to me that on some levels that the MAG distanced itself from Madam Justice Shore and the SOLGEN Kerzner.

I express my sincere gratitude for your professional attention to this matter of procedural necessity.

Warm regards to all of you

/s/Mr. Kevin A. McLean (BA, JD, CIM)

Court file number: Court File No. DC-24-00000718-00JR
Type of document: email with attached emails from a representative of the DAG and my response
Short title of proceeding: McLean v. TDHA et al
Party: Mr. Kevin A. McLean (B.A., J.D, CIM) (mcleansettlement@gmail.com

Dear DC (Registrar and Local Registrar) and the Respondents by their counsel by email representations (but not filed documents):

The present letter is formally tendered for the record, addressing the Honourable Court and all persons and your clients herein (where applicable).
Confirmation is hereby effectuated that due service of the Confirmation of Motion has been accomplished upon all Non-Respondents possessing a demonstrable per se interest in the subject proceeding. Furthermore, a definitive response has been formulated subsequent to the thorough and measured consideration of an electronic mail transmission received on the preceding Friday, the complete contents of which were reviewed in extenso on the current date; this response was critically assessed against the backdrop of the prior formal requisition addressed to the Honourable Deputy Attorney General of Ontario (hereinafter designated as the "DAG"). A facsimile of the aforenoted correspondence is appended hereto for immediate reference. Should the exigent nature of the motion necessitate such disclosure, this material may be submitted for the judicial review of the presiding Justice, specifically concerning the necessary determination of whether documentary or other material evidence was subjected to disposal predicated upon the purported directives and concurrent approbation of the Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Justice (The Honourable Mr. Justice Morawetz), the foundational veracity of which representation has been accepted prima facie.
A critical corollary of the Deputy Attorney General's explicit repudiation of signature upon the Criminal Code Form 4 Indictment is the effective transference of the onus probandi regarding the instrument's authentic provenance. The negation of ministerial involvement necessitates that the Originating Judicial Precinct or the transmitting authority must demonstrate, with requisite particularity, the agent or officer who formally executed and preferred the charging instrument, thereby ensuring the procedural integrity of the commencement of the criminal process. This evidentiary vacuum, created by the absence of a verifiable ministerial fiat, compels judicial examination into the administrative chain of custody and the delegated authority under which the Indictment was filed, an examination that must proceed concurrently with the principal motion.

ANALYSIS OF MATERIAL FACTS, NON-DISCLOSURE, AND PROSPECTIVE EVIDENTIARY DISCLOSURE

The proceedings must acknowledge the materially significant facts that have been either discovered or have arisen ex post facto—specifically the discernible instance of fraud by non-disclosure pertaining not only to the executed arrest warrant but also to the Criminal Code Form 4 Indictment. The gravamen of this non-disclosure resides in the withholding of facts fundamental to the Applicant's comprehension of the ratio underpinning the original judicial process, which non-disclosure is further compounded by the substitution of the originating charge with a subsequent False Information Package. This systemic substitution prevented the Applicant from engaging in a substantive defense predicated upon the true nature of the originating accusation, thereby establishing the necessary elements for the establishment of procedural fraud: a false representation (or omission), knowledge of its falsity, intent to deceive, and reliance that resulted in detriment to the Applicant. A solemn undertaking is hereby proffered that all persons shall be promptly apprised should any further substantive evidence or informational data be subsequently obtained. Notwithstanding this continued commitment to the rigorous exercise of due diligence, and in adherence to the requisite spirit of bona fides, the appended evidentiary materials shall constitute the foundational basis of reliance for the scheduled judicial hearing of December 3, 2024, premised upon the comprehensive rationale articulated hereinafter.

For the purpose of maximal procedural clarity and concision, the detailed enumeration of the underlying rationales for reliance is found within the appended document addressing all Counsel of Record and Litigants (vide: Appendix #1, Sections II and III).

Juridical Syllogism Regarding Unidentified Principal-Agent Relationships and Material Non-Disclosure

It is logically and legally incumbent upon the proceedings that the following assertion be acknowledged: should the Respondent Insurance Companies, or the Licence Appeal Tribunal (LAT), or Mr. Weir, or the Ministry of the Attorney General (MAG), have possessed any degree of involvement in the origination of the criminal complaint against the Applicant—notwithstanding the fact that said complaint was subsequently rendered non-procedural through the substitution of the False Information Package—and should this involvement remain undisclosed and ignotum at the present juncture, such circumstance would constitute a fact arising and/or a fraud arising subsequent to March 2025. Such a development would necessarily be deemed to have reasonably and materially vitiated the judicial outcome. The doctrine of ultra vires agency, while typically addressing the limits of delegated authority, cannot be permitted to shield the corporate or governmental principal from the imputation of knowledge or liability where an agent's misfeasance or non-disclosure is demonstrably linked to the origination of the impugned judicial process. Conversely, the individual liability of the agent for misfeasance in public office, predicated upon bad faith or malice, operates independently of the principal's immunity, offering an alternative avenue for remedial judicial intervention. Whereas the existence of such an undisclosed nexus is, in limine, frequently unknown to the presiding judicial officer under conventional procedural paradigms, this specific factual matrix demonstrably engenders a unique and unprecedented legal issue within this particular sphere of jurisprudence, thereby warranting exceptional judicial scrutiny.

A principled, non-derogable obligation is submitted to rest upon all officers of the court to formally adduce any evidence pertaining to their substantive knowledge or the demonstrable absence thereof concerning these material facts. The disclosure required transcends merely the known facts and encompasses the proactive duty to inquire into the institutional knowledge held by the respective governmental or corporate clients that may bear relevance to the integrity of the judicial process. The failure to make a requisite disclosure of such pertinent information, followed by the subsequent discovery of the same through the Applicant's rigorous and continual exercise of due diligence, would ipso facto and demonstrably engender another potential opportunity to formally institute a motion pursuant to Rule 59.06(2)(a) of the Rules of Civil Procedure, concerning the setting aside or variation of an order on the basis of a matter arising subsequent to the making of the order, as is definitively mandated by the procedural framework of this Province, in contradistinction to the less rigorous processes extant in other jurisdictions.

Judicial Precedent Pertaining to Suability and the Scope of Remedial Efficacy

It is acknowledged that no definitive inference may be drawn from the courteous and meticulously articulated electronic mail correspondence tendered by Ms. Im in November 2024 (vide: Appendix #2). However, it is judicially observed, with the benefit of the pronouncement by the Ontario Court of Appeal (ONCA) in Gratton-Masuy Environmental Technologies Inc. v. Ontario, 2010 ONCA 501, that the procurement of declaratory or injunctive relief cannot be permissibly sought per se against a non-corporate statutory entity, such as the aforenoted commission, owing to its inherent legal incapacity to be subjected to suit. The ratio decidendi of the ONCA explicitly determined that the Building Code Act, 1992, did not expressly or implicitly confer such legal capacity, and, critically, that the inclusion of a claim for declaratory and injunctive relief does not, ipso facto, operate to augment the entity's susceptibility to suit. The pertinent excerpts from this decision are hereby reproduced:

The Commission was not a suable entity. It was a non-corporate entity and was not expressly liable to suit by the terms of the Act. The Act did not contain any indication of a legislative intent that legal capacity to be sued should be inferred of the Commission. Indeed, the provisions of the Act relating to the Commission significantly undercut that suggestion. As the Commission was not a suable entity, it was irrelevant that the claim was for declaratory and injunctive relief and not for damages. The liability to suit of non-corporate statutory entities is not augmented where declaratory or injunctive relief is claimed.

The claim against the subcommittee members was for misfeasance in public office. The core of their pleading against the subcommittee members consisted on page 322 allegations of bad faith, actual malice and bias. To avoid the protective ambit of the immunity from suit provision in s. 31(1) of the Act, sufficient facts had to be pleaded to support assertions of bad faith or malice. Moreover, in cases involving allegations of malice, rule 25.06(8) of the Rules of Civil Procedure requires that full particulars be pleaded. A bald plea of malice is insufficient to defeat a rule 21.01(1)(b) motion. The only substantial facts pleaded by the plaintiffs were assumptions and speculations about the motivations underlying the conduct of the subcommittee members and that the asserted facts were nothing more than legal conclusions or bald assertions of bad faith or malice. It was plain and obvious that the statement of claim did not disclose a reasonable cause of action against the subcommittee members. As the individual defendants were not liable, the Crown was similarly not liable.

This pivotal distinction between the non-suable statutory entity and the suable individual acting in an official capacity is paramount to the establishment of the current locus standi. Specifically, the availability of injunctive and declaratory remedies against individuals, notwithstanding the non-suability of the corporate principal, ensures that the judicial review process retains efficacy in compelling compliance with judicial mandates. The nomination of Mr. Weir, an individual acting in the capacity of Executive Chair of Tribunals Ontario, therefore serves to provisionally satisfy the jurisdictional threshold, enabling the judicial intervention necessary to address the non-disclosure. The selection of this procedural anchor permits the Court to issue binding orders directed towards the non-corporate persons who maintain a degree of control over the requisite documentation or whose actions gave rise to the dispute, thereby avoiding the structural impediments imposed by the Gratton-Masuy precedent regarding the entity itself.

The advent of the Tribunals Adjudicative Records Act, 2019 (TARA) and the creation of "Tribunals Ontario" as a non-incorporated umbrella organization introduces a further layer of complexity to the suability analysis. While TARA imposes specific duties regarding the creation, retention, and public access of adjudicative records upon the tribunals themselves, the organizational structure of "Tribunals Ontario" as a mere collective reference or administrative body, rather than a distinct, suable statutory corporation, raises a material question: how can such an entity, which is not an adjudicative tribunal in itself (vide: Derenzis), be the ultimate repository or records holder when it is inherently incapable of being sued? The principle articulated in Gratton-Masuy suggests that an umbrella organization lacking its own express statutory capacity to be sued cannot have its liability augmented simply by being named as the custodian of records. Notwithstanding this, the overarching Crown liability for the conduct of an adjudicative tribunal under various statutes, including the Administration of Tribunals and Government Agencies Act, 2019 (ATGAGA), remains a factor to be reconciled within the remedial scope of the current application. The confirmed refusal by the LAT to provide copies of the two undisclosed Motion Orders, whether pursuant to TARA or, in the alternative, the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act (FIPPA), substantiates the necessity of compelling production via a judicial order directed at the suable individuals or the appropriate Ministerial entities.

Accordingly, the prior nomination of individuals, specifically Mr. Weir, in various capacities may be considered fortuitous, thereby establishing a provisional jurisdictional locus for the ad hoc purpose of seeking the relevant remedies pursuant to Notice of Motion Number Three (NOM #3). Notwithstanding the potential limitations imposed by this governing jurisprudence, formal notification of this assertion is hereby provided to all interested persons.

Consideration of Procedural Propriety and Remedial Scope

It is incumbent upon this submission to formally address the subsequent assertions proffered via electronic communication from Senior Counsel Ms. Im. The observation that the inclusion of Her Majesty the Queen, utilizing an archaic template reference to the Queen as opposed to the King, was procedurally questionable is acknowledged; however, this de minimis error does not vitiate the overall validity of the judicial review application, given that the Crown remains a de facto person via the Attorney General's statutory service requirement pursuant to section 9(4) of the Judicial Review and Procedures Act (JRPA).
Furthermore, the contention that the Licence Appeal Tribunal (LAT) must be formally named as a respondent, pursuant to section 9(3) of the JRPA, is a procedural suggestion duly noted. Nonetheless, the operative consideration remains that the declaratory and injunctive relief sought by NOM #3 is principally directed toward the conduct and control of documentation held by the nominated individuals and non-Respondent entities. As the JRPA permits the issuance of injunctive and declaratory relief generally, and given the compelling need to compel the production of records controlled by individuals like Mr. Weir or entities within the Ministry's purview, the application for judicial review is deemed viable even without the formal designation of the LAT as a suable person. The Tribunal's failure to effectuate proper delivery and filing of its own Notice of Application for Judicial Review, as asserted, further complicates the jurisdictional landscape but does not mitigate the need for the immediate judicial intervention sought by the Applicant.

While I believe that most of what Ms. Im was articulating was correct on many technical levels, I believe that the Attorney General is entitled to participate in the hearing of the JRPA Application – not necessarily a hearing as a matter of right but perhaps a moot issue.
This comprehensive submission is trusted to be deemed of material assistance in the Court's deliberations. The totality of the aforementioned procedural confirmations, especially the denial of signature by the DAG and the continued refusal to disclose the Motion Orders by the LAT, is advanced at this juncture prior to any formal submissions regarding costs, thereby ensuring that the Court is apprised of the current factual and procedural status quo ante.

APPENDICES

APPENDIX #1: TRANSMITTAL AND INQUIRY PERTAINING TO JUDICIAL PROCESS

Dear Counsel of Record (The Honourable Shore J.):

I. Transmittal of Judicial Filing and Confirmation of Service
Pursuant to the doctrine of good faith and the necessary requirements of professional comity, transmitted herewith is a facsimile of the Confirmation of Motion pertaining to Motion Number Three (NOM #3). This instrument was duly furnished to the Registrar of the Divisional Court on the preceding date. Notification shall also be forthwith tendered to the Divisional Court confirming service of this requisite instrument upon all persons of record, thereby ensuring strict adherence to Rule 4 of the Rules of Civil Procedure.
II. Inquiry Pertaining to Criminal Code Indictment
A. Confirmation of Lack of Ministerial Signature
It is further confirmed, pursuant to the aforementioned good faith exchange, that a representative, acting on behalf of the Honourable Deputy Attorney General of Ontario, courteously provided a substantive response concerning the ascertainment of whether the aforementioned official effectuated the signature de facto and de jure upon the Criminal Code Form Indictment. The affixing of the signature was unequivocally repudiated by the representative, notwithstanding the fact that the Deputy Attorney General's office would have satisfied the statutory prerequisites for an agent or signing officer of the Attorney General under section 2 of the Criminal Code.

B. Extrapolation Regarding Custodial Mandate

This aforementioned repudiation is fundamentally consonant with the established custodial mandate requiring the Originating Judicial Precinct to retain its executed copy of the arrest warrant, alongside a duplicate of the Criminal Code Form 4 Indictment. The representative of the Honourable Deputy Attorney General did not preclude the potential inference that the Judiciary of the Provincial Court (Ontario), being the Ministry of the Attorney General (MAG), may have authorized the execution of the signature. Nevertheless, the totality of the circumstances and the compelling inferences arising therefrom appear to gravitate toward the Ministry of the Solicitor General (SOLGEN), given its physical proximity and demonstrable nexus with Tribunals Ontario (being situated on the same floor). This connection is underscored by the proven linkage between the Licence Appeal Tribunal (LAT), operating as agents of the Crown, and the Respondent Insurance Companies, which are similarly situated as agents. Due diligence continues to be rigorously exercised through all appropriate investigative avenues to conclusively resolve this outstanding matter, which involves complex considerations of ultra vires agency.

C. Legal Conclusion on Retention

Irrespective of the erroneous contention, occasionally posited, that judicial precincts do not retain copies of executed arrest warrants, it follows ipso facto that the Originating Judicial Precinct is legally compelled to maintain a copy of the document that commenced the criminal proceeding, whether said document was electronically lodged or preferred in physical form.

III. Custody of Judicial Process and Compulsion for Production

A. Potential Custodial Venues

By potentiality, the only Originating Judicial Precincts that have not affirmatively disclaimed custody or control of the aforementioned initiating documents are delineated as follows:

1. The Superior Court of Justice (SCJ) at 361 University Avenue; and
2. The Divisional Court at 130 Queen Street West, Toronto.

B. Syllogistic Analysis of Document Location

It is presumable that the hypothesis obtains that each jurisdictional location may possess a copy of only one of the instruments. The Criminal Code Form 4 Indictment would conceivably be lodged via electronic mail with the SCJ 361 University Precinct pursuant to Rule 4.10 of the Criminal Proceeding Rules. Conversely, given that a Judge of the Divisional Court is inherently a Judge of the SCJ, the issuance and execution of an arrest warrant by such a judicial officer, exercising jurisdiction ad hoc for the SCJ (Toronto Region, 361 University Avenue), confers the custodial jurisdiction (de facto and/or de jure) upon the location of the presiding Judge. Such proceedings are conducted in camera by definitive constraint, which, being ex parte relative to the Accused, appropriately delineates the elements of the ex parte and in camera process. Notwithstanding this framework, it must be submitted that the archival recordings of these proceedings are subject to production, both in the criminal and civil contexts, subsequent to the arrest of the accused or the issuance of a judicial process. The principles of open justice and judicial accountability mandate that the records pertaining to the issuance of compelling process, such as arrest warrants, must be retained and subject to inspection or production pursuant to judicial order, particularly given the subsequent challenges to the procedural validity of the initiating instrument. This principle, concerning the acta of the court, is not vitiated by any prohibitive ruling regarding civil case conferences, as was posited by the Honourable Madam Justice Shore, whose focus was placed upon an alleged inability to produce rather than a demonstrable unwillingness to comply with extant directives.

C. Compulsion for Production

Notwithstanding the preceding complexities, the conceded position of the Deputy Attorney General remains that the judicial documents resident within the courthouse were not alienated or otherwise disposed of by official direction emanating from the Honourable Deputy Attorney General and subsequently ratified by the Chief Justice of the SCJ. It is thus a self-evident conclusion that these documents are subject to production pursuant to judicial directive from any entity possessing custody, control, or possession thereof. The failure of a person to definitively locate or account for the disposition of a mandatory court record, such as the initial charging document, necessitates a finding that the document is either still in existence and subject to production or was improperly disposed of, in which latter case the consequences for the vitiated process must be addressed by the Court. As the Originating Judicial Precinct is statutorily compelled to possess custody and/or control of the process, particularly given the electronic preference of the Indictment, the operative inquiry devolves upon whether the same has been officially expunged by the precinct or the transmitting person. The ultimate factual determination of the status quo ante remains a matter requiring further forensic discovery.

Respectfully Submitted,

Dear Attorney General of Ontario:

As per my discussions with Ms. Benson of your office, she requested that I serve the above counsel and then discuss directly with assigned counsel.

I look forward to those discussions and I await to hear regarding the same.

I will update on my proposal for timing, schedule and the hearing of this judicial review. I will update on other procedural and preliminary matters.

As it currently stands, I am finalizing the application record for the ONSC (Divisional Court) or a single justice depending on whether the urgency request or motion is granted, and then the factum and the authorities.

Thank you.

Warm regards,

Mr. Kevin Alexander McLean (B.A. (MCL), J.D., CIM) (he/him)

to me

Mr. McLean,

Thank you for service of your Notice of Application for Judicial Review.

I accept service as counsel for the Attorney General, who is required to be served with all Notice of Applications for judicial review as per section 9(4) of the Judicial Review and Procedures Act, RSO 1990, cJ1. Please be advised that you are NOT required to name the AG as respondent in your application, although he is required to be served and entitled to participate in any JR should he choose to do so.

Also, you have named the “EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR, LICENCE APPEAL TRIBUNAL, HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN IN RIGHT OF ONTARIO, REPRESENTED BY EXECUTIVE CHAIR OF TRIBUNALS ONTARIO IN MR. SEAN WEIR.”

I believe the decision(s) you are seeking to have reviewed are decisions of the License Appeals Tribunal? If that is the case, you are required to comply with sections 9(2) and (3) of the JRPA. Section 9(3) states that “…any two or more persons who, acting together, may exercise a statutory power, whether styled a board or commission or by any other collective title, shall be deemed to be a person under such collective title…”

In short you are required to name and serve the License Appeal Tribunal as a respondent to your NOA.

I do not and cannot accepts service of the NOA for the LAT.

Thank you.

Dear Sirs/Mesdames:

RE: ACKNOWLEDGEMENT OF CORRESPONDENCE AND IMPUTATION OF NON-DISCLOSURE

I. PROLEGOMENON TO CORRESPONDENCE

The receipt of the automatic reply issued by Ms. Im, a barrister and solicitor designated to the Ministry of the Attorney General (MAG), Crown Law Office—Civil Division (CLO-C), whose professional address is duly confirmed as 720 Bay Street, 8th Floor, Toronto, Ontario, is hereby formally acknowledged. This confirmation of Ms. Im's professional designation and location is noted as being coterminous with that of Mr. Sinnadurai, thereby establishing a necessary point of jurisdictional and professional reference.

II. CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE AND IMPUTATION OF MOTIVATION

A. Discovery of Extrinsic Evidence Pertinent to Costs Submissions

In the actus of verifying the precise street address of Ms. Im, an unforeseen journalistic article—heretofore unknown to the author—was serendipitously discovered via a common-law digital search engine. This material, which details the substantial investment of taxpayer-funded Crown counsel hours expended in litigation concerning the nondisclosure of Ministerial Mandate Letters, is appended for consideration: https://www.cbc.ca/news/canada/toronto/crown-lawyer-hours-ford-mandate-letters-1.6891876.

It is expressly stipulated that while a complete and exhaustive perusal of the entirety of the aforementioned article has not yet been conducted, reliance shall be placed upon the factual assertions contained therein for the subsequent submission of costs and the extrapolation of similar fact evidence. The discernible pattern of preserving informational secrecy appears to constitute a thematic element central to the Ministry's operational posture in specific instances.

B. Affidavit Evidence Pertaining to Effort Expended

While the intent is not to castigate or engage in ad hominem attacks upon the professional integrity of the involved parties, an affirmation has been personally sworn and duly submitted detailing the inordinate quantum of time and attendant resources necessarily devoted by this party. This expenditure was occasioned by the protracted and seemingly deliberately circuitous engagement with personnel from the MAG CLO-C and the administrative staff of the court operations (inclusive of managerial cadres). The objective of such engagement was the procurement of documentation to which prima facie entitlement is conferred, without concomitant cost, pursuant to the provisions delineated in Section 7 of the *MAG CSD Court Information Access Guide.

III. LACK OF FORMAL APPEARANCE AND PROSPECTIVE RELIANCE

It is an indisputable factual premise that the Ministry of the Attorney General has not, in any manner or form, submitted or served a Notice of Appearance in this matter.

Ipso facto, the resultant inferences and circumstantial evidentiary deductions, which are inextricably linked to the demonstrable lack of comprehensive and timely disclosure, shall be meticulously collated and subsequently presented within a formalized submission dedicated to the quantification and imposition of costs at the jurisprudentially opportune moment. The absence of a formal appearance thus serves to buttress the contention that certain actions or, conversely, inactions regarding disclosure were undertaken with a specific, though perhaps unstated, litigation strategy or objective in mind.

I provide the above as a courtesy and to ensure that there has not been justification or excuses laid that notice was not given even on the slightest of issues inclusive of costs (i.e. someone was out of office or otherwise not available).

On my brief perusal that case which the SCC overturned the lower court's turned on Cabinet confidentiality which is not at issue herein but nonetheless indicative of non-disclosure from a similar fact evidence standpoint especially in light of Derenzis and my due diligence efforts which remain ongoing.

SUBJECT I: Confirmation of Payment and Filing Status of the Motion Record (the "Motion Record") in the Ontario Courts Public Portal (the "OCPP")
SUBJECT II: Request for Immediate Access to the Case Centre (the "Case Centre") in Advance of the Hearing Date Pursuant to Rule 4.05.3(4)
I cordially write regarding the above Subjects of this correspondence. I thank you in advance for your time and consideration of this correspondence and its attachments (by reference or inclusion). I appreciate your finite yet valuable resources which is why I have taken immense time to research the legal issues herein and apply them to the facts herein. The present document serves as an official record, meticulously designed to minimize the judicial effort necessary for comprehension of the procedural posture, thereby facilitating an efficient and efficacious resolution. The complexity of this matter demands meticulous procedural fidelity, a commitment to which I have assiduously adhered throughout this JRPA proceeding.
I adopt all definitions from previously, indirectly or directly, cited correspondence.

I. Preliminary Confirmations and Current Technical Impediments to Finalization

This correspondence serves to confirm the successful remittance of the requisite fees, where applicable, for the Motion Record (comprising, inter alia, Notice of Motion #3, the Factum, and attendant materials), the affidavit of service, and the Confirmation of Motion (the "Confirmation") within the OCPP. This successful financial transaction, the particulars of which are appended hereto as Appendix II, represents the culmination of prior, protracted efforts to navigate the initial iterations of the OCPP, which previously exhibited an in limine reluctance to recognize certain file formats or resolve encrypted document properties.
It is acknowledged that the OCPP constitutes an estimable interface, capable of accommodating substantial documentation, and that the integrated payment module functions with commendable facility and security. This facility stands in contradistinction to the preceding difficulties encountered, thereby underscoring the continual improvement in the Court's technological infrastructure.
Receipt is also hereby confirmed of the electronic mail communication disseminated by the Government of Ontario, which specified the linkage of the Case Centre platform with the MyOntario account infrastructure. As an account had been previously established under the auspices of Thomson Reuters, the account has persisted and been migrated to the MyOntario framework, thereby maintaining the status quo ante concerning the User's digital identity and associated procedural history.
The Persistence of the Current Technical Impediment
Notwithstanding the foregoing successes in payment and portal navigation, a singular, refractory technical challenge has materialized this afternoon. An attempt was made to upload a consolidated digital compilation—an expedient measure intended to streamline judicial review—which included the Confirmation appended with the two Divisional Court Judicial Review Procedure Act (the "JRPA") Guides, materials vital for contextualizing the Confirmation's substance. This unitary upload was regrettably met with a pervasive 403 error code within the OCPP. This systemic failure to process a correctly structured submission is deemed a procedural obstruction that ipso facto precluded the finalization of the comprehensive filing. The resolution of this technical anomaly is, therefore, a necessary precondition to the full and timely electronic submission of the complete Motion Record, without which the filing cannot be considered procedurally complete. Until this technical defect is cured, the integrity of the electronic record remains compromised, an outcome that is, naturally, highly undesirable in the context of judicial review.

Imperative Necessity for Case Centre Access and Chronological Compliance

Pursuant to the Confirmation and the prevailing Rules of Civil Procedure (the "Rules"), it is mandated that all filed documentation be uploaded to the Case Centre within a strict temporal framework. This requirement transcends mere procedural formality; it is an acta essential for the proper administration of justice, ensuring the Bench and all parties have commensurate access to the complete record. Rule 4.05.3(4) dictates, in relevant part, a mandatory deadline:

"(4) Subject to subrules (4.1) and (5), the documents listed in subrule (3) must be uploaded to Case Center by the following deadline:

1. In the case of the hearing of a motion or application where the party is required to give the registrar a confirmation of motion (Form 37B) or confirmation of application (Form 38B), the deadline is 2 p.m. three days before the hearing date, unless the court orders otherwise."

This provision establishes a prima facie obligation for the User to effect the uploading of the relevant documents no later than 2:00 post meridiem on Friday, given the chronology of the impending hearing date. Punctuality in this procedural matter is non-negotiable, and any failure to meet this tempus could potentially prejudice the User's position.

The esteemed Ms. Gentles, Registrar (the "Registrar") of the Divisional Court, is appropriately exempt from the provisions of Rule 4.05.3(4.1), which explicitly stipulates that the Registrar cannot unilaterally effectuate the uploading of documents on behalf of a party. This distinction correctly places the administrative burden of electronic transmission upon the party, ensuring clear lines of responsibility. Furthermore, Rule 4.05.3(5) is deemed inapplicable, as the matter at hand is a Motion, not a Trial, and the Confirmation was timely transmitted via electronic mail to the Divisional Court, in strict accordance with the requirements of Rule 37.10.1(1)(a)(i), thereby obviating any requirement for transcripts at this juncture.

Analysis of the Apparent Regulatory Inconsistency and the Role of the Registrar

There appears to be a minor inconsistency per se concerning Ontario Regulation 226/25 (the "Regulation"), which became effective in early October 2025, specifically regarding proceedings commenced in the City of Toronto—a geographical designation applicable to the JRPA Proceeding herein (as detailed in Appendix I). The Regulation pertains to documents filed or residing within the Court file, creating a crucial distinguishing characteristic between the Registrar's mandated duties and those of a designated "party" concerning the chronological uploading of documentation. The scope of the Registrar's authority is not ultra vires their statutory mandate, but the procedural application of the Regulation requires judicial clarification to ensure consistency with the spirit of the Rules.

Upload Intent and Entitlement to Unfettered Access Status

In light of the preceding technical delays and the User's commitment to facilitating a comprehensive review by the Court, the intention to upload the previously filed Compendium is hereby reaffirmed, notwithstanding the conventional dispensation accorded to unopposed or consent motions. This is a voluntary act of procedural diligence.

The User possesses a prior, inchoate entitlement to access the Case Centre stemming from the initiation of the JRPA Proceeding over one year prior. This access is not a gratuity but a necessary procedural right. To ensure punctual compliance with the prescribed deadline, the immediate and unfettered grant of access to the Case Centre is absolutely essential. The Divisional Court is respectfully solicited to furnish an invitation forthwith, preferably by the conclusion of the present business day, to allow for the indispensable acclimation to the Case Centre protocols and to verify the consistency of the Registrar's prior uploads with the User's filings. This verification is crucial to ensure that the documentary record upon which the Court will ultimately rely is accurate and complete.

It is posited that only the User's filings shall presently reside in the Case Centre, as the Respondents have not yet filed materials. Should any Non-Respondents or Non-Parties seek leave to permit the late filing of a Notice of Appearance or similar instrument, the onus for their respective uploading responsibilities shall attach solely to them. The User is entitled to be apprized of the status of all "filed documents," as opposed to those merely existing per se within the overall Court file, so that no ambiguity exists concerning the record in limine. For the purpose of effecting the immediate invitation, the designated electronic mail address is the one used for this correspondence, and the designated Username is kmack1983.

I will have my Costs Submissions to the Respondents today along with a copy to the Non-Respondents.

Yours most appreciatively and gratefully,

/s/Mr. Kevin A. McLean (BA, JD, CIM)

SUBJECT I: THE CONSEQUENCES OF BELATED FILINGS AND DELIVERY WITHIN THE JUDICIAL REVIEW APPLICATION PROCEEDING (THE "JRPA PROCEEDING")
SUBJECT II: THE PRINCIPLE OF NON-PARTISAN DEFENCE BY ADJUDICATIVE TRIBUNALS IN JUDICIAL REVIEW APPLICATIONS

Dear Sirs/Mesdames/Other Gender-Neutral Pronouns:

I. INTRODUCTION AND STIPULATIONS

Correspondence is commenced concerning the above Subjects of this communication.

II. THE STATUS OF THE RESPONDENT INSURANCE COMPANIES AND THE NEED FOR LEAVE BEFORE ANY FILING OF MATERIALS ON THE JRPA APPLICATION SUBJECT TO MR. NIEUWLAND "DELIVERING" THE SERVED NOTICE OF APPEARANCE BY WAY OF FILING AND PROOF OF SERVICE (EITHER AFFIDAVIT OF SERVICE OR CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

Receipt of the acta constituting Ms. Maciel's automated electronic correspondence has been confirmed, where within the postulate of her physical absence from the situs of professional engagement and the concomitant cessation of electronic mail access is articulated. Ipso facto, this inhibits the faculty for the furnishing of the requisite proof of service component, indispensable for the "delivery" of the Notice of Appearance (the "NOA"). Notwithstanding this salient procedural impediment, the Insurer Respondents, through their retained counsel, Mr. Nieuwland, retain the residual prerogative, should the exercise thereof be deemed expedient, to submit the NOA for filing, albeit in a highly belated fashion. Such an action, were it successfully prosecuted, would necessarily afford the Insurer Respondents locus standi before the Divisional Court and the subsequent entitlement to notice of all procedural steps undertaken in the JRPA Proceeding, receipt of all pertinent documentation, and the capacity to file substantive materials within the JRPA Application. Should the Insurer Respondents elect to pursue this singular course of action, formal notification of the same is mandatorily requested such that the Applicant may prepare responsive documentation.

It is firmly propounded that Mr. Nieuwland, being a duly matriculated member in good standing with the Law Society of Ontario (the "LSO") and having previously executed the service of a NOA on behalf of all Insurer Respondents in the LAT Proceeding, is vested with the professional authority to execute and file a proof of service, whether presented by means of an affidavit of service or a certificate of service. A contrario, should the filing thereof not materialize, the Insurer

Respondents shall be compelled to persist in the posture of non-parties whilst concurrently remaining designated as Respondents, subject to the obligation of uploading any "filed documents" to the electronic case management system. This prospective scenario encompasses, inter alia, the necessity of successfully prosecuting a motion seeking leave to permit the late filing and delivery of both a responsive factum and an application record, as well as the ability to serve and file any responsive documents to Motion Number 1 (the "NOM #1") and Motion Number 2 (the "NOM #2"). The belated nature of the latter actions, now approximating eleven (11) months relative to both motions, represents a significant and highly prejudicial delay, warranting rigorous scrutiny under the established jurisprudence governing the enlargement of time. The ratio for resisting such leave is grounded firmly in the principle that the failure to meet mandatory timelines constitutes a presumptive acta non verba of abandonment or waiver of the right to participate in the substance of the JRPA Application. Considering that the adjudicative disposition by way of a written hearing is currently scheduled for December 3, 2025, the Insurer Respondents would be obliged to seek and obtain this requisite leave in limine prior to that seminal date, an action which itself is highly disruptive to the court's carefully managed schedule.

Any such interlocutory motions, should they be promulgated by the Insurer Respondents, shall be duly and vigorously opposed on the basis of demonstrable prejudice to the Applicant, the lack of sufficient explanation for the extraordinary delay, and the absence of any overriding injustice necessitating intervention. Should the Insurer Respondents proceed with these procedural steps, responsive documentation shall be served, filed, and subsequently uploaded to Case Centre within a compressed temporal window. Costs against the Insurer Respondents shall, in due course, be assiduously pursued should the prosecution of these procedural manoeuvres be undertaken, with submissions emphasizing the unnecessary expenditure of legal resources occasioned by the belated and unwarranted acta.

The longer that the Respondent Insurance Companies delay the same, the more prejudice that will arise. To the extent that such a motion is brought by the Respondent Insurance Companies, my view will remain that it was without merit and subject the Respondent Insurance Companies to further costs.

III. The Impropriety of LAT Defence and Relevant Jurisprudence

The aforementioned emphasis upon the Insurer Respondents, as opposed to the LAT, emanates from the principle that while the LAT could conceivably effect a late filing of its NOA, the actual delivery of the same is procedurally inhibited due to Ms. Maciel's documented indisposition, which constitutes the second automated reply received and whose right to privacy and confidentiality shall be respected. Such a filing would have been of de minimis import solely for the purpose of initiating a "First Defence" and a preliminary request for a case conference. Absent the timely and proper filing of a "First Defence," whilst the LAT could notionally submit its "Defence" for filing (solely for the ancillary purpose of case conferences, which possess no present relevance at this juncture and for Motion Number 3 (the "NOM #3")), the prerequisite of "delivery" of its NOA cannot be satisfied. Ergo, Rule 38.07(2) of the Rules retains full applicability, which explicitly proscribes the filing of the Defence where the requisite procedural steps have been neglected.

This determination is deemed jurisprudentially efficacious and maintains strict consonance with the established mandatum governing adjudicative tribunals, whereby the assumption of an active defensive posture within the ambit of a judicial review of their own decisional opera is proscribed. The principle of institutional neutrality and the separation of functions mandate that the tribunal, having rendered its decision, should generally refrain from becoming an adversarial litigant against the applicant. Reference is respectfully directed to the relevant body of case law, including Ontario (Energy Board) (the "Energy Board Decision"), wherein the court articulated the necessary distance and non-adversarial stance required of a tribunal in review proceedings. Further substantiation is provided by Tranquilli (the "Tranquilli Decision"), Drewlo (the "Drewlo Decision"), and Hutchison v. Aviva et al (the "Hutchison Decision"), which uniformly reinforce that the tribunal's role is to provide the court with the record and the reasons, but not to champion the decision's outcome against the applicant. The participation of the LAT in this instance is thus limited to ensuring the record is complete; any attempt to engage in the lis inter partes on the merits would constitute an ultra vires action. In this specific and material regard, the Insurer Respondents are represented by counsel who possesses the capacity to defend the JRPA Application and furnish important insight into the TDI Karat Theft and subsequent fraud and impersonation, should such an action be deemed advantageous to their posture. The current presumption, based upon the temporal proximity of the hearing, is that this defence shall not be proffered; however, perpetual vigilance shall be maintained against the potential advent of any interlocutory motions initiated by the Insurer Respondents, especially those that might inadvertently draw the LAT into an inappropriate defensive role.

IV. FOUNDATIONAL NULLITIES AND PRE-EMPTIVE MEASURES

Whilst the judicial authority exists for orders to be judicially sanctioned nunc pro tunc (literally, "now for then"), the exercise of this unique discretion would constitute a judicial anomaly and an inappropriate application of the doctrine considering the provision of advance notice of the NOM #3, the furnishing of evidence well in advance of the motion, the service of NOM #3 on November 17, 2025, and the October 26, 2025, letter being submitted on the date of its origination. The nunc pro tunc power is typically reserved for correcting technical defects or omissions where the substantive step was, in fact, undertaken at the proper time, not for retroactively curing a fundamental failure of compliance that spans many months. The current facts demonstrate a substantive absence of action, which is not amenable to this remedial power.

Out of an abundance of circumspection and to safeguard the status quo ante, pre-emptive orders have been sought that shall render any purported filings—with the exception of motions for leave to file material on the JRPA Application and receive notice of steps and documents—void ab initio. Furthermore, any such purported "filings," save for the Insurer Respondents "delivering" (completing the final two of three steps of a "delivery") and receiving any steps and documents herein (subject to the caveat of the Insurer Respondents "delivering" their NOA), shall be judicially declared void ab initio and set aside. The critical distinction underlying this relief is that such failings do not constitute mere procedural irregularities, which may be cured or rectified pursuant to the Rules, but rather fundamental nullities, or documents spawned from foundational nullities. A foundational nullity renders the procedural step incapable of having any legal effect, necessitating its complete expungement from the record, as opposed to a mere irregularity which permits correction and allows the step to stand. The sustained and unexplained non-compliance with the mandatory time periods for filing, particularly in relation to the substantive defence materials, transcends the realm of curable error.

V. CONCLUSION AND RESERVATION OF RIGHTS

In relation to costs, the issue is one of the fact costs are sought against parties and the Respondents are not parties. As it currently stands, costs will only be sought against the Respondent Insurance Companies and the LAT for the steps that were taken and not against the Ministry of the Attorney General (the "MAG"). This clarification is provided which can be passed on to Ms. Im while she was away from the office and her email.

Nonetheless, the documents and/or steps taken by the LAT and Insurer Respondents, although the Insurer Respondents failed to participate in the intake process and the LAT was disentitled from doing so, are noted. While perhaps the Divisional Court should have precluded it, costs can only be sought against Respondents (and in some instance non-Respondents). In the Applicant's view, the fact that the Respondents could not produce any evidence of "delivery" of their NOA's places them on a distinctly worse footing than a "party." The delays in advancing a motion since October 26, 2025, are furthermore a matter denoted herein and without debate. In that regard or generally, Rule 57.01(6) concerning the "Costs Outline" only permits "parties" to agree on costs. Ergo, the view is maintained that a consent agreement cannot be entered into with one or more Respondents as they are not per se "parties." The Court shall be requested to fix the sum of costs to avoid any further dissipation of judicial resources.

Consequently, any submissions concerning costs formally delivered hoc die shall not incorporate the potential exigencies attendant upon any motions brought by the Insurer Respondents; nonetheless, should the same be prosecuted, the unequivocal right to effect the amendment of the said costs submissions is hereby reserved, with the intention of claiming costs on a substantial indemnity basis, given the patent necessity for interlocutory opposition to actions resulting from protracted procedural default.

To the extent that a definitive resolution upon any or all of the outstanding issues is achieved by the Applicant and the Respondents, including Non-Respondents, the Divisional Court shall be promptly notified through the appropriate administrative channels. However, given the prima facie complexity of the factual and legal issues, the consummation of such a resolution should not be presumed ad hoc.

Finally, I have had a chance to review the involvement of Ms. Im in the Global News case and any castigation of her would not be proper without knowing the invoice amounts of the MAG in that regard and whether Ms. Im was involved prior to the judicial review or not. In any event, the SCC decision is self-evident. I thank all for the time to review the same.

The right to rely upon this correspondence for any lawful purpose inclusive of costs is hereby reserved.

Yours most appreciatively and gratefully,

/s/Mr. Kevin A. McLean (BA, JD, CIM)

Creation Method & Reservation of Rights	This document was generated subsequent to dictation utilizing voice recognition software, the inherent limitations of which necessitate a prophylactic posture. The Applicant meticulously transcribed and refined the dictation, acknowledging the potential for residual transcription anomalies that may necessitate future correction. Accordingly, a comprehensive reservation of the unconditional right to effect subsequent amendment is hereby made and asserted, ad infinitum. This includes the necessary rectification of grammatical or syntactical deficiencies, the inclusion of essential legal qualifiers, or the excision of any improper double negatives or inadvertent ambiguities. This deliberate reservation ensures the unimpeachable integrity and jurisprudential precision of all submitted documentation, irrespective of the initial medium of composition, and underscores the Applicant's commitment to procedural accuracy. The Applicant further affirms the right to present oral submissions that may transcend the written scope herein provided, reserving the right to introduce novel, material, and relevant case law or statutory construction not explicitly detailed within the present four corners of this instrument, should such introduction be warranted by the exigencies of the hearing or in direct rebuttal to unforeseen Respondent arguments. The Applicant's comprehensive professional background in law and financial management informs the precision of these submissions, notwithstanding the initial dictation method.

II. FORMAL COMMUNICATION AND SERVICE

A. Subject Matter and Delineation of Respondents

SUBJECT: Formal Transmittal of Enclosed Costs Submissions — Provision of Notice and Effectual Service upon the Delineated Respondents (and Prospective Non-Parties) — Specific Pertaining to the Licence Appeal Tribunal (LAT) and the Respondent Insurance Companies.

To: Counsel of Record / Designated Representatives:

This present correspondence is formally executed, having as its indispensable objective the provision of unequivocal notice and the effectuation of service of the enclosed Costs Submissions upon the entities herein specified and specifically addressed:

1. The Adjudicative Tribunal: The Licence Appeal Tribunal (LAT);
2. The Respondent Insurance Companies, collectively and individually delineated:
   a. SNIC (Security National Insurance Company);
   b. TDGIC (TD General Insurance Company); and
   c. TDHA (TD Home and Auto Insurance Company).

B. Reference to Enclosed Submissions and Integration into the Judicial Review Application Compendium

Enclosed herewith is the document entitled Applicant's Costs Submissions for the Entirety of Proceeding from November 15, 2024 to December 3, 2025 (Costs Submissions), dated November 26, 2025, detailing with scrupulous specificity the quantum of costs sought, specifically demanding an award calculated on the substantial indemnity scale given the egregious circumstances delineated infra in Section III, which reflect a level of misconduct far exceeding the threshold for ordinary costs.

It is hereby confirmed that these Costs Submissions shall be immediately integrated and consolidated into the Compendium prepared for NOM No. 3, the contents of which have been particularized with precision in the Confirmation of Motion dated November 24, 2025, which formal document shall follow in the ordinary course of the judicial process. This integrative step is critically undertaken to ensure that the Honourable Presiding Motion Judge is definitively seized of the Applicant's precise pecuniary claims at the earliest permissible juncture, thereby preventing any subsequent claim by the Respondents of lack of notice or unpreparedness regarding the substantial financial implications of their procedural conduct.

C. Assertions of Entitlement and Reservation of Rights

1. Modification of Submissions: The inherent and unassailable entitlement of the Applicant to effect subsequent modification and augmentation of these Costs Submissions, thereby petitioning the Court for a greater quantum of costs, is firmly reiterated and preserved in toto. Such an amendment shall remain entirely conditional upon, and directly responsive to, any acta or procedural steps undertaken by the Respondents during the intervening period concluding on December 3, 2025, or any other date appointed by the Court for the final adjudication of this matter. The right to enhance the costs claim is intrinsically linked to the Respondents' ongoing failure to either secure locus standi or cease their improper and unwarranted interference with the orderly progression of the JRPA. The quantum of costs must necessarily reflect the complexity, duration, and the resulting economic burden introduced by the Respondents' non-compliant and often obstructive posture.
2. Correspondence Reliance: The unconditional right to rely upon this correspondence, and all its concomitant assertions and factual recitations, for any lawful or juridical purpose is stringently reserved. This encompasses, but is not restricted to, the assertion of claims for additional or augmented costs at any point in limine to, or subsequent to, the issuance of any and all interim, interlocutory, injunctive, or final Orders by the Honourable Presiding Motion Judge of the Divisional Court within the ambit of this Judicial Review Application (JRPA) Proceeding. The finality of the Applicant's entitlement to these costs is, prima facie, self-evident upon review of the extant record, which unequivocally demonstrates the deliberate obfuscation and profound procedural non-compliance perpetrated by the named entities. The Applicant emphasizes that the entire procedural history, including the necessity of filing NOM No. 3, is a direct result of the systemic failure of the Respondents to honour basic obligations under the Rules of Civil Procedure and statutory requirements, particularly those concerning the timely filing of responsive materials and the Tribunal Record, thereby unnecessarily protracting the litigation process and significantly increasing the Applicant's costs.

III. JURIDICAL RATIONALE FOR IMPOSITION OF COSTS

A. Procedural Status and Failure to Establish Locus Standi

Notwithstanding that the Respondent Insurance Companies and the LAT are not, at this juncture, formally recognized as "parties" to the Judicial Review Application (JRPA)—a status only conferred upon the proper service and filing of a Notice of Appearance (NOA)—substantial pecuniary relief, specifically the joint and several apportionment of costs, is actively sought against them within the stipulated parameters of NOM No. 3. This paradoxical situation is observed to have arisen exclusively from their deliberate procedural inaction and neglect, which amounts to a tactical abuse of the litigation process. It is demonstrably incumbent upon the aforementioned Respondents, inclusive of the LAT, to deliver, file, and conclusively demonstrate proof of service of their requisite *NOA*s. Absent this indispensable procedural predicate, the Respondents are ipso facto precluded from filing any responsive material, including submissions in opposition to the joint and several apportionment of costs pursued by the Applicant, as Rule 1.04 compels strict procedural compliance. This procedural inability to file responsive submissions is a consequence directly traceable to the Respondents' own neglect or strategic election to maintain a position of deliberate procedural ambiguity, the legal ramification of which cannot be evaded. The continued participation of non-filing parties, even through passive defense, informal submissions, or unauthorized attendance at motion hearings, constitutes a profound abuse of process that warrants the most severe costs sanction available to the Court. The doctrine of non-appearance, whilst not strictly applicable in an administrative review context, informs the legal inference that a party who chooses not to formally engage is either conceding the merits of the application or demonstrating an egregious disregard for the judicial process by circumventing the cost consequences of the Rules of Civil Procedure. The Court is invited to consider the inherent unfairness and prejudice of allowing Respondents to informally interfere with the JRPA proceeding—thereby imposing cost-driving delays and unnecessary complexity—while simultaneously shielding themselves from the corresponding cost consequences mandated by the *Rules. Based upon a rigorous construction and precise application of the JRPA and the Rules of Civil Procedure (specifically, those rules governing intervention and participation), the LAT must inevitably serve and file its NOA should any contemplation of opposition to the relief sought against it be entertained, given that its foundational conduct and adjudicative decisions constitute the core subject matter of the review. Consequently, the presumptive framing of NOM No. 3 proceeds upon the foundational assumption of either immediate and forthcoming remedial steps being undertaken by the Respondents, or, alternatively, the judicial acceptance of their continuing procedural default, thereby warranting a decision upon the merits of the costs submissions alone. The Applicant's meticulous compliance with all procedural requirements, including the potential utilization of Form 57(B) analogues for each step where costs consequences arise, is observed to contrast sharply with the Respondents' profound dereliction of procedural duty. The Applicant's costs submissions, therefore, are predicated not only on success on the merits but specifically on the extraordinary expenses incurred merely to compel compliance with the most rudimentary aspects of litigation protocol, a cost driver that is wholly inexcusable on the part of the Respondent entities.

B. Evidentiary Basis for Extraordinary Costs and Syllogistic Conclusions

The quantum of costs sought is established and predicated upon the reasonable hourly rate ascribed to the Applicant, a financial metric fully commensurate with the Applicant's extensive prior litigation experience and documented successes attained in homologous domains of complex administrative and civil proceedings. It must be formally noted that the police services' classification of the underlying vehicular incident, as referenced in the attached document, has transitioned to a characterization consistent with doctrines of intentional tort and criminal assault, potentially encompassing the offenses of "Assault with a Weapon," "Battery," and/or "Attempted Murder," a perspective observed to be more consonant with certain jurisprudence within the United States legal system. Furthermore, the immediate, unauthorized, and undisclosed deactivation of the TD MyAdvantage application in October 2022, undertaken without proper consent, coupled with the subsequent failure of SNIC to comply with the mandatory provisions of PIPEDA and the attendant OPCC complaint by withholding the Applicant's personal information (specifically referencing section 9(4) of PIPEDA), logically compels the singular inference that the totality of the conduct, at least on the part of the Epstein Cole LLP Client and SNIC, constituted an attempted felonious act against the Applicant; it is unequivocally stated that this serious allegation is not extended to the LAT, TDHA, or TDGIC, but is focused upon the initial perpetrators. The calculated mens rea (deliberate intention) behind the actions of the Respondent Insurance Companies is inextricably linked to the financial thresholds established by the Statutory Accident Benefits Schedule (SABS) and the Minor Injury Guideline (MIG). The likelihood that an above-average SUV striking a stopped Insured Automobile on an uphill gradient, followed by the movement of the stopped vehicle by an agent of SNIC (not TDGIC) for approximately 30 feet, constitutes a mere accident or mistake is exceedingly remote. The principle of res ipsa loquitur (the thing speaks for itself) is invoked to underscore the inherent implausibility of the events being purely accidental. The fundamental strategic objective of the Respondent Insurance Companies is inferred to have been the avoidance of having the Applicant's benefits exceed the Monetary Injury Guideline (MIG), which provides a maximum treatment limit of $3,500. However, due to the Applicant's own subsequent expenditures and basic mathematical computation, the expenditures factually transcended the MIG threshold (specifically exceeding the $3,500 ceiling, and thus logically moving toward the $5,000 threshold for the potential classification of fraud under the Criminal Code). This financial escalation, which triggered the alleged intentional and deliberate vehicular incident coupled with the unlawful surveillance via the TD MyAdvantage App, thereby potentially escalated the matter to one of fraud over $5,000, which is precisely the threshold that triggers serious legal consequences under the Insurance Act and criminal law. The underlying theme of the Respondent Insurance Companies' strategy was, demonstrably, to avoid having the benefits exceed the MIG even though they did through the Applicant's own expenditures and simple math—a calculation which the Epstein Cole LLP Client could not competently perform in his SABS Manager of Spring 2023, with obvious non-coincidences, thereby necessitating a procedural reaction (the NOM No. 3). Once the benefits exceeded the MIG, the continued denial of access to the Applicant's own records, coupled with the unlawful usage of surveillance, became highly problematic and prejudicial, transforming a case of contested benefits into a potential matter of criminal or civil fraud and severe misconduct in litigation. In the present context, the Applicant is not bound by the criminal standard of proof, but is required merely to discharge the burden on a balance of probabilities, which necessitates a demonstration of clear, cogent, and convincing evidence regarding the entitlement to costs on the substantial indemnity scale due to the Respondents' calculated actions.

It is acknowledged that, pursuant to the October 2022 MRI Report prepared by Dr. Bohdan Lychaz, the Applicant's physical condition has been documented to be subject to a degenerative trajectory, specifically concerning the spine, which directly impinges upon the capacity to operate at the previous level of efficiency; to the extent that this circumstance may necessitate a nuanced or calibrated assessment of the proposed hourly rate, such consideration is deemed to reside within the purview of a cognitive, discretionary determination, recognizing that the evaluation of costs is fundamentally an 'art' rather than an exact 'science'. The immense majority of professional time expended was demonstrably necessitated by the post-facto discovery of critical facts and the arduous investigation of alleged malfeasance—a forensic process consuming a verifiable expenditure in excess of 1000 hours, as explicitly evidenced by the statutory declarations incorporated at Tabs #3 and #4 of the Motion Record (referencing Tab #22). This extraordinary time was required not for arguing the merits of the JRPA, but for unearthing procedural violations and systemic misconduct. The demonstrated success on the multitude of factual grounds arising, particularly the uncontested evidence that the Respondents failed to comply with the mandatory requirements of Rule 38.07(1) of the Rules of Civil Procedure (regarding service of motion material) while simultaneously engaging in reprehensible, improper, vexatious, and unnecessary conduct since November 27, 2024 (excluding the conduct of the AGO), fundamentally justifies the specific scale of substantial indemnity costs requested. Sound syllogistic conclusions, logically deduced from the exhaustive forensic investigation, which includes substantive admissions and unequivocal representations previously made by the Respondents or their authorized agents, definitively negate any tenable suggestion that the actions or inactions of the Respondent Insurance Companies or the LAT were attributable to mere mistake per se; thus, the intentionality and deliberation of the misconduct are, by logical extrapolation from the evidence, rendered entirely self-evident, demanding a costs award that reflects judicial condemnation of such calculated procedural resistance.

C. Public Interest Concerns, Statutory Non-Compliance, and Unreasonable Conduct

The issues presently under judicial review have substantially escalated beyond conventional administrative law principles, transitioning into matters of profound public interest and systemic regulatory failure that demands judicial censure. This escalation is directly attributable to the confluence of the LAT's conduct in a separate OIPC proceeding, the Respondent Insurance Companies' conduct in response to PIPEDA requests and ensuing complaints, and the specific alleged misconduct of various individuals associated with the Respondents, including the actions of Mr. Karat of the Respondent Insurance Companies (including Primmum) and the conduct of the Epstein Cole LLP Client during the protracted period of October 2024 to June 2025. The strategy of "drag, stall, and delay" by insurance defense, when synergistically coupled with underlying fraudulent activity, is ultimately unsustainable, as fraud is codified in Rule 59.06(2)(a) (allowing for setting aside judgments based on fraud) and constitutes an enduring matter of common law and equitable jurisdiction. The motive for such action, potentially originating from the Epstein Cole LLP Client's desperation and demonstrated by the failure to tender approved funds to a service provider in April 2023, is understandable only as a desperate act. However, the subsequent unlawful substitution of SNIC for TDGIC, achieved through the misleading use of a single fax number (416.774.3120) linked solely to SNIC, presents a strong inference that the substitution was executed by design to complicate the Applicant's claims and confuse the corporate relationship, a hallmark of sharp practice. This deliberate malfeasance serves as the context for the subsequent egregious conduct of the LAT, particularly the reprehensible, outrageous, and scandalous actions of Vice-Chair (VC) Lake in January 2024, the remedy for which was only achieved by the Applicant through the expenditure of professional time and disbursements to obtain certificates of status from FSRA (Financial Services Regulatory Authority of Ontario), a measure that should never have been necessary to compel administrative transparency. The refusal of the LAT to forthwith file the record of proceedings with the Divisional Court is now undeniably linked to the necessity of preventing said record from being uploaded to Case Center, which would have occurred under the previous Rules of Civil Procedure provisions; this intentional delay thereby avoided inclusion of potentially damaging documentation and further highlights the Tribunal's procedural dereliction of duty, creating additional public interest issues concerning the accessibility and integrity of adjudicative records. This refusal directly subverts the clear intent of section 20 of the Statutory Powers Procedure Act (SPPA) and section 10 of the JRPA, which demand the timely and complete submission of the record for judicial review. The Court must specifically address the key issue of the jurisdictional interplay and the statutory distinction between Tribunals Ontario and the LAT, particularly where Tribunals Ontario is asserted to be the central records holder, which arguably creates an internal barrier to the impugned decision makers' ability to comply with the statutory requirement to forthwith file the record. The failure to resolve this statutory tension internally places an undue, costly, and legally complex burden upon the Applicant to compel basic compliance. Furthermore, the Tribunal's contradictory practice of admitting that case conferences are to be recorded, while failing to record them, and the unremedied misrepresentation by Madam Justice Shore on October 10, 2025, concerning the obtainability of case conference records in the Divisional Court, is cause for substantial concern regarding public interest and procedural fairness, raising questions about the Tribunal's internal compliance culture. The necessity of avoiding a multiplicity of proceedings, as codified by Rule 59.06(2)(a), reinforces the urgency of resolving these public interest issues within the Costs Submissions framework. It is acknowledged that the Divisional Court, being a statutory court possessing equitable jurisdiction (pursuant to sections 96 and 97 of the CJA), cannot exercise its inherent jurisdiction to contravene the clear legislative intent of the Legislature or the Lieutenant Governor in Council (LGIC). Accordingly, officers of the court and litigants are expressly prohibited from encouraging or inciting the Divisional Court to pursue such an ultra vires course of action, a caution that must be extended to the Respondents' counsel who may seek to rely on procedural technicalities over substantive justice. The Applicant, recognizing the considerable judicial burden, has maintained scrupulous adherence to the relevant statutes and the Rules of Civil Procedure (distinguished from the Family Law Rules), which stands in stark contrast to the Respondents' conduct that has devolved the proceeding into a procedural "circus" both prior to and subsequent to the commencement of the JRPA Application. Such "thug-like" and cowardly behaviour is antithetical to the principles articulated in judicial pronouncements, such as the decision of The Honourable Justice Akazaki in Zurich v. Chubb (2024).

Moreover, the wilful and deliberate non-compliance by the LAT with its mandatory obligations under the Tribunals Adjudicative Records Act (TARA) in connection with the relevant record request constitutes an additional, independent, and compelling ground for the imposition of full indemnity costs against that entity, given that such conduct subverts the statutory integrity and transparency principles inherent in tribunal administration. This failure to comply with TARA necessitates extraordinary remedies and expenses to obtain the record that should have been provided forthwith as per section 10 of the JRPA. The assertion that the collective conduct of the Respondent Insurance Companies and the LAT has been nothing short of outrageous and scandalous since December 3, 2024, is considered an egregious understatement of the demonstrable facts. The indefensible decision to actively defend a JRPA Proceeding without having secured formal party status through the filing of a First Defence represents the very epitome of unreasonable, scandalous, and outrageous litigation behaviour, which behaviour should consequently attract the most severe financial sanction permissible under the Courts of Justice Act (CJA). Such conduct constitutes a profound disrespect for the judicial process and an intolerable dereliction of administrative duty, which has unnecessarily prolonged the Applicant's pursuit of justice. The costs claim is not sought for sympathy, but as a punitive measure against the systemic failures and intentional misconduct that necessitated the Applicant's extraordinary and costly efforts to enforce basic legal rights and procedures against entities that should be setting a standard for procedural probity.

D. Analogous Precedent and Statutory Violations

A compelling legal parallel may be drawn between the instant circumstances and jurisprudence, such as the precedent established in Bernstein v. Peoples Trust Company, wherein full indemnity or substantial indemnity costs were robustly awarded against financial institutions following intentional statutory violations that otherwise invited the imposition of punitive damages. The Applicant avers that the intentional and deliberate conduct by the Respondents, specifically the concerted effort to conceal evidence (e.g., the TD MyAdvantage data) and avoid procedural obligations (e.g., filing the NOA and Tribunal Record), transcends mere negligence and falls squarely into the realm of bad faith litigation conduct, which is the necessary prerequisite for an award on the substantial indemnity scale as a clear signal of judicial disapproval. The Court of Appeal has established that substantial indemnity costs are justified where the losing party has engaged in vexatious, frivolous, or highly inappropriate behaviour that has unduly complicated the litigation. While punitive damages are not capable of being awarded per se in a Judicial Review Application (as they are not classified as "actions"), the alleged intentional violation by the LAT of the mandatory provisions contained within section 10 and section 9(2) of the JRPA and the non-compliance with the *TARA furnishes an analogous foundation for the imposition of maximum costs. The status quo ante dictates that the purported service, but not filing or delivery, of the LAT's NOA by way of Ms. Maciel's correspondence is dispositive of the issue of procedural validity. Furthermore, any actions undertaken by an unlicensed law clerk not falling within the specified single employer exemption of the LSO By-Laws are subject to the direct and unassailable professional supervisory responsibility of Mr. Boyce, as a lawyer licensee in good standing with the Law Society of Ontario (LSO). This chain of professional accountability fortifies the argument that the LAT's procedural defaults were not merely administrative oversights but were the result of a fundamentally flawed and legally precarious institutional strategy, the cost of which should be borne by the institution, not the Applicant. The lack of requisite institutional independence of the LAT, as judicially determined in Shuttleworth, combined with the documented reporting of lawyers to the LSO by Mr. Weir for fulfilling their fiduciary duty to represent catastrophically impaired clients, demonstrates that exhaustion of remedies at the LAT, particularly following the dismissal of the First Insurer relief, is not a viable option for resolution, thereby necessitating the costly JRPA process in the first instance.

E. Decision Against Personal Costs and Mounting Disbursements

The determination to refrain from petitioning the Court for costs against counsel personally pursuant to Rule 57.07 was executed as a strategic and ethical calculation, primarily to ensure the maintenance of the appropriate metric or matrix for cost recovery. Given the evident reality that the Respondent Insurance Companies constitute multi-billion dollar entities, the proper and appropriate payor for the substantial costs incurred resides squarely with the corporate entities, whose resources are presumed to be sufficient to satisfy a substantial indemnity award, rather than any individual practitioner whose capacity to satisfy such an order is presumptively and significantly lower. The involvement of Mr. Nieuwland in the alleged TDI Kart Theft or the subsequent conduct of Mr. Papadimitropoulos involving fraud, impersonation, or concealment is not suggested by this office; nevertheless, the corporate Respondent Insurance Companies are inextricably bound by the misconduct of their agents and former agents, irrespective of the suspiciously timed exit of the Epstein Cole LLP Client from the TDIA Group to TD Bank. The underlying medical evidence, such as the commissioned MRI reports by registered medical professionals, possesses an undeniable objective veracity that transcends disagreements regarding the application of the SABS thereto; the represented approval of OCF-18 forms followed by the subsequent non-payment of that which was prima facie approved causes systemic harm to the entirety of the automotive insurance industry, as service providers rely on the timely fulfillment of such payments for the maintenance of their livelihoods and the integrity of the benefits system is undermined. The temporal convergence of various events, particularly the notifications on December 13, 21, and 28, 2024—the first of which coincided precisely with the payment for the Certificate of Perfection and the formal perfecting of the JRPA Application—introduces a level of temporal suspicion that cannot be legally ignored or judicially dismissed. It is acknowledged that potential interim, injunctive, and interlocutory orders may yield further evidence warranting a higher costs award; however, the Applicant refrains from factoring such speculative future events into the present definitive calculation. The continuing failure of the Respondents to secure locus standi further necessitated extensive legal research and procedural maneuvering to determine the appropriate jurisdictional angle for seeking costs against entities that improperly defend proceedings without formal participation, thereby generating additional and unnecessary hours of professional time, directly recoverable as part of the costs.

In furtherance of the Applicant's burden of proof and ongoing detailed analysis, the Applicant confirms that disbursements will be sought herein for payments made to Authorized Transcript Originals (ATOs) and for Request Form Undertakings related to the undisclosed criminal proceeding ("UCP"), as these expenditures were necessitated by the fictitious nature of the criminal proceeding, which the Ministry of the Attorney General (Mr. Sinnadurai) admitted was void ab initio due to its foundation upon a False Information Package and the lack of requisite statutory consent from the Crown to transfer the matter to the OCJ 10 Armoury Street Courthouse. The expenses incurred for these criminal proceedings, albeit fictitious and later admitted as such, are directly traceable to the fraudulent and vexatious conduct that originated with the Respondent Insurance Companies and therefore represent necessary and recoverable disbursements in this judicial review, pursuant to the principle that a wrongdoer must bear the cost of mitigating the effects of their own wrongful conduct. In furtherance of the Applicant's burden of proof and ongoing detailed analysis, it is further confirmed that formal requisitions have been issued, seeking unfiled or merely provided but unknown documents of the Respondents; the provision of these documents is again requested forthwith, regardless of their prior filing status, and the non-production of these documents will be grounds for increased costs.

IV. PROPOSITION FOR ACQUIESCENCE AND CONCLUDING MATTERS

A. Proposition for Acquiescence and Negotiation

Should the Respondent Insurance Companies and the LAT harbor a disposition toward acquiescence regarding the quantum of costs presently claimed, the provision of immediate notification is formally requested. Furthermore, it is hereby declared that the Applicant remains available to engage in separate and structured discussions, conducted with or without prejudice, with the impugned Respondent Insurance Companies and the LAT for the specific purpose of negotiating a resolution regarding costs should such a resolution be expediently desired by the aforementioned entities. Such notification or negotiation would consequently permit the Applicant to formally apprise the Divisional Court accordingly and to effect the necessary correlative amendment of the Compendium for NOM No. 3. The prompt exhibition of such consent or good faith negotiation would significantly promote judicial economy, avert the necessity for protracted argument on the issue of costs, and streamline the procedural requirements for the Honourable Court.

B. Adherence to Legal Principle and Mitigation of Costs

It is confirmed that the Applicant shall continue to place unwavering reliance upon strict compliance with the foundational "source laws" and the established common law jurisprudence as settled in the multitude of applicable areas, including the interpretation of procedural fairness and the standard for imposing elevated costs. The Applicant proceeded in good faith and upon the presumption that the Respondent Insurance Companies and the LAT had executed the filing of their Notices of Appearance; this presumption was subsequently proven to be erroneous, necessitating further procedural steps and cost accumulation. The representation made by Mr. Boyce in response to NOM No. 1, asserting that the delay was attributable merely to awaiting the direction of Madam Justice Shore, is rendered suspect given Her Ladyship's subsequent undisclosed prior judicial involvement in the matter, the inference from which is evident regarding the delay's justification; nonetheless, neither Mr. Boyce nor Madam Justice Shore possesses the authority to override statute from a Divisional Court post, reinforcing the LAT's independent statutory duty to file the record forthwith. The Applicant is not seeking emotional consideration but costs strictly in accordance with the CJA and the Rules of Civil Procedure for the unnecessary expenditures, professional time, and emotional duress caused by being subjected to a procedural "wild goose chase" and unlawful backlash—a pecuniary claim substantiated by the quantifiable time and resources wasted. The Applicant's professional assessment confirms that the principle that "there is never a wrong time to do the right thing" possesses particular cogency in the present context, and thus, any obscenely belated remedial conduct or procedural rectifications undertaken by the Respondent Insurance Companies or the LAT may potentially serve to mitigate or lessen the quantum of costs ultimately ordered; however, to achieve such an attenuating effect, those steps will need to be initiated and executed forthwith, demonstrably reversing the course of prior non-compliance. Absent such immediate and demonstrable bona fide action, the presumptive entitlement to costs shall remain undisturbed. The Applicant notes that "courage is contagious," but asserts that the pursuit of legal remedy against the demonstrated resistance of government entities and multi-billion-dollar corporations entails a highly quantifiable and recoverable risk, which should be reflected in the substantial or FULL indemnity scale sought to deter similar systemic misconduct in the future.

C. Service on Non-Respondents

A singular copy of these Costs Submissions may, at the Applicant's discretion, be provided to Non-Respondents, such as the Ministry of the Attorney General, solely for informational purposes regarding the ongoing procedural and substantive issues. Nonetheless, the formal provision of these submissions to all Non-Respondents shall definitively occur through the established Compendium, irrespective of whether any Respondents contemplate action to secure locus standi herein and subsequently endeavor to oppose NOM No. 3 in accordance with the Rules of Civil Procedure. Failure to observe this formality would, ipso facto, render any subsequent opposition ultra vires the established procedural framework and subject to immediate objection by the Applicant.

Subject I: Requisition for Mandated Electronic Document Upload Repository Access Subject II: Confirmation of Auxiliary Filings and Imminent Compendium Submission Pertaining to Notice of Motion Number 3 (the "NOM")

I cordially write regarding the above.
I adopt all definitions from previously, indirectly or directly, cited correspondence.
I. Concomitant Documentation and Auxiliary Filings
Confirmation is hereby provided that the filing of specific concomitant documentation has been duly effectuated and recorded on the court file, thereby rendering the record complete pro tanto.
Specifically, the following materials have been formally introduced:

1. The Costs Submissions (previously tendered for the Court's consideration); and,
2. The Requisitions of November 26, 2025 (the "Requisitions"), which are appended hereto as the sole Enclosures to this correspondence, and are cited herewith as necessary components of the official record.

II. Status of the Compendium Preparation
The preparation of the Compendium, an essential constituent of the court documents as per my Confirmation of Motion, approaches its conclusive phase.
A diligent verification shall consequently be undertaken to ensure that the requisite access credential, or invitatio, has been duly furnished for the purpose of commencing the electronic submission procedure

Case Center (the "Platform") prior to the cessation of the present business day. The provision of this access is a condition status quo ante for compliance with the forthcoming deadline et al.

III. Imperative for Electronic Upload Facility Access and Registry Compliance
Appreciative acknowledgment is extended to the Divisional Court for the prompt provision of the aforementioned access in the context of the instant NOM, which demands this preliminary facilitation. Although the filing of a supplementary Requisition is not deemed necessary per se to compel action, this communication serves as a conscientious notification to the Divisional Court Registrar to effectuate the timely issuance of the said invitatio. This is rendered essential by the stringent Deadline stipulated under the Rules of Civil Procedure (the "Rules") for the upload of the Compendium at 2:00 p.m. on the third day preceding the scheduled hearing.

Given that this calculation would ipso facto cause the filing deadline to fall upon a dies non (Saturday or Sunday) during the impending weekend, the litigant's entitlement to the Platform access is established. This requirement has been consistently articulated in the Divisional Court Guide (the "Guide"), the relevant provision of which explicitly states: "Case Center Case Center is an online document sharing platform which allows the Divisional Court to electronically view your court materials. The Divisional Court uses Case Center for both remote and in-person hearings. After you have brought an application or motion for leave, you will receive an email to register for Case Center and upload your materials. There is no fee to use Case Center."
It is further recalled that the previous Divisional Court Judicial Review Practice Application Guide (the "Previous Guide") stipulated an analogous system, specifically referencing CaseLines. The Previous Guide stated: "CaseLines CaseLines is an online document sharing platform which allows the Court to electronically view your materials. The Divisional Court uses CaseLines for remote and in-person hearings. After you have brought an application for judicial review, you will receive an email to register for CaseLines and upload your materials. There is no fee to use CaseLines." Non obstante veredicto, the Rules of Civil Procedure (the "Rules") definitively mandate the facility for litigants to upload documents that have not been submitted by the Registrar, pursuant to the recent amendment to the Rules. Accordingly, the Applicant maintains an a fortiori entitlement to, at minimum, inspect all documents uploaded to the repository and to reference the same with precision. The previous communications tendered regarding this exigency are herewith reiterated and relied upon.

In tandem with the access request, the Court is also directed to the Requisition filed under Rule 4.08 (the "Requisition for Copies") for certified copies of any documentation lodged on the Judicial Review Practice Application (the "JRPA Application"). This is necessitated by the observation that the Respondents have neither filed nor delivered their respective Notices of Appearance. I have done so out of an abundance of caution.

The timely provision of the access credential and the fulfillment of the Requisition for Copies are, therefore, requested with alacrity to avert any in limine non-compliance with the prescribed electronic filing Deadline. I also confirm that I received another auto-reply from Ms. Maciel in relation to the last email.

Yours most appreciatively and gratefully,

Subject: Provision and Formal Service of the Applicant's Compendium for Notice of Motion No. 3, Filed Pursuant to Required Interval Mandates in the OCPP

Dear Sirs/Mesdames/Other Gender-Neutral Pronouns:

I. Introduction and Purpose of Correspondence

The present correspondence is submitted for the singular and specific purpose of providing formal notification to the Honourable Court and all parties concerning the complete acta associated with the recent filing of the voluminous Compendium of Authorities and Evidence, pertaining to Notice of Motion No. 3 (hereafter, "NOM No. 3"). Pursuant to the established administrative directives mandating that submissions be lodged in designated page intervals, and as was previously undertaken, the entirety of the Compendium has been electronically filed and is concurrently being provided for formal service.

I confirm that I repeat and rely upon the previous above.

II. Submission Structure and Electronic Integrity

The meticulous and painstaking preparation of the Compendium is observed to ensure the utmost facilitation of the forthcoming judicial review and adjudication. The comprehensive evidentiary record, which encompasses Tabs 1 through 66, has been rigorously formatted such that all internal cross-references are secured with precise hyperlinking mechanisms, and the totality of the annexed documents are comprehensively bookmarked; this highly specialized design is specifically intended to preclude any administrative ambiguity or procedural impediment (in limine) that might otherwise arise from voluminous documentary submissions.

III. Dissemination Protocols

The necessity of strict adherence to electronic file size constraints, which necessitates the reduction of individual file capacity, mandates that the complete Compendium be formally partitioned into ten (10) distinct and sequential electronic filings. This procedural requirement, while demonstrably cumbersome, is executed in strict compliance with the established filing mandates and is not indicative of any failure to comply.

- Initial Components: The initial four components of the Compendium, designated formally as Parts 1 through 4, are herewith formally appended to this primary filing and are thereby considered formally served upon the parties copied herein.
- Residual Components: The residual six components, constituting Parts 5 through 10, shall be furnished to the aforementioned recipients via a series of discrete, subsequent electronic filings, all of which shall bear the operative and effective service date of November 28, 2025.

IV. Procedural Confirmations and Administrative Requests

- Non-Perfection of Appearances (unfiled and undelivered): It is affirmed ex abundante cautela that the records presently accessible do not manifest any demonstrable evidence of the Respondents having perfected the filing of their requisite Notices of Appearance in this jurisdictional matter. Confirmation is respectfully sought concerning the definitive file title employed by the Office of the Chief Justice and Provincial Court (OCPP) for the aforementioned Notice of Appearance, thereby ensuring the prompt updating and currency of the Compendium should any Respondent perfect their filing. Absent such formal notification, the presumption shall subsist that the Respondents elect not to proceed with the filing of said Notices.
- Service upon Non-Respondents: Furthermore, an unambiguous undertaking is herewith provided that the full Compendium shall be disseminated and formally served upon all known non-Respondents who may possess a material or determinative interest in the subject proceedings.
- Case Centre Access and Imminent Hearing: Given that the scheduled hearing date is now less than three (3) business days distant, access to the Case Centre platform is respectfully requested forthwith to facilitate the electronic filing of the complete record. It is further noted that the internal confirmation regarding the review of recent communications for such an invitation, subsequent to the filing of the Bill of Costs, may be still pending. The compliance with the filing protocol, which stipulates intervals of 500 pages, renders the conclusion self-evident that the full Compendium is provided in the exact format required for administrative processing, ensuring the integrity of the record is maintained status quo ante the hearing. The subsequent failure to review this material cannot, ipso facto, be attributed to any dereliction on the part of the Applicant and Moving Party.

V. Conclusion

The Applicant (Moving Party) remains, Sirs/Mesdames, with the highest professional consideration, acknowledging the Court's mandate for the rigorous and proper administration of justice. All of which is formally and respectfully submitted.

Thank you to all and wishing all a pleasant weekend!

Particulars of Electronic Transmission
Judicial File Designation: 24/718/00JR
SHORT STYLE OF CAUSE: McLean v. TDHA et al.
Character of Instrument: Official Transmittal of the Primary Draft Order Pertaining to Notice of Motion No. 3 (NOM #3)
Originating Entity: The Applicant and Moving Party in NOM #3
Submitted By: Mr. Kevin A. McLean (B.A., J.D., C.I.M.)

5533
Classification: PRIVILEGED AND CONFIDENTIAL
Medium of Conveyance: Via Electronic Means
Addressees: The Honourable Divisional Court
(With Corresponding Service Effected Upon All Named Respondents)
SUBJECT LINE: FORMAL SUBMISSION OF THE PRIMARY DRAFT ORDER, ARTICULATING THE PROPOSED ANCILLARY AND SUBSTANTIVE RELIEF AS OF NOVEMBER 30, 2025 BASED ON CURRENT CIRCUMSTANCES
SUBJECT LINE II: I WILL PROMPTLY NOTIFY THE DIVISIONAL COURT AND RESPONDENTS SHOULD I BE SERVED BY ANY OF THE NON-RESPONDENTS (RESPONDING PARTIES ON MOTION) IN RELATION TO THE RELIEF SOUGHT AGAINST THEM (CONFIRMATION NOTHING AS OF TODAY'S DATE)

I. INTRODUCTION AND TENDER OF THE PRIMARY DRAFT ORDER

This formal communication is hereby tendered to the Honourable Court with respect to the above-referenced proceeding, the paramount objective of which is the confirmation of the contemporaneous electronic filing of the Primary Draft Order (hereinafter designated as "the Draft Order") in both Portable Document Format (PDF) and Microsoft Word format, bearing the inscription of November 30, 2025. This specific iteration has been designated advisedly as a "Primary Draft Order," given that the proposed scope of the relief delineated therein has been judiciously concentrated upon the more fundamental, ipsum factum elements deemed indispensable for the restoration of the status quo ante and for facilitating the efficacious prosecution of this Application for Judicial Review. A deliberate election has been made by the Applicant to defer, pro tempore, certain forms of ancillary relief, such as the external transmission of records, which course of action manifests a measure of principled restraint and compassion, having been extended in consideration of the lamentable derelictions in judgment that have been committed by certain parties, particularly those whose private circumstances might hypothetically warrant such clemency. Notwithstanding the adoption of this measured approach, an unwavering commitment to the immediate and unencumbered restitution of the Applicant's sequestered property remains paramount, encompassing assets of substantial sentimental consequence, instruments deemed essential for the Applicant's quotidian professional and personal necessities, and, a fortiori, all documentation, records, and evidentiary materials that constitute the integral subject-matter of the within litigation.

II. ADHERENCE TO THE JURISDICTIONAL PRINCIPLES AND RESERVATION OF APPELLATE RIGHTS

It is herein unequivocally reaffirmed that the entire scope of the Applicant's substantive grievance is definitively directed toward the impugned judicial officer—specifically, the Honourable Madam Justice Shore—with respect to all conduct undertaken, whether such actions were formally disclosed or maintained in an undisclosed fashion. This singular focus shall remain immutable, irrespective of the precise impetus or motivational catalyst underlying the lines of conduct or judicial approaches that are demonstrably and prima facie inconsistent with the governing legal principles and established juridical precedents.
The entirety of the Applicant's rights is expressly reserved, the election having been made to maintain a deferential, "wait and see" approach concerning the highly protracted procedural timelines that have heretofore characterized the management of this file. Although the potential for dilatory or delinquent filing practices on the part of certain Respondents constitutes a discernible, if speculative, eventuality, any definitive pronouncement or extrapolation concerning such conjecture is, at this juncture, duly eschewed as premature.

III. PROCEDURAL DELIMITATIONS AND THE CONSTRAINTS UPON AVAILABLE REMEDIES

It is submitted that the Applicant is procedurally constrained by the prescriptive dictates of the Ontario Rules of Civil Procedure, R.R.O. 1990, Reg. 194. Had the inherent jurisdiction of the Court permitted, a substantial preference would have been exercised for the initiation of a new, distinct proceeding, such as the mechanism of a Petition grounded in formalized allegations of fraud, analogous to the procedural framework accessible within the Province of British Columbia. Such an alternative procedural modus operandi would have afforded the opportunity to seek commensurately expanded and additional damages. Nevertheless, confinement is necessitated by the jurisdictional ambit of the province of the Applicant's residence and the venue of the operative facts, thereby demanding the filing of the within Motion for the setting aside of all impugned steps, documents, or Orders, pursuant to the prescriptive ambit of the Rules of Civil Procedure. Consequentially, the Applicant is rigorously compelled to advance the entirety of the requisite relief within the extant fiscal and procedural parameters of this singular Judicial Review Application (JRPA) Proceeding.

IV. STATUS OF OUTSTANDING MANDATES AND ALLEGATIONS OF OBSTRUCTION

As of the date inscribed upon this submission, the absence of any restitution of the unlawfully divested property is averred; furthermore, no provision of duplicate Compact Discs (CDs) has been effected as mandated by Request Form Undertakings, nor has there been any transmission of audiotapes and materials for transcription to the Applicant's authorized transcribing officers (ATOs). This systematic obstruction of the requisite paths to the procurement of evidence is specifically attributed to the sustained actions of the Honourable Madam Justice Shore.

In the contingency that no unforeseen, belated filings of Notices of Appearance (NOAs) by the Respondent Insurance Companies or any other responding parties are effectuated, this Draft Order shall stand as the Applicant's definitive, substantive proposal, thereby affording authorization for the Applicant to proceed forthwith by way of written argument, in limine.

V. THE RATIONALE UNDERGIRDING THE COMPENDIUM AND THE ALLEGED OPERATIVE FRAUD

Detailed particulars have been meticulously incorporated into the prescribed form, providing both a reference to the substantive background and a comprehensive, granular cross-reference to every document contained within the "Compendium For NOM #3." While the submission of a Compendium is not strictly mandatory where a motion remains unopposed, the Applicant was compelled to undertake this extraordinary quantum of work to ensure that all relevant filed documentation was properly collated, thereby facilitating its seamless upload to Case Center by the Applicant, a procedure now required under the pertinent amendments to the Rules of Civil Procedure for matters within the Toronto Region.

It is formally asserted that the actus reus of the property's unlawful divestiture, when considered within the totality of the attendant circumstances, was deliberately orchestrated. The apparent design was predicated upon the operational premise that Rule 68 of the Rules of Civil Procedure only mandates the filing of a factum and an Application Record thirty days subsequent to the filing of the Record of Proceeding in the relevant Court. In the context of a Divisional Court matter, the Tribunal is statutorily obliged to file the Record forthwith. However, the demonstrated modus operandi of the Licence Appeal Tribunal (LAT) is well-established, evidenced by the fact that the compilation of the Record of Proceeding was not even contemplated until February 2025.

The logical extrapolation derived from the confluence of surrounding events—specifically, the unlawful divesting of the Applicant's property and electronic devices, conjoined with the actions of Mr. Karat, who acted in concert with the Applicant's Landlord, and the nexus to other ostensibly nefarious public mischief complaints involving the Epstein Cole LLP client in June 2025—suggests a calculated attempt to incapacitate the Applicant. The manifest intent was apparently to prevent the timely filing of the Application Record, thereby unilaterally arresting the commencement of the "factum and application record" procedural clock.

It is submitted that such machinations demonstrate a fundamental jurisprudential ultra vires misunderstanding concerning the paramountcy doctrine within the Canadian legal framework, which deficiency is perhaps an understandable failing given the purported lack of formal, accredited legal education (law clerk, paralegal, or law school) on the part of the aforementioned private actors in the Province of Ontario.

VI. CONCLUDING ASSERTIONS AND FINAL SUBMISSIONS

To the extent that any Non-Respondents effect service of documents upon the Applicant, the Applicant undertakes to promptly furnish these materials to this Honourable Divisional Court. Should said Non-Respondents fail to effect service by the close of the business day, given that their initial service was marginally later than that of the primary Respondents, notification of this material omission shall likewise be rendered to the Honourable Court.

The continuity of the LAT's alleged fraud is evidenced by its persistent refusal to produce a copy of the Two Undisclosed Motion Orders, an act which may have served as the fundamental causa causans for the initial illegal seizure of property. Simultaneously, this procedural malaise has transpired against a backdrop of purported attempts at extortion perpetrated by Mr. Karat and Mr. Papadimitropoulos during periods when their professional engagement appeared to be minimal.

A copy of this email and Draft Order (November 30, 2025), while reserving all rights should anything change between now and end of business day tomorrow. However, if not, then by all accounts, this motion will proceed unopposed even against Non-Respondents. Of course, I have remained and will continue to be duly diligent in attempting to obtain new facts or evidence, including that which was and is subject to special categories of causes of nullities but to the extent that this NOM #3 proceeds unopposed then that will conclude this proceeding vis-a-vis those issues which I boldly presume for some will be a relief (pardon the pun).

As noted on October 26, 2025, there is no quid pro quo for Madam Justice Shore as I will pursue all independent avenues of recourse in the public interest and many of them are in the public interest. She nearly killed me with her unlawful approach to jurisdiction, which perhaps with her lack of experience in that domain could be understandable, and the Undisclosed Criminal Proceeding but I commend the MAG on some of its honesty in the Summer of 2025, and perhaps the intentional tipping me to the name of the presiding judge in the UCP by the unilateral selection of Mr. Sinnadurai. That I will never know and we need not know.

If it was not clear either, active and similar steps have been taken in relation to JP Jiri as I verily believe that he had an active role in tacit adoption or facilitation of the Intake Court Endorsement [Sic] but he is entitled to due process in that regard as well. Suffice it to say that OCJ Brampton with RSJ Paul Currie at the helm for some time has enough corruption surrounding it considering his assaults and batteries of females and coercing law enforcement to render that my last time into the Brampton area (i.e. the personal service on JP Jiri).

I can also confirm that active steps have been taken in relation to various members of law enforcement with independent oversight bodies in the public interest.

Of course, any further omissions or commissions in unlawful fashion are ones that I could raise in that regard under my right and duty to do sand in accordance with the "open court principle". I trust that will not be necessary or no further evidence will arise herein in light of sagacious, erudite and pointed precedent of law affirmed by the most Honourable Mr. Justice Akazaki of the SCJ (Toronto Region) in Zurich v. Chubb (2024) regarding vital treatments and benefits that have been required in light of degenerative and deteriorating conditions (see: most recent MRI of 2025).

The Draft Order has been duly submitted in both formats to facilitate any desired refinements by a presiding judicial officer, should such modification be deemed requisite for the effective administration of justice.

I reserve the right to rely on any correspondence herein including that which may be appended to an affidavit out of an abundance of caution and for record keeping purposes.

Respectfully Submitted,

May it please the Court, Esteemed Counsel, and the Distinguished Registrar: The present communication is tendered as a matter of exigency and procedural necessity, serving to formally document the recent procedural acta of the Applicant.

I. Confirmation of Procedural Compliance and Technological Impediment

This correspondence is formally submitted to the Divisional Court and all interested parties pertaining to the aforementioned judicial review proceeding. The imperative requiring the explicit inclusion of the esteemed Registrar of the Divisional Court, Ms. Gentles, in this electronic transmission is directly borne of the technological impediment encountered post meridiem yesterday, to wit, the explicit notification received that the Court's primary electronic receptacle of judicial communications was rendered inaccessible, having achieved its maximum storage capacity.

An equitable indulgence is respectfully sought from the Registrar subsequent to this unforeseen actus involving the judicial infrastructure. This procedural documentation confirms unequivocally that this exceptional circumstance arose subsequent to the mandatory submission of the Confirmation of Motion, as is statutorily mandated by the strictures of Rule 37.10.1 of the Rules of Civil Procedure—a critical prerequisite to the proper scheduling and hearing of motions. The Confirmation of Motion, dated November 24, 2025 (Enclosure 1), was duly filed prior to the technological issue. This act, confirming the motion for the return date of December 3, 2025, ad majorem cautelam, serves to dispel any potential ambiguity concerning the Applicant's diligent compliance with the Rules preceding the Court's electronic failure. The maintenance of the status quo ante regarding the procedural timetable is thus demonstrably supported by the Applicant’s antecedent adherence to the Rules.

II. Effectuation of Service Upon Non-Respondents: Supererogatory Prudence

It is herewith further confirmed that, as an exercise of supererogatory prudence and to ensure absolute procedural rectitude across the spectrum of all potentially affected parties, formal service has been effectuated upon the Non-Respondents. These entities are precisely those parties designated in the affidavit of service formally sworn on November 21, 2025. This requisite service, rigorously completed on this date, encompassed the specific judicial documentation enumerated hereunder:

1. The Draft Order for NOM #3, dated November 30, 2025 (Enclosure 3). This instrument represents the Applicant’s proposed outcome, detailing the precise and comprehensive relief sought from the Court, and is necessary to fully apprise all parties of the intended final disposition.
2. The Compendium for NOM #3, which was previously served and officially filed on November 28, 2025. The Compendium, serving as the compilation of essential documentary evidence and authorities, is fundamental to the Court's assessment of the merits of NOM #3.

The rationale underlying the service upon Non-Respondents is anchored in the principle of fundamental fairness and the avoidance of any claim of procedural ultra vires pertaining to the relief sought, even if such parties have not formally delivered a Notice of Appearance. The overarching goal is the complete transparency of all acta relevant to this proceeding.

III. Reaffirmation of Motion Particulars and Rigorous Temporal Stipulations

The integrity of the previous procedural submissions is strictly maintained. This includes the origination of the Applicant's Notice of Motion Number Three (NOM #3) on November 17, 2025. Its scheduled return date of December 3, 2025, was established via the aforementioned Confirmation of Motion (Enclosure 1), and was predicated upon the subsequent rendering of service upon the Responding Parties with a minimum of fourteen (14) days' notification.

The underlying procedural premise remains the inherent and non-negotiable necessity to commence such an ancillary motion intra the established Divisional Court proceedings, herein denoted formally as the Judicial Review Procedure Act (JRPA) Proceeding. The gravity of this NOM #3 is underscored by the substantive relief sought, including, inter alia, a Costs Award claimed on a full-indemnity basis in the substantial, as meticulously articulated in the Draft Order (Enclosure 3).

Said origination and service were comprehensively accompanied by the requisite filing and remittance of the fee for the NOM #3, the concurrent service of the Factum for Motion In Writing, the Motion Record, the prior Draft Order (November 19, 2025), and corroborative proof of service rendered upon both the Respondents and the Non-Respondents (cf. Tab #22 of the Motion Record for NOM #3 and the corresponding Compendium). The Applicant's timely fulfillment of these prerequisites establishes a prima facie case for the motion's readiness for determination.

The rationale compelling the service and submission of a Compendium for NOM #3 is, ipso facto, axiomatic within this electronic record’s history, facilitating the expeditious and comprehensive review of the relevant materials by the adjudicative body. Moreover, subsequent to a rigorous extrapolation and computation of the temporal parameters stipulated within the Rules of Civil Procedure ('Computation of Time'), the Responding Parties are theoretically afforded the potential to effectuate the filing and service of responsive documentation until the conclusion of the prevailing business day. There subsists a demonstrable ambiguity regarding the precise commencement of the period designated as 'within 10 days' after the complete service of the Moving Party's material (November 19, 2025), necessitating definitive clarification on whether this initial date is permissibly included for the purposes of temporal calculation pursuant to the Rules.

The precise nature of the Responding Parties' obligation to respond is further contingent upon their prior 'Delivery' of Notices of Appearance with requisite proof of service—a foundational jurisdictional fact which remains, in the context of certain parties, unsubstantiated at this juncture. This lack of formal appearance by certain Respondents impedes the procedural clarity and necessitates the Applicant's conservative adherence to maximum notice periods.

IV. Permissible Responses and Administrative Obligation

Consequently, should any or all Responding Parties elect to furnish responsive material to the Court office, via the Online Case and Court Process Portal (OCPP), they are constrained by the following delineated options, pursuant to O. Reg. 465/93, s. 4 (2):
(a) A formal consent to the motion, which definitively curtails any requirement for further judicial deliberation on the contested matters;
(b) A definitive notice that the responding party shall not oppose the motion, a position that, while not consenting, removes adversarial contestation;
(c) A motion record, a notice signifying acceptance of a written hearing and determination under this Rule, and a factum entitled 'Factum for a Motion in Writing', meticulously delineating their comprehensive legal argument; or
(d) A notice signifying their in limine intention to present oral argument, accompanied by any material intended to be relied upon by the party, requiring the Court to allocate formal hearing time.
It is further recognized that the procedural amendments implemented within the Toronto Region, which govern the administration of these proceedings, necessitate the eventual uploading of the Compendium for NOM #3 into the digital repository known as Case Centre, an administrative requirement now incumbent upon the esteemed Registrar's office to ensure the electronic accessibility of the complete file.

The Registrar, Ms. Gentles, is once again extended profound appreciation for the aforementioned indulgence regarding the unanticipated technological deficiency. It is fervently hoped that the Divisional Court's staff shall execute the necessary technical restitutio in integrum and expeditiously resolve the current technological issue afflicting the Court’s electronic messaging capability, thereby restoring the proper channel for judicial communication.

Respectfully Submitted and Executed,

/s/Mr. Kevin A. McLean (BA, JD, CIM)

TO:
THE DIVISIONAL COURT (Kind Attention: Registrar Ms. Gentles)
COPIES TO: Respondents herein
Subject: confirmation that none of the “Responding Parties” have opposed my NOM #3 (November 17, 2025) to be heard in writing
Subject II: confirmation that none of the “Responding Parties” have objected to NOM #3 being heard in writing – thereby obviating the necessity for any Zoom coordinates or in person appearances

I. CONFIRMATION OF PRIOR ELECTRONIC TRANSMITTAL

The Honourable Court is respectfully apprised that the antecedent electronic transmittal, directed toward the Divisional Court's designated electronic repository, was successfully effected without incident, procedural impediment, or the generation of any automated non-delivery reportage. It appears that the issue with the full mailbox of the Divisional Court’s general email for correspondence has been cleared out. The efficacy of the communication mechanism is therefore conclusively affirmed.

II. AFFIRMATION OF NON-RECEIPT OF RESPONDING MATERIALS AND IPSO FACTO CONSEQUENCE
Out of an abundance of cautious and meticulous precaution, and consistent with the imperative codified in the Rules of Civil Procedure concerning the notification of the "Registrar" (as defined in Rule 1.03 of the Rules of Civil Procedure—where "registrar means the Registrar of the Divisional Court or Court of Appeal, or a local registrar of the Superior Court of Justice, as the circumstances require"), it is herewith formally confirmed. As of the terminus of the prescribed business day, no documentation responsive to Notice of Motion (NOM #3), accompanied by the prerequisite evidence of service, has been tendered or received from any of the designated Respondent or Non-Respondent entities.
This demonstrable dereliction, ipso facto, dictates that the aforementioned NOM #3 shall proceed on Wednesday, December 3, 2025, as an unopposed application for the entirety of the substantive and ancillary relief sought within its compass.

III. EXTRAPOLATION OF LEGAL PRINCIPLES AND PROCEDURAL DETERMINATION

The substantive relief sought by the Applicant is comprehensive, encompassing, inter alia, the imperative and required, by, inter alia, Rule 59.06(2)(a) (see: requirements denoted in the BCCA's comparativie provincial jurisdictional analysis (i.e. Ontario rules of civil procedure require such a motion to have been served and filed in the proceeding where the facts arising or discovered and/or any alleged fraud, arising or discovered has so occurred (nota bene: in effect, there is but one route herein in Ontario when such occurrences have happened and that is the filing of a motion in the instant JRPA Proceeding) setting aside of specific juridical steps, filed documents, and/or antecedent judicial orders predicated upon a comprehensive and multifaceted matrix of available legal grounds. These grounds include, but are not strictly limited to, those rooted in the principles of equity, the inherent jurisdiction of this superior court, the common law, and various appurtenant statutory and prescribed provisions, particularly where an action is determined to have been ultra vires. Furthermore, given the conspicuous and uncontroverted absence of any formal, written objection from the Responding Parties (encompassing more than merely Respondents) concerning the proposed modality of disposition, the adjudicative process for NOM #3 shall, in accordance with standard practice, proceed by way of a written hearing, thereby rendering the physical attendance of the Applicant and Moving Party a superfluous requirement.

IV. CONCLUSION AND TENDER OF JUDICIAL ASSISTANCE

In the pervasive spirit of professional comity and facilitation of the judicial function, the Applicant remains readily available should the Honourable presiding motions Judge (the "Presiding Motions Judge") deem it necessary to pose any queries pertaining to the filed motion documents, either contemporaneously with or subsequent to the determination. This availability extends to the potential exigency of drafting a formal order (to the extent that the most recent formal draft order requires refinement) for the judicial consideration, requisite review, signature, and subsequent entry by the Divisional Court presiding motions Justice.

It is respectfully noted, however, that given the complete service and filing of the Notice of Application (the JRPA Application (November 15, 2024)), Notice of Motion (November 17, 2025), and Compendium for NOM #3 (November 28, 2025), the requisite endorsement of an order, pursuant to Rule 59 of the Rules of Civil Procedure, may be efficaciously executed upon one of the afore-listed primary originating documents, thereby potentially obviating the requirement for a separate, subsequent instrument.

As this NOM #3 is unopposed by all Responding Parties, I will respect their rights of non-opposition, although consent would have been preferable and respectful of Divisional Court's resources, I may confine my future communications exclusively to the Divisional Court. Nonetheless, should any copies of such documents be requested by Responding Parties, I shall provide them without delay (i.e. forthwith).

I shall notify the other Responding Parties of the same.

Thank you kindly.

SUBJECT I: JUDICIAL REVIEW APPLICATION NO. DC-24-00000718-00JR; McLean v. TDHA et al.

SUBJECT II: URGENT CONFIRMATION OF FILING: MULTI-PURPOSED REQUISITION FORM (FORM 4(E), DIVISIONAL COURT FORM 1, AND APPLICATION HEARING REQUEST) AND COMPLIANCE WITH AN IMMEDIATE ALERT TO THE DIVISIIONAL COURT OFFICE IN TORONTO REGION PURSUANT TO THE ABOVE AND IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE DIVISIONAL COURT PRACTICE DIRECTION IN THIS REGARD

I. INTRODUCTION AND ADOPTION OF LEGAL DICTION

Formal communication is herein extended concerning the above-noted proceeding, the principal subject of which pertains to the time-sensitive submission of dispositive documentation tendered in anticipation of the scheduled return date for Notice of Motion Number Three (hereinafter, the "NOM #3"), presently docketed for judicial consideration on Wednesday, December 3, 2025. This exigent transmission constitutes the requisite notification to the Trial Coordination Office staff concerning the time-critical nature of the contemporaneously filed instruments, which form an integral component of the comprehensive legal argument and evidentiary submissions that comprise the acta of the Application for Judicial Review. The gravity of the NOM #3 is predicated upon substantive legal challenges to the foundation of the proceeding itself, thus demanding rigorous attention in limine.

For the purpose of maintaining conceptual precision and jurisprudential consistency throughout this documentation, all definitions, stipulations, and qualifications articulated in previously, indirectly or directly, cited correspondence, records, and judicial materials comprising the comprehensive acta of this matter are meticulously adopted, thereby obviating the necessity for their repetitive restatement. Furthermore, the Rules of Civil Procedure, R.R.O. 1990, Reg. 194, which govern the procedural modus operandi of this Court, shall be hereinafter formally designated as the "Rules."

II. PROCEDURAL PRECEDENT AND THE MANDATE FOR URGENT SUBMISSION

The present official correspondence is necessitated by a strict, non-derogable adherence to the Divisional Court Practice Direction, Part A.2: Filing Online Filing for Toronto Divisional Court Matters (hereinafter, the "Practice Direction"), which unequivocally mandates that, in circumstances where an urgent hearing request is prosecuted, a corresponding electronic mail transmission must be forwarded to the appropriate administrative office. This is required, inter alia, to furnish notification to the pertinent staff of the submission's critical nature subsequent to its electronic lodgement via the Online Court Case Portal (hereinafter, the "OCCP"). The efficient and salutary operation of this dual-alert mechanism is calculated to ensure that time-critical filings are not permitted to languish within the generalized queue of submissions, but rather ascend immediately to the requisite level of judicial and administrative prioritization, a measure essential for the prevention of procedural laches.

The essential prima facie basis for establishing the requisite temporal urgency of this alert is unequivocally demonstrated by the compelling convergence of two pivotal factors: (a) the recent discovery of crucial, compelling evidence and foundational facts, which attained definitive confirmation as of December 1, 2025, and which provide the direct causa causans for the NOM #3 filed on November 17, 2025. This newly discovered evidence precipitates an argument that prior issues may be rendered non-justiciable, thereby altering the essential locus standi of certain claims and necessitating the immediate intervention of the Court. (b) The imminent spatial proximity of the underlying hearing date is irrefutable; the return date for the NOM #3 is demonstrably fewer than three business days distant from the date of the submission, which ipso facto characterizes the documents as time-sensitive pursuant to the governing Practice Direction. This comprehensive procedural diligence constitutes not merely an exercise in formality but a foundational, prophylactic safeguard, the objective of which is to ensure that submissions of potentially dispositive magnitude are identified and prioritized by the Court staff, thereby protecting the proper administration of justice from unnecessary logistical delay or potential ultra vires continuation of non-justiciable controversies, thus upholding the public interest in judicial economy.

III. CONFIRMATION OF INSTITUTIONAL FILING MULTIPLICITY

The primary and solemn purpose of this communication resides in the authoritative confirmation of the methodical and deliberate filing strategy executed within the OCCP, the intent of which is to ensure absolute and prophylactic compliance with all pertinent, potentially overlapping procedural requirements imposed by the Divisional Court, thereby foreclosing any obiter dictum concerning procedural error.

Due the inherent composite nature of the submission—which formally encompasses the need for a statutory Requisition (mandating action by the Registrar, per Form 4(E)), a Written Request (seeking specific administrative direction, per Form 1), and an Application Hearing Request (necessary for the calendaring of the urgent motion)—and in order to rigorously mitigate any latent or perceived risk of procedural misclassification that might otherwise consequentially impede the necessary and expedient processing of the urgent request, the Applicant elected to upload the singular, identical substantive document under three separate and distinct procedural headings within the OCCP. This triplicate process was judiciously undertaken to preclude any ambiguity in the Court's electronic filing system regarding the document's manifold function, which is simultaneously an Application Hearing Request (requesting the date), a Requisition (demanding the mandatory action by the Registrar), and a Written Request (confirming the urgency pursuant to the Practice Direction).

The document, which is formally titled "Requisition - DC Request - Hearing Request - URGENT - Newly Discovered Evidence - OCCP - Issues No Longer Justiciable - APPLICANT - Mr McLean - 1-Dec-2025" (hereinafter, the "Urgent Requisition Document"), was filed concurrently and precisely under the following three official classifications:

1. Divisional Court Form 4(E): Requisition
2. Divisional Court Form 1: Requisition or Written Request
3. Divisional Court Form (unnumbered): Application Hearing Request

This calculated redundancy was implemented as an exercise in procedural prudence and abundant caution, intended solely to expedite the Court's ministerial processing of this urgent filing and thereby avert any potential prejudice, irreparable or otherwise, that might ensue from the current status quo ante of the judicial file, securing the constitutional right to a timely hearing.

A. Evidentiary Confirmation of Procedural Compliance

The Applicant's adherence to the Practice Direction and established best practices for the lodging of complex, urgent materials is demonstrably complete. The appended Appendix #1, which provides a transactional summary of the filing information, functions as conclusive evidentiary confirmation of the successful electronic transmission of the Urgent Requisition Document under the three aforementioned procedural classifications, which must be accepted as the definitive record of lodgement.

IV. THE IRREMEDIABLE EFFECT OF RESPONDENTS' PROCEDURAL DEFAULT (NULLA DIES SINE LINEA)

It is confirmed unequivocally, by reference to the public record accessible through the Online Court Case Portal (the "OCCP"), which is deemed the final administrative arbiter of documents filed, that the Respondents have entirely neglected to file their requisite Notices of Appearance (hereinafter, the "Notice of Appearance") or effectuate the delivery thereof to the Applicant, a necessary sine qua non for participation. This systemic and irremediable lacuna in the fundamental procedural requirements constitutes a matter of demonstrable, objective certainty that cannot be rebutted by collateral assertion or procedural challenge.

Pursuant to the mandatory provisions articulated within the Rules, specifically those governing the requirement for filing an initial defending document, this substantive default ipso facto operates to render the defaulting parties entirely divested of their locus standi and consequently prohibited from the receipt of any subsequent steps, documents, or filings in this proceeding. This prohibition is absolute and encompasses any communication or document, inclusive of the document designated as Document #48, should that document be determined to be one that required service upon a party enjoying procedural standing. The failure to file

Notice of Appearance thus strips the Respondents of their de jure right to be served, converting their status to that of non-participants in the ongoing litigation process.

Assurance is further provided that any belated filing of the Notice of Appearance shall be preemptively opposed by the Applicant. Notwithstanding this position, the infallible conclusion must be drawn that should any such Notice of Appearance be filed tomorrow, such lodgement would, in any event, post-date the Applicant's time-sensitive submission of the Urgent Requisition Document. This temporal sequence dictates that the Respondent Insurance Companies, the LAT et al., and the Non-Respondents (who are acting as Responding Parties) have not, as of the time of the Applicant's definitive filings, formally opposed or challenged any relief being sought against them (where applicable) in the NOM #3 or any other timely submission.

Consequently, the Divisional Court is not merely absolved of the obligation to furnish further notice to these procedurally delinquent parties; it is, in point of fact, prohibited from serving any subsequent notice of steps or documents herein, given the Respondents' failure to file a first defence or deliver their Notice of Appearance. This strict adherence to procedural mandates is essential for maintaining the integrity of the process and ensuring the Court is not placed in the position of providing preferential treatment to defaulting parties. This assertion constitutes definitive confirmation that the inclusion of the Respondents in the electronic transmission of this singular correspondence shall denote the definitive and final instance of such communication relative to this proceeding (the ultima ratio of service). Furthermore, assurance is provided that monitoring of the OCCP will continue, thereby allowing for the immediate and decisive procedural action necessary should any delinquent filing of the Notice of Appearance by any Respondent belatedly transpire, which would, in and of itself, require subsequent judicial consideration.

V. CONCLUSION AND REQUEST FOR EXPEDITIOUS PROCESSING

Given the comprehensive nature of the Urgent Requisition Document, which articulates concerns regarding issues that are arguably no longer justiciable and introduces newly discovered evidence of compelling probative value pertinent to the NOM #3, it is respectfully submitted that the attendant circumstances a fortiori mandate the immediate attention and high-priority processing of these documents, thereby mitigating the risk of judicial resources being expended on an application that may have been fundamentally altered by the new evidence.

A. Processing Timeline and Integrity of Filings

Note is hereby taken that all filings requiring administrative processing have been particularized to ensure their proper uploading and availability on or before the return date of December 3, 2025, at the hour of 9:30 a.m. While it is acknowledged that the Registrar is not subject to a specific administrative deadline for general filings, a critical temporal constraint is imposed upon the Applicant with respect to the uploading of the Compendium for NOM #3. This must be effectuated promptly to forestall the potential for any further unauthorized intrusion or fraud pertaining to personal information, personal health information, and confidential or privileged material, an egregious possibility that regrettably materialized on the day immediately subsequent to the service of the NOM #3 upon the Respondent Insurance Companies and the Licence Appeal Tribunal (LAT et al.). Whether this confluence of events represents merely a coincidence is a query that inherently furnishes its own conclusion. The gravity of these circumstances dictates, at the minimum, the necessity of a definitive judicial decision to ensure that these allegedly malicious and fraudulent actors are placed unequivocally under the imperium of contempt, should they intentionally disregard or disobey orders subsequently issued by this Honourable Divisional Court or by the presiding motions judge on Wednesday, December 3, 2025. The prompt execution of this ministerial duty is imperative to ensuring that the Court may discharge its supervisory function over the inferior tribunals and matters properly before it.

I is formally requested that the esteemed Registrar, Ms. Gentles, issue instructions to the requisite Court personnel for the immediate and expeditious processing of the Urgent Requisition Document as an urgent filing, thereby enabling the acta for the NOM #3 to be completed without further administrative protraction, which is critical for safeguarding the integrity of the imminent hearing.

The Court's indispensable function and the meticulous efforts required of the Registrar and staff in the administration of this judicial review application are acknowledged with profound appreciation and deference.

A confirmation is provided that the Applicant is grateful for the anticipation of compliance, the expected cooperation, and the prioritization of these time-sensitive requisitions and requests, which is essential to the due administration of justice.

I confirm that I have moved as expeditiously as I could involving this evidence as it only came to my attention on December 1, 2025, when perusing the features of the OCPP. Even the OCPP tech professionals can fact check the same.

Respectfully Submitted,

SUBJECT: IMMEDIATE REQUIREMENT OF STAMPING THE OUTSTANDING SUBMITTED FILINGS TO THE DIVISIONAL COURT WITH PARTICULAR REFERENCE TO THE FILED MOTION RECORD (INCLUDING THE NOM #3, FACTUM, MOTION RECORD, DRAFT ORDER, AFFIDAVIT OF SERVICE ET AL) (SEE: 4B3F-88B8-7280-8DEB)

Dear Divisional Court, Ms. Gentles et al:

I write regarding the above on an urgent basis. As you know from the email of last night, it is unequivocal that none of the Respondents "filed" a "First Defence" and "delivered" their Notices of Appearances. Pursuant to Rule 38.07(2)(a) to (c), which is reproduced:

"(2) A respondent who has not delivered a notice of appearance is not entitled to,
(a) receive notice of any step in the application;
(b) receive any further document in the application, unless,
    (i) the court orders otherwise, or
    (ii) the document is an amended notice of application that changes the relief sought;
(c) file material, examine a witness or cross-examine on an affidavit on the application…"

Were entitled to receive notice of "any step" in the JRPA Application (document #1 in the record of proceeding of the JRPA Proceeding); receive any further "document" in the JRPA Application; or file material on the JRPA Application.

"Document" includes data and information in electronic form (see: Rule 1.03 of the Rules of Civil Procedure).

As such, with this unequivocal proof, this request is squarely and exclusively provided to the Divisional Court and will be so on a go-forward basis.

I refer to the language in the Wednesday, November 26, 2025, email which states:

> "Your documents will be reviewed by court staff and you will be notified within three business days…."

Based on not counting the first day which was Wednesday, November 26, 2025, within three business days was yesterday, Monday, December 1, 2025.

Since the filings unequivocally comply with the requirements for filing, I am entitled by law to stamped copies of those documents to be dated on November 26, 2025 of which there was included receipt involving the same (see: Requisition of last night which was served, out of an abundance of caution, and filed). As per the motion relief therein, which also seeks abridgement of time and orders granted on a nunc pro tunc basis, which is to be decided by the presiding motion judge in writing, kindly provide me with the stamped copies of the documents contained in the below numbered package of documents forthwith. As you also know from last night's letter and filed Requisition,

The language is unequivocal in the email therein, which is attached, and it requires a duty of good faith which is imposed upon the Divisional Court by its employees, albeit employed by the MAG, that I will (not "may") notified within three business days.

As you know, I am required to bring this motion in the Divisional Court under the JRPA Proceeding pursuant to the requirements under the Rules of Civil Procedure which state:

"Amending, Setting Aside or Varying Order

Amending

59.06 (1) An order that contains an error arising from an accidental slip or omission or requires amendment in any particular on which the court did not adjudicate may be amended on a motion in the proceeding. R.R.O. 1990, Reg. 194, r. 59.06 (1).

Setting Aside or Varying

(2) A party who seeks to,

(a) have an order set aside or varied on the ground of fraud or of facts arising or discovered after it was made;

(b) suspend the operation of an order;

(c) carry an order into operation; or

(d) obtain other relief than that originally awarded, may make a motion in the proceeding for the relief claimed. R.R.O. 1990, Reg. 194, r. 59.06 (2)."

As such, I was and am required to have made the motion in the proceeding for which the relief was claimed.

As you know, the "Responding Parties" were all provided notice and served with the Notice of Motion on November 17, 2025 (Monday) which was 16 days in advance of tomorrow's date. The NOM #3 will proceed by "written hearing" as per the Rules of Civil Procedure (see: Rule 37.12(4) and (5)) on December 3, 2025.

In consequence, the Court is formally and respectfully implored to furnish, with the utmost promptness and without further administrative circumlocution or delay, the officially stamped exemplars of the documents contained within the aforementioned package of documentary submitted filed documents with authorized payment. Please do so by 3:30 p.m. so that compliance is effected in accordance with the representations made to me in writing by the email attached.
When I receive the stamped copy of the aforementioned and cross-referenced documents, I will confirm the same by email to confirm the closure of this issue requiring immediate attention by the Divisional Court.

Thank you kindly.

Respectfully Submitted,

Electronic Mail: scj-csj.divcourtmail@ontario.ca; Tashekah.Gentles@ontario.ca
Subject: Exigent Requirement for the Registrar's Execution of Duties Pursuant to Honoured Procedural Representations Regarding the Temporal Scope of Filed Documents in the OCPP

I. INTRODUCTION AND CONTEXT

This urgent communication is submitted with utmost deference and respect to the Honourable Justices of the Divisional Court, and is directed specifically to the Office of the Registrar. The present temporal designation, 9:45 ante meridiem on December 3, 2025, represents a critical juncture in the procedural chronology of this application.

5551

Subsequent to the submission of the requisite formal requisitions, an appended document is provided herewith. This enclosure constitutes a graphic excerpt from the 'My Filings' module of the Ontario Courts Public Portal ('OCPP'), which definitively demonstrates a substantive failure to adhere to the established judicial administration's represented timeline for processing and validating submissions. Specifically, the antecedent assurances provided to me regarding the notification of acceptance within a period of three business days have not been fulfilled, which constitutes, prima facie, a material misrepresentation of the established procedural protocol.

II. NON-COMPLIANCE WITH PROCEDURAL REPRESENTATION

In the enduring spirit of collegiality, and reserving all extant factual and legal prerogatives, I respectfully and urgently request that the relevant filings, particularly those associated with Reference Number '4B3F-88B8-7280-8DEB', be forthwith accorded the validation stamp bearing the date of November 26, 2025. Immediate confirmation of safe and accurate receipt of the aforementioned documentation will subsequently be provided by me.

This procedural rectification is indispensable to ensure the unimpeded progression of NOM #3, which is designated to proceed this day “in writing” and without the necessity of my personal attendance. It is acknowledged that a period of time will necessarily be required for the Presiding Superior Court of Justice Motions Judge (hereinafter, the “Presiding SCJ Motions Judge”) to meticulously peruse the documentation contained within the NOM #3 Motion Record, in conjunction with the most recently promulgated draft order (dated November 30, 2025), herein designated as the “Primary Draft Order.”

The efficacy of this judicial review is entirely contingent upon the successful and timely uploading of the filed documents to the Presiding SCJ Motions Judge, with the singular exception of the Compendium For NOM #3, the preparation and transmission of which remains my sole and punctilious responsibility. Although the submission of the Compendium For NOM #3 was not strictly mandated, its filing and service upon all relevant entities were definitively effectuated on November 28, 2025, which comfortably preceded the returnable date designated for the hearing of NOM #3 by a margin of three clear days.

III. JURISDICTIONAL MANDATE AND ACTA

Should the immediate rectification of these critical procedural matters not be effectuated, I shall be compelled to escalate this exigency to the appropriate supervisory authority. Such action would be undertaken to ensure strict adherence to the pith and substance of the Courts of Justice Act, the Legislation Act, the Judicial Review Procedure Act, and all relevant attendant regulatory instruments.

It is affirmed that the requisitions appended hereto necessitate the Registrar's execution of a statutory duty pursuant to the Rules of Civil Procedure. Concomitantly, the imposition of a supplementary prescribed fee is deemed unwarranted, predicated upon the antecedent disbursement of all various prescribed fees established under the pertinent regulation issued pursuant to the Administration of Justice Act, specifically titled the Superior Court of Justice and Court of Appeal - Fees.

Analysis of Regulatory Fees

It is observed that the regulatory provision, Superior Court of Justice and Court of Appeal - Fees, O Reg 293/92, specifically subsection 1(1)3(iv), stipulates:

> “iv. A notice of motion served on another party, a notice of motion without notice, a notice of motion for a consent order or a notice of motion for leave to appeal, other than a notice of motion in a family law appeal, $339.”

To the extent that since the Respondents failed to “deliver” their respective Notices of Appearance previously and prior to the filing of the Notice of Motion Number Three, and thus are not formally designated as “parties” to this motion, and given that the instant Notice of Motion was initiated with notice, does not seek a “consent order,” is not a “motion for leave to appeal,” and is not a “notice of motion in a family law appeal,” the logical inference, ipso facto, is that no further charge for “filing” can be levied pursuant to the strict construction of the regulatory language.

IV. ACCESS TO JUSTICE AND PROCEDURAL INTEGRITY

Notwithstanding the aforementioned rigorous statutory construction, and in deference to the judicious management of the Divisional Court's limited temporal and fiscal resources, I confirm that the imposition of the aforementioned fee may proceed in any event for administrative convenience. This acquiescence is grounded in the axiomatic principle that I procedurally constrained to advance a motion within this proceeding pursuant to Rule 59.06(2)(a), notwithstanding the absence of formally designated "Responding Parties." It is a self-evident legal conclusion that a "Responding Party" is jurisprudentially distinct from a "party."

It is further acknowledged that the guarantee of access to public courts for the adjudication of civil disputes constitutes a foundational tenet of the Canadian constitutional architecture (see: Trial Lawyers Association of British Columbia v. British Columbia (Attorney General), 2014 SCC 59, at paragraphs 32 and 41; referencing Ontario (Attorney General) v. $25,610 in Canadian Currency, 2017 ONCA 251, at paragraph 1). The Registrar is therefore mandated to comply with the represented timelines to ensure that this fundamental constitutional right is not ultra vires prejudiced.
The aforementioned electronic correspondence was concurrently transmitted via facsimile to preclude any possible misapprehension or conceptual ambiguity regarding the exigent nature of this matter. It has now been five business days since the effectual filing of the NOM #3, Factum, Motion Record, Primary Draft Order, and Affidavit of Service; a duration that significantly exceeds the represented three-business-day processing interval. I punctiliously fulfilled the obligation to deliver a Confirmation of Motion to the Registrar at least five days prior to the hearing date, specifically on November 24, 2025, thereby satisfying the prescription of Rule 37.10.1(1)(a)(i).
As NOM #3 constitutes a motion without oral argument, its adjudication proceeds appropriately in the absence of the public pursuant to Rule 37.11(1)(a), which states:
"(a) the motion is to be heard and determined without oral argument;"

V. CONCLUSION AND RESERVATION OF RIGHTS

In consideration of the demonstrable lack of opposition to NOM #3 and the exigent circumstances underlying the substantive relief sought therein, a revised draft order shall be expeditiously transmitted for the attention of the Presiding SCJ Motions Judge. While the administrative temporal delays are unquestionably of considerable concern, it is anticipated that this approach will facilitate the determination of the merits in an expeditious, fiscally judicious, and fundamentally just manner.
I formally reserve the prerogative to bring this entire acta to the attention of those possessing the requisite supervisory authority, should the stated representations and corresponding procedural obligations remain unfulfilled. While resorting to such supervisory intervention would be undertaken with demonstrable reluctance, it may become an unavoidable necessity to preserve the status quo ante and uphold the integrity of the judicial process.
The previously provided Primary Draft Order is appended hereto for the Presiding SCJ Motions Judge's ease of reference, should the immediate endorsement of that instrument be contemplated.

I thank the Court for its prompt and judicious attention to this exigency.

Respectfully Submitted,

/s/Mr. Kevin A. McLean, B.A., J.D., C.I.M.

Subject: Acknowledgement of Administrative Succession and Requisition (Requirements) for Expedited Processing and Formal Validation (that which has been delayed beyond processing) of Filed Documents Pertaining to the Written Hearing of Notice of Motion Number Three (NOM #3), Scheduled for December 3, 2025

I. Acknowledgement of Administrative Succession and Transference of Duties

The Applicant (Moving Party) duly acknowledges the official advisement concerning the cessation of the role and responsibilities of the former Registrar/Manager of the Divisional Court (hereinafter the "Former Registrar"), Ms. Gentles. Consequently, the transference of her subsisting administrative and procedural duties is hereby directed to the immediate and meticulous attention of the present administrative apparatus, specifically including the newly designated Registrar/Manager (hereinafter the "New Registrar"). This direction is effected by way of explicit reference to the comprehensive documentation appended hereto, which delineates the precise administrative obligations currently outstanding. This administrative continuity, essential for the efficacious function of the Divisional Court's mandate under the Courts of Justice Act, must remain unimpaired; the New Registrar is respectfully requested to be fully seized of all outstanding obligations in media res to prevent any procedural lacuna in the execution of justice and to safeguard the Applicant (Moving Party)'s substantive rights scheduled for adjudication.

II. Mandate for Immediate Processing and Preservation of Status Quo Ante

Given the present chronological demarcation, being approximately 15:00 hours, and the consequential administrative mandate to effectuate the expeditious processing of the outstanding filings, many of which were submitted on an exigent and demonstrably time-sensitive basis, it is imperative that the represented service standard of acceptance within three (3) business days be honoured without further delay. Specifically, it is stipulated that all outstanding submissions be formally received and logged within the Online Civil Claims Portal (OCCP) as of their respective original dates of submission (acta non verba), thereby meticulously preserving the procedural status quo ante and ensuring the unimpeachable integrity of the judicial record in advance of the December 3, 2025, return date for the written hearing (without the necessity of physical attendance) of the Applicant (Moving Party)'s Notice of Motion Number Three (NOM #3).

The exigency of the situation is further underscored by the potential for procedural prejudice arising from the retrospective application of filing dates; should the official filing dates fail to correspond precisely with the dates of submission, the mandatory calculation of various procedural timelines under the Rules of Civil Procedure, including those relating to the perfection of the motion record, could be detrimentally compromised. Such an administrative delay, though understood in the context of succession, risks rendering the Applicant (Moving Party)'s submissions technically deficient ab initio, an outcome which would be demonstrably inequitable and contrary to the paramount principle of procedural fairness. The Applicant (Moving Party) reiterates and relies upon the comprehensive materials previously submitted, including the requisitions and confirmations of filing, a meticulous duplication of which is appended herein for the recipients' ease of reference. I have also included the index for the Compendium For NOM #3 that I am required to upload. Cross-referencing is specifically directed to those documentation, including those remunerated where applicable, which were submitted as much as one week prior to the issuance of this correspondence. The submissions must be officially stamped nunc pro tunc.

III. Procedural Status of NOM #3 and Extrapolation of Legal Principles

A. The Unopposed Nature of the Relief Sought

It is formally confirmed, as has been previously established through comprehensive documentary evidence, that a Confirmation of Motion was successfully transmitted to the court office via electronic mail on Monday, November 24, 2025. Perusal of the correspondence annexed hereto unequivocally substantiates the Applicant (Moving Party)'s knowledge that the Notice of Motion Number Three (NOM #3) remains fundamentally and procedurally unopposed by any potential Responding Parties (a designation encompassing both nominal Respondents and Non-Respondents). Specifically, Requisition/Request #11 (submitted and filed on December 2, 2025, at 03:05 hours) constitutes a compelling prima facie demonstration that the nominal Respondents neither delivered their mandatory Notices of Appearance nor filed a "First Defence," thereby failing to attain the requisite jurisdictional status of a party to the substantive proceeding. This failure operates as a decisive waiver of their entitlement to participate in the adjudication of NOM #3.

B. Application of the Rules of Civil Procedure and Remedial Authority

The failure of the nominal Respondents to comply with the threshold procedural prerequisites under the Rules of Civil Procedure renders them ipso facto non-parties. This procedural defect, which is not attributable to any action or inaction on the part of the Applicant (Moving Party), concurrently and consequentially nullifies any standing they might otherwise possess to oppose the relief sought against them, as evidenced by the corresponding lack of opposition from the Non-Respondents who were duly served (vide: Tab #22 of the Motion Record and the Compendium For NOM #3).

It is a sophisticated extrapolation of legal principle that the judicial branch possesses the inherent and statutory authority to prevent administrative or technological failures from undermining the pursuit of justice. The adherence to the spirit and substance of the Rules of Civil Procedure necessitates the dispensing with technical compliance where the technological impediments or the former non-compliance of the Former Registrar's duties have occasioned delays. To penalize the moving party for administrative delay would be tantamount to an act of procedural ultra vires against the foundational tenets of natural justice. The New Registrar is therefore requested to ensure that the requisite remedial measures are instantiated forthwith, recognizing the Court's equitable power to correct such administrative errors.

Re: Provision of the Primary Draft Order for Judicial Assistance

In furtherance of the objective of utilizing public resources with maximal efficiency, and drawing a potent analogy to the successful, uncontested implementation of the Applicant (Moving Party)'s Notice of Motion Number Two (NOM #2)—which proceeded summarily in writing without objection from the nominal Respondents—the Applicant (Moving Party) has appended a meticulously prepared copy of the "Primary Draft Order" (vide: Requisitions by Appendices for cross-referencing).

The aforementioned document, which was previously transmitted via electronic mail, is current as of November 30, 2025, and is deemed filed on December 1, 2025. This critical date is chronologically situated more than ten (10) days subsequent to the complete service of the NOM #3 Motion Record upon the nominal adversaries. The provision of this Primary Draft Order serves a dual purpose: it constitutes timely notice to the Presiding Motions Judge, and, more importantly, functions as a judicial roadmap, meticulously detailing the materials to be reviewed, the specific legal authorities relied upon, and the necessary operative paragraphs of the final disposition. This proactive measure significantly contributes to the optimal utilization of finite judicial resources, mitigating the administrative burden associated with navigating complex motion records. The Applicant (Moving Party)'s conclusions regarding the procedural entitlement to the sought relief are thereby rendered structurally and legally self-evident by the unopposed record and the sufficiency of the notice provided.

The Applicant (Moving Party) reaffirms its unwavering deference to the inherent jurisdiction of the Court to command the integrity of its own processes and remains readily available should any subsequent refinements to the Primary Draft Order be deemed requisite. Electronic communication via this thread is acceptable for purposes of further clarification.

The Applicant (Moving Party) extends its sincere appreciation for the scrupulous attention and compliance with the stipulations contained herein, and for ensuring that the principles of procedural fairness and the efficient administration of justice are meticulously upheld in this complex matter.

Warmest regards and congratulations to Ms. Parris, licensed paralegal, on her promotion:

Attention: The Registrar of the Divisional Court as of Wednesday, December 3, 2025, in Ms. Roxanne Parris as LSO licensed paralegal (the "Current Registrar")

SUBJECT I: CONFIRMATION OF THE DELIVERY AND FILING STATUS OF TWO DISTINCT DOCUMENTS SUBMITTED VIA MAIL TO THE DIVISIONAL COURT ON DECEMBER 9 AND DECEMBER 11, 2025, COMPRISING THE UPDATED DRAFT ORDER AND THE COMPENDIUM FOR NOTICE OF MOTION NO. 3.
SUBJECT II: ENCLOSURE OF THE COVER LETTER AND EVIDENTIARY IMAGES OF THE MAIL FILED COMPENDIUM FOR NOTICE OF MOTION NO. 3.
SUBJECT III: RESIDUAL MATTERS PERTAINING TO ADMINISTRATIVE IRREGULARITIES AND THE PRINCIPLE OF MINISTERIAL DUTY.

Dear Sirs/Mesdames:

I. Introduction and Governing Definitions
I cordially write regarding the above-referenced matters. It is sincerely hoped that all judicial and administrative personnel, inclusive of the Current Registrar, are maintaining optimal health and wellness. Judicial efficiency and the preservation of the rule of law depend fundamentally upon the timely and scrupulous execution of administrative duties, a principle which forms the core of this correspondence. The Court's administrative function must be seen not merely as a matter of internal organization, but as a critical component of judicial legitimacy, ensuring that procedural justice is not eroded by bureaucratic inertia. The Applicant seeks not special treatment, but the timely, mandated performance of a public duty.
I adopt all definitions from previously, indirectly or directly, cited correspondence. For the purposes of this present communication, the following appellations and definitions shall be utilized, ensuring consistency in terminology throughout this document:

1. The Rules of Civil Procedure, R.R.O. 1990, Regulation 194 (the "Rules")
2. The Updated Draft Order (Form 59(A) under the Rules) (the "Draft Order")
3. The Compendium for Notice of Motion No. 3 as of December 7, 2025 (the "Compendium")
4. The Notice of Motion No. 3 (the "NOM #3")
5. The Ontario Courts Public Portal (the "OCPP")
6. The Honourable Judge Morawetz, in his capacity as the Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Justice and ipso facto the President of the Divisional Court (the "President of the Divisional Court")
7. The Responding Parties (the "Opposite Litigants")
8. Roncarelli v. Duplessis, 1959 CanLII 50 (SCC), $$1959$$
   SCR 121 (the "Roncarelli Decision")

II. Procedural Impediments and Substantive Compliance
Confirmation is herewith proffered regarding the precise chronology and procedural context of the NOM #3. The requisite fee for the NOM #3 was paid on November 26, 2025, subsequent to the service upon the Opposite Litigants on November 17, 2025. Following payment, the Factum, Motion Record, initial Draft Order (dated November 19, 2025), and Affidavit of Service (dated November 21, 2025) were all submitted for filing. This was done notwithstanding the four business days' advance notice provided to the Divisional Court via electronic mail on November 24, 2025, concerning the proposed written hearing returnable on December 3, 2025, as prescribed by the Rules.

The uninterrupted and inexplicable failure to process the requisite documentation and officially "confirm" the filing status subsequent to the prescribed service and submission periods constitutes, prima facie, an administrative dereliction that directly impedes the Applicant's fundamental right to prompt and effective adjudication. This administrative lapse has resulted in a state of "constructive non-filing," where the Court is in physical possession of all necessary documents and fees, yet administratively refuses to afford them legal status. This delay is not merely an inconvenience; it constitutes an obstruction to justice by rendering the Applicant's case effectively inert, potentially prejudicing the Applicant's position by extending the lis pendens without legal justification. Furthermore, the ambiguity created by the lack of confirmation introduces unnecessary uncertainty for the Opposite Litigants regarding the formal status of the motion, although their failure to oppose remains a separate issue. The prevailing circumstance suggests, with considerable persuasive force, that the OCPP is either technically defective or not being staffed to operate at its represented and mandatory capacity. Critically, the explicit representations issued by the Court concerning the expected three-business-day processing timeframe are not being scrupulously honoured. This failure has been consistently observed ad seriatum regarding filings subsequent to the initial submission of the NOM #3 material on November 28, 2025.

This technical malaise is further compounded by the sudden and unheralded departure of the Former Registrar (Ms. Gentles). This administrative vacuum, which suggests a severe lack of adequate succession planning, is a clear instance of institutional negligence and has a direct causal link to the current chaos. This chaos is magnified by a demonstrable, ongoing failure to responsibly monitor the storage capacity of the Divisional Court’s electronic mail system—a fundamental component for the mandatory transmission of documents such as the Confirmation of Motion (Form 37(B)). The Applicant's compliance with the mandates of Rule 37.10.1(1)(a)(i) of the Rules, which requires this document to be given (not filed per se) via electronic mail, cannot be frustrated by the Court's internal and remediable failure to manage its digital infrastructure. Such institutional failures do not merely result in delay; they impose an unjust and undue financial and temporal burden upon self-represented litigants seeking to diligently prosecute their cause, thereby creating a substantial and unconstitutional barrier to the effective access to justice, contrary to Section 7 of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. The Applicant is placed in an untenable position, having fulfilled all party obligations, only to be stalled by institutional non-performance.

III. Non-Opposition and Procedural Expediency

It is noteworthy that the Opposite Litigants were afforded ample and prescribed opportunity to offer opposition to the NOM #3 through various modalities: non-opposition, consent, written opposition, or the presentation of oral argument. As not a solitary Opposite Litigant exercised any of these options within the specified timelines, the NOM #3 remains unopposed. Ipso facto, there existed, and continues to subsist, no extant scheduling exigency necessitated by opposition, thereby removing any legitimate basis for the administrative delay. Proof of service was duly tendered to the Divisional Court via electronic mail and was simultaneously submitted for filing through the OCPP.

The absence of opposition is not merely a procedural convenience; it is a critical factor that elevates the administrative delay from a necessary scheduling challenge to a purely bureaucratic breakdown. When a motion is unopposed, the core adjudicative function of the Court—resolving conflict—is minimized. The administrative priority ought to be the swift processing of uncontested matters to conserve judicial resources for contested proceedings, thereby honouring the overriding purpose of the Rules as articulated in Rule 1.04(1): "to secure the just, most expeditious and least expensive determination of every civil proceeding on its merits." By delaying the confirmation of an unopposed motion, the administrative body demonstrates a profound misallocation of public resources and a fundamental disregard for the principle of procedural expediency which underpins the Rules. The delay is, therefore, purely one of internal clerical processing, disassociated entirely from any complexities arising from the adversarial nature of the proceeding, and is, in principle, indefensible.

IV. Legislative Will: The Dichotomy of Acceptance versus Confirmation

The statutory distinction between the superseded JSO Portal regime and the current OCPP scheme is monumental, representing a fundamental philosophical shift in the procedural governance of court filings. The JSO Portal paradigm necessitated a two-tiered approach: Registrar’s “Acceptance” (Rule 4.05.2(3)), followed by the Registrar’s “Confirmation” (Rule 4.05.2(4)). This prior requirement of "Acceptance" inherently conferred upon the Registrar a quasi-discretionary veto power over the initiation of the record, potentially blurring the line between a purely administrative clerical function and a substantive, judicially reviewable adjudicative act. The former requirement of acceptance was predicated on the notion of an administrative offer of filing creating a binding quasi-contract subject to the Registrar's proactive approval.

Conversely, the current OCPP scheme (Rule 4.05.2.1), effectuated through O. Reg. 226/25, s. 4, is predicated solely upon the concept of a filing being “Subject to Confirmation,” where the document is deemed filed or issued exclusively upon the electronic transmission of confirmation by the registrar or sheriff (Rule 4.05.2.1(4)).

The legal distinction between a condition of ‘acceptance’ (a discretionary act) and a condition ‘subject to confirmation’ (a mandatory, ministerial act) is analogous to the distinction between a condition precedent where a contract is already in force but subject to a condition to be met, which the Registrar is so required, and the offer of something to another for their acceptance. In the latter, when there is no acceptance, there is no binding contract between those persons which is of course subject to return consideration. Under administrative law principles, the former ("acceptance") requires the Registrar to make a decision based on subjective criteria (vires testing), while the latter ("confirmation") requires the Registrar only to verify objective facts (e.g., file integrity, prescribed fee payment).

The term “confirmation” implies a process more perfunctory, technical, and ministerial in nature, merely attesting to the reception and entry of the submission into the court’s electronic record. The ministerial duty of the Registrar, in this context, is simply to acknowledge the successful electronic submission and verify basic, easily ascertainable technical standards, such as file format and size limits. This deliberate legislative shift effectively eliminates the Registrar’s capacity to unilaterally reject a document on grounds of substantive non-compliance, thereby precluding the application of principles such as delegatus non potest delegare to a purely clerical function. The power to assess the sufficiency or formal compliance of the document is now correctly and exclusively vested in the Presiding Motions Judge, who is the proper authority to exercise judicial discretion and control over the proceedings.

It is thus self-evident that the legislative intent underlying the OCPP amendments was to streamline the filing process by removing the prerequisite of discretionary "acceptance," recognizing that unnecessary layers of administrative review only introduce delay. This necessary administrative evolution reflects a considered policy decision to reduce the burden on the public purse and expedite the processing of documents. The judicial scrutiny regarding the formal compliance of documents, which was formerly exercised prematurely by the Registrar, has been thereby relocated to the Presiding Motions Judge or Panel, to be adjudicated, inter alia, by way of objection advanced by the opposing litigant. This extrapolation of legal principle dictates that the administrative focus should be the expeditious, cost-effective, and just determination of matters upon their merits, rather than an in limine administrative acceptance requirement that unnecessarily burdens court resources and delays the progression of proceedings. The Registrar’s duty is, therefore, one of mandatory execution, not discretionary oversight, and the current non-performance is a violation of this mandate.

V. Conversion of Paper Documents and Mitigation of Delay

The aforementioned procedural complexities, including the delays attributed to the malfunctioning of the OCPP and the administrative transition from the Former Registrar to the Current Registrar, cannot be imputed as a fault to the Applicant. The Applicant's imperative, grounded in the overarching principle of mitigating any potential loss or injury and ensuring the integrity and completeness of the judicial process, was to secure the substantive presence of the critical documents before the Divisional Court.

As such, the two critical documents—the Draft Order (mailed on December 8, 2025) and the Compendium (delivered on December 11, 2025)—were submitted via mail filing pursuant to Rule 4.05 of the Rules:

Rule 4.05(4): Filing by Leaving in Court Office or by Mail

Any document, other than one that is to be issued, may be filed by leaving it in the proper court office or mailing it to the proper court office, accompanied by the prescribed fee. R.R.O. 1990, Reg. 194, r. 4.05 (4).

The delivery of these hard copy documents is evidenced by tracking numbers from the postal carrier, thereby obviating any potential allegation of non-receipt under Rule 4.05(6). The presence of these tracking numbers effectively removes the operation of the rule that deems non-received documents as non-filed, providing conclusive acta of delivery to the proper court office. This mail filing, therefore, cured the administrative defect caused by the electronic delay and perfected the filing status under the alternative paper regime, ensuring that a properly filed record is now indisputably before the Court.

Furthermore, pursuant to O. Reg. 226/25, s. 1, the Registrar possesses the statutory power of conversion:

Conversion from Paper Format

(11) In the case of a proceeding that is commenced or continued in the City of Toronto, the registrar may prepare an electronic copy of any document that was filed or issued in the proceeding in paper format and include it in the court file.

It is explicitly confirmed that the Applicant does not require the restitution of the documents following their electronic conversion. These documents must remain with the Divisional Court to constitute the complete and comprehensive record of the proceeding. This is the Current Registrar's second, non-delegable ministerial duty: to convert and incorporate the paper-filed documents into the electronic Case Center record for the review of the Presiding Motions Judge. The word may in Rule 4.05(11) must be interpreted as shall in this context, given the overwhelming policy interest in maintaining a unified, accessible electronic court file as the default under the new OCPP regime.

V-A. Judicial Discretion and Rule 37.01 Compliance

As noted in the quoted language, “

MOTIONS AND APPLICATIONS RULE 37 MOTIONS — JURISDICTION AND PROCEDURE Notice of Motion 37.01 A motion shall be made by a notice of motion (Form 37A) unless the nature of the motion or the circumstances make a notice of motion unnecessary or these rules provide otherwise. R.R.O. 1990, Reg. 194, r. 37.01; O. Reg. 322/24, s. 4.", the Presiding Motions Judge can rely upon the motion so filed, but delayed without lawful reason for confirmation only, or decide the relief sought in the draft order by reference to confirming that such notice of motion was unnecessary based on the circumstances.

This rule confers a significant inherent power upon the Presiding Motions Judge to control the court's process and dispense with unnecessary technical formalities. Given that the delay in confirming the electronic filing is purely an administrative failure—a clerical omission rather than a substantive party error—the judicial officer has the discretion to deem the notice of motion—having been properly served, fully documented, and paid for—as having been advanced in circumstances that make the technical confirmation requirement "unnecessary." This judicial power extends to issuing an order nunc pro tunc (now for then), which effectively backdates the legal effect of the filing to the date of original submission, thereby curing the administrative lag. The use of a nunc pro tunc order is appropriate only to correct a clerical or administrative error, not to remedy a party's mistake, making it the perfect judicial tool to counteract the Registrar's delay. This judicial act would effectively ratify the filing nunc pro tunc and allow the relief sought in the Draft Order (which is now properly mail-filed and dated December 4, 2025) to be considered on its merits, without further administrative impediment. In this regard, the Presiding Motions Judge can rely on the mail filed documents to approve the draft order contained therein at the most recent tab therein (December 4, 2025). This is the only recourse available to counteract the administrative paralysis that currently threatens to subvert the Applicant's timely right to justice.

VI. Compendium Status and Registrar's Exclusive Upload Duty (Rule 4.05.3)

I confirm that I am the only party per se. I reproduce the following, which governs the use and population of Case Center:

"Requirement to Use Case Center

(3) Every party participating in the hearing or conference shall provide the following documents to the court by uploading them to Case Center in accordance with this rule:

1. A copy of every document filed with the court by the party in respect of the hearing or conference.
2. Subject to subrule (5), a copy of any other document in the court file on which the party intends to rely at the hearing or conference that has not already been uploaded to Case Center by another party.
3. Unless the court directs otherwise and subject to subrule (3.1), a compendium that meets the requirements of subrule (7). O. Reg. 300/24, s. 2 (1).

   Modification, City of Toronto

   (3.0.1) In the case of a proceeding that is commenced or continued in the City of Toronto, the documents referred to in paragraphs 1 and 2 of subrule (3) in respect of each party shall be uploaded to Case Center by the registrar and not by the party. O. Reg. 226/25, s. 5 (1).

   Compendium

   (3.1) A compendium is not required to be provided with respect to a conference or the hearing of an unopposed motion or motion on consent, unless the court directs otherwise. O. Reg. 300/24, s. 2 (1).

   Deadline

   (4) Subject to subrules (4.1) and (5), the documents listed in subrule (3) must be uploaded to Case Center by the following deadline:
4. In the case of the hearing of a motion or application where the party is required to give the registrar a confirmation of motion (Form 37B) or confirmation of application (Form 38B), the deadline is 2 p.m. three days before the hearing date, unless the court orders otherwise.
5. In any other case, the deadline is five days before the date of the hearing or conference, unless the court orders otherwise. O. Reg. 689/20, s. 7; O. Reg. 224/22, s. 1; O. Reg. 300/24, s. 2 (6); O. Reg. 301/24, s. 1; O. Reg. 226/25, s. 5 (2).

   (4.1) Subrule (4) does not apply to the registrar. O. Reg. 226/25, s. 5 (3)."

The preceding provisions establish a critical, sui generis procedural framework for Toronto proceedings. The "Modification, City of Toronto" (Rule 4.05.3(3.0.1)) is a clear policy directive recognizing the unique volume and complexity of filings in the Toronto region, thus centralizing the document upload function with the court administration. Specifically, Rule 4.05.3(3.0.1) unequivocally delegates the primary responsibility for uploading all filed documents (paragraphs 1 and 2 of subrule (3)) to Case Center exclusively to the Registrar, thereby absolving the Applicant of this burden. Furthermore, Rule 4.05.3(4.1) explicitly provides that the stringent deadlines of subrule (4) do not apply to the Registrar. The legislative intent here is to remove the pressure of time constraints on the administrative process for uploads, allowing the Registrar to perform this function methodically, but this immunity from deadlines must not be misinterpreted as a license for indefinite delay. In this regard, I note that subrule 4.05.3(3)(2.) requires only a party to be able to invoke that right to have any other document in the "court file" to be relied upon. Since the Applicant is the only party per se, this right is exercised and requires the Registrar to upload any relied-upon documents from the "court file." Ergo, only the Registrar can upload filed documents but not subject to any deadline. The conclusion is therefore inescapable: the Registrar has an absolute, non-discretionary, and non-time-constrained ministerial duty to complete the court record by uploading all filed documents, whether submitted electronically or, as here, via the mail-filing exception. This duty is the single remaining procedural hurdle.

Confirmation is provided that neither the Draft Order of December 4, 2025, nor the Compendium required physical binding. Pursuant to Rule 4.05.3(3.1), the Compendium was not required due to the unopposed status of the NOM #3. The Compendium was filed nonetheless as a matter of good practice and procedural completeness. Furthermore, the requirement for buff covers applies exclusively to an "appeal book and compendium" under Rule 4.07(3), which mandates:

Appeal Book and Compendium

(3) An appeal book and compendium shall be bound front and back in buff covers. O. Reg. 19/03, s. 1 (1).

It is trite law that a compendium prepared for a motion is patently distinct from that mandated for an appeal, rendering the binding requirement inapplicable. The deliberate decision not to bind the motion Compendium was therefore not a procedural irregularity but an act of strict compliance with the Rules.

Pursuant to Rule 4.07(7), which governs electronic documents:

Electronic Documents

(7) This rule does not apply to a document that is filed electronically in accordance with these rules or uploaded to Case Center under rule 4.05.3; however, if the same document is filed or provided to the court in paper format, this rule applies to the paper version of the document. O. Reg. 689/20, s. 9; O. Reg. 300/24, s. 4 (2); O. Reg. 301/24, s. 1.

The Applicant confirms that the mail-filed Draft Order and Compendium will not be subsequently filed electronically. In that regard, the "same document" will not be dually filed in both paper and electronic format by the Applicant, thus consciously avoiding the application of the latter clause of the rule to prevent any procedural complication and maintaining a singular, definitive version of the record.

VII. Conclusion and Request for Remedial Action

Given the demonstrable delays within the OCPP system, the egregious breach of administrative representations concerning confirmation timelines, and the fundamental principle that court staff are compelled to act at the direction of the President of the Divisional Court, a copy of this correspondence shall be provided to the President of the Divisional Court to ensure the Current Registrar executes the duties required by law with appropriate diligence and dispatch.

It is a cardinal principle, reaffirmed by the Roncarelli Decision (see: supra), that statutory or regulatory discretion is not an absolute prerogative. It must be exercised judiciously and according to the rules of reason and justice, not according to private opinion, administrative humour, or bureaucratic convenience. Lord Halsbury's guidance in Sharp v. Wakefield remains a potent syllogism: discretion must be "legal and regular," and not "arbitrary, vague, and fanciful." The continued failure to execute the non-discretionary duty of confirmation and document conversion constitutes an administrative action that falls outside the boundaries of good faith and legal regularity, equating to an abuse of public power. The honest approach, appreciating the sensitive administrative transition, dictates that the Current Registrar must promptly process all outstanding submissions and furnish confirmations, as the statutory mandate is one of ministerial confirmation, not of discretionary acceptance.

While careful consideration was given to the filing of a Motion to Compel the Current Registrar and to seek the appropriate order for costs against the Ministry of the Attorney General (the "MAG"), such a procedural initiative was ultimately deemed unnecessary and an instance of overkill, particularly in light of section 76 of the Courts of Justice Act (CJA). Section 76 empowers the Chief Justice to issue directions necessary to enforce the integrity and efficiency of the court process. The President of the Divisional Court is constrained to act when the statutory language dictates "shall," and his inherent authority to issue directions is activated upon receipt of clear, undisputed evidence of a systemic administrative failure. The provision of this current electronic correspondence to the President of the Divisional Court furnishes the requisite knowledge, thereby establishing the necessary obligation upon him to issue the directive. Failure by the President of the Divisional Court to act upon this clear evidence of administrative disarray would constitute an unfortunate acquiescence to the systemic failure. In this manner, the necessity of an additional motion is obviated, ensuring that the merits of the Judicial Review Application (JRPA) Proceeding can be decided in an expeditious, cost-effective, and just manner. The cost of a procedural motion to compel the Registrar, including the and preparation time and judicial resources, would be an additional, unwarranted burden on the Applicant, caused entirely by the administrative arm of the Court.

As this was another some thousands of dollars in disbursements with the printing of pages, purchase of binders, tabs, paper, and mail filing, which was excessive but not my fault, I reserve the right to provide an amended Bill of Costs and current Draft Order. These costs, being directly attributable to the Applicant's necessary mitigation efforts against the Court's administrative failure (i.e., duplicating the filing in paper format), are reasonable and recoverable as special damages arising from institutional negligence.
I reserve to rely on this email document for any lawful purposes including seeking additional costs along with asserting my legal rights in a professional and lawful manner.

I further reserve the right to give, send, file (mail or electronic) any further documents to ensure that this JRPA Proceeding with particular reference to NOM #3 is decided in a manner consistent with the law along with reference to the binding principles in the Zurich v. Chubb cases including the dissenting opinion of Juriansz J.A. that was adopted verbatim by the Supreme Court of Canada in 2015 and the binding decision of The Honourable Justice Akazaki in May 2024. I reserve the right to formalize and expand upon these principles in a formal request or requisition of the Divisional Court where applicable.
The administrative delays currently being experienced do not constitute a mere inconvenience; they represent a material obstruction to the Applicant’s entitlement to the expeditious and just resolution of the extant application for judicial review, directly impacting the right of access to justice. Such institutional failings, if allowed to persist without immediate rectification, inevitably erode public confidence in the judicial process and contravene the overarching policy objectives enshrined in the Rules.
The President of the Divisional Court, by virtue of his statutory nomenclature and judicial eminence, bears the ultimate responsibility for conducting the court's administrative functions in a manner entirely consistent with the Rules and established judicial principles. It is therefore respectfully requested that the administrative confirmation of all outstanding filed documents be effected without further delay, thereby preserving the status quo ante of the timely filing and ensuring that the matter can proceed to an unbiased determination on its merits.

To the extent that the representations are not honoured, I have nonetheless mitigated the same to assist the Presiding Motions Judge to approve the draft order, sign the same and have the Registrar file and enter the same with a copy to me.

Warm regards,

/s/Mr. Kevin A. McLean (BA, JD, CIM)

The Divisional Court of Ontario (Toronto Region)
Osgoode Hall, 130 Queen Street West
Toronto, Ontario M5H 2N5
Attention: The New Registrar, Ms. Roxanne Parris (the "Registrar")
SUBJECT I: PROVISION OF MICROSOFT WORD COPY OF FACTUM FOR NOTICE OF MOTION NUMBER THREE (THE "FACTUM")
SUBJECT II: FACILITATION OF FACTUM UPLOADING TO CASE CENTER (THE "CASE CENTER") IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE RULES OF CIVIL PROCEDURE (THE "RULES")

Introduction and Contextual Preamble

I cordially write regarding the above-enumerated subjects, the central purpose of which is the provision of an electronic, editable iteration of the Factum (the "Word Factum") to facilitate the administration of justice. I adopt all definitions from previously, indirectly or directly, cited correspondence, motions, and materials herein, and hereby introduce the following definitions for precision:

- The Divisional Court of Ontario (Toronto Region) (the "Court")
- The Factum (the Factum for Notice of Motion No. 3 (the "NOM #3"), which was formally served and filed on November 18, 2025)
- The "Registrar" (Ms. Roxanne Parris, in Her Official Capacity)
- The Rules of Civil Procedure, R.R.O. 1990, Regulation 194 (the "Rules")
- The Courts of Justice Act, R.S.O. 1990, c. C.43, s. 98 (the "Act")
- The Ontario Courts Public Portal (the "OCCP").

Provision of Factum and Rationale

The genesis of this present correspondence is the recent and salutary amendments to the Rules and the concomitant issuance of the Divisional Court Practice Direction (the "Practice Direction"), a copy of which is appended hereto. While the Practice Direction is, per se, an administrative directive and remains subordinate to the mandatory provisions of the Rules, it nonetheless stipulates, as a procedural requirement, that Factums must also be uploaded in Word format to the Case Center for the Court's administrative benefit.

Therefore, attached hic et nunc (the "Attached Document") is the Word Factum for NOM #3, which corresponds precisely in substance and content to the executed Portable Document Format (PDF) version previously served and filed on the eighteenth day of November, 2025. Although the Word Factum is not adorned with the digital signature of the Applicant, the integrity of the record is preserved, as the OCCP maintains the filed, signed PDF iteration. This provision is tendered as a professional and collegial courtesy (pro bono) to the Court, ensuring strict adherence to the Practice Direction insofar as it stipulates:

> "All documents must be uploaded in PDF format. The indexes to all Records should include hyperlinked bookmarks. Factums must also be uploaded in Word format."

This submission, being in conformity with the recent regulatory shift, is a proactive measure to sustain the streamlined and efficient administration of the Court's processes, thereby maintaining the established status quo ante of judicial efficacy.

Offer of Further Assistance

It is cognizable that the Court may also require the Word Factums corresponding to earlier filed documents, specifically the Factum filed on December 12, 2025, and the Factum related to Notice of Motion Number Two (the "NOM #2") of February 1, 2025. I note that these antecedent documents were submitted exclusively in PDF format, in accordance with the then-prevailing lex fori as accepted and confirmed by the previous Registrar.

The Applicant maintains a continuing posture of helpfulness and gracious cooperation with the Court. Should the Registrar encounter any exigencies or require the electronic, editable copies of the aforementioned previous Factums in order to effectuate their uploading to the Case Center, I remain unequivocally at the Court's service. Ubi jus, ibi remedium.

This comprehensive cooperation, while not strictly required ab initio for documents filed prior to the Practice Direction's amendment regarding Word format, is demonstrative of the Applicant's unwavering commitment to the resolution-oriented, functional operation of the Court's electronic repository. This is an action taken in limine to prevent any future administrative impediment.

Conclusion

In conclusion, the Word Factum is herewith transmitted. The Applicant trusts that this submission is received as a welcome contribution to the Court's administrative necessities and efficiency on all fronts.

Yours most appreciatively and gratefully,

A/M: Kevin A. McLean (BA, JD, CIM)

Subject: Urgent compliance with outstanding obligations of the registrar's office of the Divisional Court by way of notice and provision of the submitted filing of the request/requisition of December 15, 2025

Dear Divisional Court and Registrar of the Divisional Court:

1. This communication is tendered in re the aforementioned matter. Confirmation is hereby provided that the attached Requisition was submitted for filing on December 15, 2025. Appended hereto is the confirmed receipt issued by the Divisional Court, documenting the said submitted filing. It is attested that the OCPP authorizes the lectronic submission of requisite documentation, including the payment for notice of motion number three ("NOM #3"), which was duly effectuated on the aforementioned date, utilizing the Ministry of the Attorney General ("MAG") authorized software. Further, it is confirmed that, effective October 3, 2025, the JSO Portal ceased to be the applicable electronic conduit for filings within the City of Toronto or the "Toronto Region."

2. In consideration of the protracted administrative delays; the demission of the Registrar (which was brought to the attention of the undersigned on December 3, 2025, the scheduled date for the written hearing, which seems rather non-coincidental, notwithstanding the non-opposition of any named Respondents in the style of cause or Responding Parties which were non-named Respondents (see: Affidavit of Service of the Applicant (Moving Party) (see: supra)); the Divisional Court's evident non-compliance with the Judicial Review Procedure Act (JRPA), the Courts of Justice Act (CJA), and the Rules of Civil Procedure; and the resultant dereliction in honouring prior written representations to the undersigned, the following mail-filing actions were subsequently effectuated: the draft order (Form 59(A)) dated December 4, 2025, was filed on Monday, December 8, 2025, and the Compendium for NOM #3 (dated December 7, 2025), comprising ten binders (Volumes 1 through 10), was filed under separate cover on Thursday, December 11, 2025.

3. Should the requisite confirmation of all outstanding submitted filings, consistent with the temporal mandates stipulated by the OCPP and written representations by the Registrar in the OCPP, not be provided, relief may be pursued via a draft order submitted to the President of the Divisional Court, who serves concurrently as the Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Justice (SCJ). Said draft order will, inter alia, move the Court, but only the President of the Divisional Court as per the CJA et al, to mandate the Registrar of the Divisional Court to remediate all deficient submitted filings via the OCPP and ensure compliance across manifold administrative facets.

4. Given the demonstrated pattern of administrative delays and the recurrent failure to honour prior assurances, the submission of a conventional Notice of Motion and the attendant expense is deemed unnecessary and impracticable. Consequently, reliance shall be placed upon Rule 37.01 of the Rules of Civil Procedure, which permits the making of a motion without a formal Notice of Motion where circumstances do not so require or where it is unnecessary. In such an event, the Registrar of the Divisional Court shall constitute the sole Responding Party, being the functionary against whom the motion is made (it is emphasized that "made" is distinct from "service," "filing," and "delivery"). Should the Registrar's continued recalcitrance necessitate this expenditure, an order for costs shall be sought against that functionary. While it is appreciated that a portion of administrative culpability rests with the Former Registrar—whose record evinced a history of non-compliance even under the JSO Portal—the extant duties of the Current Registrar are immutable, and the office is necessarily tasked with addressing the transgressions of the status quo ante.

5. The jurisdictional basis compelling the President of the Divisional Court to adjudicate this potential motion—which would be supported by submissions and evidence, notwithstanding its deviation from Form 37(A)—is articulated in section 76 of the Courts of Justice Act (CJA), which vests the President of the Divisional Court and only the President of the Divisional Court with the authority to direct court staff and the Registrar concerning the fulfillment of their duties. Given the statutory obligation to assign judicial duties to certain judges, the President possesses the discretion to assign an independent judge (an "Independent Presiding Motions Judge") to consider the mail-filed documents contained within the Compendium for NOM #3 and the Draft Order of December 4, 2025 (vide: supra).

6. It is the fervent hope of the undersigned that such a motion will prove superfluous, contingent upon the expeditious fulfillment of the Current Registrar's outstanding obligations.

7. Nevertheless, should compliance not be effectuated with the utmost expediency, specifically by no later than 12:00 P.M. on the succeeding day (December 17, 2025), the aforementioned motion to the President of the Divisional Court shall be commenced without further admonition. While recognizing the administrative friction attendant to the technological transition involving the OCPP (October 14, 2025) and the change in Registrar (December 3, 2025), it is verily believed that ample time has been accorded to the Current Registrar to remediate the prior transgressions of the Former Registrar and to honour written assurances pertaining to the confirmation timelines for submitted filings. Furthermore, given that NOM #3 is uncontested and the JRPA Application proceeded undefended, without the submission of a First Defence by any Respondent, there remains a substantial quantum of administrative irregularity requiring remediation and unwinding of which I was required to bring my motion intra this JRPA Proceeding.

8. Provided that the Registrar remedies the outstanding deficiencies—by confirming all submitted filings by 12:00 P.M. on December 17, 2025, extending an immediate invitation to the Case Center to the undersigned, and uploading all filed documents in the JRPA Proceeding to the Case Center by close of business on Thursday, December 18, 2025—the necessity of bringing the intended motion, pursuing costs, and amending the bill of costs previously filed (via mail in the Compendium for NOM #3) shall be obviated.

9. This communication is submitted for the Divisional Court's urgent consideration and necessary administrative action.

10. Ergo, I must rely on the poignant adage, “There is never a wrong time to do the right thing”. Thank you.

Best regards,

/s/Mr. Kevin A. McLean (BA, JD, CIM)

Attention: The new Registrar of the Divisional Court (as of December 3, 2025) in Ms. Roxanne Parris ("Divisional Court Registrar", "Registrar" or "Current Registrar")

AND TO:

The President of the Divisional Court, The Honourable Chief Justice Morawetz
130 Queen Street West
Toronto, Ontario
M5H 2N5

Subject: my motion #4, without form 37(A) due to lack of necessity and/or the circumstances do not require a notice of motion, and unlikely to even require service on the registrars due to the lack of contested facts (all denoted by record of proceeding) and extant mandatory duties of the former and current registrar

Dear Divisional Court (attention: President) and Registrar of the Divisional Court:

The undersigned submits this formal correspondence to address a persistent, deleterious, and arguably contumacious failure on the part of the Office of the Registrar—encompassing the professional conduct of both the predecessor and the incumbent—to discharge their mandated administrative obligations. Notwithstanding the prima facie validity and technical sufficiency of the materials submitted via the Ontario Court Case Portal ("OCCP"), there has been a demonstrable and prolonged omission in the processing of filings. Such inaction constitutes a profound departure from the strictures of the Rules of Civil Procedure, R.R.O. 1990, Reg. 194, and the specific protocols governing the Toronto Region of the Superior Court of Justice and the Divisional Court.
In view of the extant and historical neglect of these ministerial duties, the further utilization of the OCCP for repetitive filings, accompanied by the redundant remittance of prescribed fees, is deemed computationally futile, economically inefficient, and procedurally nonsensical. To persist in a digital framework that fails to acknowledge or validate receipt is to engage in a hollow exercise of form over substance. Such a course of action would merely perpetuate a state of status quo ante wherein the administration of justice remains obstructed by a pervasive bureaucratic inertia that borders on administrative paralysis.

II. THE LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR MANDAMUS AND THE EXTRAPOLATION OF REGISTRARIAL OBLIGATIONS

It is asserted that the conditions precedent for the seeking of the extraordinary remedy of mandamus have been satisfied in toto. The Registrar is bound by a public legal duty to act—a duty that is executory, ministerial, and entirely non-discretionary in nature. The right to the performance of said duty is vested in the undersigned as a litigant entitled to the orderly progression of the colonial-judicial machinery.

The necessity of judicial intervention is underscored by the following extrapolations of fundamental legal principles:

1. A Clear and Vesting Right to Performance: The applicant has maintained an unassailable record of adherence to all statutory requirements. This includes the meticulous service and filing of documentation and the timely remittance of all prescribed fees. The failure of the Registrar to respond to these completed conditions constitutes a breach of the social contract between the judicial administration and the public it serves.
2. The Absence of an Alternate, Adequate, or Efficacious Remedy: No collateral avenue exists to rectify the persistent failure of the Registrar to process filings within the represented temporal parameters. The administrative "black hole" created by the current state of the OCCP renders ordinary inquiries toothless, necessitating an order from this Honourable Court to compel the performance of a duty that should, ex debito justitiae, be automatic.
3. The Practical Value and Determinative Effect of the Order: An order compelling performance would not merely be symbolic; it would have immediate, tangible utility by rectifying the procedural irregularities and nullities occasioned by the Registrar's ultra vires inaction. It is essential to distance the record from this lack of compliance to ensure that the eventual adjudication of the merits is not tainted by the preceding administrative delinquency.

Reference is made to the nuanced jurisprudential distinctions regarding procedural irregularities as articulated in Long v. Redbranch Investments Ltd., 2018 BCCA 468, as applied and distinguished within the specific context of these proceedings. Furthermore, the balance of convenience unequivocally favours the applicant. The undersigned has been uniquely prejudiced by the Registrar's failure to facilitate the provision of digital recordings and transcripts on CD—despite Justice Shore's uncorrected misinterpretation of the law—notwithstanding the satisfaction of all financial prerequisites via bank draft.

III. THE DOCTRINE OF IMPLIED REFUSAL AND THE URGENCY OF RECTIFICATION

While the legal test for mandamus is ostensibly met, it is conceded that should the Registrar comply with all outstanding statutory and prescribed obligations by 17:00 hours this day, the necessity for the relief sought in Motion #4 may be partially or entirely obviated. However, the Court must recognize that a refusal to act need not be express; in the absence of compliance, the refusal is deemed implied through continued and unreasonable inaction, as evidenced by the ignored Requisitions #11 through #15.

The peculiar circumstances of this matter dictate that the Registrar(s) are the only parties whose interests are directly affected by the orders sought, as they are the primary actors in this administrative default. It is further noted that the Respondents have failed to file Notices of Appearance with proof of service as mandated by the plain language of Form 68A. This delinquency was unequivocally confirmed by a comprehensive audit of the OCCP CaseView. Consequently, the Registrar remains under a mandatory, non-shifting obligation to correct these administrative deficiencies ipso facto and to account for payments that may otherwise fail to be "finally captured" due to the expiry of digital payment windows.

IV. SACROSANCT STATUTORY OATHS AND THE PRINCIPLE OF PROCEDURAL CONTINUITY

The attention of the Court is directed to the Courts of Justice Act, R.S.O. 1990, c. C.43 and the Public Service of Ontario Act, 2006, S.O. 2006, c. 35, Sched. A, regarding the solemn oath of office required of public servants. As an officer of the Court, the Registrar is bound by a perpetual statutory duty that transcends the individual identity of the office-holder. The errors, omissions, or systemic oversights of the predecessor do not—and cannot—absolve the incumbent of the immediate obligation to ensure procedural regularity and the integrity of the court record. To suggest otherwise would be to allow the transition of personnel to serve as a shield for the erosion of the rule of law.

V. CONCLUSION AND THE PHYSICAL LODGING OF MATERIALS

To facilitate the President of the Divisional Court in directing staff to rectify these lapses, a comprehensive Motion Record and detailed written submissions have been prepared. While such voluminous documentation should, in an ideal procedural environment, be redundant, they will be provided ex abundanti cautela to ensure the Court is fully apprised of the gravity of this administrative failure and the resulting prejudice to the applicant.

Should the electronic portal remain in its current state of dysfunction, the Draft Order for Motion #4 and all supporting materials shall be delivered via physical strata—by mail or direct drop-off—to the Court's registry to ensure they are brought to the personal attention of the Regional Senior Judge.

Ergo, adhering to the poignant and prevailing adage that "there is never a wrong time to do the right thing," the undersigned remains:

MATTER DETAILS

- Court File Number: DC-24-00000718-00JR
- Short Style of Cause: McLean v. TD Home and Auto Insurance Company, et al.
- Document Classification: Correspondence and Submission of Final Draft Order regarding Motion #4
- Sender: Mr. Kevin A. McLean, B.A., J.D., C.I.M. (the "Moving Party" and "Applicant")

I. PREAMBLE AND FORMAL SUBMISSION

The Applicant, ipso facto the Moving Party in the extant proceedings, respectfully submits this comprehensive and meticulously structured correspondence alongside the appended Final Draft Order pertaining to Motion #4. I confirm that this current and final draft order is a substitute for the previous one submitted yesterday. This submission is necessitated by an egregious, multifaceted accumulation of administrative irregularities, systemic failures, and clerical stasis that have, prima facie, impeded the orderly and equitable progression of Notice of Motion No. 3 (NOM #3). Such irregularities, if left unrectified by judicial intervention, threaten to undermine the very foundations of procedural fairness and the core tenets of the rule of law within this jurisdiction.

By way of this formal instrument, the Moving Party seeks the immediate, decisive, and remedial attention of the President of the Divisional Court and the Registrars to rectify the status quo ante. It is of paramount importance to ensure that the judicial process is not rendered ultra vires by clerical omissions, technological inertia within the Ontario Courts Plus Portal (OCPP), or the inadvertent negligence of the physical registry. The Moving Party posits that administrative efficiency is not a mere aspirational convenience but a mandatory, non-negotiable prerequisite for the effective exercise of judicial authority and the protection of a litigant's right to a timely hearing.

II. CHRONOLOGY OF PROCEDURAL COMPLIANCE AND ADMINISTRATIVE STASIS

1. Initiation and Service of NOM #3: On November 17, 2025, the Moving Party formally issued NOM #3, effecting comprehensive and valid service upon all Responding Parties on even date. Subsequent thereto, on November 19, 2025, the exhaustive Motion Record, Factum, and Draft Order were meticulously served, followed by the requisite filing of the Affidavit of Service. These actions were undertaken in strict adherence to the Rules of Civil Procedure, demonstrating the Moving Party's unwavering commitment to procedural rectitude.
2. Confirmation and Digital Filing Imperatives: On November 24, 2025, a Confirmation of Motion was transmitted to the Registrar. On November 26, 2025, the Moving Party successfully navigated the complexities of the OCPP to submit the filing of NOM #3 and its ancillary documentation. Despite the passage of several weeks and the explicit authorization of the requisite fees, the status of said filing remains perpetually relegated to a "received" state. This failure of the system to transition to "accepted" status as contemplated by the Rules constitutes a significant, albeit artificial, barrier to the Moving Party's right to have his motion adjudicated.
3. Procedural Default of Responding Parties: It is a matter of record that the Respondents, none of whom have delivered a "First Defence" to the Judicial Review Procedure Act (JRPA) Application, have failed to adhere to the temporal mandates of Rule 37.12(5). This procedural lethargy, compounded by a total absence of responsive material, constitutes a default that necessitates judicial notice. The Respondents have effectively abdicated their esponsibility to participate in the adversarial process, yet they remain shielded by the Registry's failure to process the Moving Party's records.

4. Physical Augmentation and the Voluminous Record: Notwithstanding the digital impasse, the Moving Party provided hard copies of the Draft Order on December 8, 2025, and delivered ten comprehensive, tabbed binders of the Compendium for NOM #3 via mail filing on December 11, 2025. This physical augmentation of the record—requiring significant personal and financial resources—was undertaken to ensure that the Court remained fully apprised of the evidentiary foundations of the motion.

III. CASE VIEW VERIFICATION AND RESPONDENT PRECLUSION

I further hereby confirm that in light of my review of the Case View in the OCPP, the Respondents are precluded from being served with any of my documents, receiving steps in the JRPA Application, and have not opposed the JRPA Application. This lack of opposition underscores the prima facie validity of the Moving Party's position and highlights the unnecessary delays caused by administrative inaction. The record demonstrates that the Respondents have waived their right to participate in these interlocutory stages through their own inaction and failure to comply with the Rules.

While pursuant to Section 9(4) of the JRPA the Attorney General for Ontario (AGO) is entitled to be heard at the hearing of the JRPA Application, that is not a matter that is currently relevant to the interlocutory administrative relief sought herein. The focus remains exclusively on the rectification of the Registry's records to reflect the actual state of the litigation.

IV. LOSS OF CONFIDENCE AND REDUNDANT FILING PROTOCOLS

As I have lost confidence and the public confidence has been eroded as a result of the failures primarily of Former Registrar Gentles, a copy of these documents will be mail or drop off filed by a third party or courier, along with being provided via email. Furthermore, a copy of this email and the appended Draft Order will be transmitted via facsimile to the attention of the President of the Divisional Court by way of attention to his judicial assistant.

This redundant methodology of service and filing is necessitated by the aforementioned administrative failures and is intended to ensure that the judicial record is perfected notwithstanding the current state of registry stasis. The Moving Party asserts that such measures are a regrettable but necessary consequence of the erosion of trust in the Registry's ability to maintain the status quo of a functioning judicial system.

V. LEGAL SYLLOGISMS AND THE NECESSITY OF JUDICIAL INTERVENTION

The Moving Party posits that the administrative functioning of the Registry is not merely a ministerial convenience but a fundamental component of the constitutionally required judicial independence and the right to a fair adjudication. To the extent that there is any further opposition or interference, or even if compliance is affected in tardy fashion, the mandamus relief may become necessary even if moot, as a prophylactic measure against recurrent administrative irregularities.

The following syllogism illuminates the necessity of the requested relief:
