If you answered yes to one or more questions, are older than age 40 and have been inactive or are concerned about your health, consult your doctor before commencing an exercise programme or substantially increasing your physical activity. You should ask for a medical clearance along with information about specific exercise limitations you may have. In most cases, you will still be able to exercise as long as you adhere to some guidelines.

When to delay the start of an exercise program: if you are feeling unwell because of a temporary illness, such as a cold or a fever, wait until you feel better to begin exercising. If you are or may be pregnant, talk with your doctor before you start becoming more active.

PLEASE NOTE: even if you answered NO to all the PAR-Q questions, if your health changes so that subsequently you would answer YES to any of these questions, you should immediately inform your instructor. You should consult your doctor to confirm whether it is appropriate for you to change your physical activity or exercise plan.

INFORMED CONSENT FOR PARTICIPATING IN PHYSICAL ACTIVITY

The purpose of an exercise programme is to help you to achieve health and fitness goals. Your programme will be based upon your present activity/exercise levels and the goals that you wish to achieve. You should expect to experience some feelings of exertion during each activity session. In particular, your breathing and heart rate will increase as would be expected from physical exercise of this type. As your fitness improves, you will participate in more vigorous levels of activity, if this is part of your goal, but these should remain within your capabilities. All activities will be explained and demonstrated to you but please feel free to ask questions about anything you wish.

Any exercise programme carries with it an element of risk. Your sessions are designed to minimise the risks whilst providing an effective exercise. Please inform your trainer if, for any reason (such as illness or injury which might be aggravated by exercise, or eating certain foods), you should not participate in an activity. During your sessions with your trainer present you will be closely supervised. During your sessions where your trainer is not present you will be responsible for your own safety. If, at any time, you feel undue pain or excessive discomfort stop the activity and inform your trainer of your symptoms.

You are free to withdraw from any activity at any time you wish.
