The Feast of Christ the King – Lectionary C Deacon Jerome Bettencourt
On this Sunday we celebrate the feast of Christ the King. The marks the end of the liturgical year and precedes the season of Advent. In history, the king was a figure that unified the nation. This was a person of great authority and power who held the fate of his subjects in his hands. Jesus Christ fulfills all these roles for us and more. The main difference between Jesus and a traditional king lies in how he achieves this place in our lives. The readings this Sunday explain how Christ has become our King.
In the Second Book of Samuel the passage describes how David was accepted as king by the people of Israel and unified his kingdom. The Israelite Saul was originally anointed king by Samuel to reign over both Judah and Israel. When he was rejected by God, Samuel was anointed David as King. This began a struggle that split the kingdom in two. The Judeans accepted David and protected him while the Israelites remained loyal to Saul. When Saul died in battle against the Philistines, the elders of the Israelite tribes meet David in Hebron and accept him as their king and David was anointed a second time. Jesus becomes our king when we accept him. As the elders reminded themselves of what David did for them when the kingdom was united, we too must remember how Jesus has touched our lives and receive him as our king.
The passage from Paul’s letter to the Colossians lists the ways Jesus has saved us and deserves our devotion. Jesus has delivered us from darkness, redeemed us from sin and has made us welcome in the Kingdom of Heaven. Jesus has a power and authority that existed from the beginning of time, and yet he attains our salvation through his passion on the Cross. If Jesus is King, then his throne is the cross. How can we reject and turn away from one who has made such a sacrifice for our benefit? The kingship of Christ is revealed in this mystery.
The Gospel passage tells a story of this passion. On the cross Jesus is mocked by the crowd. They taunt him to show his power by saving himself. The Romans mock him and the crowd by placing a sign over His head declaring Him to be the King of the Jews. As one of the men condemned at his side insults Jesus, the other accepts his own guilt acknowledging Jesus’ innocence. Our Lord promises the man that he will enter paradise. Jesus saved the repentant criminal showing power through mercy. For this he is mocked and ridiculed, not just by the crowd at the foot of the cross but often by people of every age since. Jesus does not show power in the way our world recognizes. He does not exert his authority through revenge or terror but reveals it through love and sacrifice.
Jesus Christ is the person who unites us through love into one body we know as the Church. He is the firstborn of creation, the model and template for all that exists, and yet he took redeem us through His sacrifice. We are saved through our relationship with Jesus. He leads us from darkness into the light of God’s kingdom. Jesus Christ is truly King. If he is to be our king, we must accept Him. We can do this when we confess our guilt and ask for his mercy in the hope that we too will meet Jesus in paradise.

Christ the King Sunday – Honoring the Sovereignty of Christ

As the Church’s Liturgical Year draws to a close, Christ the King Sunday, celebrated on November 23, 2025, calls all believers to turn their eyes toward the true and eternal King — Jesus Christ. This feast, established by Pope Pius XI in 1925, was meant to remind a restless and divided world that peace and order can only reign when Christ is acknowledged as King of both hearts and nations.

This solemnity celebrates Christ’s universal kingship — not a political reign, but a spiritual sovereignty rooted in love, mercy, and truth. In an age where pride and power often dominate human ambition, the image of Christ wearing a crown of gold reminds us that true authority comes through sacrifice and humility. His throne is the Cross, and His law is love. The feast also serves as a bridge to Advent, inviting the faithful to prepare for the coming of the King — not just in remembrance of His birth in Bethlehem, but in anticipation of His return in glory. As we honor Christ the King, we are called to let His reign take root in our homes, our choices, and our daily lives.

To proclaim “Viva Cristo Rey!” — “Long live Christ the King!” — is to declare our loyalty not to worldly rulers, but to the One whose kingdom shall have no end.

Reflection:

May this Christ the King Sunday remind us that every act of charity, forgiveness, and justice is a step toward His kingdom. As the Church year concludes, let every heart echo the ancient cry of faith: “Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done.”
