W. W. DIMOND'S

One thing that has been instrumental in keeping up the price of goods in Honolulu is the combinations among retail dealers; legitimate enough in its way but it savors of a Trust and the public does not like Trusts.

As the proprietor of the largest hardware, crockery and house-furnishing establishment in the islands we begin business with the view to securing your patronage. We can get it in one way only. Personal friendship is a good thing to possess but it cuts no ice in a business transaction; it's the dollars that count. We are going to get your trade on the basis of dollars and cents.

Having bought our stock direct from the manufacturers and at a trifle less than living prices, we will sell them on the same plan. To start right we took the prices of our competitors on the same line of goods, and in most instances cut them in two—some of them only a quarter off, none the same, the average is half off what other dealers get you to pay for them. We can do this and make a good profit, good enough to let you and ourselves live and enjoy all the beauties of this semi-tropical country.

It's hard for you to believe that, but you will be convinced of the fact if you will visit us on the 17th. Then you will see the goods with the prices marked on them in plain figures and those are the prices you may buy them at, not less, because we mark them in the first instance at just the price we can afford to sell them at.

Remember the 17th.
