

WHAT THE NON-CHINESE PEOPLES MUST DO TO COMPETE AND END P(L)ANDEMIC

WHAT THE NON-CHINESE PEOPLES MUST DO TO COMPETE AND END P(L)ANDEMICS

BY DAVID HUTTNER

Published by the Peace Love and Progress Party
Release date: January 17, 2025; Version 3
Copyright 2025 by David Robert Huttner

The rights to this book, both the digital and the hardcopy book rights, in all languages, are henceforth in the public domain. You may copy, print, translate, and sell it, unaltered but royalty free. Email your comments, questions and suggestions to me, David Huttner, at drhuttner@gmail.com.

Other works by David Huttner and Available at <http://peaceloveandprogressparty.org> Include:
Decoding the Deluge and finding the path for civilization
(3 vols)
Irish Mythology passageway to prehistory
Stage II of the Nonviolent Rainbow Revolution
The First Christmas (a short play)
Just Say No to Latent Homosexual Crusades
Social Harmony as Measured by Music (a lecture)
Making the Objective and Subjective Worlds One
Converting the World to English
Heaven Sent
Selected Works of David Huttner Volume 1
Selected Works of David Huttner Volume 2
Selected Works of David Huttner Volume 3

This book is extremely general and broad in scope. It covers many topics and makes general statements that, upon a first reading, you might not understand and accept. Please suspend your disbelief and give me the benefit of any doubts during your first reading. I promise you that all my theories fit together like the pieces of a fine Swiss watch and that, when not interpreted literally (when psychoanalyzed), our sacred myths and rituals (the choruses of our ancestors) verify all of these theories.

You'll discover this with a second reading in which you make the effort to explore my citations and dig deeper into the subtopics.

Most folks can't finish reading my books. They blow mental fuses. Why? Because humanity is drowning in lies. As little children, many of us want to know the truth. But each generation "goes along to get along." Because everything we do tends to become habit, as we accept and repeat lies, they slowly become a part of us. Each generation then contributes its own lies to the conventional wisdom, to our growing heritage of lies and wishful thinking. We all must struggle to reverse this trend because the truth, by definition, is all the information and knowledge that advances human evolution.

Notational abbreviations for the author's other books:

DTD Decoding the Deluge, and finding the path for civilization, in three volumes

IM: Irish Mythology, passageway to prehistory

SW: Selected Works of David Huttner, in three volumes

Stage2: Stage II of the Nonviolent Rainbow Revolution

TFC: The First Christmas, a 40-page play

JSN: Just Say No to Latent Homosexual Crusades

MTSAOWO: Making the Subjective and Objective Worlds One

HS: Heaven Sent

SHAMBM: Social Harmony as Measured by Music

Notational abbreviations of the author's videos:

SS101P1: Social Science 101 the K and R Class Struggle...
Part 1

SS101P2: Social Science 101... Part 2

SS101P3: Social Science 101...Part 3

SS201P1: Social Science 201 Homophobia and Latent
Homosexuality, also in 3 parts

SS301: Social Science 301 the New Socialist Family, which summarizes Stage2

SS401P1 or SS401P2 Social Science 401 the Aboriginal African Americans, in two parts

All these books and videos are FREE to download or watch at <http://PeaceLoveAndProgressParty.org>.

So I stood with my shield outstretched

And both were safe in its sight

And I would not that either should triumph

When triumph was not with right

--Solon

TABLE OF CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION 8

CHAPTER 1: WHAT THE CHINESE PEOPLE STILL KNOW THAT OTHERS HAVE FORGOTTEN 14

CHAPTER 2: HOW EASTERNERS, ESPECIALLY CHINESE PEOPLE, DIFFER FROM WESTERNERS, ESPECIALLY AMERICANS 16

CHAPTER 3: WHAT THE REST OF US (ESPECIALLY WESTERNERS) MUST DO TO PREVENT OUR EXTINCTION 26

A. THE SHORT ANSWER 26

B. DISPEL ALL OUR ILLUSIONS AND PREJUDICES REGARDING 26

i. Class Society 26

ii. Sexual Orientations and Homophobia 28

iii. Religion 35

iv. Male Superiority 43

v. The Universal Prejudice against Dark Skin 45

vi. "Modern" Medicine and the New Dark Age of "Covid- 19" 49

C. FORM CLOSE-KNIT AND COOPERATIVE COMMUNITIES 64

i. The Chinese Community 64

ii. The Domed Community we must Develop 66

CHAPTER 4: SUMMARY AND WHAT YOU CAN DO
69

INTRODUCTION

In 1990, I was one of the first people to publicly call for a global ban on fossil fuels. Many of us knew that this was necessary to stop global warming and prevent a major ice sheet from sliding into the sea, inundating coastlines everywhere and killing billions of people.

This did not endear me to the oil companies and all the governments that were controlled by them. It appears, from the reports that are slowly leaking out, that everyone on the ban-fossil-fuels bandwagon was systematically persecuted.

Political persecution was nothing new to me. Prior to Perestroika time (1989), when I developed my own, new, K and R Theory of the Class Struggle, I had been a zealous Marxist for about 20 years. Although, as you will see below, there was and is nothing prejudicial about my K and R Theory of the Class Struggle; my political persecution increased with the formulation and adoption of it! I was expelled from one job and industry after another. At least 3 attempts were made to seriously injure or kill me – with plain-clothes policemen driving unmarked police cars, twice in Manhattan and once in Hoboken.

Yet I persisted in researching, expanding and improving my major book, “Decoding the Deluge and Finding the Path for Civilization.” For me, the last straws were (1) Secretary of State Jim Baker publicly admitting that the first invasion of Iraq was “all about oil” and (2) my right to practice law being flagrantly violated after my graduation from CUNY Law School and immediately passing the New York Bar Exam (scoring in the 98th percentile on the Multistate Exam) at the first opportunity thereafter.

Everyone was, at that time, afraid of the oil companies and their thugs in government and, especially, the “intelligence” community. Even the American Civil Liberties Union would not help me. Fortunately, the People’s Republic of China subtly offered me asylum. They offered me a job teaching English in China. I shall be eternally grateful to them for this.

Soon after going to China and beginning my career as an English teacher, I was summoned to the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, in Beijing, where they offered to buy my major book. They actually wanted to publish a book that was severely censored in the United States of America, that was censored in the world’s professed champion of freedom and democracy!

But I could see that their plan was to censor and distort the chapter of DTD that was devoted to China. They wanted to buy all the rights in perpetuity. Moreover, they wanted to pretend that the author of what was already the world’s best social science work – was Chinese! A Chinese man had already been selected to personate me as the author. My book, as they planned to distort it, would whitewash their government and culture. Their subtle offer of asylum had been motivated by something less than humanitarianism. As I was to learn, over the eleven plus years of my life in China, they are as unable to see themselves as they really are, as others see them, as are Americans.

However, their national socialist (“us against the world”) policies have done a much better job of compensating for their weaknesses and exploiting ours than have American imperialist policies. The world is wise to us and only slowly becoming wise to them.

Most folks have very limited time horizons. They live from day to day and only see changes as they occur day to day.

As Gibbon's "History of the Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire" informs us; most Romans were unaware that their empire was declining and totally surprised when barbarians appeared at the gates.

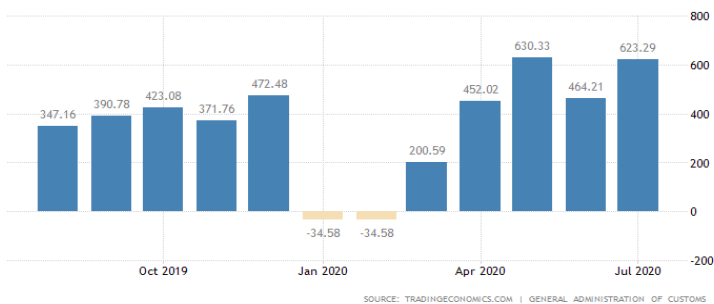

However, the American Empire is declining much faster than Rome ever did. Moreover, today, we have a statistical indicator that clearly reveals a nation's health to anyone willing to open his eyes and see it. The all-important indicator is the balance of trade, the value of a country's exported goods and services minus its imported goods and services.

A positive balance shows that a country's citizens, on average, are relatively productive and efficient. Productive citizens can afford to pay taxes and support a strong government. Relatively unproductive and unemployed citizens are a liability for their government. These all-important statistics, the national balances of trade, clearly show that China is killing the rest of us.

"Since 1995, China has been recording consistent trade surpluses which from 2004 to 2009 have increased 10 times. In 2019, China posted a trade surplus of USD 421.9 billion, the biggest since 2016, as exports increased 0.5 percent and imports fell 2.7 percent on weak domestic demand and trade tensions with the US. The biggest trade surpluses were recorded with the US, Hong Kong, the EU - in particular the Netherlands, the UK, Poland, Spain, Italy and Belgium - India, Vietnam, the Philippines, Singapore, the UAE, Pakistan, Turkey and Indonesia.” --

<https://tradingeconomics.com/china/balance>

Below is a graph of China’s positive trade balance in recent months. While a tariff-raising trade war between China and the US can reduce China’s trade surplus with the US, tariffs alone cannot affect countries’ relative competitiveness or the long-run tendency of the most efficiently produced goods to flow where they are most in demand. Barring radical change in our relative productive conditions, the US will continue to be the single biggest source of China’s surpluses. The following totals are annualized rates in billions of USD.

Of course, the most productive people will also have the highest rate of saving and will buy up the assets of the less productive peoples – which is what the Chinese are doing.

Nine months after coming to China, I tried to warn my countrymen of their need to either change or perish. On February 10, 2005, I predicted “The Emptying of America.” I emailed an editorial of the same name to the Ellsworth Independent Reporter in Ellsworth County, Kansas. The present booklet is, in part, an update of that editorial, which appears below. Maybe this time the world will listen. -- DRH, September 12, 2020

David Huttner
PRC, Jiangsu Province
#50 N. Zhu Jia Yuan Rd.
Yue Long School, Dormitory Bldg. #208

Ellsworth County Kansas, Independent / Reporter -Headquarters
Website: www.ellsworthinderep.com

Thursday, February 10, 2005

RE: The Emptying of America

Gentlemen,

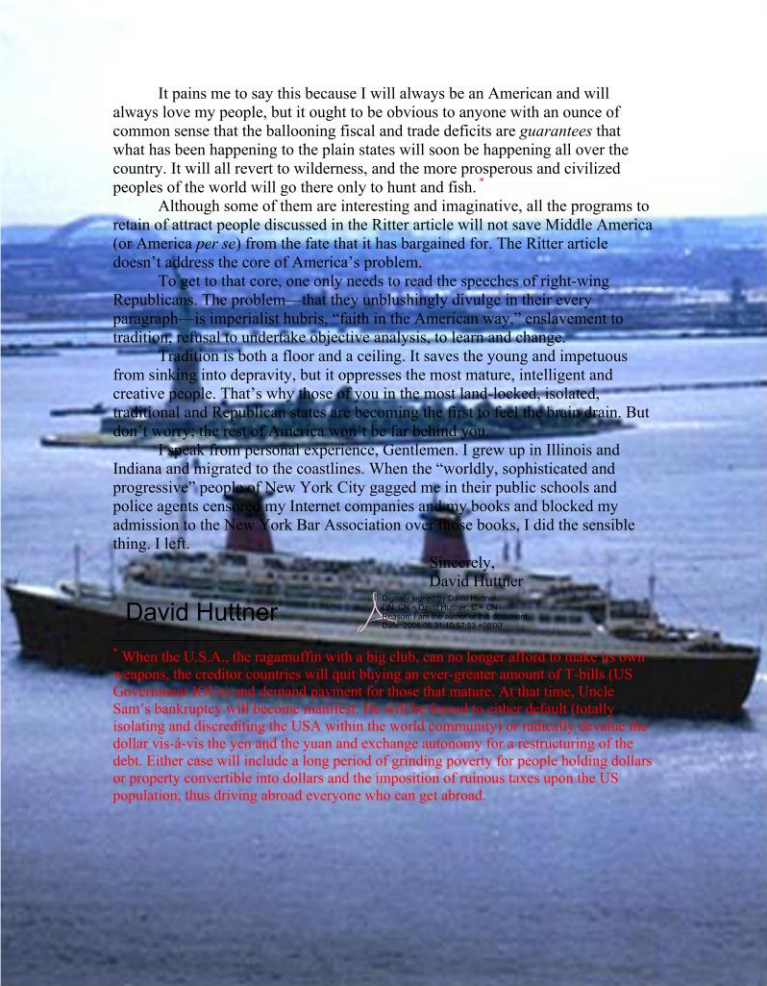

I just now read John Ritter's article on Yahoo News about the Great (Emptying) Plains States and the efforts of their cities and towns to keep and attract people.

I'm teaching English in Nantong, China. You've probably never heard of the place, but it's one of the hot Economic and Technological Development zones in China. It's at the mouth of the Chang Chung River, ideally situated for trade with Korea, Japan and the rest of the Pacific Rim.

But it's not geography that the Chinese have going for them. They are kicking our butts for other reasons. They work hard, cooperate with one another, live within their means and make friends of their neighbors.

Lester Brown's State of the World, 2004 cited China as one of the very few countries where people are living on their income. Few of us have central heating. We drive bicycles and electric motorcycles instead of cars. Unlike the USA, we do not have over 700 military bases and armies of secret police agents in other countries--violating the self-determination of other peoples, setting up puppet governments and forcing our terms of trade on others. With the arguable exception of Tibet (whose people are so closely related to the Chinese as to be visually indistinguishable from them and where the USA would be installing missiles aimed at the major cities of China and capable of striking within minutes if the Chinese weren't there), I don't think that China has a single military base on foreign soils.

All of this is possible because they mitigate their class struggle with equal opportunity and population control and very purposefully maintain a secure and relatively egalitarian societal family. This allows their already secure women to marry for love and permits people to be happy. The Chinese are not deluded by 'American Dreams,' forever chasing carrots that falsely promise happiness.

It pains me to say this because I will always be an American and will always love my people, but it ought to be obvious to anyone with an ounce of common sense that the ballooning fiscal and trade deficits are guarantees that what has been happening to the plain states will soon be happening all over the country. It will all revert to wilderness, and the more prosperous and civilized peoples of the world will go there only to hunt and fish.

Although some of them are interesting and imaginative, all the programs to retain or attract people discussed in the Ritter article will not save Middle America (or America per se) from the fate that it has bargained for. The Ritter article doesn't address the core of America's problem.

To get to that core, one only needs to read the speeches of right-wing Republicans. The problem—that they unblushingly divulge in their every paragraph—is imperialist hubris, “faith in the American way,” enslavement to tradition, refusal to undertake objective analysis, to learn and change.

Tradition is both a floor and a ceiling. It saves the young and impetuous from sinking into depravity, but it oppresses the most mature, intelligent and creative people. That's why those of you in the most land-locked, isolated, traditional and Republican states are becoming the first to feel the brain drain. But don't worry, the rest of America won't be far behind you.

I speak from personal experience, Gentlemen. I grew up in Illinois and Indiana and migrated to the coastlines. When the “worldly, sophisticated and progressive” people of New York City gagged me in their public schools and police agents censored my Internet companies and my books and blocked my admission to the New York Bar Association over those books, I did the sensible thing. I left.

Sincerely,
David Huttner

David Huttner

Digital Signature of David Huttner
SHA1: 1.0 David Huttner, CA 04
Binary: 2008.06.31 08:52:43 +0800

* When the U.S.A., the ragamuffin with a big club, can no longer afford to make its own weapons, the creditor countries will quit buying an ever-greater amount of T-bills (US Government IOUs) and demand payment for those that mature. At that time, Uncle Sam's bankruptcy will become manifest. He will be forced to either default (totally isolating and discrediting the USA within the world community) or radically devalue the dollar vis-à-vis the yen and the yuan and exchange autonomy for a restructuring of the debt. Either case will include a long period of grinding poverty for people holding dollars or property convertible into dollars and the imposition of ruinous taxes upon the US population, thus driving abroad everyone who can get abroad.

CHAPTER 1: WHAT THE CHINESE PEOPLE STILL KNOW THAT OTHERS HAVE FORGOTTEN

The conventional wisdom says that our contemporary world is civilized. Dwellers of large, American inner cities don't believe this. Gangsterism is rife there. No one in Chicago, a city notorious for the gangsters it has produced, believes it either. Except for Chicagoans and other large, American, inner-city dwellers; Westerners have forgotten that:

In a world of competing gangster groups, the largest and most unified group inevitably wins.

A full and correct understanding of this axiom is key to understanding our contemporary world.

Nowhere does any people see itself as a gangster group, as organized savages. We all want to believe we are civilized, and only other peoples are savage. As Socrates and Plato told us, the most difficult thing in the world is to see ourselves as we really are, as others see us.

The Chinese people see other peoples – uniformly – as gangsters or barbarians. Many other nations invaded them, oppressed and humiliated them for approximately 100 years.

If we set aside all our prejudices, we should be able to agree on how to correctly measure civilization. A very common but insufficient way to measure it is by its technical and scientific sophistication. But to do that is to forget that savages value technology too and use it for negative purposes.

The correct way to measure our degree of civilization is by the extent to which we cooperate. Cooperation is the essence of civilization. Morality and cooperation require us to renounce or defer our instinctual impulses and subgroup, gangster prejudices in favor of what is best for humanity as a whole. Cooperation improves productivity and compensates cooperators with the quality of life benefits that we rightfully associate with civilization: peace, security, technical advancement, material abundance and increased life spans.

CHAPTER 2: HOW THE CHINESE PEOPLE DIFFER FROM THE REST OF US

I have lived in or visited about 30 countries. I also drove a New York City taxi (the world's best graduate school of psychology) for about 30 years. The business is mostly in Manhattan where roughly every other person on the street was born outside of the USA and an overly disproportionate share of the foreign-born are taxi customers.

It's fair to say that these experiences combine to make me a relatively international person. I can tell you with great confidence that there is no paradise on this planet. Every people has its problems, some that are uniquely theirs and others that are common to all of us.

Prejudices astound me, which may be why, during my first few years in China, I suffered from a recurring dream. In it, the world consisted of two massive mansions on a barren hilltop separated only by a residential street. The two mansions were identical on the outside but very different on the inside. In the western one, everyone was armed with loaded firearms and shooting at one another. Corpses and blood were everywhere. In the eastern one, everyone was running around lying and playing dirty tricks on each other. Larceny and betrayals were rampant and caused epidemics of disease. The insides of the mansions were alike in only one way. In both places, everyone kept running up to me and asking, "Aren't you glad you're here and not in that nut house across the street?"

The essence of East-West differences is female versus male domination. If you doubt this, see DTDv1, Chapter 13. People that haven't lived in both places for at least a year are unlikely to believe this. Before going to China, I met the owner of Manhattan's "Ear Bar" shortly after he returned from living in China. I asked him, "What's it like?"

"I could tell you," he said, "but you wouldn't believe me."

He was right. At that time, I wouldn't have believed him. You must live in both countries for at least a year to appreciate the fact that the East, especially China, is female dominated; and the West, especially the U.S.A., is male dominated. Chinese men tend to be out front in business and foreign relations, but their women are telling them what to do. For the benefit of all of you that are unable to live in China and see this with your own eyes, I will try to convince you by explaining how East-West differences developed during our prehistory.

Our first, Homo sapiens family won their autonomy, broke away from the Homo erectus-dominated long house, by inventing the bow and arrow, a weapon superior to Homo erectus' spear. This was circa 75 thousand years ago, during the depths of the Ice Age. Breaking away was an unprecedented and hostile act. Even with the bow and arrow, their survival was precarious because they were only one woman, an Eve, and two or three men, Adams. There were probably about a million Homo erectus people, globally, at this time, as many as the Ice Age could support at the top of the food chain.

Our break-a-way, modern ancestors consciously and concertedly multiplied like rabbits. Why? Because the hybrids, the offspring of mixed, Homo sapiens/Homo erectus unions, were sterile. Like most hybrids, mules for example, the hybrids were superior people. They are the "heroes of old" in all our mythologies: Bellerophon, Fin MacCumhail, Cuchulain, Achilles, Sampson, etc. They were bigger, smarter and stronger than the rest of us, but they couldn't make babies. Because we couldn't share grandchildren with Homo erectus, the world had to belong to either them or us.

At some point, during the depths of the Ice Age, 65-75 kya, the Homo erectus community surrounding our rapidly-expanding colony, on or around Lake Victoria, in the heart of lion country, where we had used the lions as a buffer, forced us to divide the family. Half of us wandered off in search of a new home. The German tribes retained this divide-and-migrate tradition right up to modern times (Machiavelli's History of Florence). The hiking half walked due north, as the animals migrated, over what later became the Red Sea. They settled in a swamp of the Lower Tigris and Euphrates River Valley (The Bible locates the "Garden of Eden" there). This later became the city of Ur, the capital of Sumer. The German word Uhr means time. It is spelled differently but pronounced the same. When Germans say that something is "Uhr-alt," they mean that it is older than anyone can imagine. The layers of settlement beneath Ur appear to be endless. When last I heard, archaeologists still hadn't hit bottom. At least one of the peoples that migrated into the basin of Mexico, the Mexica, remembered that their first and only previous, settled community had been across a land bridge, in a swamp.

East-West differences descend all the way from Ur, our first out of Africa, permanent settlement. In or around the swamps of Ur, a mosquito-infested area that no one else wanted, our first out-of-Africa, modern ancestors found refuge. This was 65-75 thousand years ago, in the depths of the last ice age, at the next to the last glacial maximum, when the world suffered from drought and both flora and fauna were minimized.

When our rapidly expanding population again became too great for the surrounding Homo erectus (parent species) community to tolerate, they attacked us. This was the beginning of the Species War, the most violent, important and protracted series of events in the life of man, the cryptic major subject of all our religions and most of our holidays. I had to coin the word for it.

We won this first battle of the Species War (what the Iraqi people still call the “Mother of All Battles”). Had we not, we would not be here today, and Homo erectus would still be dominating the Earth.

This victory (or a few similar ones) enabled our bow and arrow armed ancestors to divide their first out-of-Africa family and move in different directions. The Semitic Tower of Babel myth and several North American Indian myths testify to this fanning out and the subsequent geographic isolation of our peoples and the loss of our common, Homo erectus language. That language would have been something closely akin to Sanskrit. (See DTD, Chapter 33 for the prehistory of the subcontinent.)

During the Ice Age, all the animals would have frequented the Ur swamps for water. Our Ur ancestors became divided into hunters and fishers. (All of them probably gathered whatever they could.) The hunting peoples would have migrated north and south with the animals. At other times, their tendency was to migrate westward because the successful hunter walks into the wind to prevent the game from hearing or smelling him. Because Pleistocene animals were big and fierce, the hunting people would have included the biggest, most confident and aggressive men. The hunting people were male dominated. Men controlled the food supply and made most of the decisions. Men fashioned the languages and religions of what were to become the Western peoples.

With primitive technology, women could and still can fish at least as well or better than men. Their subcutaneous is fattier and their hip bones are less pointed, so women can sit longer without fidgeting. The marine peoples that left Ur would have been loaded up with the most confident and clever women, women who didn't want to depend upon men. The marine people migrated eastward along the Indian Ocean and were female dominated. Women fashioned the languages and religions of what became the Eastern peoples. Fashioned them pursuant to their interests, abilities and needs. If you have any doubt of this, learn about the Naci people that live around Lugu Lake. They are a throwback to the original marine people that migrated eastward from Ur. They are a snapshot frozen in time. (See Volume 1, Chapter 13 of DTD.)

The Western, hunting people were more aggressive and better armed, so Easterner women made maximum use of their greatest strength, languages. They made their languages intentionally and progressively more difficult and used them as a shield to keep the violent Westerners out.

Easterners still readily recognize Westerners as barbarians, savages. Look again at the cartoon that graces the front cover of this book. It wasn't made for Western eyes. I reproduced it from a billboard in China. The accompanying text was all in Chinese and incomprehensible to me. But the little devils obviously symbolize non-Chinese people, people whom the Chinese learned to hate during their hundred years of sorrow, from the mid-1800s to the mid-1900s, when Westerners invaded and occupied their country and humiliated them in every way. The Chinese still refer collectively, indiscriminately and scornfully to foreigners as “weigoren.”

When females abuse their power and injure others, they tend to do it with lies and trickery. Female savagery is more subtle and less obvious than male savagery.

Aside from the era of the crusades, when Westerners were most greatly divided and conflicted by competing religions, Westerners have probably always led the world in science and technology. Science, technology and the mastery of the external environment interest men most.

The Chinese claim to have invented five key inventions of ancient times. But the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, which wanted to buy my books, also wanted to pretend that their author was Chinese. I suspect that Westerners who wandered into China invented those wonders of antiquity.

Women are more focused upon and interested in love, marriage and family life. These aspects of life have always been better in the female-dominated East. This is probably true despite there being a lengthy tradition of Chinese women prostituting themselves to get goods and technologies from Western men.

Many westerners thought that “opening China” would result in its conquest by western imperialism. Nixon and Kissinger were gleeful about their 1972 trip to Beijing and the resumption of Chinese American diplomatic relations. When Deng Xiaoping introduced Special Economic Zones in 1978, western corporations couldn’t invest fast enough in them. Nixon and Kissinger must have thought that history would compare them to Alexander the Great and Count Metternich. In retrospect, they look more like a Laurel and Hardy comedy team. The Chinese have organized themselves like a single person, with one will -- to steal Western, especially American, technology and sell it back to us in lowest-price-per-unit goods.

Although the unbelievably difficult Chinese written language depletes Chinese people of their imagination (forcing them to remember what those 10,000, crazy, Hansi characters symbolize). Although Hansi and their insanely-difficult, tonal, oral languages force them to become what I call “Learning II” people, people with the skills of linguists, the skills to learn from others, listening, imitating and remembering, skills that are just the opposite of the skills needed to learn on our own, to invent and discover new knowledge. Although all 1.4 billion Chinese people couldn’t invent the wheel if we spotted them four spokes and a rim. They are killing the rest of us economically and are on track to drive all the rest of us to extinction.

How and why is this possible?

It’s possible (1) because they work very hard, as one must to do anything in one of their languages, (2) because their family-oriented values cause them to care more about each other and to be more united and to cooperate much more closely with one another, (3) because they are prostituting any and all of their people, especially young people, as necessary to catch the loveless western men they need in a “honey trap,” and (4) because they are the world’s largest gangster group.

At the start of their hundred years of sorrow, the Chinese were overwhelmingly peasant farmers. They were technologically backward in every way. Yet they were able to expel the foreigners because they made maximal use of their unity and numerical superiority.

They go so far as to prostitute anyone and everyone as necessary to lure needed Westerners, especially Western men into coming to China or otherwise giving up their secrets. Some of the tactics are so dirty and despicable that you wouldn't believe it possible unless you read my little book, "The Spy I Loved secrets to the rise of the People's Republic of China." This is not a novel. It's a true story that I was forced to write and disseminate to preserve my liberty. But it only circulated among spies, diplomats and potential investors in China. Why? Because it is so shocking as to mortify everyone that reads it. It is especially embarrassing to me and the characters in the book, characters who, though provided with fictitious names, could be identified by many people and cause posterity to eternally blush.

Although "The Spy I Loved" was released to the Western news media and to the diplomatic and intelligence communities in the summer of 2014. Although Western governments are now thoroughly knowledgeable of the most extreme and strategic Chinese tactics. The Western gangsters have been unable to stop the Chinese gangsters from eating their lunch. Just knowing the Chinese strengths and weaknesses and their dirtiest tactics is insufficient to stop the Chinese from driving the rest of us to extinction.

And the Chinese have absolutely no incentive to change. They are winning and they know it. President Trump's nostalgic, imperialist bluster, to "Make America Great Again," is hysterically funny. His is a Christian game of make-believe.

[Paul's "Jesus" symbolizes the derivative element of the godhead, the Homo sapiens victors of the Species War and the killers or would-be killers of the other three universal and original elements of the godhead. Notice that the killers or would-be killers of the original, four universal elements of the gods are all sons of some sort, and the victims are all fathers or at least parents of some sort. Thus, the Christian, who fervently believes in Jesus as the son of God and magically participates in Jesus' sacrifice by eating his body and drinking his blood, during "communion," earns himself a pardon from the angry gods and is "saved," destined for heaven. (See TFC or the subsection on religion, below.)]

But simply wishing for something (e.g. an end to or defeat of Chinese national socialism) or believing something (e.g. that they are not burying us), no matter how many people believe it or wish for it -- upon a star, at Disneyland or wherever -- cannot make the wish or the belief come true.

Through a close friend, Mr. Trump asked for and received a complete, hard copy set of my books, including "The Spy I Loved," in August of 2016, before winning the Republican nomination for president. But he and the Western ruling classes have obviously not understood my books well enough to draw the correct conclusions.

Westerners, especially Americans, have NEVER been united enough to compete with today's Chinese national socialists. So, it is absurd to talk about "Making America great again."

Even if it were possible to turn the historical clock back to the 1950s, that wouldn't save us. Even then, we were in no condition to compete with the Chinese as they are now, with Chinese National Socialism.

National socialism (or state capitalism) is an “Us against the world” set of policies and attitudes. It appeals to formerly oppressed countries, especially former Marxist countries, which have been oppressed by imperialism. Imperialist countries are the relatively K countries that produce relatively capital-intensive goods. (“K” is defined in the next chapter.) National socialism is not an option for the Western imperialist countries. So, what must we Westerners do to turn the tables on the Chinese, to stop them from eating our (the Westerners’) lunch? What must the Westerners do to turn the tables and force the Chinese to change?

CHAPTER 3: WHAT THE REST OF US (ESPECIALLY AMERICANS) MUST DO TO PREVENT OUR OWN EXTINCTION

A. THE SHORT ANSWER

To survive competition with the Chinese, the rest of us must learn from them. We must become more civilized, among ourselves, than they are. We must mold our societies into one virtual and loving family. We must turn our miserable, savage, gangster-ridden class societies into a most cooperative, classless, nationless, civilized and sustainable world. For the more united, cooperative and civilized we become, the more productive we shall be.

B. DISPELLING OUR PREJUDICES AND ILLUSIONS

In order to unite, cooperate and civilize ourselves – in order to compete with the Chinese; we must dispel our prejudices and illusions. The major ones, in my opinion, are as follows.

i. Class Society, the K and R Class Struggle

Roughly 15 kya (thousand years ago), men (more likely women) discovered horticulture. They discovered how to find the seeds that fall to the ground without opening, collect them and save them over the winter in dry clay pots, and plant and water them in the spring.

Archaeologists think that this discovery, which triggered the Neolithic, the Stone Age of agriculture, began only 9 kya. That's because the earliest crop pollen they find radiocarbon dates to 9 kya. Archaeologists are in error by 6 ky. Why? Because they fail to realize that 15 kya, when the Neolithic, when horticulture actually began; the ocean level was about 300 feet lower than it is now. The earliest farms are now 300 feet below water, and the pollen from their crops will never be found.

The first farmers of the new class societies grew rich beyond previous comprehension. They created their own, permanent state powers to overmaster tribal authority. They cared little for equality and the common environment. They were motivated largely by greed. But class society, monstrous as it was, persevered. It won out over tribal society because the leaders of the tribes tended to be traumatized, superstitious and archly conservative people that thwarted all change. (See "The Golden Bough," the classic work of James George Frazer.) Class society enabled and must be credited for the rapid expansion of our forces of production, for all the technology that we have today.

To fully and correctly understand class society, we must understand its essence, what it is about the classes without which they are not. For example, the essence of schools is not that they have buildings, black boards, desks and chairs, a principal, etc. The essence of a school is the existence within it of teachers and students. The essence of class society is not that it consists of slaves and slave masters, serfs and lords or proletarians and capitalists. Push the argument to a higher level of abstraction, and you will see that the essence of class society is the existence within it of extreme quality and quantity strategies for reproductive competition.

Like the large animals, the rich and powerful pursue the K, quality reproductive strategy. They have few babies (relative to their means) but train and equip them with every possible advantage for survival. Like the small animals and the insects, the poor and powerless members of class society pursue the R, quantity reproductive strategy.

In the early 1970s, biologists E. O. Wilson and Robert MacArthur articulated these two strategies. They noticed that every animal species adopts one or the other.

At Perestroika time, while searching for a new theory of the class struggle, I noticed that humans, at the top of the food chain and in competition only with each other, adopt both these strategies. The two strategies cause and define each other. They are the root cause of all our problems without exception. Think long and hard about any social ill, and you will realize that K and R are at the bottom of it. K and R are what the class struggle is all about. That's why the class struggle cannot be won. Neither can ANY of our socio-political problems be solved without simultaneously lessening, preferably minimizing BOTH K and R. That means simultaneously maximizing, respectively, equal opportunity and population control. (See DTD's Conclusion in Volume 3.)

The strong tendency among us is to see the class struggle only from the point of view of the class we were born into. That is simply unacceptable. Such one-sided prejudice leads to perpetual fighting and prevents one from becoming a civilized person. As an old French proverb says, "To understand all is to forgive all."

ii. Sexual Orientations and Homophobia

The simple and basic laws of our psycho-sexual development are so tabu as to remain unstated – even in our psychology text books. Even the people who are openly homosexual, “out of the closet,” as we say, are afraid to articulate these simple laws because the vast majority of our contemporaries cannot be honest about this subject.

But this subject is so basic as to affect us wherever and whenever two or more people are together. The lies and pretensions surrounding this subject are, in my opinion, the most damaging and pressing ones in the world today. We simply MUST get real about this most basic aspect of ourselves in order to cooperate better and improve our world. Here it is:

If Mom has a partner and doesn't stay too close to us for too long (creating effeminate young men and masculine young ladies that are unmistakably homosexual), then we transfer our desires to our siblings, and he, she or they determine our sexual orientation. Age differences notwithstanding, people with siblings of both sexes become bisexual. People with only same-sex siblings become homosexual, and people with only opposite-sex siblings become heterosexual. The cousin or neighbor most like a sibling determines the orientation of children without any.

Owing to homophobia, people that can hide their homosexuality generally try to do so. By puberty time, they adopt a false persona that I refer to as the Third Mask. We all see these masks going up or strengthening at puberty time, but none of us are privileged to criticize them at this time.

Why? Because by puberty time, we are all wearing two earlier masks given to us by our confused, unconscious and horrific prehistory. The historically First Mask, hides the fact that our greatest love always remains for the members of our birth family. The First Mask came into being after the Primal Revolution that launched civilization, in the time of Homo erectus. (Our parent species. See page 37, below.) The First Mask facilitated our transition to exogamy, marriage outside of the family. The Second Mask resulted from guilt and fear of Homo erectus due to our modern Homo sapiens ancestors having exterminated them and (especially after the Great Flood) having erased their memory. The Second Mask denies our animal being. (See “Second Mask” and “Third Mask” in DTD Volume 1. See “Fourth Mask” in “Message to Guys that think they are Gals,” in “Selected Works of David Huttner, Volume 2.”) As we’ll see, the “Corona” or “Covid-19” mask is an idiot mask created in part by the top latent homosexual Ks, with the help of their venal and religious counterparts in the medical community. Their plandemic is an effort to shrink the human population and economy to avert another great flood, and to do so without losing face. The “Covid-19” pandemic is, in its other part and as we’ll see, an inevitable result of class society grinding to a halt.

So, the mask that hides homosexuality is a Third Mask. In our time, the homophobia that creates the Third Mask has at least three sources. The first source, the minor source, will be with us for as long as human reproduction is sexual. We compete reproductively with other fertile members of our gender. Within civilized limits, that competition is positive and will not go away anytime soon.

The other two, major sources of homophobia are negative and can be eradicated. The first is the inordinately-high, unregulated, largely-female-instinct-driven birthrate. The belief, a belief especially strong among women, which says they have a “god-given (?)” right to procreate and their tendency to become baby-making machines forces men to become killing machines. (Of course, the rational birthrate of a civilized society is the one corresponding to the greatest decrease in the death rate.) The need for the men of savage K and R society to become killing machines is, of course, incompatible with male homosexuality. It causes tremendous homophobia and virtually forces homosexual men that can hide their homosexuality to do so, to adopt a false persona, a Third Mask that portrays them as being quite the opposite of the sensitive and loving person beneath the mask.

The other major source of homophobia is monogamy, which forces homosexual folks to choose between having love and having children. That's a horrible double bind. Monogamy forces bisexual folks to be only half satisfied. Believe it or not, for the vast majority of human existence, we were NOT monogamous.

Until roughly 15 thousand years ago, our ancestors lived in tribal families, in long lodge houses, polyamorously. They had to eat together and be polyamorous in order to insure each other's survival. In hunter gatherer times, no one could be assured of finding food every day, or even every second or third day. People died at birth or very early. The discovery of horticulture (collecting the seeds that fall to the ground without opening, saving them over the winter in dry, clay pots and planting and watering them in the spring) started the Neolithic (the Stone Age of Agriculture). K and R, class society, also began at this time.

The first farmers laid claim to the land and the wild herds that they were working with as private property. The land and the wild herds had always existed, but traditionally they had been thought to belong only to the gods, meaning our first gods, our Homo erectus parent species.

The first farmers were in fierce competition with each other and in conflict with the tribes from which they came. Our horrific prehistory had deeply traumatized people and made them superstitious, fearful and resistant to all change. The first farmers needed sons to help them protect their claims to private property and to help with the hard work. They also wanted to keep their property intact, so they needed to bequeath it (pass it on) to only one or a very few offspring.

Daughters were unwanted. They could be expected to marry outside of the patrilineal family and take production secrets with them. The first farmers wanted their few offspring, their sons, to be biologically their own. So, the first farmers, the first members of the K Class, had to become monogamous.

But monogamy, the very institution they needed to constitute themselves as a class, became the worst problem for them and for every successive generation of Ks. Monogamy forces homosexual folks to choose between having love and having children!

And the sons of the first farmers, the first in-born generation of Ks, were homosexual. Every successive generation of Ks has become increasingly latent homosexual for at least two reasons. First, loveless, angry, malicious, mendacious and ultra-reactionary, they become the best savages. They develop the personality profile that George Orwell described as “Big Brother.” They become the monsters of society. (The Second Mask makes all of us the monsters of the animal kingdom.) They rise (materially) right to the top of every walk of savage, K and R life. Secondly, we all tend to want children that are like ourselves. Far from getting Orwell’s message, the Ks are still modelling latent homosexuality to the rest of us. Donald Trump goes right before the cameras, beating his chest and saying, “I’m more latently homosexual than all of you.”

The claim that there are different kinds of love is pure nonsense. There are NOT different kinds of love. There are only different degrees of love. Same sex siblings of every class are afflicted by monogamy. All are brainwashed, at puberty time, by their parent and grandparents. ‘Oh no!’ say the old folks, ‘You don’t love each other. You love the opposite sex, and you will each marry one of them to produce grandchildren for us.’

Follow these instructions, add to our population problem, and you will condemn at least eight people to lives of misery: yourselves, the opposite sex people you marry and at least four other people who should have been your marriage partners.

Moreover, and except in cases of rare genetic defects, genes have nothing to do with the characteristics that really matter. Genes have nothing to do with character, personality and general intelligence. All these important things are learned. Genes only determine which proteins our cells make, insignificant things like the color of our eyes or the shape of our nose. (See Stage2.)

The worst sufferers of homophobia and latent homosexuality don’t understand its causes but know that they never willingly chose to be as they are. So, they indiscriminately blame all the rest of us and are hell-bent upon “getting even with” (humiliating) the rest of us. This last personality trait causes them to gravitate to politics and government like metal filings to a magnet. Politics, government and wealth provide latent homosexuals with ample opportunities to oppress and humiliate others. It is impossible for latent homosexuals, loveless people, to be happy. But if they can make everyone around them miserable, then they are less apt to notice their own misery. If they can monopolize some vital service or resource, then they are in the 9th Latent Homosexual Heaven.

Incidentally, if you don't know that we all love our siblings, then talk to any little child. Until they become brainwashed and oppressed, little children tend to be our most spontaneous, honest and best people. A good place to find them is at a McDonald's playground or a Laundromat on a weekend when Mom is doing the wash and dragging them along.

To compete with the Chinese and to transition to a civilized, sustainable and loving world that I describe as "Stage II of the Nonviolent Rainbow Revolution," in my little book, Stage2; we need to pass through a 25-year transitional period, a Stage I. We'll consider Stage I in more detail in the next subchapter. For now, realize that Stage I must include a global moratorium on human procreation in order to reduce our population to a controllable level, create equal opportunity, complete the spread of the most simple trade and port language (English) as the world language, educate the public and eliminate all our prejudices, especially homophobia.

Homophobia and K and R savagery will quickly disappear when no one can procreate and love becomes the only motive for marriage.

Heterosexual monogamy will be the ideal for future generations and will simplify social life, after we have committed ourselves to civilizing the world by maximizing equal opportunity and population control. Then we can get monogamy right. My book, "Stage II of the Non-violent Rainbow Revolution," shows how we can make heterosexual monogamy work for future generations, how we can provide every future person with a happy marriage to his or her perfect partner. Two, new software applications will be needed, one for Stage I, both for Stage II. (See Stage II.)

In the meantime, we've got to accommodate the people we have. Everyone has an equal right to be happy, and – contrary to the conventional wisdom -- no one marriage size or gender pattern fits all! We need to legalize – not only same sex marriages but – group marriages under the right conditions for the people that need them. The Peace Love and Progress Party has proposed a Group Marriage Bill that can do much to overcome the oppression of homosexual and bisexual people. The bill can be read on the Blogs Page of <http://PeaceLoveAndProgressParty.org>. All the blogs, books and videos of the Party are FREE to read, download and watch at the website.

iii. Religion

Except for the mellow inmates that use their hard time to think and read, everyone rightfully incarcerated (in prison) is religious. Percentagewise, you find the fewest number of believers in prestigious academic institutions and laboratories. Those two facts alone should suffice to disprove claims that religion correlates positively with morality and civility.

Moreover, anyone schooled in any of the natural sciences knows that religious myths and rituals can't possibly be literally true.

But it is insufficient to simply reject religion abstractly. Religions are the cartoon or hallucinatory versions of our prehistory and basic psychology. Until we know more precisely and scientifically what our prehistory and basic psychology is about, religion continues to exert a powerful hold upon our minds because it refers symbolically to these subjects.

So, let's get into that psychology and prehistory. Let's get into religion at its nuts and bolts level. I find it extremely interesting, and I think you will too.

I have found that the easiest and best way to understand and teach comparative religion is by considering its two sides: the demand side and the supply side.

The demand side is super simple. Everyone that makes any effort to understand religion scientifically understands the demand side.

Like all the other animals and plants, our ancestors evolved from one-celled organisms. Although we are presently at the top of Earth's food-chain (possibly for not much longer), getting here has been a 4 billion-year long and arduous struggle. There never was a big parent in the sky, an angel in a cave or a thundering voice atop Mount Sinai to inform us, empower us or protect us. But at one insecure time or another, especially when leaving home and going out into the savage world on our own; all of us have wished for a big parent at large. A parent to protect us as our biological parents did when we were babies.

As babies, when we look up into our parent/creators' eyes, we acquire the archetype of God. As we grow up and learn more about the world and our parents, they slowly lose their divinity. As they lose it, we hope that another being can fill the role.

The demand and supply sides of religion interface in the projection and misidentification of spirits. Here's how that works. The greater, imperishable being, must be an immaterial and great spirit, like the imperishable and immaterial "soul" that we hope to have within us.

But the "soul" is the phenomenological result of the closing of an electrical circuit that admits sensory inputs into its orbit. Through long nerves, ganglia that connect to the circuit and stretch throughout the brain, we are able to store sensations and logical syllogisms. The circuit resides in a donut-shaped object at the base of the brain called the intralaminar nucleus. Chemical electricity cycles within it at a steady state of 40 cycles per second. At 40 frames per second, the external world appears fluid, like a cartoon. Moreover, this operating system, which is relatively stable and unchanging compared to the external world that it monitors, gives rise to self-awareness, awareness of itself as a thing. But this operating system, which Freud called the ego, ceases to exist when the electricity in it stops cycling. Then we are only worm food, 90 some cents worth of chemicals, maybe a few dollars, inflation being as it is.

The apprehension of external and immaterial "spirits" seems to affirm the individual's wishful belief in his own immaterial and imperishable "soul." But the "spirits" simply result from the repression of one side of our ambivalence (mixed emotions, love and hate) toward some person or associated object of ambivalence. We tend to repress the negative side of the people we need (e.g. the same-sex parent) or must work and cooperate with (e.g. our ongoing, genetic competitors). But the positive and negative emotions still struggle with one another in the mind. The struggle can't be located because one side of it is repressed and unknown to the unconscious person. So, the unconscious person thinks that he is interacting with an external living, immaterial and imperishable thing, such as the immaterial and imperishable “soul” that he hopes resides within him.

The unconscious individual needs to identify these “spirits.” He “finds religion” when he associates the projected spirits of his ongoing genetic competitors and same-sex parent with the prehistoric gods of his native culture. Religious believers tend to be completely unconscious of their ambivalence toward these universal elements of the godhead.

Major breakthroughs on the supply side of religion were made only by Joseph Breuer, Sigmund Freud (Breuer’s student) and me. Breuer discovered the key significance of ambivalence, mixed emotions. If you only hate someone, that’s not a big problem. You can avoid that person or group and forget about him, her or them. But that is not possible with someone for whom you have extreme ambivalence.

Especially if he, she or they are parents of some sort; that ambivalent person or group is always on your mind. He, she or they become associated with every tough decision, every momentous event and every difficult problem.

There are four groups of ancestors and relatives and one individual toward whom all of us have extreme ambivalence.

These folks, the universal elements of the godhead, were the only candidates to become the gods, more specifically, the gods and the demons, or, in modern times, God and Satan.

These universal elements of the godhead are:

1. The biological, same-sex or competing parent

2. Closely associated with 1. and forming, with 1. what Freud referred to as the Oedipal or Electra complex, are the primal fathers, the alpha males of the horde, of the wandering and foraging pack of 10-40 primates when we lived as the gorillas still live. The largest, alpha male monopolized the females and drove his sons from the horde once the sons had reached sexual maturity. The sons then developed in isolation until they could return to gang up upon the father, kill him, cannibalize him and fight to replace him. This cycle of violence was broken when our Homo erectus parent species accomplished the Primal Revolution, first revolution in our social behavior, a revolution that launched civilization, when they learned to renounce the desire for siblings and parents and mate outside of their nuclear family. This eliminated most of the conflict between fathers and sons and enabled fathers to tolerate adolescent sons within the family.

3. Homo erectus, our parent species, the victims in the Species War. We are ambivalent toward them on the positive side because they were parents that taught us their culture. Our negativity toward them stems from the fact that they oppressed us, took our women as they chose and cannibalized us more than others.

No telling how many of us Homo erectus mutants were born before they permitted a male and a female freak to mate. When they finally did allow us to mate with each other, it would have been only for the sake of producing more hybrids.

4. Closely associated with 3. and forming what I call the Fraternal complex are our ongoing genetic competitors.

On the positive side, we are a herd animal that must work together cooperatively in order to survive and thrive. On the negative side, we are at the top of the food chain. We lack a natural predator and still have our natural instincts to over-produce and preserve our own genes. We've also failed to rationally limit our reproductive competition. Given these conditions, we're compelled to prey upon each other. And finally,

5. The victors of the Species War, our prehistoric Homo sapiens ancestors that defeated Homo erectus. They are the derivative element of the godhead. Their ambivalence and divinity are derived from their killing of Homo erectus. Why? Because the executioner is loved to the same extent that his victim is hated and hated to the same extent that his victim is loved. The ambivalence felt toward them became as balanced as that felt toward their victims.

All four groups and the one individual became amalgamated mythologically owing to their similarities and owing to the efforts of priests and scribes to syncretize the gods. Every priest sought to increase his patrons by enlarging his god, which meant absorbing the gods of competitors. The gods also became magnified owing to the dramatic, narrative benefit of symbolizing large groups as individuals with extraordinary powers. During the syncretism (amalgamation of the gods) and dramatic narrative creation, the positive attributes became attributed to the loving gods and the negative ones to the hateful demons.

Because two of the prehistoric elements of the godhead (i.e. the primal fathers and the parent species) were killed and the other three universal elements of the godhead were folks whom a part of us would like to kill or to have killed (i.e. the ongoing genetic competitors, the same-sex parent and the victors in the Species War), it was vaguely understood that the gods were angry . Therefore, they needed to be feared and won over, supplicated with revenge in kind, blood! Blood sacrifice was the everyday work of the pagan priest. Pagan tribesmen needed to live fraternally, so, like today's national socialists, they projected all of their negativity toward each other as unrestrained genetic competitors onto men from other tribes, tribes toward whom they were always fearful and often at war. The perennial pagan pattern was to capture other tribesmen and clansmen and sacrifice them to the gods.

But with the approach of the modern era, pagan religions, especially sacrificial rites, had to be reformed in the interest of trade. People from different tribes and clans had to be able to come together with goods in hand instead of weapons, so that everyone could benefit from trade. The general transition was from human sacrifice to infanticide to animal sacrifice to votive offerings (giving the god's priest a weapon or a coin).

Expanding empires were unifying people's coinage, customs, languages and commercial laws and connecting them with seaways and roads. Empires needed to unite people in their religious beliefs too. This meant condensing the hordes of gods into a few that everyone could remember and revere. All the pagan images were best expunged too because modern men, dividing the production process as they do, were more analytical in their thinking. (If they could see through the image, see whom the god represented, then they wouldn't need a priest!)

Finally, and most importantly, each modern religion had to invent a creative and persuasive argument as to why the angry gods would settle for something less than revenge in kind, blood.

My videos, Social Science 202 Prehistory and Religion, Parts I, II and III, reveal how the various modern religions developed their arguments and turned believers away from blood sacrifice. (You should now be able to reread my account of the logic of the Christian Myth, the second paragraph of page twenty-four, above, and understand it.)

It is important to realize that no religion played the fully civilizing role that they attribute to themselves. To do so, they would have had to make the people conscious of the universal elements of the godhead, remorseful toward the exterminated elements and purged of their negativity toward the ongoing elements. The Peace Love and Progress Party is the first organization conscious and civilized enough to do this. The Party's new system of marriage and child-rearing, Stage2, will eliminate our problems with incest and negativity toward the individual element of the godhead, the same-sex parent. Minimizing the K and R class struggle (by maximizing equal opportunity and population control) will minimize our negativity toward the other, ongoing element of the godhead, our ongoing genetic competitors.

Unlike the Peace Love and Progress Party and me, who struggle to eliminate our basic contradictions, religions have only sought to restrict those contradictions within survivable limits. (In the case of the modern religions, distant neighbor relations were improved in the interest of trade – without increasing equal opportunity and population control – without improving overall civility.) Neurotic priests, who are, like politicians and the Ks in general, mostly malicious latent homosexuals; oppress the people by keeping them unconscious, savage and strife torn.

In 1991, when my books were only about one fifth as good and voluminous as they are now, and my videos did not yet exist, the Roman Catholic Church sent a cardinal all the way from the Vatican to me, in New York City. They arranged the meeting to make it appear plausibly accidental. It wasn't. It was clear to me, from prior conversations with an FBI agent, that they were willing to pay me $33,000,000 for my books. They sought not to publish them but to bury them!

Not for a moment did I ever take them seriously. I knew that their contract would include a non-compete clause and a non-disclosure clause. Had I accepted it, I wouldn't be able to communicate with you as I'm doing now.

Again, your esteem is worth more to me than love or money.

iv. Male Superiority

As stated in the previous chapter, the East is female dominated, and the West is male dominated. In both societies, the dominated gender fails at what it would otherwise do well. Easterners fail to develop science and technology. They fail where men generally excel. Westerners fail at love, marriage and family life. They fail where women generally excel.

The dominant gender is assumed to be smarter than the dominated gender. But, in fact, none of us are good at what we are NOT focused upon. We men are stupid when it comes to love and marriage, and we should NOT be making those decisions.

Insecure and oppressed, Western women passively wait for proposals from stupid, male suitors and generally choose the highest (monetary) bidder. That's why there's no love in the West, and that's why the Honey Trap works so well for the Chinese. They acquire the intellectual property of ANY targeted Westerner, mostly men, by sending the right seducer to him. The right seducer is of the right gender for the target and has a face very similar to that of the target and his mother. Once the target is conscious of his love for the seducer,

“For one command he sits and waits now from one who's master of his fate now

He can't resist cuz it's too late now

He's just a prizner of love.”

– Leo Robin's “Prisoner of Love” lyric

The Chinese have probably developed the “Face-matching” software that I refer to in Stage2. This software is only an enhancement of the facial recognition software that Westerners developed long ago. Westerners are using it only for identification purposes, for security purposes. Male dominated, Western society is too crazy to use it for its potentially highest and best purpose – matchmaking, love-making. Of course, for the latent homosexual males that dominate Western class society, love can't exist; and they are resentful of anyone that appears to have found it!

In order to overcome our vulnerability to the Honey Trap and create a happy society, we must first, during Stage I, get our population under control and start to eliminate all our prejudices. Then we can create two governmental hierarchies of committees. One will enforce equal opportunity. The other will enforce population control. If we do this and organize ourselves into Stage I community domes (as described in the next chapter), then we can implement the Stage II System of Marriage and Child Rearing described in the book Stage2. It will create a paradise wherein

- love is virtually guaranteed for everyone,
- anger, crime and incest virtually disappear,
- our men all become creative geniuses and
- our women become gifted family leaders with more control of their families than even Chinese women ever dreamed of enjoying.

v. The Universal Prejudice against Dark Skin

In class society, in a society consisting of Ks and Rs, in a society where we (at the top of the food chain and without a natural predator) have failed to set limits upon our reproductive competition and consequently MUST prey upon one another; prejudices of every sort are inevitable. If the only difference between the individuals of class society were in the relative size of their toes, then that would be the basis for “us versus them,” intra-human predation.

But the prejudice against dark skin is universal. It has an additional, prehistoric basis.

We have already referred to the Species War, the most violent, traumatic and important series of events in the life of man. We have also referred, very generally, to the Stone Age of Agriculture, to the Neolithic, which created class society.

The Neolithic, the advent of horticulture, also caused the Great Flood. Yes, there was a Great Flood! It was the second worst trauma in the life of man, but the one that still impacts us the most because it occurred only 14,634 years BPE, before the present era, before year 2000. We have retained a partial memory of it and are still very traumatized from it.

I discovered very early in my research that The Flood is what psychoanalysts call a “screen memory.” It is closely connected with and screens out the Species War. The Flood caps the Species War in all our mythologies.

But for the first 22 versions of DTD, I falsely believed that “The Great Flood,” in all our mythologies, refers to an amalgam of four floods that happened at interglacial peaks over the last 400 thousand years. No one of these floods was significantly worse than the others, or so I thought.

Wrong! We can’t see what our minds won’t permit us to see, and I am no exception to that rule. Although clear evidence of a single Great Flood had always been right before my eyes, it was simply too horrible for me to admit into consciousness.

For Version 23 of DTD, I saw it in the most recent (Greek) Deucalion myth. I saw it in the earliest Irish myth of Fintann, the “Salmon of Knowledge,” and I saw it in Part II of the Walam Olum, the Bible of the Delaware Indians.

I saw all of this on April 2, 2015, after I had returned to the USA from China in order to update my books. I also saw, at that time, that the most recent Vostok Ice Core data, provided by the Russians, reveals the date of the Great Flood. I was, on or about that date, also able to verify it by the fact that the Aboriginal African Americans started enlarging their great mounds into platform mounds after the Flood, at 14634 years BPE, platforms mounds with a ramp on one side and onto which they could run in the event of another great flood. Here is what apparently happened:

The discovery of horticulture spread like wildfire around the world. Our ancestors had already known, for at least 100,000 years, how to breed the animals. They needed and used the domestic dog to defeat Homo erectus. The use of dogs compensated for our sensory inferiority to Homo erectus. However, animal husbandry was not a viable occupation until we could grow grain or tubers to feed the animals. Now agriculture blossomed. This sparked a global frenzy of slashing and burning to lay claim to the lowest, most fertile and most easily irrigated lands. There were no fire departments back then. If a fire got away from you, it could burn a whole region. As one Hindu myth says, a “terrible poison came forth and immediately enveloped the universe ...paralyzing the universe with smoky fire and fumes” (DTD, Volume 2, page 294). The slashing and burning caused a global spike in deforestation and carbonation of the atmosphere. This sent a massive ice sheet (probably Greenland) sliding into the sea when the glaciers were still massive.

The ice slid in three successive pieces, raising the sea level about 100 feet and creating another 100 feet of tidal waves.

But even before 2015 and my discovery of the actual date of the Great Flood, I knew that our ancestors had become supremely guilty about their extermination of Homo erectus. Guilt and fear (of “the gods”) had caused them to distort the prehistory of Homo erectus and the Species War.

After the Flood, they virtually expunged – blacked out -- Homo erectus’ memory in all our oral histories. Why? Because everyone feared the Homo erectus gods had brought the Flood as punishment. Even thinking about Him or the Species War might incite His anger and bring more punishment. Or so they thought.

This expunction had the effect of severing our link with the rest of nature. To completely expunge the guilty memory of Homo erectus, our ancestors had to sever our link with the rest of nature and pretend that we were created by an extra-terrestrial, alien god in the sky. This resulted in such crazy thoughts as,

“On the seventh day, God created man in His image” (i.e. different from all the other animals and plants).

The only real connection between our parent species and the sky is that His less edible body parts were, in most places, burned in bonfires; and His ashes rose into the sky. It is exactly upon the locations of these bonfires that all the world's great mounds, including the ones that evolved into pyramids and tumuli, were built. (Ambivalence toward Homo erectus and his ashes caused our Homo sapiens ancestors to continually throw dirt upon these locations.)

Our animal alienation comes under attack and our mental lid upon the Species War and all the associated guilt and fear is threatened with being blown sky-high whenever we see another human being with dark skin. Why? Because all the other great apes have dark skin. Thus, the universal prejudice against dark skin.

The Aboriginal African Americans were the worst immediate victims of the Flood. They were a marine people that hugged the coastlines and the Mississippi River Valley. Their population center was the Lakes of Mexico and the Caribbean Lake. (Just before the Flood, the ocean was about 300 feet lower than it is today. There was a land bridge between Florida and Guiana.)

For Aboriginal African Americans, the Flood was a double whammy. They were the worst victims of the water and among the worst victims of the racism (animal alienation) that followed the Flood. That explains why, still today, African Americans are among the most traumatized and fundamentally religious people.

As Kenneth and Mamie Clark showed us in the 1940s, African Americans' adherence to modern religion causes even them to think ill of themselves. When allowed to choose between a white and an identical dark-skinned doll, even the African American children assumed that the white doll was "better."

vi. "Modern" Medicine and the New Dark Age of "Covid-19"

"Modern medicine" is a misnomer. Ignorant and naïve prejudice accepts and promotes the illusion that the patrons and practitioners of modern medicine are civilized. In fact, there is nothing modern about the conventional doctors who diagnose and treat disease. Their allopathic, "germ" or virus theory of disease derives from Neolithic superstition and alienation from the natural world. They, themselves are no more modern or scientific than our Neolithic ancestors.

Our conventional physicians are very competent, when they choose to be, in performing surgery, delivering babies, mending bones and giving emergency life support. But they are clueless at diagnosing and treating disease. They tend to do more harm than good in their disease practices because they don't understand how our bodies function, and they interfere with processes they don't understand.

Paleolithic, Old Stone Age, men assumed that all death from unobservable causes was attributable to Awade (to use the Kwakiutl name), to a murderous agent of the Homo erectus gods. These agents were later dubbed as the "Holy Spirit," the "Holy Ghost" or (colloquially) the "Grim Reaper."

With the advent of agriculture, men became more powerful and most became more confident of their own powers. But as stated above, the Great Flood caused the expunction of Homo erectus' memory, severing our link with and alienating us from the rest of nature. Our alienation from the natural world not only gave birth to dark skinned racism. It also gave birth to allopathic medicine, to the theory that disease is caused by an earthly organism invading our alien bodies.

The truth is that there is no such thing as a "virus" that causes disease. "Viruses" are almost wholly a product of religious superstition and alienation, fraud and, as we'll see, venality.

I say "almost" because many of the micrographs (images produced by electron scanning microscopes) do show nano-size particles that are membrane enclosed and do contain proteins and genetic material such as their hypothesized "viruses" would contain. These particles were discovered 30 years ago and are called exosomes. They are tiny garbage bags of debris that are created when cells are disassembled by bacteria and fungi or destroyed by toxins or emfs (electro-motive fields). They are not and cannot be transmitted from person to person. There are more bacteria than cells in the human body. Exosomes, bacteria and fungi are indigenous, created by or hosted by our bodies. The exosomes absorb toxins. All three are an important part of the cleaning up process that follows the recovery stage of dis-ease. It generally takes a massive injection of a foreign bacteria, e.g. as from a blood transfusion, to weaken us or make us sick. Fever also results from cell destruction during the healing phase of disease. More on disease, below.

It is important to note that none of the micrographs show living organisms. The heat created by the electron scanning beam, in both types of electron microscopes, kills anything in the beam's path. Moreover, the specimen is scanned in a vacuum to facilitate movement of the beam. The heat and the vacuum kill any living thing that might have been in the specimen. So how can virologists hope to preserve in its original, life-like structure, a dead nano-size particle? How can they know that these objects they see in an electron microscope image were ever alive and did anything? Obviously, they can't. They are engaged in the ultimate Christian magic and wishful thinking. Virology is the communion of the Christian medical scientists, and the leaders of the World Health Organization and National (USA) Center for Health Research are its high priests.

But they keep using electron microscopes for biology and pretend to overcome this dilemma by subjecting the specimen to ever greater and more numerous procedures, e.g. filtering out the large particles or coating particles with gold or other heavy metals. All these maneuvers are just additional layers of magical wishful thinking and fraud, additional curtains for the wizard to hide behind. The community claims to see whatever it wants to see. (See, for example, Dr. Ilsedora Laker's blogs, <https://www.gnmonlineseminars.com/the-iron-rule-part-i/>)

et. seq. See also excerpts from the text, “How Cells are Studied,” at <https://opentextbc.ca/conceptsofbiology1stcanadianedition/chapter/3-1-how-cells-are-studied/#:~:text=Preparation%20of%20a%20specimen%20for,using%20this%20type%20of%20microscopy.&text=In%20a%20scanning%20electron%20microscope,cell%20surface%20characteristics%20by%20reflection.>)

Ryke Geerd Hamer, quite possibly the greatest physician of all time, was the first person to understand the disease process. In the 1980s, he discovered how our autonomic nervous system evolved and functions. This system (of nerves that we can’t volitionally control) plays the critical role in all disease.

All dis-ease is triggered by trauma. Whenever we experience a trauma (or even a disappointment, in the case of the common cold), depending upon how the psyche interprets it, the brain center for one organ or another is switched on.

Every organ has a brain center that evolved with it. The brain center controls the amount of work that the organ can do by controlling its size. Bigger lungs exchange more gasses. Thicker skin protects us better, etc.

Nerves connect the brain centers with their respective organs. The nerves are routed through the pons, an electrical harness in the brain stem, at the base of the brain.

Activating an organ’s brain center causes the organ to grow bigger or stronger by one of two methodologies, depending upon whether it is an old brain organ, with its brain center in the brain stem or the cerebellum, or a new brain organ, with its brain center in the mid-brain or the cortex.

When the crisis subsides, the organ reverts to its baseline state. The assumption that our organs are, like our stature, fixed in size once we reach “maturity” is simply not true. This organ tumult, growth and shrinkage of an organ, is what causes dis-ease. (See “The New Medicine of Ryke Geerd Hamer” in SWv1 or at <http://peaceloveandprogressparty.org/blog/f/the-new-medicine-of-ryke-geerd-hamer> .)

But the standard, allopathic disease theory remains popular because it satisfies three tendencies: 1) the belief that we are all the same on the inside. (Latent homosexuals would like to deny all individual differences and view the mind as a blank or black box.); 2) the superstition and alienation of religious people from the natural world and 3) the greed of the drug companies, hospitals, the AMA and its members.

The industry can’t make one tenth as much money from the legitimate practice of the New Medicine as what it makes off fraud, superstition and alienation, off selling us bogus medicines and vaccines, performing unnecessary surgery and requiring unnecessary hospital stays.

Popular beliefs concerning “cancer” constitute a separate mythology. Tumors don’t metastasize. They usually result from a prolonged, old brain organ crisis in which cells are being told, “Divide, divide, divide ...” That can cause the P53 gene to go awry and not kill a cell that fails to replicate correctly, creating tumors. But tumors, said Hamer, are generally harmless unless they grow large enough to interfere with another body organ. During the crisis lyses (resolution) stage, when the brain center switches off, when organs are reverting to their baseline state, tumor cells are the first ones killed off.

Brain cells swell with water when a brain center is switched on. The swelling appears on a CT scan as white, concentric circles. As the crisis subsides and over time, the circles transition from white to grey to black and from continuous to discontinuous rings. Dr. Hamer, who died July 2, of 2017, or one of his colleagues can read you your whole medical history – from fetus to the present – by looking at a CT scan of your brain and noting where the circles are, how large they are, what color they are and how continuous they are. Can any of the conventional quacks do that?

I know for a fact that many medical school administrators, drug company executives and doctors understand the New Medicine. Yet they continue to defraud the public with their quackery because the quackery is at least one hundred times more profitable for them.

The new “Covid-19” or “Corona Virus” Dark Age was triggered by me, on January 18th of 2020, in Xian, China. Here’s what happened.

After my discovery, on April 2, 2015, that the Great Flood actually happened, I was greatly alarmed. I was able, then, to prove by three different methods that the Great Flood had happened 14,634 years BPE. The psychoanalysis of our mythologies, the analysis of the Russians’ Vostok Ice Core data and the behavior of the Aboriginal African Americans were all in accord and attested to it. After 14,634 years BPE, the Aboriginal African Americans worked feverishly and like zombies to enlarge their great mounds into platform mounds with ramps up one side. Mounds like Cahokia and Poverty Point became huge platforms onto which the people could run in the event of another great flood.

Obviously, if global warming had brought a great flood in the past, then we are due for another one. Glaciologists were already in widespread agreement that the near-future collapse of the Greenland mountain range of ice will raise the ocean level 23 feet and that the tidal wave will double that. The Greenland ice currently has a mean altitude of 7005 feet. Moreover, in June of 2019, mainstream media reported that over 50 lakes have been detected beneath the Greenland ice. (See <https://www.smithsonianmag.com/smart-news/more-50-lakes-found-under-greenlands-ice-180972509/>.) With rapidly increasing global warming, the Greenland ice is a sword of Damocles hanging over our heads. If it slides any time soon, billions of people will die in the historical blink of an eye!

Still the Big Brothers, loveless, angry, lying and malicious latent homosexuals, influenced by the oil companies and the venalest politicians, appeared to ignore me. I was renting a room in the Long Island home of one of David Rockefellers spies on April 2, 2015 when I discovered that the Great Flood actually happened. They knew within seconds, yet they appeared to pay no attention to me.

They had already flagrantly violated my right to practice law and had made at least 3 attempts to seriously injure or kill me, twice in Manhattan and once in Hoboken, using plain-clothes police driving unmarked cars. They and most of the world's people had been brainwashed by the wishful thinking of religion, the oil companies and their lackeys to believe that sea level rise had always been and could only be gradual.

Of course, this wishful thinking was enabled by our traumatized ancestors having mostly blacked out the memory of The Flood. What was I to do?

I was disinclined to raise an uproar and invite more persecution. So, for three years I retreated to higher ground (in Brooklyn, New Jersey and ultimately Taos, NM). I sat back and consoled myself with the knowledge that when the Flood comes next, this persecuted, isolated and censored researcher will have the last laugh.

Until guilt overcame me. I couldn't just sit back and wait for billions of people to die. So, on April 30, 2018, I returned to China to summarize my comprehensive new social science in videos. I had a nice apartment in Nantong, Jiangsu, China where I could comfortably do the work. "The Big Brothers are too arrogant to listen and too stupid to read," I reasoned, "but they just might watch the videos."

What I didn't know is that they were secretly preparing a deceitful and face-saving response to the global warming emergency.

Very much like the testing methods for HIV, the COVID-19 testing method was also patented, and in this case long before any "pandemic" was announced.

The actual testing kits were already manufactured in 2019 and were ready and waiting to be shipped to China as soon as they announced a pandemic.

...The testing method for CV-19 is called the PCR (Polymerase Chain Reaction) test which was developed by Kary Mullis in 1984. Mullis himself said that it should NOT be used for diagnosing "infectious diseases". He actually devised this test to see if it could diagnose lung cancer. —

Dr. Ilseadora Laker has exposed, in her blogs, many similarities between the two fraudulent plandemics, HIV and Covid-19. Both were preceded by the covert preparation of phony testing methods. Both were preceded by the promotion of the craziest Christian scientists to positions of authority and influence at the WHO and the NCHR. Both involved the well-organized and planned terrorization and brainwashing of the public.

With these revelations, it is now possible to see the true political motive for the HIV plandemic. It was not only, as microbiologist Peter H. Duesberg argued, an attempt by the big pharmaceutical companies to avoid wrongful death liability for the many toxic entertainment drugs that they had been selling to the LGBT community. LGBT people have been struggling heroically, as all of us should, to pull the latent homosexual Big Brothers out of the closet, to make loving and healthy human beings of them. The HIV plandemic was pushback of a most extreme and criminal variety. It was an attempt, organized no doubt by the biggest of the Big Brother monsters (i.e. the Council on Foreign Relations?, the Rockefeller Club?) to scare and force LGBT people back into the closet.

Even the name, “Covid-19,” reveals what this plandemic is really about. “Covid” sounds an awful lot like covert. The number 9 symbolizes the end of the line (0123456789), death. And the number 20, 10 x2, symbolizes perfect love. The Covid-19 plandemic is the last ditch, desperate attempt of the biggest Big Brother, latent homosexual monsters to preserve their dying class society and prevent Stage I of a new, loving and civilized world from emerging.

Returning to my own personal history, I was pleasantly surprised when my videos worked! The Chinese government started sending me subtle but positive feedback. To stimulate and accelerate my production, I made two of the movies in Vladivostok, Russia. For the final two of my ten movies, on the Aboriginal African Americans and the Great Flood, I booked a youth hostel in Xian, China for one month. (Xian looms large in our prehistory, so I expected it to be a stimulating place for my research.)

When I showed up at the cheapest and dirtiest hostel in Xian, they pretended not to have my reservation and told me to go to another, nearby hostel. This confounded me because the place appeared to be deserted. Why did they turn me away? Because the spies were waiting at the other, better hostile. The Ancient City's Youth Hostel was packed with spies from all over the world, yet they booked me in at the lower price of the empty and inferior hostile.

I was busy updating my research and had no time to talk to most of the many people there from different countries. People that I did talk to, from China, Russia, Cuba and the USA, were obviously spies and made little attempt to hide it. They were all competing to get a first look at my updated findings. Their Big Brother leaders wanted to hear again from me before launching the Plandemic. They were all hoping that I would say, "Oops, I made a mistake. We have nothing to worry about."

But that was not to be.

Instead, I found a fourth method of corroborating and proving my 2015 findings! The archaeological record for the arrowheads of the southeastern USA clearly shows that the points of the Aboriginal African Americans DISSAPPEAR from 14,634 years BPE until about two thousand years later!

So many Aboriginal African Americans were wiped out by the Flood that there weren't enough survivors to leave enough arrow heads in the ground for us to find for another 2000 years! Their decimation by the Flood also explains why they were so easily conquered by the Amerindians. (See DTDv3, Appendix H or SS401Part2.)

I finished updating my research on January 18th, last, and immediately gave two Chinese spies the results. THE VERY NEXT DAY, WE STARTED HEARING ABOUT THE "CORONA VIRUS."

They started attributing a pneumonia epidemic, that had broken out in Wuhan (Hubei Province) to this mysterious virus that nobody knew anything about.

Pneumonia is a fear of death syndrome. There is a lot of controversy as to how many people are really getting pneumonia, and how many are dying from it. I've heard lots of hearsay about doctors and hospitals being forced to attribute illnesses and deaths to "Covid-19."

I personally believe that many of these reports are true, that the Big Brothers, in an effort to shrink the human economy and population and avert another Great Flood – without losing face for their perennial and persistent growth chant – are intentionally scaring people and upping the numbers.

But it is also true that there is a growing awareness that class society, the world as we have known it for the last nine to ten thousand years, is at the end of its tether. Class society, consisting as it does of Ks and Rs, requires growth. Rs need to be Rs in order to tolerate the Ks. Everyone needs to expect growth in the forces of production in order to tolerate class society's inhumanity and environmental destructiveness.

Latent homosexual people initiated and have always dominated class society. They led the growth chant and brainwashed most people into believing it, believing that we could grow the human economy and population indefinitely and with impunity.

Now the Greenland ice has exposed this growth mantra as the great lie of class society. In truth, the human economy and population can only grow at the expense of other animals and plants, our distant relatives, and the eco-systems upon which all of us depend. Class society is at the end of its tether because growth cannot continue without catastrophic results, without the Greenland ice collapsing and billions of people dying in the historical blink of an eye.

A new, civilized, equal opportunity and population-controlled world is struggling to be born. The New World will hold no comfortable place for Orwellian savages that can't love and marry only to make babies. So, it is predominantly latent homosexuals that, at this critical time, fear death and are succumbing to a pneumonia and flu epidemic. (The stomach muscles contract forcefully when we've eaten something we can't stomach or are struggling to repress an awareness we "can't stomach." See "The New Medicine of Ryke Geerd Hamer," in SWv1, and see articles 2-12 in SWv3.)

Our best chance of avoiding another Great Flood, competing with the Chinese and creating a more civilized world is to tell the people the truth.

To the best of my knowledge, British preacher, Thomas

Malthus, became the first person to oppose Big Brother's growth mania in 1842 with his essay, "On Population." Toward the end of the 1800s, Austrian economist Joseph Schumpeter enhanced Malthus' arguments for shrinking the human population and economy. Stanford Professors Paul and Ann Ehrlich repeated and raised the alarm in 1965 with their book, "The Population Bomb." I joined the ranks of the opposition in 1969 and the chorus circa 1990 with early versions of my main book, "Decoding the Deluge and Finding the Path for Civilization."

Although the film, "The Day After Tomorrow," was based substantially on my book; I got zilch for it. My nonfiction works were severely censored at that time. The screenplay was originally attributed to a Mr. "Nachmanoff." I was the writer they knocked off.

Opportunists like Al Gore, whose books supported the wishful thinking of the oil companies (i.e. that sea level rise has always been and can only be gradual), were richly rewarded. They and the oil companies are the most to blame for the emergency situation we are in now.

Not only are the latent homosexual Big Brothers incompetent, they are criminals too, criminals because they have always sought to punish (or even assassinate) those of us that tell you the truth. The truth is terrifying to them because they unconsciously associate truth and change with the removal of their Third Masks. Moreover, if you can lie about your third most basic characteristic, after species and gender identity, then it must be easy to lie about everything else. Expecting them to tell the truth is like asking your dog to speak Latin. It aint gonna happen. Presently, by lying to the people regarding the Plandemic, they are playing Russian roulette with billions of lives. We need to tell the people the truth about everything and get latent homosexuals out of government, where they do the most damage, and which they continue to virtually monopolize.

Abraham Lincoln was the only US president that wasn't latently homosexual or bisexual. (Lincoln did have a brother, Thomas, but Thomas died when he was only 3 days old.) Lincoln understood that the truth, by definition, is all the knowledge and information that advances human evolution. Lies, in the long run, do just the opposite, they retard all of us.

Lincoln once said,

"I am a firm believer in the people. If given the truth, they can be relied upon to meet any national crisis. The great point is to bring them the real facts."

In particular, lies about viruses increase illnesses, hypochondria and obsessions with cleanliness. The latter increase unnecessary packaging and garbage. Idiotic lies about disease also select for the most unconscious and stupid people among us.

The most stupid people are now in leadership positions. Like the Churchmen of the Middle Ages, they have led us into a dark age. I can foresee only two paths out of this dark age, this downward spiral in which humanity is caught. Either the Flood will come and kill roughly half the world's people, enabling the Biggest Brother scoundrels to restart business as usual as soon as order and ecosystems are restored, or the LGBT movement and the grass roots education of the people will result in the displacement of the top scoundrels and their mass media and governments and our emergence into Stage I, of a new civilized world.

Lies about a mysterious virus benefit only the biggest of the Big Brothers that deserve to be punished for at least 180 years of lies and misrule. The most fearful, ignorant and unconscious people that blindly obey elected officials and bureaucrats -- whether they are right or wrong, true or false -- are fascists.

No one in his right mind ever voted for anyone whom he expected to lie to him. When politicians lie to us, they cease to rule by consent. It is our duty then to expose them, oppose them and remove them from office ASAP.

We need to tell the world the truth about the current crisis and launch Stage I:

- to most safely and securely avoid a great flood
- to exit from the dark age that the latent homosexual Big Brothers and Sisters have led us into
- to remove the Big Brothers and Sisters from the political sphere where they do the most damage, and
- to begin the process of creating a civilized, sustainable and loving world. (More about Stage 1 follows, below.)

C. FORM CLOSE-KNIT AND COOPERATIVE COMMUNITIES

1. The Chinese Community

The Chinese people have always lived relatively close together. Pictured below is an example of an ancient Chinese town. Now, all across China, villages and towns are being replaced by high-rise apartment buildings in dense communities like the one shown in the second photo, below.

They always have lived and still do live relatively close together because they cooperate with one another and have good marriages. Their women are not captives. The Chinese woman chooses her man. Despite the claims that women were sold for bride wealth in dynasty times, I doubt very much that many Chinese families ever sold their daughters to a man that the daughter hadn't secretly chosen. Women have always been dominant in China due to their control of the horribly difficult Chinese languages.

Having happy marriages, wherein the women are not captives, is a big part of the reason why they respect each other's marriages, don't fear each other and can live in close proximity.

The long and hard-fought socialist revolution was fought and won mostly by agrarian peasants because the Communist Party of China promised “Land to the Tiller.” The nationalization of the land and the rational management of the land is (along with unity) probably the most lasting benefit of the Revolution.

Invent whatever reasons you want for preferring the good, old-fashioned American ways. But the fact is that their land management and style of living is extremely efficient. It minimizes the consumption of land, leaving them plenty of land for agriculture, the other animals and plants and whatever creative purposes future generations might divine. It also minimizes maintenance and the cost of providing infrastructure and utilities. It also minimizes travel because most of the businesses needed by the community residents are in the bottom floors of their own buildings or centrally located between these buildings.

These dense, close-knit communities are not only enabled by cooperation, they also enhance cooperation. Residents can't help becoming more aware of one another and more accommodating of each other's needs.

2. The Domed Communities we must Develop

The rest of us need to acquire the strengths of the Chinese people. The best way for us to do that is to learn from them and their experience – hopefully without paying the terrible price that they paid. Wouldn't it be preferable to achieve land reform without a violent 50-year-long revolution? Wouldn't it be preferable to empower women as family leaders without equipping them with an archaic language that consumes people's imaginations, debilitates men and makes uncreative, Learning II people of everyone?

We ought to be able to replicate these strengths of the Chinese people through learning and political reform. With realistic and creative thinking, we can even surpass them in some of these ways in which they are currently superior.

For example, as my late friend and mentor, Kurt Vonnegut, used to say, we westerners "are all married to the wrong person." By being realistic about the simple laws of our psychosexual development, ridding ourselves of homophobia and developing Face Matching Software for match making; we can greatly improve upon our marriages.

We can shrink the divorce rate to a tiny fraction of what it is now.

We can include, within the 25-year, Stage I transition period, a moratorium on all new residential construction except Domed Communities. I've been thinking about this idea for many decades, but Kanye West appears to be the first person to put his money where these dreams are. He designed and built massive, community dome homes – classless and efficient – in Calabasas, California. You can see them at https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=gI7_y1tipiY.

As the video states, he failed to get the right building permits and chose the wrong neighborhood (of ultra snobs) to build in. But Kanye has many great ideas and is not afraid to finance them. He has earned the right to call himself a founding member of the Peace Love and Progress Party.

Our community domes of the future can be cheaply constructed because they will not need to be impregnable fortresses. Crime will quickly disappear in an equal opportunity, population-controlled society. Properly constructed, domes are also earthquake and hurricane proof. The individual units will not need bathrooms or kitchens. One men's room and one women's room on every level should suffice. A ground floor cafeteria and concession restaurants will replace the need for individual unit kitchens. The separation, collection and recycling of glass, metals and plastics and the production of compost from sewage, waste food and carbon can all be efficiently done at each dome if we properly design them.

Each domed community should also be able to grow its own fruits and vegetables (in green houses, when necessary). If we locally grow enough organic fruits and vegetables and add Asian ones to the mix. If we raise fish locally and learn to cook in woks. Then the rest of us can eat as well as the Chinese do and be as healthy as they are.

When community dome residents do divorce, they won't be stuck with an individualized home that they can't afford to maintain, that depreciates rapidly and can only be sold at a substantial loss.

Nobody wants billions of people, of any ethnicity or nationality, to die. As soon as we tell the people the truth about the present crisis, everyone will cooperate in doing anything and everything possible to stop the ice from sliding (e.g. radically increasing emissions restrictions for vehicles or outlawing fossil fuels altogether).

As soon as we explain the need to transition to a civilized and sustainable Stage I society, the civilized and intelligent people of the world will join the movement. It is only the people of the Third Mask, the latent homosexual Big Brothers and Sisters that can't love and can't accept themselves that are die-hard reactionaries. They will continue to struggle to preserve the savage status quo, the savage world to which they are so well adapted. They would rather play Russian roulette with billions of lives than be exposed as the lying, posturing, malicious, incompetent and reactionary frauds they are.

CHAPTER 4: SUMMARY AND WHAT YOU CAN DO

In summary, to compete successfully with the Chinese and prevent our own extinction, the rest of us must civilize our world to become more unified, cooperative, happy and productive than the Chinese are. Because these same civilizing reforms are needed to exit most safely from the current crisis (the likelihood of the Greenland Ice submerging) and because about half of the Chinese people live within the imperiled coast and flood plain ; the sanest and most intelligent Chinese people will want to join us and oppose their own Big Brothers and Sisters as we progress to Stage I.

Progressing into and through Stage I, a 25-year, global transition period, will require us to:

- I. Create Face-Matching Software to enable happy marriages and use it for party members, as an inducement for people to join the Party and substitute Party morality for instinctual (gangster) behavior.
- II. Create a global moratorium on procreation (reducing our population to a manageable level).
- III. Create a global moratorium on the construction of residential buildings other than community domes (encouraging efficiency, good marriages and cooperation).
- IV. Educate the most unconscious and traumatized people (literally religious people) regarding our traumatic prehistory, the K and R Class Struggle and our ambivalence toward the universal elements of the godhead.
- V. Eliminate all our prejudices, especially dark-skin racism and homophobia, thus enabling everyone to love and be loved.

VI. Replace all our non-English languages with English, the most modern and simple, word-order-dependent, trade and port language.

VII. Enact strict limitations on inheritance and gifts (thus gradually nationalizing the land and rationalizing its usage).

VIII. Enact laws to eliminate nepotism in all companies except small family businesses.

IX. Require all full-time educational institutions to admit students on a financial-need-blind basis. Thereafter, we should be able to pass into Stage II, to create a civilized, sustainable and loving paradise on Earth by...

X. Reducing government to that for which government is essential: two hierarchies of committees, one enforcing equal opportunity and the other enforcing population control.

XI. Creating the Baby-Face-Generating Software that will enable us to restart human reproduction on a rational basis and to perfect family life (i.e. guarantee every new person love with the perfect partner, eliminate incest conflict, make geniuses of our guys and gifted family leaders of our gals). See the Stage2 book for details.

If and when the rest of us go so far upon this path as to create a society that is more cooperative, civilized and happy than the society that the Chinese enjoy. If and when we create a society where love is not only possible but probable, for everyone. Then the Honey Trap and national socialism will cease to work for the Chinese. Then they will become the backward and unproductive ones, forced to either change (e.g. replace Chinese with English) or perish.

What can you, personally do? Help to educate and organize others. Share your copy of this book with friends and loved ones. Advise everyone to order it at DavidHuttnerBooks.com, where they can use a credit or debit card or pay by clicking the PayPal button. Watch the 10 videos and download and read the 14 books that are all FREE to download at PeaceLoveAndProgressParty.org.

Finally, organize your friends and neighbors into a Party cell. As we sane people of goodwill become the majority in one polity after another, we will nominate our own candidates for the government offices of those polities and win them. General elections -- wherein thousands or millions of voters are voting for a few candidates about whom they have no personal knowledge -- are a rigged game. General elections are generally controlled by the richest Ks that have the most to spend on mass media. The viable candidates are all, themselves either rich Ks or people that toady to them, malicious latent homosexuals immoral enough to sell out the public interests to special interests.

But an educated and organized majority can beat them at their own game. As the Peace Love and Progress Party becomes the majority and wins control of government in one polity after another, we'll substitute popular democracy (hierarchical elections, democratic centralism) for dollar democracy (general elections). See JSN and "Why I'm Running for President," in SW1. In the meantime, write in my name on your presidential ballots.

Thanking you for your attention and consideration,
Dave Huttner

My name is David Huttner. I am the author/researcher of the comprehensive New Social Science, the founder of the Peace Love and Progress Party (PeaceLoveAndProgress.org) and a write-in candidate for U.S. President.
I have lived and worked in China for over 11 years. But what I value most is your esteem.
Count on me to tell you -- not what you want to hear but -- what you need to know.

