

Halloween Creepy Crawly is Back!

Come join us for our first Creepy Crawly Halloween event in Downtown Campbell in 3 years! Bring your two and four-legged little ghouls, goblins, and superheroes to our haunted district for some scary good fun and Trick or Treating from 4 pm to 7 pm (time is subject to change).

Our annual Creepy Crawly Halloween is a threehour costume supernova in the streets of Downtown Campbell. Candy and other freebies are certainly a big part of this event, and most people come mainly to revel in a community-wide costume party in the streets and get some candy as an added bonus. This is a very popular event and it could be crowded so if you're bringing sensitive children or animals, please take special precautions. There will not be a costume contest this year. We're keeping things simple for our Trick or Treating event in several years, but if any of our businesses decide to have a costume contest, we'll be sure to let you know where. For your social media Please tag your Creepy Crawly Halloween photos in Downtown Campbell with #creepycrawlycampbell. Cost is FREE ...Starts at:

Holidays at the Ainsley House 2022

Campbell, CA – The Ainsley House is excited to be open this holiday season with Holiday events for the whole family. This year will have something to delight everyone! Join us for a myriad of fun events for the holiday season: Holiday Teas & Tours, Holiday Boutique, and Evening Open Houses, as the Ainsley House brings Holiday Cheer to Campbell. Additional details will be available at www.campbellmuseums.com The Ainsley House will be decorated in the theme: Holiday Alphabet. Discover how each volunteer, business, and organization who participated in decorating the Ainsley House, decorates a room using a letter of the Alphabet as inspiration!

Tours will through the Ainsley House will be unguided, self-paced. The Ainsley

House and Boutique will be open November 17 through December 18, Thursdays-Sundays, from 11am-3pm. The Ainsley House will be closed on Thanksgiving Day. Tour admission is $10 adults (18-64), seniors (65+) $8, youth age 7-17 $6, Museum members are free. The Holiday Boutique is located in the Carriage House as well as in several rooms on the first floor of the Ainsley House. In the Boutique you will find unique seasonal gifts, ornaments, jewelry, scarves, and much more. The Boutique will be open during touring hours.

The Campbell Museum Foundation's annual Holiday Teas fundraiser: T's the Season, will take place December 2, 4, 9, 10, & 11. Seating will take place at 12pm. The tea menu includes finger sandwiches, champagne, a special Ainsley blend tea, and tasty treats in the Carriage House, followed by a docent led tour of the Ainsley House. There will be a daily raffle, and a grand prize raffle at the end of the entire 9 days of teas. Admission is $60/ General Public and $55/ Museum Member. Admission proceeds go toward supporting education programs and preservation efforts at the Campbell Historical Museum and Ainsley House. Reservations are required for the teas and can be made at www.campbell*museums.com*. Reservations for the Holiday Teas and Tours are open now.

One of the best ways to see the Ainsley House decorated for the Holidays is to attend one of two evening Open House events. The Open House events at the Ainsley House offer the public an opportunity to enjoy the holiday decorations at night, with live music in the Ainsley living room and light refreshments in the Carriage House. The Open House events take place 5:30-8:00pm story... Just before a recent trip my tour took to Puerto Rico, we waited out the weather in our Dallas-Fort Worth airport hotel rooms with little to no choice in the matter. What was supposed to be three relaxing days on San Juan's beaches before our concert there, Hurricane Fiona was ravaging the island with heavy winds and rain, causing heavy flooding, as well as knocking out the central power grid that plunged everyone on the island into total darkness for many hours. Every news program I tried to skip over on my TV remote con-trol continued to spread the news of Puerto Rico's widespread damage. It seemed rather optimistic to me at the time that we would still be going there, but we held our

In between expensive meals, I watched hundreds of airplanes take-off and land outside my window for three solid days, yet none of us were scheduled on any of them. The grim news continued to pour-in like the rain did on the island. Some sections of the island were completely cut off when bridges were literally washed away. I had once experienced a very scary weather phenomenon before while in Vienna Austria, when a freak storm packing140+mphwindsblew everything away around me in while I hung on for dear life, so I had some idea of that helpless feeling that was hard to fathom at the time.

But it turned out the city of San Juan (population of nearly 350,000) didn't suffer nearly as much damage as the southern and western portions of the island. On day four, the storm had passed over, and off to Puerto Rico we went. The main airport was open for business, and apparently that was all that was needed for us to try and pull off a show. It appeared to be 'business-as-usual' upon our arrival, and it oddly appeared as though nothing major had really taken place there. We were told half the island would possibly suffer without power or fresh water for days on end and I felt a little guilt setting in from that info. The streets had already dried up and there were no detours needed to get to the arena and our hotel destination. We were ready to rock if the fans were. The next night the band performed a great set to a sold-out crowd that seemed very happy for the musical distraction, though many areas would still be recovering from the storm for some time to come. When we flew out over the island on our departure, you could clearly see major flood damage, and it was rather disheartening. Thousands of people on the island could really use our help. I witnessed only a small part of it, and that was enough for me to know how bad they were hit by this powerful category 3 hurricane. Soon to follow in the gulf, Ian was even more damaging for southern Florida, and they need your help too. Storms will continue to come and go for millennia, and we must always be as best prepared for them when they do arrive. I'm not generally a big endorser, but if there is any way you can help these storm victims out, please make a donation to the American Red Cross. They are a solid first-responder organization that usually get it right and will help these victims asap to the best of their abilities and resources, but they need your support too. We can all help them rebuild their lives sooner with any pledge or donation you can make. This is truly a humanitarian crisis that quickly needs to be addressed. The easiest way to donate is to simply go to:

http://www.redcross.org.

The 1950 Campbell High School String Orchestra pose outside what is now the Roosevelt Redwood Room (Q80) at the Campbell Community Center. As you can see from the current photo, the building itself hasn't changed in its appearance since it was built. However much of the area around it has, especially the addition to the Heritage Theatre and its western expansion that affected the re-creation in matching the exact location of the old photo. Editor's note: Eight-foot ladder not included, and well... there's a building there now too. However, no photojournalists were harmed during the replication process.

What to Know for Campbell...

PUBLISHER NOTES

In September it was busy everywhere with lots of music and good cheer, especially the night of the 'Campbell Wine Walk.' Lots of people came by the Campbell Press office and everyone really had a great time. Thank you for the support and comments about our Community newspaper. Yes, we'll keep it up to encourage local news and business in our Community. Evidently from the talks we had, so many of you want to see it in your mailbox and thought our $30/year is a very reasonable deal. People shared that we ran out quickly at our distribution points as so many of you have put it in your must-read list for the month that new subscriptions were added to our growing mailing list. We welcome subscriptions, just look for our subscription form in the newspaper or on our website at www.thecampbellpress.com or you can just sign your name and address and send us a check!

The DCBA has more events coming up this month and the rest of the holiday season including the 'Carol of Lights.' First Fridays and Second Saturdays, with music on every corner, including in front of The Campbell Press at 334 E. Campbell Avenue, with music by 'Cook'n Fenny' on the 2nd Saturday and 4th Saturday evenings. They will be in front sharing music for everyone to enjoy, so swing by and say hello, and pick up the October Issue of the newspaper with the Oktoberfest schedule and the City Garage Sale Map on the back page too.

Hosted by the Campbell Chamber of Commerce that thousands enjoy each year, is the annual downtown 'Oktoberfest' celebration held on the weekend of the 15-16th. This special event has a two-page pull-out program schedule inside this October issue. Use it as your weekend guide so you don't miss out on this year's entertainment!

A map on our last two pages 15-16) for the Campbell City Wide Annual Garage Sale. Creepy Crawly Trick or Treat is back, so get the family ready for a downtown stroll and candy collecting on Oct. 30 from 4-7pm. TCP will be open with 'Cook'n Fenny' playing some music and we'll have lots of treats too. Remember our Veterans on November 11th and the event for Campbell's Veterans Day. Memorial Ceremony at the Campbell Veterans Memorial Foundation on the side of City Hall. The ceremony starts at 9am, and the keynote speaker is Major Commander Steve Butow of the California Air Force National Guard. Please join them that evening for their fundraising dinner at Villa Ragusa, with guest speaker and President of the 49ers, Al Guido, as well as Chancellor Brad Davis of West Valley College. They will be giving student scholarships to veteran students. The event begins at 6 pm. Share your support for our hardworking Campbell non-profit memorial organization and get your dinner tickets and bid on items from their silent auction.

Please go to the website to sponsor a brick in honor of your veteran or loved one or become a corporate sponsor. You can also donate by mailing a check to P.O. Box 622 Campbell, CA 95008 or call 408-641-0644 to volunteer at the dinner and/or other community activities. For more information go to: www. campbellveteransmemorial.com

Companion planting is touted as a silver bullet for the perfect garden. Plants are said to "like" and "help" each other when grown together, but they don't. In fact, it's a war zone out there.

LOCAL

Biochemicals produced by some plants actively harm neighboring plants. This is called allelopathy. Common pea plants use chemicals to inhibit the growth of nearby lettuce, wheat, cress, or sorghum. The truth is, popular claims about companion planting are based on a 1930's study that had nothing to do with how plants actually grow.

A more useful concept is intercropping. Intercropping refers to mixed plantings that take advantage of certain plant behaviors and needs to make the most of limited garden space. The traditional Three Sisters Method of growing corn, squash, and beans together is an example of intercropping. In this method, the corn grows tall, providing pole beans with something to climb. Nitrogen-fixing pole beans feed the squash and corn. The broad squash leaves shade the ground, reducing competitive weeds and retaining moisture. The three types of plants grow better together than they would alone. But it has nothing to do with how they feel about each other.

gardener. They make better use of sunlight, soil, and water than monoculture crops. These mixed plantings tend to confuse many insect pests, reducing damage and the need for pesticides. Pollination rates increase because there is a wider variety of blooms and different times throughout the growing season. Intercropping also provides better habitat for more biodiversity.

The downside of intercropping is that it requires more planning than traditional rows. Rather than simply planting a row of seeds, you need to consider things like speed of growth and rooting depth. With intercropping, you plant deep-rooted crops, such as tomatoes, with shallow-rooted crops, like lettuce. You can also grow fast-growing plants like spinach or radishes, with slower-growing crops, like corn or carrots. Plants that don't need as much sunlight are planted alongside taller plants.

The science behind which plants perform best together is still being researched. Bottom line: pay attention to your plants and do what works best for you, your soil, and the varieties in your garden.

Author and Historian Barney Terrell will present his new book, Cold Wrath: the 8196 Rampage of James C. Dunham.

why he did it. Why murder his wife and her parents, or kill his brother-in-law, or murder two farmhands on the ranch where they lived? Why leave his three-weekold son alive in bed next to his murdered mother? With the twentieth century looming, Santa Clara, California was a small farming community south of San Francisco, and Jim Dunham was a family man with ambitions. Somehow in the spring of that year, his great plans derailed. We know Jim Dunham killed all those people. The messy truth is that we may never know why. In Cold Wrath: The 1896 Rampage of James C. Dunham, author Barney Terrell takes us through the known facts and eyewitness accounts, the manhunt, and the enduring questions. It is just as important, all these years later, to understand the forces that drove Jim Dunham to unleash his wrath on the victims. Saturday, November 19, 5pm-7pm, $15/ person.

Author Brian Earl will discuss his book Christmas Past: The Fascinating Stories Behind our Favorite Holiday's Traditions.

Behind every Christmas tradition is a story, often a forgotten one. Every year as we put up a tree and pour the eggnog, we're continuing generations-old narratives, while being mostly unaware of their starting chapters. Join Bay Area author Brian Earl for a festive and fascinating look at the stories behind the most wonderful time of the year.

Campbell Area Chapter 5151 AARP Margaret Schieck, President

Welcome Fall, hopefully with more much needed rain!

Fall has brought an upsurge in activities with many seniors getting out and about again. It is obvious in any in-person event that most of us have really missed social interactions. There is a hum of greetings and conversation, as well as smiles at every social gathering.

Members from the Campbell Area Chapter 5151 of AARP have participated in the Lions Club glasses-sorting and cleaning event and will be joining the Lions again on October 8th at the VISTA center on N. Bascom Ave. at 9:00 a.m. This is another opportunity to "do well while doing good". Great social interaction while doing something useful.

The next meeting of Chapter 5151 will be held on October 18th in Room Q80 of the Campbell Community Center, 1 W. Campbell Ave. Coffee and conversation begin at 9:15 a.m. and the general meeting and speaker will begin at 10:00. The program for October will be presented by The League of Woman Voters who will discuss the pros and cons of the Propositions on the November ballot. AARP does not advocate for any propositions except for those directly affecting seniors and we do not advocate for any candidates. We only present both sides of arguments for propositions.

Costumes are welcome at the October meeting in the spirit of the upcoming Halloween Holiday. Guests and new members are welcome.

LGHS Wildcat Theatre

LGHS Wildcat Theatre presents And Then They Came for Me Remembering the World of Anne Frank October 14 and 15. And Then They Came for Me is a unique theatrical experience: a multimedia play that combines videotaped interviews with two childhood friends of Anne Frank and their Holocaust experiences with live actors recreating scenes from their lives during World War II. Part oral history, part dramatic action, part direct address, part remembrance, this production is like a historic newsreel brought to life on the stage. This is what live theatre does especially well-moving a big subject like the Holocaust into the realm of personal understanding and connection. It will open your heart with curiosity and compassion.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENTS

Flipping Silicon Valley Style Author's Corner By Carol W. Gerwitz

Ernest Hemmingway's advice was to write about something you know. Author Mike Trigg did just that in his first book "Bit Flip", released in August and which he describes as a corporate thriller. Both Mike and the book's protagonist, Sam Hughes, are transplants from the Midwest to Silicon Valley, Mike from Wisconsin and Sam from Ohio. Both are married with families, and both live in Silicon Valley.

The similarities don't end there, as I discovered in a recent chat over coffee with this engaging author. Mike Trigg, a self-proclaimed entrepreneur, has been a founder, employee, executive and investor in several technology start-ups. Sam Hughes is also a tech executive and is also out to make the world a better place through technology.

Mike's inspiration for the book came from his telling his wife stories about his days at work. "You should write a book," she told him. Mike had always wanted to write a novel, so with the forced stay-at-home imposed by Covid, Mike took his wife's suggestion and seized the opportunity to write and get his book published and on the market. Although Covid played a role in the book's creation, it does not play a role in the book itself, a choice Mike deliberately made.

In Chapter 1 of "Bit Flip" Sam is given a 20-minute heads up by his HR department that he is to be a last-minute speaker on a panel at a conference at Moscone Center. Rather than giving the expected presentation on his company's success, Sam has a very public meltdown and condemns Silicon Valley's high tech industry for being a fraud and not concerned with improving the world but rather with garnering wealth. Predictably, Sam is fired. While still in a tailspin and contemplating his professional and personal futures and whether technology is even worth it, Sam is unexpectedly asked to rejoin the company and then discovers what could be the company's undoing. The book progresses as Sam considers the negative influences of greed and technology along with what role he wants to play and how he wants to handle his discovery.

To Silicon Valley readers, this book is particularly relatable with its familiar settings (from the Fairmont Hotel to Alice's Restaurant to Sand Hill Road), characters, and jargon. The title itself is computer-ese: bit flip can be switching a binary digit (bit) from 0 to 1 and back again, or it can mean doing a 180-degree flip in thinking. The events and characters are fictional, although Mike has been asked by readers if Sam or another character isn't really an actual person whom they know.

Mike has done his own flip and is now writing full-time. His second book ("Burner") is in the editing stage, and he has begun outlining his third book, a Great Gatsbytype tale. Neither book involves Sam Hughes.

"Bit Flip" is available at local bookstores now.

Mission Valley Chorus' 16th Annual Jingle Bell Tea will be Saturday Dec.3. Seatings at 11:30 or 3:00, Saratoga Community Center. Ticket sales close Oct. 31. See www. missionvalley.org.

OCTOBER MOVIES

Don't Worry Darling - C-

Poor man's WandaVision meets Stepford Wives. Rising star Florence Pugh is a 1950's housewife living in a rich American dream style suburban community that may not be as it appears to be. Harry Styles is disappointingly forgettable as her husband, who's mysterious new job brought them to the community. Chris Pine, Gemma Chan, and Olivia Wilde appear in supporting roles in Wilde's unoriginal sophomore directorial effort.

The Woman King - B-

Fans of swords and sandals historical action dramas, this is for you. Viola Davis stars as a seasoned commander of an elite unit of African women warriors with Lashana Lynch as her number two and John Boyega as the king. A well made film that does suffers from a stagnant second half. The story is loosely based on a true historical events.

Barbarian - B+

A young woman travels to Detroit for a job interview and arrives at her Airbnb to find it already occupied by a man played by "IT" star and Pennywise himself Bill Skarsgard. Unpredictable suspenseful horror awaits as the duo discover more about the house.

Newcomer writer/director Zach Cregger shows great talent commanding the tone right from the beginning. The always entertaining Justin Long and legendary working actor Richard Brake round out the cast.

Clerks III - C+

Everyone returns in this sequel which catches up with the characters lives over a decade later. Sometimes really funny, sometimes really cringe. Overall, it was fun to see all the returning characters and the story is full of amusing callbacks to the previous two films. Creator Kevin Smith puts a lot of heart into this and it shows in a good way as the story is surprisingly touching.

Pearl - B-

Prequel to recent 1970's set horror film "X", this time set in 1918 and following the younger version of the antagonist old lady as she descends into madness while trying to make it as an actress. Mia Goth returns and turns in a terrifically unsettling performance. The story has shades of 2019's "Joker" but is much more brutal.

Money Empowerment by Jill

Holiday season is once again upon us. It is the time of the year where it is totally possible to go backwards when it comes to your financial plans. The good news is that holiday budgeting does not need to be stressful.

Below are a few tips for creating a budget that will not break your bank.

1. Make a List

Make a list of people you would like to give gifts to as well as anything else you may want such as home decor or party needs.

2. Set a limit

Suggest setting a price limit on gifts with friends and family. Not only does this help with budgeting but also gives a chance to get creative.

3. Give meaning

Most of the time, the most meaningful gifts are not the priciest. Try finding gifts that the receiver will use or find touching.

4. Give time

Help your friend or family member with something. Maybe you could help with yard work for an afternoon or help them with errands. The gift of time is precious.

5. Informal dinners

Host an informal dinner night, game night, movie night with a few friends. Make it a potluck and casual event.

6. Decorate with Flair

Homemade decorations are both original and inexpensive. The internet is full of ideas. You can use popcorn, cranberries, oranges, tree branches, all kinds of things. Get creative.

7. Watch the sales

Start watching sales early in the season and grab anything that is on your list. I tend to watch the wine sales or purchase gift cards here and there so I have a secret stash for impromptu gifts.

8. Bake

Who does not love homemade baked goods? Cookies, candies, breads, you name it. Better yet, have a baking party and then combine the finished goods into small baskets to hand out to multiple families.

9. Avoid self gifting

It's easy to find things for ourselves while we are out shopping for others. Avoid buying anything because "it's on sale" unless it is something that you really do need

10. Keep it simple

Don't over do it. If you have a lot of party invites, choose the ones you really want to attend. Don't feel obligated to purchase gifts for everyone. Try suggesting to some friends and family that instead of giving gifts you just want to hang out and enjoy each others company.

This season is meant to be enjoyable and not stressful. I really do not remember all of the gifts I've received over the years, but I sure do remember baking and snuggling together to watch movies.

Enjoy the season,

Jill Scarnecchia

CITY NEWS By Sergio Lopez

Attention Campbell residents: the City Council needs your input!

September's Council meetings and will continue to be of importance in the coming months. That's because, while the City Council is made up of five people with a diverse array of backgrounds, experience, and perspectives, we nonetheless need the input of residents and other community members to make the best decisions.

To take one example, consider the parklet program — a major discussion which came back before the Council during the September 20th Council meeting. It comes toward the finish line of what has been a long process — from the launch of the temporary programs during the pandemic, to discussions of adopting "semi-permanent" (more permanent, but still removable) parklets, to actually designing both the potential parklets and the program in a way that supports business owners and the Campbell community as a whole.

While City staff has conducted surveys and outreach to business owners, the September 20th meeting unfortunately missed out on input in the form of comments (either written, online, or in-person) from business owners. Accordingly, the City Council directed staff to go back to businesses and solicit more detailed feedback about the proposed program - demonstrating the importance of community engagement and feedback to help the Council make the best decisions. By the time you read this, it's likely that a second discussion will have occurred — as staff was scheduled to come back to the Council with further feedback by the October 4th meeting.

In this case, the goal of the program is to have parklets that are more aesthetically pleasing and more standardized than the current temporary ones that adorn Campbell Avenue downtown. Additionally, the Council and staff have worked hard to try to find ways to support

That message became clear during | businesses through the design of the program, such as subsidizing fees or other costs. Speaking for myself, this support is important given the economic impacts which many suffered during the pandemic — but my highest priority is making sure the program serves the entire Campbell community. I have appreciated the option of outdoor dining which has expanded as a result of the pandemic, and both residents and neighbors from surrounding cities have as well, adding vibrancy to our downtown.

> An additional important item before the Council — which you have the opportunity to help shape now — is the creation and implementation of residential design standards for the Campbell community. This work is driven by a state law which requires cities to publish "objective standards" for proposed development (as well as "subjective standards" which could be interpreted to mean different things by different audiences). If the city does not adopt objective standards, it risks losing local control over projects, making this process a priority for the city.

City staff has put together a comprehensive resource page on this process, including a survey, community meetings, and the ability to make appointments with staff for a discussion; you can access the page at: https://www.campbellca. gov/1174/Multi-Family-Development-and-Design-Stan

This process is your opportunity to give feedback in this important process on the type of buildings you would like to see in Campbell. Key to the discussions so far has been the need to balance being specific with what kinds of designs will be allowed, while being wary of a "cookie-cutter" approach which risks damaging the diversity and unique spirit of Campbell which is apparent when you explore our neighborhoods — which is why your feedback could be key to helping achieve that balance.

COUNTY NEWS Mental Health Care for the "Missing Middle"

Challenges with mental health and addiction affect us all, and the number of people struggling only intensified during the pandemic. In 2021, for example, 37% of the U.S. adult population suffered from moderate to severe anxiety, up from 7% in 2019, according to the Century Foundation.

Close to home, a recent survey conducted by the Saratoga Area Senior Coordinating Council found that about 30% of Los Gatos residents over age 60 live with depression, and 80% said they do not have access to quality mental health care.

That's simply not acceptable. Mental health care is health care. Folks should have access to it at every phase of life, no matter what their income or resources may be.

Yet, affordability is a huge barrier, even for those who earn what most of us would consider a decent living. Many County residents fall into what I call the "missing middle" - people who earn a bit too much to qualify for Medi-Cal subsidies but not enough to pay for care out of pocket. Having commercial health insurance is no guarantee, since many plans don't offer adequate coverage.

Whatever the case, the mental health needs of the missing middle have been overlooked for far too long. We need to close the gap that has allowed too many people to slip through the cracks in our health care system.

As Chair of Santa Clara County's Health and Hospital Committee (HHC), I'm pleased that the County is making real progress in doing just that.

First, the Board of Supervisors unanimously supported my proposal to ensure that residents are aware of their "mental health parity" rights. Under state law, medically necessary treatment for all mental health and substance use disorders must get equal treatment with other health conditions.

California Senate Bill (SB) 855 expanded this right in 2020, prohibiting health plans and insurers from limiting these benefits to shortterm or acute treatment. But not all insurers are stepping up as they should. And many patients are not aware of their rights. People often spend a lot of time trying to figure it all out, worrying if their insurance covers the services, and working out how to pay for it all.

Second, at my request, the County is developing a program that ensures mental health treatment for middle income residents.

I think we've finally turned a corner in understanding the role the County has to play, whether it's for young people who need help, or programs that help families and seniors in that "missing middle" get affordable outpatient mental health services.

By County Supervisor Joe Simitian

Every one of us can make a difference. We can start by getting the word out about the resources that are now available, by advocating for more, and by doing everything we can to help make folks feel welcome, valued, and connected. It's good for patients, good for families, and good for our entire community.

Joe Simitian was elected to the Santa Clara County Board of Supervisors in 2012 and re-elected in 2016 and 2020. He represents the Fifth District, which now includes Cupertino, Los Altos, Los Altos Hills, Los Gatos, Monte Sereno, Mountain View, Palo Alto, Saratoga, Stanford, and portions of San Jose. Joe's public service over the years includes stints as a member of the California State Senate, the California State Assembly, Mayor of Palo Alto, President of the Palo Alto School Board, as well as an earlier term on the Santa Clara County Board of Supervisors. He served as an election observer/ supervisor in El Salvador and Bosnia and participated in refugee relief and resettlement efforts in Albania and Kosovo.

City Council & Planning Commission News 🛛 🛎

It's a busy time for the City of Campbell. Between now and next March, we expect to adopt a new General Plan, a new Housing Element (Campbell's Plan for Housing), and a new Zoning Code (Residential Design Standards) for everything apart from single-family parcels. To this end, Commissioner Matt Kamkar and myself have volunteered to assist staff in studying and evaluating the possibilities for those Design Standards. We're researching how other cities manage their standards, what local developers need, what our residents want, and sorting all of that into coherent information to present to the Planning Commission and eventually the City Council.

Commissioner Kamkar and I attended a developer round table on September 28th, which got plenty of engagement, both from market-rate and subsidized housing developers. Our consultants, Opticos, ran the meeting, and asked for feedback on some proposed standards as applied to the lots at 612 E Campbell Ave (The Greylands) and 2415 S Winchester Blvd (the Safeway complex).

Governor Newsom signed AB 2097 on Thursday, September 22, eliminating parking mandates in the parts of Campbell within a half-mile of our light rail stations, and while that means that developments will see less parking going forward, developers still want to provide parking as an amenity. Market-rate developers tell us that their financiers require about one parking space per apartment; subsidized developers provide between half and three-fourths of that.

Most developers achieve high densities using "wrap build-ings", also called the "Texas Donut", which is an aboveground parking structure as the core of a large building, with apartments around the outside, and non-residential uses like bike lockers or retail on the ground floor. Underground parking is unreasonably expensive, and surfaceonly parking takes up a lot of space; this is a popular format, for example in Santana Row in San Jose.

There was debate over "adjacency": what should highdensity developments next to low-density neighborhoods do at their borders? The meeting was more about questions than answers, but some ideas we had were to use parks as buffers, only require adjacency adjustments if the boundary didn't cross a road, or develop a setback formula, say, that everything more than fifteen feet taller than the adjoining building envelope must have an additional setback of half the height distance. The process is visual; Opticos will be making "testfit" renderings of how some sites may be developed under these new rules.

Future meetings are scheduled for October 19 (community) and October 21 (developers). If you have opinions about how the multifamily and mixed-use parts of Campbell should look in the future, check it out! The city is also running a survey about design preferences; see the link below. We can't do this without your help; we truly value your feedback!

Before the Song: by Chris Jackson "Another One Bites the Dust"

Ever get a good idea but you don't write it down because you figure that if it's that good, you'll remember it? That kind of thinking almost caused the band Queen to lose the idea that became their song, "Another One Bites the Dust."

Queen's bassist, John Deacon, came up with the bass note pattern that became the song's introduction: da da DA DA DA, da DA DA da DA. He played it for the band. Nothing came of it, so they all went home. The next day, John tried to play it again and couldn't remember it! They hadn't written it down or recorded it because, well, we all just assume if it's good we'll remember it, right?

John worriedly asked the other members of Queen if they remembered what he played the day before. All but one said, "no." Drummer Roger Taylor blurted out the bass part with his mouth and John couldn't believe it. That was it! There remained just one problem: singer Freddie Mercury couldn't figure out what to sing while that iconic bass part was going.

Freddie eventually decided to match his words, "another one bites the dust," to the bass part and the chorus was born. For the verses, Freddie decided to be very over-the-top dramatic because nothing else worked. When the song was finished, it worked so well, it caught the ear of movie star Sylvester Stallone. He had an idea that would make the song even more famous.

He wanted to use "Another One Bites the Dust" in one of his "Rocky" movies. He like the beat. He asked the band for permission, but lawyers for the parties were unable to get the deal done. Stallone ended up asking another band to write a song with the same exact beat. That other band? Survivor. The song? "Eye Of the Tiger." It has the same beat with the same tempo, and the notes even line up.

Stallone used "Eye Of the Tiger" in the movie "Rocky III," and the song went on to become an anthem for competitions of all kinds. To this day, "Eye Of the Tiger" is played when you win, and "Another One Bites the Dust" when you lose. Funny-that's just the way it worked out for Survivor and Queen. ©

HEALTH

Sometimes there is so much going on it is difficult to decide priorities and what needs discussing most. Putting our summer garden to rest, amending soil in anticipation of winter rains, what to plant now for winter and spring harvest are all relevant topics for today's article.

Lettuce, spinach, peas are a good start to plant now. Lettuce and other leafy greens should be planted in two week intervals. Planting a few seeds every couple of weeks will insure that fresh garden lettuce and spinach can be enjoyed all season long.

Now is also a perfect time to plant nitrogen fixing plants such as vetch, clovers and fava beans, that will add nutrients to the soil while providing food for insects and bees. Especially nice is crimson clover which adds color to a dreary space.

Now is also an important time for migrating birds. As a gardener, the first course of action is to encourage appropriate flowers and seed producing plants. However, during winter months, this can be a difficult project in some landscapes. By preparing a chart of what produces nectar, pollen and seed during the year, will help determine what is lacking and what areas needing improvement. The need for seed, fruit and nectar feeders for resident birds is also an important issue.

With diminished flower resources during the cold winter months, it is important to continue feeding resident birds. They have become accustomed to the availability of an easy meal. Keep feeders clean by washing with hot soapy water and rinsing well. Provide fresh food regularly. Use only pure cane sugar in preparing your nectar mixture.

Recent research indicates that hummingbirds can be subject to iron poisoning brought on by too much iron in the sugar used for making home-made nectar syrup. Any orange discoloration in the water is usually an indication of excessive iron. It is always safer and healthier for the birds to use a commercially prepared food mixture. Although 80% of hummingbird diet is from insects, the sweet and syrupy mixture is always appreciated. Research also proves that added coloring to the mixture is not needed as the birds are attracted to the color of the feeders first and not necessarily the mixture.

October

Feeding songbirds is helpful to encourage healthy populations. Better yet, is to let some flowers and grass go to seed, creating a natural diet. Excess commercial seed, if allowed to fall to the ground can encourage rats and other critters. Try mixing cayenne or chili powder with seed to discourage any unwanted guests. Products currently being sold include the peppers but can be pricy.

Most seed is viable and will germinate in damp soil creating other issues in the garden. By baking seed in a 250° oven for 20 minutes can help minimize the germination by sterilizing the seeds The Santa Clara Valley Audubon Society (SCAVA.org) is an exceptionally good local resource. A final note, by providing food for migratory birds will not stop their natural instinct to migrate. There are confirmed cases of highly pathogenic avian influenza (HPAI) in Santa Clara County. It is a critical issue of major concern right now. HPAI is responsible for killing millions of poultry throughout the world, including chickens, turkeys and ducks.

The virus is spread by wild migrating birds like Canada geese but affects farm raised birds. There are no cases of HPAI infecting humans. To report sick or dead birds call 916-358-2790 or contact cdfa.ca.gov

By Sharon McCray

This time of year it is also important to keep up on the winter weeds and only water as needed. Remember, the two major killers of plants is water. Either too much or not enough. Good luck and enjoy the season.

CAMPBELL FIRE REPORT...

Firefighters were dispatched to a report of a vegetation fire. SCCFD arrived on the scene to find a fire without threat to surrounding vegetation or structures. Firefighters worked to control traffic and were able to extinguish the fire safely.

August 26 - Structure Fire - In the area of Winchester Blvd and Hamilton Ave

SCCFD resources from the cities of Campbell, Los Gatos, Saratoga, and Cupertino were dispatched to a report of a fire in a commercial building. Firefighters arrived to find smoke inside a building with no fire. An inspection of the roof determined that an air conditioning unit had malfunctioned, producing smoke inside the building. Firefighters secured the malfunctioning equipment and made contact with the property owner for repairs. step? New Academy:

By Justin Stockman

County Fire continues to fill existing vacancies with its third firefighter academy of 2022. Santa Clara County Joint Fire Academy 2022-3 is hosted by the Santa Clara Fire Department and the South Bay Regional Public Safety Training Consortium. JFA 2022-3 is hosting recruits from Santa Clara Fire Department, Palo Alto Fire Department and Santa Clara County Fire Department. The academy is scheduled for graduation in early 2023. Interested in a job with the fire department? As a full-service, all-hazard fire department, we have emergency and non-emergency positions available throughout the year. Keep an eye out for open positions at careers-sccfd.icims.com.

August 6 - Gas Leak - In the area of Llewellyn Ave and Hamilton Ave

SCCFD was dispatched to a report of a smell of gas outside. Firefighters found a ruptured natural gas line that was leaking gas. Firefighters closed the valve, stopping the flow of gas. Gas detection monitors were utilized to ensure the concentration of gas had fully dissipated.

August 21 - Smoke Investigation - In the area of Rincon Ave and Milton Ave

Firefighters were dispatched to an outside smoke investigation. On arrival, crews found a fire burning inside of a storm drain. Firefighters were able to extinguish the fire without incident.

August Safety Message:

BACK TO SCHOOL II

Last issue we talked about preparing for the yearly back to school season, and how to prepare for things that will come up. A few of you emailed me with your suggestions, and the one that was most spoken of was having back up childcare in case of some unexpected events. Most of us wait until there's a need, and then we scramble to fill it. Thank you to Mandy who shared the following situation from her own life. She has two kids, and one day she got a phone call from school that her son had hurt himself on the playground. After going to the school, she called the doctor and he suggested she bring him in for x-rays. The problem was, her other son had a baseball game that same afternoon. She had previously prepared for a situation like this and made a phone call to the mom of one of her son's teammates and arranged for her to pick up her son and take him to the game. Her husband would be home from work during the game, so she could focus on what was going on with her injured son and not worry about her other son and the game. You see, when the season started, there was a meeting with the parents and coaches. There, she met some parents, and asked a few if they'd be interested in a sort of ride share agreement in case of emergency. Some thought she was a little crazy, but she certainly felt like she'd done the right thing when the need arose.

In this busy, sometimes difficult world we live in, we must look to others for help at times, because we all need it. Another reader shared that at the beginning of every school year, she gets together with a few other moms, and they discuss the idea of doing a childcare co-op. This accomplishes so many things. It frees up time for mom and dad to go out to dinner, catch a movie, or just relax while the kids hang out with their friends. No one has to pay for a sitter, parents feel at ease and that the kids are safe. This is so important to keep relationships happy and healthy. So, think outside the box, and make plans for the unexpected so that you'll be better prepared when things unexpectedly happen in your life.

Of course, nobody has a crystal ball and can know everything that's going to come up, but if you have a few people in your circle of friends who are willing and able to "cover" for you when circumstances present themselves, you'll be better off, and things will go smoother than they would otherwise.

It's really important to network with other parents when school starts, so make the effort to connect and create a solid group of people you can count on, and make sure they can count on you as well. You might just make some long-term friendships and improve your quality of life!

Wide Bodied Passengers

The weight and balance of an aircraft is critical prior to take off. In calculating this, airlines used to use an average weight of the passengers based on outdated figures - 180 lbs in summer and 185 in winter.

These figures were substantially adjusted in 2003 as a result of fatal accident in January that year of a US Airways Express flight that crashed shortly after takeoff from Charlotte Douglas Airport.

The investigators were thorough in checking the medical records of all the passengers and crew and discovered that this estimate was far too low.

Over the years these figures have been adjusted to take account of what seems to be a 'growing' population.

To achieve accurate figures, some airlines took to weighing each passenger for small aircraft. If you've ever flown on a helicopter, they are likely to weigh you before boarding.

Now a new issue has arisen, not weight related but width related. This is as a result of airlines fitting their planes with seats as narrow as possible so they can squeeze as many in. While concern, it is one of comfort and could be critical in an evacuation.

The FAA is now carrying out consultation regarding seat dimensions.

While from a wide-bodied passenger's point of view (in these PC times, I won't call them fat) they would be most concerned with comfort. However, the FAA is more concerned with safety.

You can actually share your thoughts with the FAA on the Federal Register.

https://www.federalregister. gov/documents/2022/08/ 03/2022-16565/request-forcomments-in-minimum-seatdimensions-necessary-forsafety-of-air-passengersemergency

OK, it's a long link so perhaps a Google search for it might be easier.

I'll not be rude by suggesting that dieting might be your other option. So instead I'll wish that lottery win comes your way so you can fly First Class or even in your own private jet!

Living Classroom Docent Recruitment

Living Classroom, a school-based environmental program, is reaching out to the parent and Campbell volunteer community for new classroom docents. Living Classroom docents lead science-based lessons to Kindergarten and first grade students in Campbell schools. Lessons include garden based activities, tasting fresh, seasonal produce and simple cooking. The lesson goals are to teach relevant and engaging lessons in science, math, social studies and literature while instilling an understanding and pleasure in our natural environment.

No prior teaching experience is needed — just an interest in working with children and a love of nature. Training is provided, including classroom management skills. Training for Fall lessons will take place September 12, 19 and 26, 2022. For more information about training and Living Classroom contact Alexis Li, Program Director at alexisL@living-classroom.org

Living Classroom is a 501(c)(3) non-profit education program bringing garden-based outdoor and hands-on science lessons to local public schools. Living Classroom is helping to raise the next generation of environmental stewards.

City Council Candidate Spotlight

By Benjamin Noel

ATLANTIS

Three districts, 3, 4, and 5 have open seats for the 2022 election. Seats for districts 1 and 2 will be voted on in 2024. This year, there is only one candidate per seat, so save a heroic write-in, these will be your new councilmembers.

Dan Furtado: District 3 Dan Furtado is a Campbell native living his whole life in the city, aside from two years on active duty for the US Army. His family roots in Campbell date back to the late 1800s. Upon graduation from UC Berkeley and San Jose State, Dan pursued a Doctor of Pharmacy degree while serving in the Army Reserves for 40 years, retiring as a Colonel. He also holds a Master's in Public Administration from the University of San Francisco. Once he's on the council, police, fire and public works are Dan's priorities. Planning and zoning, along with building affordable housing are also important to him. Additionally, he plans to support the arts, recreation, and libraries. The current plans to build a new library and police department building have already been approved, and Dan intends to bring the plan to fruition. On the Council, he will listen to recommendations presented by the Chamber of Commerce, advisory boards, as well as local businesses and community members in order to make the right decisions for Campbell.

Elliot Scozzola: District 4

Elliot is a South Bay native, a small business owner and a teacher. During the mortgage crisis, he worked with his parents to build a successful small business, saving the family home from foreclosure. He is currently a member of the Chamber of Commerce, and is on a council at Capri Elementary School. He now teaches in the Campbell and Los Gatos/ Saratoga High School Districts. Elliot is an Eagle Scout, and continues to show his communitycentered mindset as he volunteers with Campbell Girls FastPitch Softball, and at local food pantries. In order to provide more affordable housing, Elliot aims to lift restrictions on Accessory Housing Units, allowing homeowners to generate income while increasing housing stock. As a small-business owner himself, Elliot supports

After meeting with my friend and photographer Dave Lepori recently, we started sifting through his many stacks of black and white band promo photos he had taken back in the day. We both pointed out various band members in many of the shots that triggered memories for each of us. In doing so, we also realized we didn't really small businesses in Campbell, and seeks to make the tax structure more welcoming of new small businesses to the city, balancing it out with slight increases in taxes for large corporations, netting the city the same tax revenues.

have much information on the whereabouts of many of these musicians without doing some research and reaching out to other musicians we were still in contact with from the area. But this iconic band that was on the Campbell circuit for many years, and quite popular in the 80's with the ladies. They played a variety of cover tunes but did play some of their own originals too. Lead singer Jeff Larson has a uniquely high vocal range that gave the band the ability to perform some songs that other local bands who be foolish to attempt.
