QUESTION TO THE MUSEUM MEMBERSHIP

Recently there has been renewed discussion by long time memebers about the possibility of returning to functions the Museum would host for the membership such as a Pizza Party Meeting and an Annual Picnic. Below is some information and a question for the members of the museum. This request is a limited time opportunity so please respond to Andy's request as oullined. (Italicized test added by the Editor for additional historical information)

At the most recent meeting we learned that we have adequate funds in the pizza fund to pay for a pizza party for club members. Jake suggested we poll members to decide on the location. It would be on a regular meeting night later this year.

Two suggested locations:

1) City Dock where we could watch trains on the Rappahannock River Bridge and enjoy fellowship. Like we did with the club years ago, usually the June or July meeting.

2) At our museum and possibly have a special LYT run at the same time, as well as non-public operations on the museum model displays.

Responses to me at asentipal@gmail.com. Cut off date February 15th.

Thanks

Andy

The Future of Norfolk Southern's B-Line Extension in Shenandoah County Rail or Trail?)

Submitted by Justin Duffus, images added by Editor

The Shenandoah Rail Corridor Organization (SRCO) (www.shenandoahrailcorridor.org) is working to preserve rail service on Norfolk Southern's "B-Line extension" from Front Royal to Broadway, VA. It is a 49-mile rail corridor that last saw freight service in 2020 running primarily through the valley in Shenandoah County but also with endpoints in Warren and Rockingham Counties. SRCO claims eight railroad operators have expressed interest in re-introducing service. There has also been much discussion about tourist trains, excursion operations, and rail bikes which would run through a very historical and beautiful valley. Check out the YouTube video from SRCO about the project.

However, a very vocal rail to trail coalition has been advocating for years that the corridor be turned into a trail only. The Shenandoah Valley Rail Trail, as it is called, has a more than 20-year history of study and advocacy. In 2023, the Virginia legislature approved $35M to purchase the line for a trail but required that any action not preclude options for preservation of rail transportation. SRCO advocates a rail with trail option which has been very successful in other locales. Norfolk Southern maintains a minimum 33-foot right-of-way on either side of the rails.

In December 2025, thousands of emails on both sides of the debate from citizens, companies, organizations, and elected officials were sent to the Commonwealth Transportation Board in Richmond expressing their opinions. On Jan 6, 2026, the Board voted 7 to 6 to move the project from the Virginia Department of Transportation to the Virginia Passenger Rail Authority (VRPA) and to begin acquisition of the line for the rail with trail option. VRPA will facilitate purchase of the line from Norfolk Southern for $23M and the other appropriated $12M is earmarked for trail development only. Norfolk Southern told VDOT that the sale should be completed by May 2026 so that its pending merger with Union Pacific does not disrupt and delay acquisition efforts.

This action by the Commonwealth Transportation Board preserves the rail corridor, at least for now, and allows for excursion rail, rail biking, short line operation and potentially commuter or passenger rail in the future. It also allows for the trail to be built alongside it, a win-win for all parties.

Virginia does not intend to own the line or trail but to facilitate the purchase for a non-government entity to own and oversee. Currently that designated organization is the Shenandoah Valley Battlefields Foundation in New Market. Further funding for trail creation or railroad rehabilitation would need to come from private sources. VDOT estimates $164M is needed to convert the line to trail only and $687M total for trail ($382M) with rail ($305M - FRA Class II – 25mph). Some industry estimates place the railroad rehabilitation costs to be much less than the VDOT estimate as the railroad is in much better condition than is typical for similar "out-of-service" lines (e.g., 132 lb CWT on the north end; 100 lb CWT rail on the south end, and only 17.5 miles of 80/85 lb rail in the central section).

Running past historical Civil War battlefields and trails, NS's "B-line extension" or "Harrisonburg line" (as Southern Railway called it) runs west from Front Royal and turns south near Strasburg following I-81 and ends in Harrisonburg, after traveling about 110 miles from Manassas. Historically, it was built as part of the Manassas Gap Railroad in the 1850s from Manassas to Mount Jackson over the Blue Ridge Mountains through Manassas Gap near Front Royal. The Manassas Gap Railroad itself ended at Mt. Jackson, about 15 miles north of Broadway, but subsequent owners extended the line south to Harrisonburg. In 1896, most of the original Manassas Gap Railroad became part of the Southern Railway system which in turn became part of the Norfolk Southern Railway in 1982.

After the 1982 merger, "the Weed Line", as it was affectionately called by its crews, only ran a series of road locals linked relay-race like from end to end. This was a result of Norfolk Southern after the merger prioritizing the parallel ex-N&W mainline from Roanoke to Front Royal and Hagerstown via Page County, and the ex-Southern mainline from Atlanta to Washington DC through the Virginia Piedmont region.

"Promoting Railway History and Preservation"

The last train traveled north from Woodstock to Strasburg in 2007 and south from Mount Jackson to Broadway in 2014. The trestle between Woodstock and Mount Jackson was put “out-of-service” in 1989 by Norfolk Southern to alter N&W and Southern union operating agreements. In 2016, the entire portion between Strasburg and Broadway was put out of service, roughly 38.5 miles. Then in December 2020, the last freight customer in Strasburg closed and the northern ten miles of the corridor were finally designated out-of-service.

Today, Norfolk Southern actively serves the Harrisonburg to Broadway segment which connects to its mainline at Elkton. Norfolk Southern still owns the “out-of-service” corridor from Broadway to Front Royal and has never filed for abandonment. The corridor currently connects to the national rail network in 3 locations: Front Royal (NS – connecting diamond currently removed), Strasburg (CSX), and Broadway (NS). There are many industries along the line that desire rail service for feed, fertilizer, propane, and other products that had been unable to obtain service previously. The corridor is flanked by three thriving short line railroads: Winchester & Western Railroad (53 miles from Gore-Winchester-Hagerstown owned by OmniTrax – 12,500 annual carloads), the Buckingham Branch Railroad R&A Division (199.6 miles from Richmond-Doswell-Staunton-Clifton Forge leased from Virginia with an operating and maintenance agreement – 12,500+ annual carloads system wide), and the Shenandoah Valley Railroad (20.2 miles from Staunton-Pleasant Valley/Harrisonburg operated by Durbin & Greenbrier Valley Railroad – 2,100+ annual carloads). These railroads move thousands of carloads per year and offer a glimpse of the possibilities for the Shenandoah Corridor.

SNAKES ON A TRAIN!

Submitted by Andy Sentipal

Originally published in the official employee magazine of the Railway Express Agency in June, 1931.

So we handle hundreds of snakes during the course of a year but if any get out it is news indeed.

Thus when messenger William G. Stuart saw that a long python snake squirmed out of the box in which it was travelling it was broadcast in newspapers throughout the land.

It was late Saturday afternoon May 10th when Erie Railroad Train 13 was passing Barberton, Ohio when Messenger Stewart saw “what was what.” The rules require that a messenger should not vacate his car while on duty, But he had the presence of mind to “pull the air” and as the train slowed down to get out of the car. The train crew wired ahead to be ready for action. Messenger Stewart rode the remainder of the trip in a different car.

When the train arrived at the station a number of railroad workers were ready to help. A search of the car found the snake coiled up on the top of a pile of freight at the end of the car. The workers removed as much of the greater portion of the contents of the car and talked about how to capture the snake. Due to the large crowd of spectators who gathered at the station no action was taken at that point as there was fear the snake might get out of the car. The car was sealed and continued onto Chicago.

The snake was estimated to be 12 feet long and it was one of four snakes being delivered from Singapore to Brownsville, Texas.

At Chicago, the Erie Railroad Superintendent made contact with a reptile expert at the Lincoln Park Zoo. A representative met the train. Railway Express employees removed all the money and valuables from the car. It was then spotted on a platform without steam so as to let the car get as cold as possible.

The plan was to grab the snake’s head with a noose on a long pole brought from the zoo. Then a number of men would uncoil the snake to keep him straight and attempt to keep him from coiling. The snake was found to be in a bit of a stupor due to the cold temperature of the car. The snake was coiled up on a crate so a different method of capture was used. A packing trunk was obtained and the men tipped the crate with the snake into the larger crate and closed it up.

The snake was then moved into it’s original container and the consignment was back enroute to it’s destination via the Santa Fe.
