Master of Science in Human Services Administration

Position Yourself to Drive Social Change at a Higher Level

Make a more meaningful impact with a Master of Science in Human Services Administration from the UNH College of Professional Studies. In 18 months or less, this fully online program helps human services professionals transition into pivotal leadership roles.

Demand is increasing for effective and compassionate leaders who can manage organizations that help individuals, families and communities secure food and nutrition, housing and shelter, legal assistance, mental health support, youth development, senior services and other critical assistance. Learn key principles of management, ethical decision-making, budgeting, program planning and more, as you prepare to drive innovation and advocate for society's most vulnerable populations.

Impact the Community in a Leadership Role

Learn to:

- Manage and operate public organizations and nonprofits
- Plan, implement and evaluate programs
- Work effectively with people from diverse backgrounds and orientations
- Identify bias and employ ethics in decision-making, policymaking and ensuring the rights and wellbeing of clients and staff
- Apply key laws, regulations and ethical standards to human service delivery.
- Examine social systems and skills related to human service delivery
